As it has been pointed by the learned Judge Mitter, J. in his judgment, there can be no doubt that if the suit had been decided before the amendment of the definition of holding by Act 4 of 1928, the plaintiff's claim for enhancement on the grounds mentioned in S. 30 (b) would have failed, on the ground that the tenancy in question is not a holding as defined in the Bengal Tenancy Act. The learned Judge has rightly observed, and the position cannot be controverted, that the decisions of this Court on the point are uniform since the year 1898, that a tenancy of the description with which we are concerned in the case before us, could not be treated as a holding, so as to attract the provisions contained in S. 30, Ben. Ten. Act, before the amendment of the year 1928. The tenant in the position of the defendant in the case before us, enjoyed immunity from action for enhancement of rent till the amendment of the definition of holding in the year 1928, and as mentioned by Mitter, J. the question for consideration in the case reduced itself to the simple proposition as to whether S. 30, Ben. Ten. Act could be combined with the definition of holding as now amended, so as to give the landlord the right to sue for enhancement of rent in respect of a tenancy created before Act 4 of 1928 came into force. The question has, in our judgment, to be answered in the negative, for the reason given by the learned Judge, namely that the effect of the amendment was to take away an immunity from enhancement enjoyed by the tenant up to February 1929, when Act 4 of 1928 came into operation, and the provision of the amending Act of 1928 dealing with vested rights could not be given retrospective effect. There can be no controversy as regards the position that every statute which takes away or imposes vested rights acquired under existing laws, creates new obligation or imposes new duties or attaches new disabilities, must be presumed, out of respect for the Legislature, not to have retrospective operation. The creation of a new right in one class of persons is generally attended with imposition of new obligations on, or the interference with vested rights of other classes. A law therefore creating a new right was generally subject to the rule against retrospective operation. The addition made to the definition of holding by the amending Act of 1928 indicates clearly that the immunity from enhancement under S. 30, Ben. Ten. Act, enjoyed by tenants in respect of tenancies comprising undivided shares of parcels of land was taken away, thus interfering with vested rights of tenants and creating new rights in the landlord so far as the operation of S. 30, Ben. Ten. Act, was concerned, in the matter of enhancement of rent, under certain circumstances, and the amendment could not have retrospective effect.

The contention raised in support of the appeal before us, that the definition of the word holding in the amending Act of 1928 was merely explanatory, does not bear serious examination, seeing that the decisions of this Court are uniform on the question that a prayer for enhancement of rent under S. 30, Ben. Ten. Act, was not maintainable in the case of a tenancy consisting entirely of undivided shares in parcels of land or partly of entire parcels of land and partly of undivided shares in parcels of land, as in the case before us. The previous law as explained by this Court was changed by the amendment made in the amending Act of 1928, by adding words to the definition of the word holding. There can also be no question that the amendment of the definition of holding affected vested rights of tenants, and conferred rights on the landlords, which did not exist before the amending Act of 1928 came into operation, and as such was a substantive provision removing a disability so far as landlords were concerned, and removing immunity so far as tenants were concerned, in the matter of enhancement of rent as contemplated by S. 30, Ben. Ten. Act; and in no way could the amendment introduced in the year 1928 be said to be a part of the law of procedure having retrospective effect. There was nothing contained in the amending Act of 1928 which gave the definition of holding a retrospective operation. In the above view of the case before us the appeal is dismissed with costs.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 388

R. C. MITTER, J.

Gajendra Nath Mandal—Petitioner.

v.

Kunja Behari Mistri and others—
Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 780 of 1935, Decided on 10th January 1936, from order of Munsif, 3rd Court, Tamaluk, D/- 4th May 1935.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 26-F—S. 5, Limitation Act, does not apply to application under S. 26-F.

Section 5, Limitation Act, has not been extended to applications made under S. 26-F.

[P 388 C 2]

(b) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 26-F—Application must be made within two months of notice—Where some co-sharer landlord not served with notice, he can apply within reasonable time.

An application for pre-emption based on S. 26-F must be made within two months, but where all the co-sharer landlords have not been served with notice under Ss. 26-C or 26-E, there is no time limit prescribed so far as the landlord not served with the notices and they can file the application within a reasonable time of the transfer: 1932 Cal 289 and 1934 Cal 662, Ref.

[P 389 C 1, 2]

(c) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), Ss. 4 (a), 26-F and 188—Application for addition of co-sharer landlord left out must be made within period prescribed by Ss. 4 (a) and 26-F—S. 22, Limitation Act, does not apply.

Where some of the co-sharers landlords file the application for pre-emption, an application for addition of some of their co-sharers landlords as opposite parties must be made within two periods prescribed by S. 4 (a); and S. 22, Limitation Act does not apply to such an application: 1936 Cal 231, Foll.; 1934 Cal 187, Disting.

[P 390 C 1, 2]

Saroj Kumar Maity—for Petitioner.Narendra Krishna Bose, Durgadas Roy and Bishnupada Mukherjee—for Opposite Parties.Order.—This Rule is directed against the order of the learned Munsiff of Tamaluk, Third Court, by which the application for pre-emption made by the petitioner before me, Gajendra Nath Mandal, under S. 26-F, Ben. Ten. Act, has been dismissed. Opposite Party 14, Promotha Nath Dass, who is the tenant of an occupancy holding, sold 8 acres of land out of his holding to opposite party 1, Kunja Behary Mistry, by a registered conveyance dated 10th October 1933. Gajendra Nath Mandal is the patnidar under one Lilabati Debi, who has 6 annas odd share in the zemindari, and her co-sharers are the opposite parties 1 to 5, 6 (a) to 6 (f), 7 (a) to 7 (c), 8 (a) to 8 (e) and 9 to 13. Promotha Nath Dass held the occupancy holding under the patnidar and under opposite parties 1 to 5, 9 to 13 and under Bankubehary Chatterjee, Sankhu Behary Chatterjee and Natbar Chatterjee, the predecessors in interest of opposite parties 6 (a) to 6 (f), 7 (a) to 7 (c) and 8 (a) to 8 (e) respectively. Natabar had died on 31st August 1933, i. e. before the transfer, and Bankubehary and Sankha Behary, on 28th March 1934 and 27th July 1934, respectively, i. e. after the transfer. In the notice of the transfer the names of the landlords were stated to be the petitioners, the opposite parties 1 to 5, 9 to 13 and Natbar, Benkubehary and Sankhabehary. Natbar was dead some time before the transfer but still he and not his heirs, the opposite parties 8 (a) to 8 (e), were named as one of the landlords in the notice of transfer.

The notice of transfer was served on the petitioners on 26th December 1934 and he made the application for pre-emption on 21st January 1935. In his application he mentioned the names of opposite parties 1 to 5, 9 to 13, Bankubehary, Sankha Behary and Natbar, as his co-sharer landlords. The heirs of the last mentioned three persons were not made parties, the petitioners apparently proceeding on the assumption that they were still alive. In fact he has made a statement on oath, that he being a patnidar under one of their co-sharers, he did not know of their death at the time when he filed his application for pre-emption, but was for the first time put on enquiry by the objection raised by the opposite party 1 on 23rd March 1935. He states that being put on enquiry he came hurriedly to Calcutta, went to the residence of the said three persons and came to know by proper verification early in April 1934 that the said three persons had died on the dates mentioned above and that their heirs were the opposite parties 6 (a) to 6 (f), 7 (a) to 7 (c) and 8 (a) to 8 (e). These statements of his remain practically uncontradicted, but I do not consider them material as S. 5, Limitation Act, has not been extended to applications made under S. 26-F. He first filed two applications for substitution and later on, being advised that as the said three persons had died before he filed his application for pre-emption, he made an application for adding the heirs of the said three persons as parties to his application for pre-emption. This application for addition of parties was made on 27th April 1935. It has been rejected by the learned Munsiff, who after rejecting it has held that the application for pre-emption is defectively constituted as all the landlords are not parties and he has dismissed it.

The question therefore is whether the Munsiff was right in throwing away the petitioner's application for addition of parties, for if that action of the Munsiff is right, his order dismissing the application for pre-emption is manifestly right. Before I deal with the said question, I should point out that on the state of the record it may be held that Bankubehary and Sankha Behary had died before the service of the notice of transfer. The position then is this that no notice of transfer was served on Bankubehary Sankhabehary and Natabar, the persons named in the notice of transfer as some of the cosharer landlords, nor on their legal representatives.

In my judgment the rule ought to be discharged, though I do not agree with the extreme contention of the opposite party No. 1 which I will notice hereafter. An application for pre-emption based on S. 26-F must be made within two months of the service of notice issued under S. 26-C or S. 26-E. The service spoken of here must necessarily mean the service on the persons filing the application for pre-emption. The case where there is one immediate landlord of the holding does not present any difficulty. But there may, as there usually are, be many such landlords. In those classes, of cases if the notice issued under S. 26-C or S. 26-E has been served on all and all file the application for pre-emption, the case also does not present any difficulty. Both these cases are governed by the terms of the statute. The third type is where all the cosharer landlords have not been served with such a notice. All the cosharer landlords may file the application for pre-emption, i. e., some who have been served with the said notice and the rest not served. In this case there is a hiatus in S. 26-F and it has been held that there is no time limit prescribed in the statute so far as the landlords not served with such notice are concerned. They can file the application within a reasonable time of the transfer : 35 C W N 688 (1), 38 C W N 634 (2). The fourth case is where all the landlords have been served with such a notice and some of them only file the application for pre-emption, and the fifth case is where only some of the cosharer landlords have been served with such notice, and the rest have not been served, and the cosharer landlords filing the application for pre-emption are those on whom such notice has been served. The case before me is that of the fifth class.

These are the typical cases, but other cases may be contemplated, but they would really be a combination of the fifth type with the third type which I have mentioned above; that is where some of the cosharers, some served with such a notice and some not so served, and not all the cosharers landlords file the application for pre-emption. To provide for these cases where some of the cosharer landlords file the application for pre-emption the legislature has enacted S. 188 and S. 26-F, sub-s. 4 Ols. (a) and (b). These cases would be of the fourth and the fifth types, or a combination of the fifth type with the third type as indicated above. The first requisite is that the remaining cosharer landlords must be made opposite parties in the application for pre-emption filed by some of the cosharer landlords in the manner provided in sub-ss. 1 and 2, S. 148-A; that is to say all the remaining cosharer landlords must be made opposite parties, and on the application being admitted a summons or notice in the prescribed form calling upon the said cosharer opposite parties to join as co-applicants must be issued and served. The second requisite is that the co-sharer landlords who file the application for pre-emption are to give an opportunity to the cosharer landlords opposite parties of joining in the application for pre-emption, that is, of becoming co-applicants.

In S. 188 the legislature uses the word and "and are given, etc." Sub-s. 4 (a) S. 26-F prescribes the time limit within which a cosharer landlord opposite party has to make the application for being transferred as co-applicant. In all the aforesaid three cases, which I have mentioned above, where some of the cosharer landlords file the application for pre-emption, it would seem to follow that the application of the co-sharer landlords, who have filed the application for pre-emption, for addition of his co-sharer landlords as opposite parties must be made within the two periods of time mentioned in sub-s. 4 (a), S. 26-F. The question whether a co-sharer landlord opposite party can apply for pre-emption as a co-applicant, when he gets through Court notice of the application for pre-emption after a month of its filing, whether he is made a party in the original application for pre-emption or added as a party within a month from the date when it is filed need not be considered in this case, as on the dates given above the application for addition of parties, as also the application for substitution in the case before me, were filed much later than one month of the filing of the application for pre-emption. That question will have to be considered when a proper case arises and it may be that the question as to whether a Court will or can relieve a party whose rights have been prejudiced by an act of the Court itself will have to be carefully considered in such a case.

1. Suryya Kumar Mitra v. Munshi Noabali, 1932 Cal 289 = 136 I O 871 = 35 C W N 688 = 59 Cal 15.

2. Baikantha Chandra v. Samsul Huq, 1934 Cal 662 = 152 I O 279 = 38 C W N 634 = 61 Cal 870.

The view which I have taken in this case, that the application of the petitioner for addition of some of his cosharers as opposite parties was not entertainable at the time it was made, accords with the view of my learned brother Lodge, J., in the case of 39 C W N 1178 (3), which decision I follow. It now remains for me to notice the extreme contention of the opposite party No. 1. The learned Advocate appearing for him contends that all landlords are necessary parties to an application for pre-emption. There I agree with him. He further says that if some of the cosharer landlords are left out in the original application for pre-emption the application for pre-emption becomes a good application only when the co-sharer landlords so left out are added as parties. There also I agree with him. His third point is that S. 22, Lim. Act, applies to the addition of necessary parties and as landlords necessary parties to an application for pre-emption that section furnishes the answer as to when a cosharer landlord originally left and can be added as a party. To substantiate it he cites before me the case of 38 C W N 409 (4). That case lays down the proposition that S. 22, Lim. Act, does not apply to the addition as defendants of proper parties, who are not necessary parties. Having regard to the provisions of S. 22, Lim. Act, and the facts of that case, and observations of my learned brother Mitter, J., at p. 413, left hand column, the words "necessary parties" have been used in the judgment to mean parties against whom relief has been claimed by the plaintiff. Inasmuch as in an application for pre-emption filed by a cosharer landlord no relief can be claimed against his cosharer landlord, I hold that the contention of the opposite party No. 1, that the defect of parties occurring by reason of the cosharer landlords being left out in the application for pre-emption must be cured within two months of the date of the service of the notice issued under S. 26-C or S. 26-E on the cosharer landlord who had filed the application for pre-emption, is not sound and I overrule it. The result is that for the reasons given above I discharge this rule with costs; hearing-fee one gold mohur, in favour of opposite party No. 1.

V.B./R.K.

Rule discharged.

4. Secy. of State v. Dharendra Nath Roy, 1934 Cal 187=151 I C 1076=38 C W N 409=59 C L J 295.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 390

R. C. MITTER, J.

Kusum Kumari Devi—Decree-holder—Petitioner.

v.

Gayanath Pramanik — Judgment-debtor and others—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 369 of 1935, Decided on 28th August 1935, from order of Munsif, 1st Court, Manikganj, D/- 25th February 1935.

Execution—Rateable distribution—Case not falling under S. 73, Civil P. C.—Court can distribute pro rata.

Where the parties are not entitled to claim rateable distribution under S. 73, Civil P. C., by reason of the fact that none has applied for execution before the date of receipt of assets, to the Court having the custody of the assets, but all the same have made attachments, the attachment does not create any lien in favour of any of them, and the Court holding the assets can divide the same amongst all of them pro rata: 1917 Cal 13, Rel. on. [P 391 C 2]

3. Mahammad Garib Hossein v. Sm. Halimannessa Bibi, 1936 Cal 231 = 63 Cal 102 = 39 C W N 1178.

Bankim Ch. Mukerjee, Jitendra Mohan Banerjee and Nirmal Kumar Sen—for Petitioner.

Order.—This Rule is on behalf of one of the creditors of opposite party No. 1. The other creditors of the said opposite party No. 1 are opposite parties Nos. 2, 3 and 4. The opposite party No. 2 is however a secured creditor and the rule is not against her. The question raised in this rule is a question relating to rateable distribution not under the provisions of S. 73, Civil P. C., but on general principles of the surplus sale proceeds of a holding, which belonged to opposite party No. 1, but has been sold in execution of a rent decree obtained by the landlord against him. The holding was sold by the Munsif, 1st Court, Manikganj, on 24th September 1934, for a sum of Rs. 350. The whole of the purchase money was in Court on or before 14th November 1934. The claim under the rent decree was only Rs. 48 odd and after the satisfaction of that decree there remained a balance of Rs. 302 odd. Opposite party No. 2 had obtained a mortgage decree against the opposite party No. 1 for Rs. 202-13-2, the subject of the mortgage being the holding which was sold on 24th September 1934. She laid a claim to the surplus sale-proceeds, and by order No. 15 the learned Munsif, First Court, Manikganj, has allowed opposite party No. 2 to withdraw the sum of Rs. 202 odd out of the surplus sale-proceeds. That order has not been challenged in this rule and cannot be challenged. After the claim of opposite party No. 2 to the surplus sale-proceeds had been allowed by order No. 15, a sum of about Rs. 100 was still left and the scramble to get this surplus was between the petitioner, opposite party No. 3 and the opposite party No. 4. On 19th November 1934 the opposite party No. 3 applied to attach this surplus sale-proceeds. The application was made in the 1st Munsif's Court at Manikganj. The claim under his decree is Rs. 52-12-6. On the same day opposite party No. 4 who had a decree against opposite party No. 1 for the sum of Rs. 43 odd had the surplus sale-proceeds attached through the Munsif, 2nd Court, Manikganj. On 24th November 1934 the petitioner who had obtained a decree against opposite party No. 1 for a large amount caused the attachment of the surplus sale-proceeds to be effected through the Munsif, 2nd Court, Manikganj. From the dates which I have mentioned above, the petitioner and the opposite party No. 4 did not make any application for execution to the Court which held the money. Besides, all the attachments were issued after the date of the receipt of the assets by the first Court of the Munsif at Manikganj. Opposite party No. 3 however made the application for execution there. But his application was also after the date of receipt of the assets. On these facts, there cannot be doubt that none of the parties, namely petitioner and opposite parties Nos. 3 and 4 are entitled to claim rateable distribution on the basis of S. 73, Civil P. C. The position, therefore, is this that the surplus sale-proceeds which amounted to about Rs. 100 was in the custody of 1st Munsif of Manikganj. The attachments had been made at the instance of three sets of creditors. These attachments did not create any lien in favour of any of them and therefore their rights cannot be detained by priority of attachment. Having regard to this fact according to the principle laid down in the case of 44 Cal 1072 (1), I hold that each of these three sets of creditors namely petitioner and opposite parties Nos. 3 and 4, must get the surplus sale proceeds divided amongst them pro rata, that is in proportion to their decrees.

The proper form of the order for the Munsif, 1st Court, Manikganj, to pass would have been to retain the portion which fell to the share of opposite party No. 3 pro rata for payment to him, and to send the Munsif, 2nd Court, Manikganj, the amounts which would fall due to the share of the petitioner and the opposite party No. 4 pro rata, i. e., according to the principle which I have indicated above. But having regard to the fact that the amount involved is very small, I do not make this further order because it would involve the parties in more costs at the time of the withdrawal of the amount from the Court of the 2nd Munsif, and therefore with the consent of opposite party No. 4 and the petitioner I direct that the money which would fall to the respective shares of the opposite party No. 4 and the petitioner should be paid by the Munsif, 1st Court,

1. Thakurdas Motilal v. Joseph Iskender, 1917 Cal 18=41 I O 516=21 C W N 887=25 C L J 595=44 Cal 1072.

Manikganj. The opposite party No. 3 would of course get the money that falls to his share from the 1st Munsif's Court. The rule is accordingly made absolute. The order of the learned Munsif, No. 16, is modified in the way indicated above. There will be no order for costs in favour of or against any of the parties.

V.B./R.K. Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 392

D. N. MITTER AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Radharani Dassya and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Brindarani Dassya—Defendant and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 140 of 1932, Decided on 17th January 1936, from original decree of Sub-Judge, 5th Court, Dacca, D/- 20th April 1932.

(a) Hindu Law—Widow—Widow's estate—Widow, mother or daughter represents last male owner in estate fully.

A Hindu widow or a Hindu daughter or a Hindu mother represents the last male owner of an estate fully, for some purposes and it would not be right to describe her right as a right of enjoying her husband's estate now that her rights are properly understood. It was so in 1877 : 5 Cal 776 (PC), Ref. [P 395 C 2]

(b) Hindu Law—Widow—Surrender reserving Moshahara in substance in nature of maintenance allowance—Surrender is not invalid.

Where a limited owner, be she a Hindu widow, or a Hindu daughter, surrenders her interest in the property in favour of the next reversioner, reserving a small monthly allowance (moshahara), which in substance is in the nature of a maintenance allowance, the surrender is not invalid and can be upheld as a surrender : 1921 P C 107 and 1919 PC 75, Ref.

[P 396 C 1]

(c) Hindu Law—Widow — Surrender in favour of one reversioner as karta of others—Surrender is valid.

A surrender by a Hindu widow, Hindu mother or a Hindu daughter in order to be effective must be in favour of all the reversioners for the time being at the time of the execution of the document. But where the surrender in effect is a surrender in favour of all the reversioners, as where the document is executed in favour of one of the reversioners as karta and that person is the de facto and de jure manager of the estate held by the reversioner and the intention to transfer in favour of all is apparent, the mere fact of the document being in favour of the one would not detract from the transaction being a valid surrender : 1918 PC 196 and 1935 Cal 689, Ref. [P 396 C 2; P 397 C 1]

(d) Hindu Law — Family arrangement—Settlement of doubtful claim is sufficient consideration.

The settlement of doubtful right is a sufficient consideration to support a family arrangement. [P 398 C 1]

Atul Chandra Gupta and Prokash Chandra Pakrashi—for Appellants.

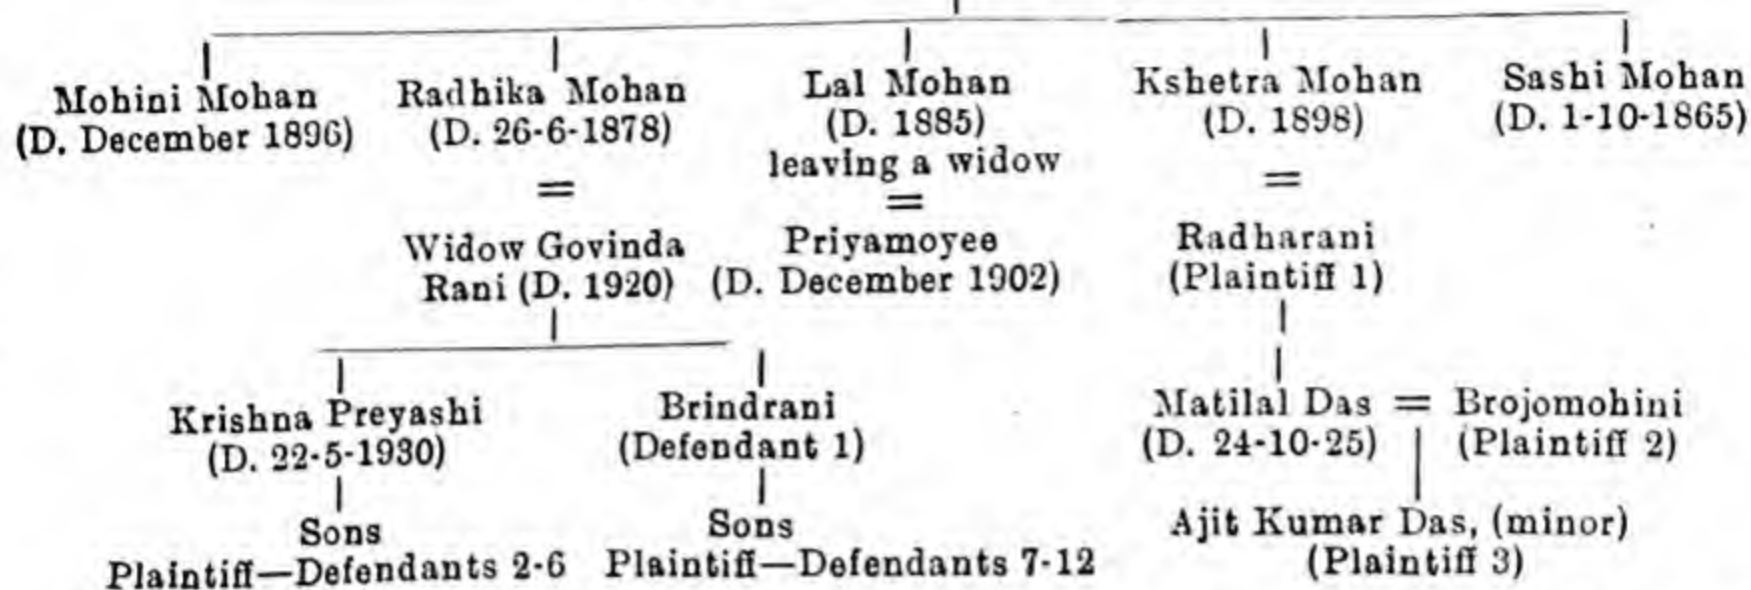

Brojolal Chakravarty, Rajendra Chandra Guha and Prafulla K. Guha—for Respondents.

D. N. Mitter, J.—This is an appeal against the decree of the Subordinate Judge of Dacca dated 20th April 1932 by which he dismissed the plaintiffs' suit for recovery of possession of about 16 gds. share of the estate of one Madhu Sudan Das, a wealthy banker and zemindar of the district of Dacca. The claim of the plaintiffs, who are appellants before us, turns on the legal effect of a document which was executed so far back as in the year 1877. In order to understand the questions raised by this appeal on behalf of the plaintiffs it is necessary to state a few circumstances which led to the execution of this document dated 29th September 1877 by Shyampeari Dassya in favour of Mohini Mohan Das, the eldest son of the said Madhusudan Das. The relationship of the parties are shown in the following genealogical tree which is admitted by both parties.

(See page 393)

It appears from the said tree that Madhu Sudan Das died leaving him surviving five sons Mohini Mohan, Radhika Mohan, Lal Mohan, Kshetra Mohan, and Sashi Mohan, and his wife Shyam Peary. One of the sons Sashi Mohan, died a few months after the death of Madhu Sudan Das on 1st October 1865, and under the Dayabhaga system of the Hindu Law Sashi Mohan's 1/5th share, which corresponds to 3 as. 4 gds. share in the estate of Madhu Sudan Das, devolved on his mother Shyampeari. It appears that a will was executed by Madhu Sudan on 24th November 1855, several years before his death which happened on 12th April 1865. That will is to be found printed at p. 1 of the second part of the paper book and has been marked as Ex. B in the suit. It is not necessary to refer to all the terms of the said will beyond stating that there is a provision in the said will by which the power of management of the estate left by Madhu Sudan after Madhu Sudan's death was given to the eldest son Mohini Mohan. Mohini according to the power given to him by the will was managing the properties

MADHUSUDHAN DAS = Shyam Peary
(D. 12-4-1865) | (D. 16-11-1918)

mentioned in the schedule as forming part of the estate of Madhu Sudan and other properties mentioned in the schedule. The next event which requires mention is the execution of the Nibandhan Patra on 7th December 1875, between the sons of Madhu Sudan except Sashi Mohan who had died in the meantime. See Ex. F printed at p. 11 of the second part of the paper book. In this Nibandhan patra it was stated that they were owners in equal shares of all the properties the moveable and immovable which stood in the name of their father Madhu Sudan as also of the money lending and trading concern, etc. In para. 1 of the said document it was stated that each of the sons would get a sum of Rs. 300 per month from the estate and that Mohini Mohan was to carry on the management and act as the Karta of the 16 as. of the estate left by his father. The karta was given the power to sell off any useless moveable or immovable property of unprofitable nature with the consent of all the brothers. The Karta was to conduct law suits relating to the estate in his own name after stating the names of the three other brothers.

The one important thing which need be noticed with regard to this Nibandhan Patra is that this document which was executed in 1875 ignores the fact that Sashi Mohan's 1/5th share in Madhusudan's estate had several years before devolved on the mother Shyampeari and practically ignores Shyampeari's interest in the estate. This brings us to the consideration of the Nadabinama which was executed by Shympeari in favour of Mohini Mohan as Karta of the joint family on 29th September 1875: See Ex. A printed at p. 21 of the second part of the paper book. It is important to notice in connection with this document that there is a recital in this document of the will of Madhusudan, more particularly of the fact that Mohini Mohan, the eldest son, being capable, obtained a certificate from the District Judge of Dacca under Act 27 of 1860 according to the terms of the Will and had been in possession enjoying, managing and acting as Karta of all the moveable and immovable properties left by Madhusudan. There is a further statement that Mohini Mohan and other brothers who were alive were the real heirs of Madhusudan Das, but according to the Hindu Shastras Shyampeari was entitled to a right of enjoying her shares in the estate left by her deceased son during her lifetime and the following clause may be quoted in extenso; because it will bear on another question, namely, that this document had the effect of a family arrangement apart from its being a deed of release. That clause is to the following effect:

I having accordingly applied for obtaining a certificate under S. 27 of 1860, in respect of that share, my application was rejected up to the High Court, and the properties have remained in your possession and enjoyment and under your management. Although, being a Pardanashin woman of a respectable family, I was unable to carry on management, yet being led by the evil advice of mischievous persons, I at times expressed a desire for instituting a title suit in Court for the share of the said deceased son and thus caused pain to the good heart of you, my son, born of my own womb, and as you are dissatisfied on account of that, I am in great uneasiness of mind.

Then follows the clause by which she purports to give up the right of enjoyment which she had in respect of the share left by the deceased son in the properties mentioned in the document as well as in such properties as may in future be acquired with the profits thereto on condition of her getting a Moshahara or monthly allowance on and from the time of execution of the document till the end of her life, at the rate of Rs. 150 at a lump per month out of the share left by the deceased son. The next clause is to the following effect:

Therefore being in full possession of my senses and out of my own accord, I give up, by this Nadabi (Release) whatever rights of enjoyment I have or had under the Sastras, in the share left by the deceased sons, on the aforesaid terms. Save and except getting this fixed monthly allowance in respect of the share of the said deceased son, I shall never be entitled to file any suit in Court, demanding any accounts, etc., for the past and making any sort of claims, etc., for the future.

The plaintiffs base their claim on the contention that this document as construed does not amount to surrender of Shyampear's interest in the property which she inherited from her son Sashi Mohan. The contention of the plaintiffs both here as also in the Court below is that it was not a surrender of her entire interest, but it was merely a transfer of the right of management to the eldest son. It was further contended that the surrender, even if it be assumed to be of the entire interest of Shyampear in her son's estate, was not right in form as it was in favour of only the eldest son Mohini Mohan who was only one of the four reversioners alive at the time of the execution of the document. The deed was also attacked on the ground that it was not a deed of surrender as there was a reservation of an allowance of Rs. 150 in a lump per month which is something very distinct from the reservation of certain portion of the estate for maintenance of the limited owner. It was therefore, contended that as this was not a deed which, in accordance with the Hindu Law was operative as a deed of surrender on the death of Shyampear which happened on 16th November 1918, the property would revert to the reversioners. Motilal Das, the father of plaintiff 3, was one of such reversioners he having died on 24th October 1925 and plaintiffs 1 and 2 are said to be trustees for plaintiff 3. On the other hand the contentions of defendants, now respondents, have been that this deed of 1877 is a deed of surrender within the meaning of the Hindu Law and had the effect of extinguishing the right of Shyampear in her son Sashi Mohan's estate.

In the alternative it was pleaded that even if it was not operative as a deed of surrender she being a limited owner under the Hindu Law the transaction could be upheld or sustained on the ground of this being a family arrangement and that the consideration for this family arrangement was the settlement of some dispute and it is said that the settlement of doubtful claims had been held to be a sufficient consideration for such an agreement, a family arrangement. The Subordinate Judge has accepted both these contentions urged on behalf of the defendants and has accordingly dismissed the plaintiffs' suit.

In appeal before us Mr. Gupta, who appears for the plaintiffs has raised the contention that the legal effect of the transaction of 1877, Ex. A, was not that it was meant to be a deed of surrender and relinquishment and so as to accelerate the estate for the benefit of the next reversioner, but that this was really a deed transferring the management of the estate to Mohini Mohan during the lifetime of Shyampear. He has based this contention on certain words in the documents to which we shall have to refer presently. He has further contended that even assuming that there was an extinction of the rights of Shyampear in her son's estate by the terms of the deed, the deed in law cannot operate as a relinquishment of her rights in her son's estate because in consideration of the deed a portion of the usufruct of the property was retained by the limited owner, the Hindu mother Shyampear. This transaction was further attacked on the ground that it was not in favour of the entire body of reversioners for the time being. It was only in favour of one of the sons who was one of the several reversioners and therefore it offends against the rule of the Hindu law that the surrender in order to be effective must be in favour of the entire body of reversioners. On the question of the family arrangement it was argued that there was no dispute between the parties, there was no settlement of doubtful claims and therefore there was no necessity to make the family arrangement valid. It is necessary to determine each of these two contentions separately. With regard to the first contention that this was merely a deed of arrangement concerning management and that this was really a deed of transfer transferring the management to Mohini Mohan we have referred to the terms of Ex. A and stress was laid on the following expression in the document.

Whereas my sons, yourself and others, are the real heirs and owners of the share left by the said deceased son, and whereas I am never myself capable of managing the same without (the help of) those appointed to act as karta of the estate left by my husband, namely, yourself and others, I proposed to give up the right of enjoyment which I have and had in respect of the share left by the said deceased son.

Stress was also laid on another passage of the document, namely:

Therefore being in full possession of my senses and out of my own accord, I give up, by this nadabi (release), whatever rights of enjoyment I have or had under the Sastras, in the share left by the deceased sons.

It has been argued and very strenuously that she had only a right of enjoyment and that she was only parting with the right to enjoy this property during her lifetime, in other words by this document she was only surrendering the right to manage this property as a limited owner. It is not possible to accede to this contention. In this connexion it has to be remembered that the exact nature of a Hindu widow's or a Hindu daughter's or a Hindu mother's estate was not properly understood in the year 1877. But some Hindu widow's estate was regarded as an estate for life as is understood in English law and consequently expressions regarding the rights of a Hindu widow in her husband's estate being merely synonymous with the right of enjoyment for life were used. In that view the Bengali expression of the right to enjoy upa bhoger je sathwa chila would correctly represent her rights. That there was some misapprehension as to the exact nature of the rights of a Hindu widow in 1877 was recognized by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 5 Cal 776 (1), at p. 789, where their Lordships pointed out that a widow who succeeds to the estate of her husband in default of male issue, whether she succeeds by inheritance or survivorship, does not take a mere life interest in the property. And the whole estate is for the time vested in her absolutely for some purposes, though in some respects for only a qualified interest and that she holds an estate of inheritance to herself and the heirs of her husband.

It is not surprising therefore that in this document which was executed in the Mufassil in 1877 when the conveyancing was very little known, expression like the right of enjoyment of a Hindu widow or other females with limited rights was described as her sole right. A Hindu widow or a Hindu daughter or a Hindu mother represents the last male owner of an estate fully, for some purposes and it would not be right to describe her right as a right of enjoying her husband's estate now that her rights are properly understood. It was not so in 1877. In this connexion one has to remember that it was the intention of Shyampearī to surrender her rights in her son's estate is evidenced by another important event which happened during her lifetime about 6 (six) years after the execution of this document. That it was not a deed of transference of management in favour of Mohini Mohan would appear clear from the certified copy of the Register of Suits in the 2nd Court of the Subordinate Judge of Dacca relating to Suit No. 85 of 1883. See Ex. 8 printed at pp. 36 to 43 of the second part of the paper book. There Shyampearī was suing for a monthly allowance not only against Mohini but also against the other two sons of Madhusudan Das, namely Lal Mohan and Kshetra Mohan, and also against Gobinda Rani, the widow of the third son Radhika Mohan. This would show that she understood clearly enough that all that she could get from the surviving sons of Madhu Sudan, to whom by reason of this deed the entire interest of Sashi Mohan in the estate passed, was the monthly allowance of Rs. 150. This lady Shyampearī lived for nearly 41 years after the execution of this deed and it is a significant circumstance that during this long period she took up the position which showed that she had nothing to do with Sashi Mohan's estate and all that she was entitled to was the monthly allowance for which she from time to time asserted her claim.

It is next said that this deed does not operate as an absolute relinquishment of her rights because a substantial portion of the usufruct of the properties was reserved for her, and the argument turns on the expression "Moshahara" as used in this document. It is said that the word "Moshahara" does not mean maintenance and if this contention is right it is contended that where anything else than maintenance is reserved by a deed which purports to be a deed of surrender under the authorities the deed of surrender must be held to be invalid. It is no doubt true that in some of the recent decisions of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council deeds of surrender have been upheld where small portions have been reserved for maintenance of a limited owner be she a Hindu widow or a Hindu mother or a Hindu daughter. We may refer in this connexion to the case of 47 I A 233 (2). In that case small portions of land were conveyed to the widowed mother for maintenance and it was held that that circumstance did not affect the validity of the deed of surrender. In that case Lord Dunedin observed as follows :

1. Moniram Kolita v. Keri Kolutani, (1880) 5 Cal 776=7 I A 115=4 Sar 103 (P C).

The conveyance of small portions of land to the widowed mother was unobjectionable, as it was only for maintenance.

That has been the trend of the decisions of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee. The question therefore turns as to whether this expression as used in this document is to be regarded as maintenance allowance. In this connexion we may refer to a contemporaneous document which was executed on the same date, namely, the Ekrarnama executed by Mohini in favour of Shyampearri Ex. 1. (See p. 15 of the second part of the paper book). Towards the end of that document there is this recital which is important to notice in this connexion :

Whereas, in father's will, there is permission (provision) for maintaining you and the sisters so long as we are capable, and whereas you have by a Nadabi (deed of release) renounced all claims and demands regarding the enjoyment of the share left by the deceased brother Sashi Mohan, for your life, and have desired to receive a sum of Rs. 150 (one hundred and fifty rupees) in lump per month, from the present month up till the end of your life, out of the share of the said deceased brother, I, under the terms of the will of my deceased father and on the strength of my position as Karta of the estate left by him, of my own accord and in full possession of my senses execute this Ekrarnama and provide that so long as you live you shall get a sum of Rs. 150 (one hundred and fifty rupees) in lump per month out of the said share; you shall not be entitled to give away or sell the same to anyone, myself or the persons acting as Karta after we shall pay up the said money to you every month.

Reading the two documents together there can be doubt that Rs. 150 was being given to this lady in lieu of maintenance. It is true that the word "Moshahara" means monthly share of allowance (See Wilson's Glossary); but it has to be read having regard to Ex. 1, and having regard to the circumstance, namely, that although a provision was made in their father's will for the maintenance of Shyampearri, as a matter of fact she received no maintenance from after the death of Madhu Sudan up to the time of the execution of this document as was directed by the will of Madhu Sudan. The amount of Rs. 150 per month was really a suitable maintenance, having regard to the value and income of the estate and it emerged in the course of discussion before us that there are papers on the record to show that the value of the share of Sashi Mohan's estate is about Rs. 2,36,000. See Ex. L, the certified copy of decree in Title Suit No. 73 of 1883 of the Second Court of the Subordinate Judge of Dacca between Sreemati Gobinda Rani Dassya, the widow of the late Radhika Mohan Das, on the one hand, and Mohini Mohan Das, Lal Mohan Das, and Kshetra Mohan Das on the other. This document is printed at p. 32 of the second part of the paper book. This is what is stated in that document :

The plaintiff (Gobindarani) has therefore instituted this suit for recovery of possession of a 5 as. 6 gds. 2 krts. share of the ancestral as well as acquired immoveable properties of her husband, valued at Rs. 2,36,000 and a 4 as. share of the moveable properties or in default thereof for the value thereof amounting to Rs. 15,000 and for getting Nikash (accounts), which is valued at Rs. 89,000 in all for Rupees 3,40,000 (three lacs and forty thousand rupees.)

From this it appears that the value of 5 as. 6 gds. would be over Rs. 15,000 which would fetch an income of nearly Rs. 600 per month. The maintenance was therefore a suitable maintenance to which she was entitled as heir of the estate of Sasi Mohan.

The next ground on which this deed is attacked is that it was not a surrender in favour of all the reversioners. If that fact could be established undoubtedly the appellant should succeed, for it is now established on high authority that the surrender must be in favour of all the reversioners for the time being at the time of the execution of the document. See the cases of 46 I A 72 (3) and

2. Sureshwar Misser v. Maheshrani Misrain, 1921 P C 107=57 I C 325=47 I A 233=48 Cal 100 (P C).

3. Rangaswami Goundan v. Nachlappa Goundan, 1918 P C 196=50 I C 498=46 I A 72=42 Mad 523 (P C).

47 I A 233 (2), and the recent decision in 43 C W N 208 (4). It is true that on the face of the document the deed of relinquishment appears to be in favour of Mohini, but he is described there in his capacity as karta and that the intention was to transfer the interest of Sashi Mohan's estate in favour of all, would be apparent also from the document Ex. 8, the certified copy of extract from the Register of suits of the second Court of the Subordinate Judge, Dacca, relating to Suit No. 85 of 1883, that liability of paying the mosahara allowance was imposed not on Mohini Mohan alone but also on the other brothers Lal Mohan and Kshetro Mohan as also on Gobindarani, the widow of Radhika Mohan, Radhika Mohan having died in the meantime. It would also appear from the claim of Gobinda Rani (Ex. L printed at p. 32 of the second part of the paper book) that she was treating the document of 1272 B. S., as a document in favour of all the reversioners. See para. 12, p. 34 of the second part of the paper book :

(My) mother Syampeary Dasya got a 1/5th share of the entire estate by virtue of inheritance from her deceased son Sasi Mohan Das and she having given up the same in favour of the plaintiff's husband and us, the defendants, by a nadabi (deed of release) executed in my favour on 14th Ashin 1284 B. S. the plaintiffs' husband's share that the plaintiff's title is established. In lieu of the said nadabi (release) I, on behalf of myself and all my brothers, agreed to pay a monthly allowance of Rs. 150 one hundred and fifty rupees, to my said mother Syampeary Dasya till the end of her life by executing a deed of ikrar (agreement) in her favour on the said date and am bound to pay the same.

This is really a statement taken from the particulars of the petition of defendant 1, that is Mohini Mohan Das, so that Mohini and other parties understood clearly enough that the deed was operative in favour of all the reversioners for the time being. We agree with the Subordinate Judge that this was a bona fide deed of surrender, that she got Rs. 150 per month as a sort of allowance or maintenance, and reserving such allowance she absolutely renounced her legitimate share in the estate. It was not a decree to divide the estate between the heirs and the reversioners for the time being. Whatever doubts there may be with regard to the transaction as contended for on behalf of the appellant in substance and disregarding the form of Ex. A it seems to us that there was a complete self-effacement of the widow's share which precluded her from asserting any further claim to the estate of her son. The execution of Ex. A and the other ikrarnama which really forms part of the same transaction on 29th September 1877 followed by the acceptance for nearly 41 years of maintenance under the terms of these documents amounted in our opinion to a complete surrender by Shyampearri of her interest in her son's estate in favour of the entire body of reversioners. We may refer in this connexion to certain observations of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 46 I A 259 (5), where the transfer was made in the circumstances somewhat similar to the present. There their Lordships point out thus :

In the present case there was indeed no formal surrender by the widow of her estate, but there was an express agreement, binding upon her, that for considerations which appeared to be sufficient she would abandon the claim which at the time she had a good right to make and would have no right, claim or demand in respect of the estate of her late husband. It is true that the documents were drawn up on the footing not of a surrender of an acknowledged right but of an admission that the right did not exist; but in substance, and disregarding the form, there was a complete self-effacement by the widow which precluded her from asserting any further claim to the estate. The question is no doubt one of difficulty, but upon the whole their Lordships have come to the conclusion that the execution of the two ekrarnamas, followed by the acceptance for 30 years of maintenance under the terms of those documents, amounted to a complete relinquishment by Anandi Koer of her estate in favour of Mahabir, and accordingly that the title of Mahabir's representatives is established and the plaintiff's action should have been dismissed on this ground.

The contention, therefore, which challenges this deed as not being a deed of surrender valid under the Hindu law, must fail. Mr. Chakravarty has sought to support this deed as a deed of family arrangement. This is the view which has also been taken by the Subordinate Judge and we agree. It appears further that there was a dispute between the sons of Shyampearri with regard to the management of this estate and it appears from the recitals in Ex. A that she unsuccessfully made an application for obtaining a certificate in respect of Sashi Mohan's share—her application having been rejected up to the High Court and that she intended to institute a title suit in respect of the share of her deceased son. In order to avoid that and in settlement of that dispute this arrangement of 1877 was entered into. It is difficult at this distance of time to get direct evidence of the circumstances under which the document was executed. It appears that in order to avoid litigation she entered into the family arrangement and surrendered the entire interest in the estate that she had inherited from Sashi Mohan and got Rs. 150 a month which really meant a monthly allowance. The settlement of doubtful right is a sufficient consideration to support a family arrangement. This arrangement can also be supported as a family arrangement. The substantial grounds that have been urged on behalf of the appellant having failed the entire appeal must fail. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

4. Ram Krishna Prodhan v. Sm. Kousalya Mani Dasi, 1935 Cal 689=158 I C 925=62 C L J 490=40 C W N 208.

5. Bhagwat Koer v. Dhanukdhari Prasad Singh, 1919 P C 75=53 I C 347=46 I A 259=47 Cal 466 (P O).

Patterson, J.—I agree.

V.B./R.K. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 398

R. C. MITTER, J.

Rai Nalinaksha Dutta Bahadur — Petitioner.

v.

Kazi Abdul Jalil and others—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 846 of 1936, Decided on 21st April 1936.

Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 26 (1), (5) and (6)—Sale of share in occupancy holding—Pre-emption application by landlord—Pre-emption suit by another co-sharer by inheritance—Latter's suit decreed—Landlord's application held should be dismissed by reason of S. 26-F (1).

Certain co-sharers sold their share in an occupancy holding and getting notice of it the landlord filed an application for pre-emption under S. 26-F. Pending this application, another co-sharer of the transferors who had become a co-sharer by inheritance under Mahomedan law, filed a suit for pre-emption to enforce the right under Mahomedan law. Both the application and the suit were heard together. The suit was decreed:

Held: that the landlord's application should be dismissed as there was no right, title or interest left in the vendees and as there could be no order for pre-emption against the co-sharer who had obtained the decree by reason of S. 26-F (1): 1934 Cal 3, Disting.

[P 398 C 2 ; P 399 C 1, 2]

Hariprasanna Mukherji — for Petitioner.

Bijali Bhusan Sanyal and Surajit Chandra Lahiri (for Deputy Registrar) —for Opposite Parties.

Judgment.—This appeal raises a question, so far as I am aware, of first impression. The position is that six persons, namely Surman Mondal Kola and five others, who may conveniently be called the Kolas, had an interest in an occupancy holding; Muhamed Soleman was their co-sharer in the said holding. They are all Muhamedans. On 4th April 1934 the Kolas sold their share in the holding to opposite parties 1 to 3 who are also Muhamedans. The notice of this transfer was served upon the landlord, the petitioner before me.

On getting the notice the petitioner made an application for pre-emption under S. 26-F, Tenancy Act, in the Court of the Second Munsif at Krishnagar on 6th June 1934. The transferees, namely opposite parties 1 to 3, were made parties defendants to that application. While this application was pending Muhamad Soleman instituted in the same Court a suit to enforce the right which he had to pre-empt under the Mahomedan law. The landlord was made defendant 10. This suit for pre-emption and the application under S. 26-F were heard together and one judgment was pronounced. In dealing with the suit for pre-emption the learned Munsif came to the conclusion that the landlord, the petitioner before me, was not a necessary party. He came to the conclusion that Mohamad Soleman was a co-sharer of the Kolas and he had become a co-sharer not by purchase but by inheritance from his maternal grandfather who was a co-sharer of the predecessor of Surman and five other Kolas. The learned Munsif made a decree for pre-emption in favour of Mohamed Soleman and directed him to put in the consideration money for which the Kolas transferred the property, with interest together with costs of conveyance and registration, within a fortnight from the date of the judgment. The money was put in by Mohamed Soleman within time. Therefore he has got an absolute decree for pre-emption in his favour. The decree was given on the basis that as a co-sharer in the property he had got the right of pre-emption both the transferors and the transferees being Mohamadans.

After disposing of the suit for pre-emption, the learned Munsif took up the application for pre-emption under S. 26-F. He came to the conclusion that the petitioner had not in the circumstances of the case any right of pre-emption because of sub-section 8 of that section. In my judgment the order is correct. By reason of the pre-emption decree passed in the pre-emption suit the transferees, opposite parties 1 to 3, ceased to have any right, title and interest in the property purchased by them since Mohamed Soleman has complied with the decree for pre-emption by putting in Court the necessary money. The title to that part of the holding which belonged to the Kolas is now in Mohamed Soleman and is not in opposite parties 1 to 3. S. 26-F, sub-section (1), Cl. (a) enacts that when the transferee of an occupancy holding is a co-sharer in the tenancy whose existing interest has accrued otherwise than by purchase, the landlord has no right to pre-empt. In the present case Mohamed Soleman, who has now acquired the interest of the Kolas by reason of the decree in his suit for pre-emption, is a co-sharer and he had derived his character as co-sharer tenant by inheritance. Sub-section (5) of the said section deals with the making of an order for pre-emption in favour of the immediate landlord, and sub-section (6) deals with the effect of such an order. That sub-section says :

From the date of the making of the order under sub-section (5), the right, title and interest in the holding or portion or share thereof accruing to the transferee from the transfer shall be deemed to have vested in the immediate landlord and co-sharer immediate landlord, if any, whose application has been allowed, &c.

At the date of the order, in Misc. Case No. 42 of 1935 the right, title and interest in the holding had already vested in Mohamed Soleman by reason of the pre-emption decree in the suit. There was no right, title and interest left to opposite parties 1 to 3 on which the pre-emption order, if made under S. 26-F, sub-section (5), can operate. That is to my mind a difficulty in the way of the landlord in the present case. The title in the holding which formerly belonged to the Kolas has now vested in Mohamed Soleman. There can be no order for pre-emption against Mohamed Soleman by reason of the provision of S. 26-F, sub-section (1), Cl. (a). This is the main difficulty which I feel in the way of the petitioner landlord. In this view of the matter it is not necessary for me to consider the precise effect of sub-section (8), S. 26-F, although there is much force in the contention of the opposite parties based on the said sub-section. Both the landlord and Mohamed Soleman had based their cause of action for pre-emption on the self, same transfer, viz. the transfer by the Kolas. Mohamed Soleman, who is a co-sharer in the tenancy other than by purchase, has already got pre-emption order in his suit, and the title of the Kolas had vested in him.

In support of his contention the learned Advocate for the petitioner relied upon the decision in 37 C W N 848 (1). I do not think that this case has any bearing on the present case so far as the present controversy is concerned. In the last part of the judgment only an obvious proposition is laid down that a man can be pre-empt against himself. It is for these reasons that I discharge this rule, but in the circumstances I make no order as to costs.

K.S./R.K.

Rule discharged.

1. Abdul Jalil v, Sm. Mahamuda Khatun, 1934 Cal 3=147 I O 1040=37 O W N 848.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 399

NASIM ALI AND EDGLEY, JJ.

Bogra Loan Office, Ltd.—Appellant—Petitioner.

v.

Jyotish Chandra Chanda and another—Respondents—Opposite Parties.

Civil Ref. No. 3 of 1935, Decided on 29th April 1936.

Stamp Act (1899), Sch. 1, Arts. 1 and 5—Implied promise by itself does not render document liable to duty higher than what is required under Art. 1—Addition of words indicating agreement would make it liable to duty under Art. 5.

A simple acknowledgment, which takes the case out of the Statute of limitation, implies a promise to pay. Such an implied promise by itself does not render the document liable to duty higher than what is required under Art. (1) of Sch. (1). But the addition of words such as are stated in the proviso to that article indicating an express promise to pay would make the document liable to duty as an agreement or a bond or a promissory note. [P 400 C 1]

An acknowledgment by the debtors of their liability to their creditor under a promissory note for saving limitation which contained an express promise to pay contained the following clause "we are going to pay the whole debt soon:"

Held: that the document did not come under Art. 1 but that it was liable to stamp duty under Art. 5 as it amounted to an agreement: 33 Cal 1047 (PC), Ref. [P 400 C 1,2]

Bireswar Bagchi and Subodh Chandra Sen—In opposition of Reference.

Order.—This is a Reference under S. 61, Stamp Act, by the Collector of Bogra. The document in question was admitted in evidence by the Subdivisional Munsif of Bogra exercising Small Cause Court powers in Small Cause Court Suit No. 732 of 1934, as not requiring a stamp. We have perused the documents. It appears to us to be an acknowledgment by the debtors of their liability to their creditor under a promissory note for the purposes of saving limitation containing an express promise to pay. A simple acknowledgment, which takes the case out of the Statute of limitation, implies a promise to pay. See 33 I A 165 (1). Such an implied promise by itself does not render the document liable to duty higher than what is required under Art. (1) of Sch. (1), Stamp Act. But the addition of words such as are stated in the proviso to that article indicating an express promise to pay would make the document liable to duty as an agreement or a bond or a promissory note. In the document before us there are unconditional acknowledgments for saving limitation. It also contains the words "we are going to repay the whole debt soon." These additional words indicate an express promise to pay. The document therefore does not come under that Art. 1. The promise to pay contained in the document does not render it liable to stamp duty as a promissory note or a bond. Reading the document as a whole it appears to us that the debtors expressly promised to pay the entire debt as the creditors agreed not to sue them before the expiration of the period of limitation. It is however contended by Mr. Bagchi appearing on behalf of the creditors that the document simply contained a written request or offer and was therefore not an agreement within the meaning of Art. 5 of Sch. 1, Stamp Act, as there is nothing to show that it was accepted in writing. Art. 5 however refers to an agreement or memorandum of an agreement:

The agreement is the writing by which the agreement is made. The memorandum of agreement is the record of an already completed oral agreement. It is treated as the agreement as it was the intention of the parties that it should be so treated and that it should be the only appropriate evidence of the agreement.

See Sir Dinshaw Mulla's Commentary, on the Stamp Act, Second Edition, 181. The language of the document indicates that it was the written record of a prior oral agreement. The document therefore was liable to stamp duty under Art. 5, Stamp Act. We therefore accept the reference and declare that the document should not have been admitted in evidence by the Small Cause Court Judge without the payment of Rs. 8-4-0 as duty and penalty under S. 35, Stamp Act. We impound the document. Let a copy of this declaration and the document be sent to the Collector.

K.S./R.K.

Reference accepted.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 400

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Abdul Sattar Choudhury and others — Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Abdul Rusan and others—Respondents.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 36 of 1935, Decided on 19th March 1936, against judgment of R. C. Mitter, J., D/- 30th April 1935.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47—Judge passing order recording satisfaction — Suit for the rectification of petition of adjustment is not barred by S. 47.

Section 47 is no bar to a suit for the rectification of a petition of adjustment, as the question of rectification of the petition of adjustment cannot be decided, by the successor in office of the Judge before whom it was filed, under S. 47, in view of the order passed by the Judge recording satisfaction. [P 401 C 1]

(b) Limitation Act (1908), S. 14—Plaintiff applying for execution—Objection by judgment-debtors of adjustment allowed and confirmed by final appellate Court—Suit by plaintiff for rectification of petition of adjustment—Plaintiff is entitled under S. 14 to exclude time taken from his execution application to final appellate order confirming adjustment.

Plaintiffs applied for the execution of their decree to which objection was raised by the judgment-debtors on the ground of adjustment; the order on that proceeding was against the plaintiffs, the objections raised by the judgment-debtors having been allowed to prevail. The proceeding was carried on in Courts of appeal; and the ultimate order passed in the proceeding in execution, started at the instance of the plaintiffs, was against the plaintiffs. Plaintiff then brought a suit for the rectification of the petition of adjustment:

1. Maniram v. Seth Rupchand, (1909) 33 Cal 1047=33 I A 165=2 N L R 130 (PC).

Held: the proceeding started by the application for execution made by the plaintiffs and ended by its disposal in the final appellate Court was a proceeding, which the plaintiffs had been prosecuting with due diligence under S. 14 and the plaintiffs were entitled to deduct that time in computing the period of limitation for the suit for the rectification of the petition of adjustment. [P 402 C 1]

Birendra K. De—for Appellants.

Benoyendra Nath Palit—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This is an appeal under S. 15 of the Letters Patent from a decision of our learned brother R. C. Mitter, J., dismissing an appeal to this Court preferred by the plaintiffs in a suit in which the main relief claimed was for rectification of a petition of adjustment of a decree filed in Court on 22nd August 1925 in a proceeding in execution. The Court of first instance, as also the Court of appeal below, on the evidence in the case, came to the finding, in favour of the plaintiffs, that a mistake had crept into the petition of adjustment. The learned Judge in this Court in second appeal held that the suit was maintainable, overruling the decision of the Court of appeal below, which held otherwise. There can be no question that the decision of Mitter, J., holding that the plaintiffs' suit was maintainable, and that S. 47, Civil P. C., was no bar to the same, is unassailable, as the question of rectification of the petition of adjustment could not be decided by the successor-in-office of the Judge before whom it was filed, under S. 47, Civil P. C., in view of the order passed by the Judge recording satisfaction.

The substantial question for consideration in the appeal before us, is whether the learned Judge, Mitter, J., is right in his decision that the plaintiffs' suit was barred by limitation. The suit to which the provisions contained in Art. 96, Sch. 1, Lim. Act, was applicable, was filed out of time, and was prima facie barred by limitation, unless S. 14, Lim. Act, could be invoked in aid of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs, it would appear, were the parties who had applied for execution of their decree on 21st August 1926, upon which there was objection preferred by the judgmentdebtor under S. 47, Civil P. C., and the execution proceedings started by the plaintiffs was held to be not maintainable, in view of the order passed by the Court on 27th August 1925, recording full satisfaction. The order passed by the Court of execution on 8th January 1927, against the plaintiff, was appealed against; and there was a further appeal by the plaintiffs against the decision of the appellate Court to this Court. The order in the execution proceedings holding against the plaintiffs that they were not maintainable was affirmed by this Court on 18th March 1929. The suit giving rise to this appeal was instituted by the plaintiffs on 26th March 1931, and the bar of limitation was sought to be avoided by asserting that the plaintiffs were prosecuting some other proceedings as contemplated by S. 14, Lim. Act.

In our judgment the application for execution made by the plaintiffs on 21st August 1926, giving rise to Title Execution Case No. 331 of 1926, must be taken to be a proceeding which the plaintiffs had been prosecuting till 18th March 1929, and it would be going against the scope and operation of S. 14, Lim. Act, if it were held that it was the judgment-debtor's objection that was the proceeding before the Court of execution, and not the proceeding in execution started by the plaintiffs to which objection was raised by the judgment-debtors. The proceeding before the Court of execution was the one started on the application of the plaintiffs as decree-holders, to which objection was raised by the judgment-debtors under S. 47, Civil P. C.; the order on that proceeding was against the plaintiffs' objection raised by the judgment-debtors having been allowed to prevail. The proceeding was carried on in Courts of appeal; and the ultimate order passed in the proceeding in execution, started at the instance of the plaintiff, was against the plaintiffs. In the above view of the case before us, we have no hesitation in holding that the plaintiffs were entitled to invoke the aid of the provisions contained in S. 14, Lim. Act, for saving the bar of limitation. It may be mentioned that we are unable to hold, as it appears to have been held by Mitter, J., in the case before us, that the fact that there was an objection under S. 47, Civil P. C., by judgment-debtors, operated as a complete bar to the plaintiff's invoking the aid of S. 14, Lim. Act.

It was the application for execution made by the plaintiffs which gave rise to the objection by the judgment-debtors, who were parties resisting the decree-holder's application to execute their decree; and it appears to us to be unreasonable, and not at all in consonance with justice, to place the plaintiffs seeking to execute their decree in the position of defendants or opposite parties resisting the objection raised to execution in contradistinction with plaintiffs and applicants as mentioned in S. 14, Lim. Act, and thus denying them the benefit of the operation of the law, so far as exclusion of time during which another proceeding was being prosecuted by them with due diligence. The plaintiff's suit was maintainable; it was not barred by limitation; and on the finding arrived at by the Court of appeal below, that a mistake had crept into the petition of adjustment filed in the Court of execution on 22nd August 1925, the plaintiffs in the suit, the appellants before us, were entitled to the relief claimed by them so far as the rectification of the petition filed on 22nd August 1925 was concerned. The decree passed in favour of the plaintiffs by the Court of first instance, so far as the claim for rectification as mentioned above, is restored.

The plaintiffs' claim for declaration of their title and for possession, as made in the suit in which the appeal has arisen, is dismissed on the findings arrived at by the Court of appeal below. In the result the appeal is allowed in the manner mentioned above, the decree of the trial Court being restored in part. The plaintiffs-appellants are entitled to get their costs in the litigation throughout from the defendants-respondents.

D.S./R.K. Appeal partly allowed.

 A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 402

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Naokhila Loan Co., Ltd. — Judgment-debtor—Appellant.

v.

Hemendra Narayan Roy — Decree-holder—Respondent.

Appeal No. 282 of 1934, Decided on 6th April 1936, from original order of Sub-Judge, Pabna and Bogra, D/- 19th March 1934.

* Companies Act (1913), S. 153—Depositors of company meeting to pass scheme — Court's sanction—Scheme relating to distribution of funds among depositors deemed as creditors pro rata — Depositor obtaining decree prior to passing of such scheme held not bound by it.

The depositors of a company held a meeting in which they passed a scheme. The Court also sanctioned it, which gave effect to the resolution carried at the meeting of the depositors held after a depositor-creditor of the company had obtained the decree. The scheme related to distribution of the available funds among the depositors who were to be deemed as creditors pro rata. The creditor-decree-holder took out execution:

Held: that the scheme could not possibly be held to apply to the depositor-creditor who had already obtained a decree before the scheme as he had ceased to be a depositor and as such he was entitled to execute his decree.

[P 403 C 1]

Sarat Chandra Basak, Jitendra Kumar Roy and Provash Chandra Bose — for Appellant.

Sushil Chandra Sen and Hari Prasanna Mukherjee—for Respondent.

Judgment.—This appeal has arisen out of an application under S. 47, Civil P. C., made by the appellant, raising objections to the execution of a decree obtained by the respondent on 3rd February 1933, in respect of the money deposited with the appellant, the Naokhila Loan Co., Ltd. The case of the appellant was that having regard to the scheme of arrangement sanctioned by this Court on 27th March 1933, under the provisions of the Companies Act, the application for execution as made by the decree-holder was not maintainable. The application under S. 47, Civil P. C., raising the objections aforesaid was resisted by the decree-holder, respondent in this Court, on the ground that he was not bound by a scheme which was passed at a meeting of the depositors after he had obtained the decree, and a scheme which was sanctioned by this Court subsequently. It is not disputed that the decree sought to be executed in the case before us was obtained before the scheme was adopted at a meeting of the depositors, of which notice was given to the respondent after he had obtained the decree. The Court of execution gave its decision against the appellant on the ground that as the respondent had ceased to be a depositor by obtaining a decree before the scheme was adopted at a meeting of the depositors, he was not bound by the scheme.

The application under S. 47, Civil P. C. was dismissed by the Court below.

It was urged in support of the appeal that the Court below should have held that in view of the scheme of arrangement under S. 153, Companies Act, sanctioned by the Court, the respondent was not entitled to proceed with execution of his decree against the appellant company. On the materials on the record in the case before us we are unable to give effect to this contention. In our judgment the scheme as passed at the meeting of the depositors on 22nd March 1933, and sanctioned by this Court on 27th March 1933 which gave effect to the resolution carried at the meeting of the depositors held after the respondent had obtained the decree and put that into execution, related to distribution of the available funds among the depositors who were to be deemed as creditors pro rata. On a proper construction of the scheme as it stands, and considering the same in the light of the materials placed before us, the scheme could not possibly be held to apply to the depositor who had obtained a decree. The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs. The hearing fee in this Court is assessed at three gold mohurs.

R.W./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

✓ * A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 403

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Aswini Kumar Gupta—Accused—Petitioner.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 1267 of 1935, Decided on 22nd April 1936.

* Penal Code (1860), Ss. 419, 468—Person pretending to be another candidate for examination forging answer-papers purporting to be answered by candidate—He is guilty of both cheating and forgery.

Accused pretending to be certain candidate for an examination forged answer papers purporting to be answered by such candidate:

Held: that he was guilty of both cheating and forgery; [P 405 O 1]

Held further: that the fact that the other candidate had failed miserably in the other papers answered by himself did not affect accused's guilt: 25 Mad 726, Dissent.; 12 Mad 151; 28 Mad 90 (F B) and 15 All 210, Rel. on.

[P 404 O 1, 2]

S. K. Sen, S. C. Taluqdar and Ajit Kumar Dutt—for Petitioner.

D. N. Bhattacharjee—for the Crown.

Order.—The petitioner Aswini Kumar Gupta was charged with having committed offences under Ss. 419 and 468, I. P. C., and on conviction was sentenced by the learned 3rd Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta, to rigorous imprisonment for six months under each of the above provisions of the law: the sentences running concurrently. The charges against the petitioner were that he cheated the Registrar of the Calcutta University by pretending to be Samaresh Chandra Mukherjee, a candidate for B. A. examination for 1935, bearing Roll Call. No. 160, in the examination hall, and that he forged answer papers of the B. A. Economics, purporting to be answer papers by Samaresh Chandra Mukherjee, intending that they shall be used for the purpose of cheating as aforesaid. As has been indicated already, the conviction of the petitioner was under both the charges mentioned above. The Rule granted by this Court, on the application of the petitioner, was to show cause why the conviction and sentence passed on the petitioner should not be set aside on grounds Nos. 3, 4, 8, 17 and 22 mentioned in the application. The first of these grounds was that the facts and circumstances accepted by the trial Court did not constitute any offence under Ss. 419 and 468, I. P. C., or for the matter of that, any section of the Indian Penal Code. The second ground was that the conviction and sentence complained of were bad in law, inasmuch as they were based upon erroneous hypothesis and assumptions not warranted by the legal materials on the record. The eighth ground mentioned in the application to this Court was that the necessary materials of an offence under S. 419, I. P. C., had not been established, the conviction and sentences were accordingly illegal and liable to be set aside.

The fourth of the grounds on which this Rule was issued was that in view of the findings as to the admissibility of an alleged confession by the petitioner, the Magistrate acted illegally in considering that evidence against the petitioner. The last ground related to the severity of the sentence passed on the petitioner. As the Rule was issued by us, it may be mentioned at the outset that of the several grounds referred to above, the one relating to a confession by the petitioner appealed to us most, when we decided to issue the rule and we felt inclined to examine the nature of the confession made by the accused to which definite reference was made by the trial Court in its judgment. At the hearing of the rule, no stress was laid by the learned Counsel appearing for the petitioner on the ground bearing upon the confession. We have ourselves examined the materials on the record to satisfy ourselves that the Magistrate's appreciations of the confessional statement was correct; and we are unable to hold that the Magistrate, in the case before us, acted illegally in considering the confession as evidence against the petitioner. The findings arrived at by the trial Court in the case before us cannot be challenged, and were not challenged before us at the hearing of the rule. The questions raised in support of the Rule were those bearing upon the ground taken in the application to the Court that the necessary elements of an offence under S. 419, I. P. C., had not been established. It was urged that it was not established in this case, that the Registrar of the Calcutta University, who was alleged to have been cheated, or the University of Calcutta had suffered damage or harm in reputation, as contemplated by S. 415, I. P. C., and conviction under S. 419, I. P. C., was therefore not sustainable under the law. In this connexion, it was pressed before us, that the fact that the Registrar had not given his evidence was very significant, and that went to the root of the matter.

We are entirely of a different opinion, so far as the effect of the non-examination of the Registrar as a witness for the prosecution was concerned, as the findings arrived at by the trial Court in the case before us were not, and could not, be challenged on the materials on the record establishing the case for the prosecution, in the matter of deception as contemplated by S. 415, I. P. C. The question was whether the act done by the petitioner through deception had caused damage or harm to the reputation of the Registrar or the University; and in this connexion it was pressed before us that the deception practised by the petitioner could not have caused any damage or harm, inasmuch as Samaresh Chandra Mukherjee, whom the petitioner personated falsely, could not possibly have passed the B. A. examination he having failed miserably in the papers answered by himself on dates previous to the date on which the petitioner wrote answer papers purporting to be written by Samaresh Chandra Mukerjee.

It is somewhat difficult to appreciate this argument in support of the case for the petitioner; and we fail to understand how the act of Samaresh Chandra Mukerjee could be brought in to the aid of the petitioner, in the matter of falsely personating Samaresh Chandra Mukerjee and forging answer papers for the purpose of cheating. In our judgment, the only question that required consideration in this case was one to which reference has been made, namely, whether on the facts proved, it was made out that harm or damage to the reputation of the Registrar or of the University had resulted, so as to sustain a charge under S. 419, I. P. C., and that question must be answered in the affirmative, an answer directly following from the facts proved against the petitioners. On this part of the case, reference was made to the decision of the Madras High Court, on the case of 25 Mad 726 (1) where in the case of a person charged with cheating the Registrar of the University of Madras by passing himself off for another person and trying to obtain a duplicate of the Matriculation certificate of that other person, it was held that as there was no proof of harm or damage to the Registrar or to the University and no wrongful gain to the accused or loss to the University, the charge of cheating must fail. It is worthy of notice, however, that the above decision is not in consonance with the view taken by the Madras High Court in 12 Mad 151 (2) where in the case of a person falsely representing himself to be another at a University examination, getting a hall ticket under that other person's name, and signing answer papers of questions, it was held that offence of cheating by personation as also of forgery had been committed.

The decision in 25 Mad 726 (1) was expressly disapproved by the Madras High Court, in 28 Mad 90 (3), and it is also opposed to the decision of the Allahabad High Court, in 15 All 210 (4).

1. Emperor v. C. Srinivasan, (1902) 25 Mad 726 = 1 Weir 481 = 12 M L J 68.
2. Queen-Empress v. Appasami, (1899) 12 Mad 151 = 1 Weir 480.
3. Kotamraju Venkatrayadu v. Emperor, (1905) 28 Mad 90 = 1 Weir 588 (F B).
4. Queen-Empress v. Soshi Bhusan, (1893) 15 All 210 = 1893 A W N 96.

In the state of authorities indicated by the decisions, to which reference has been made above, we have no hesitation in expressing agreement with the reasons underlying the decisions of the Madras High Court in 12 Mad 151 (2) and 28 Mad 90 (3), and the decision of the Allahabad High Court in 15 All 210 (4), and dissenting from the view taken by the Madras High Court in 25 Mad 726 (1), on which reliance was placed by the learned counsel for the petitioner in support of the position that no harm or damage to the reputation of the Registrar or the University had resulted. In our judgment the necessary elements of an offence of cheating and forgery for the purpose of cheating as contemplated by law, was committed by the petitioner, regard being had to the conclusions on evidence arrived at by the Magistrate in the case before us.

On the above conclusion on the questions submitted for our consideration in the case, the conviction of the petitioner must be affirmed; and we direct accordingly. The sentence of rigorous imprisonment for six months passed under Ss. 419 and 468, I. P. C., to run concurrently, do not, on the facts and circumstances of the case before us, appear to be severe, regard being had to the gravity of the offence committed as also to the position that the petitioner, a brilliant alumnus of the Calcutta University occupying the post of a lecturer of an important College in Calcutta took a defence which was entirely false and unworthy of a person of his status in society. The sentence is required to be deterrent as far as possible. The Rule is discharged, the conviction of the petitioner and the sentence passed on him are upheld. The petitioner must surrender to his bail, and serve out the sentence passed on him.

K.S./R.K.

*Conviction affirmed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 405

NASIM ALI AND EDGLEY, JJ.

Annada Charan Dutta—Defendant
No. 4—Appellant.

v.

Kamala Sundari Rai and others—
Plaintiffs—Respondents.Appeal No. 1499 of 1933 Decided on 31st March 1936, from appellate decree of Addl. Dist. Judge, Chittagong, D/
24th May 1933.

Will—Construction—Absolute dedication of property to idol—Subsequent clause giving surplus to wife and sons—Prohibition of alienation—Held no absolute dedication to deity but expenses of deity formed burden on estate—Interest obtained by sons held liable to be sold in execution of decrees against them.

The material portion of a will ran as follows:

"I dedicate all my ancestral and self-acquired immoveable and moveable properties to my family deity. For the present my wife and my son shall go on managing the said properties. Out of the profits of the said properties the managers shall maintain the deities and all my usual annual festivities and the surplus profits shall be enjoyed in equal shares by my wife and my sons. Be it known that the said sons shall not be competent to gift away, sell or alienate any portion of the said properties nor shall they be able to put up to auction or sell any of these properties for their debts":

Held: that the intention of the testator as expressed in the will taken as a whole was not to apply the whole income of the estate for the benefit of the idol. The expenses for the maintenance of the idols and other usual annual festivities which were being carried on by the testator at the time of his death formed a burden upon the properties left by him and that the properties were not made absolute debutter by the will: 1917 PC 177, Rel. on.

[P 407 C 1]

Held further: that the directions in the will that the surplus income was to be enjoyed by the members of the family in equal shares amounted to a bequest of the surplus to them for their own use and benefit and their interest was liable to be sold in execution of a decree against them even though the testator had declared that they should not be competent to sell or gift away or alienate any portion of his properties as these directions being inconsistent with the interest given were wholly beyond the power of the testator and must be rejected as having no operation: 5 Cal 488 (PC), Rel. on.

[P 407 C 1]

Brojalal Chakravarty and Khitindra Kumar Mitter—for Appellant.

S. C. Basak and Chandra Sekhar Sen—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The properties in suit belonged to one Umacharan Roy. He died leaving a will the material portion of which is as follows:

I dedicate all my ancestral and self-acquired immoveable and moveable properties to my family deity Sree Sree Iswar Dayamayi Thakurani. For the present my wife, Srimati Kamala Sundari Thakurani and my son, Sri-man Durga Prosad Roy shall go on managing the said properties. Out of the profits of the said properties the managers (Sarbarakars) shall maintain the deities, Sri Sri Iswar Dayamoyi, Sri Sri Iswar Dasabbhuja and all my usual annual festivities and the surplus profits shall be enjoyed in equal shares by my wife, the said Kamala Sundari Thakurani, and my sons Sriman Durga Prosad Roy and Kalika Prosad Roy and Sriman Karuna Kumar Roy, the minor son of my eldest son, the late Kishory Mohan Roy, and the manager (Sarbarakar) shall be bound in every way to bring up the minors Sriman Kalika Prosad Roy and Sriman Karuna Kumar Roy during their minority. Be it known that the said, Durga Prosad Roy or Kalika Prosad Roy or Karuna Kumar Roy, shall not be competent to gift away, sell or alienate any portion of the said properties, nor shall they be able to put up to auction or sell any of these properties for their debts.

Probate of this will was taken by Kamala Sundari and Durga Prosad. They got their names registered as Shebaites of the deity in respect of all the revenue paying estates. Defendant 1 obtained a decree for money against Durga Prosad and Kalika Prosad defendants 2 and 3, and in the execution of the decree attached these properties. The idol Dayamoyi Thakurani through the Shebait Kamala Sundari preferred a claim under O. 21, R. 58, Civil P. C. This claim was disallowed. She therefore raised the present suit under O. 21, R. 63, Civil P. C., for a declaration that the properties in suit are debuttar properties and are not liable to attachment and sale. She obtained an injunction from the Court restraining defendant 1 from selling the property pending the hearing of the suit but before the order of injunction was communicated to the executing Court the properties were sold and purchased by defendant 4. The defence of defendant 4 is that the disputed properties are not debuttar, that they are the secular properties of defendants 2 and 3 which they had inherited from their father and that they are liable to be sold in execution of the decree obtained against them. He also pleaded that he had obtained possession of the lands purchased by him at the auction sale and consequently S. 42, Specific Relief Act, was a bar to the present suit.

The trial Judge decreed the suit. He declared the properties to be absolute debuttar and not liable to be sold in execution of the decree obtained by defendant 1 against defendants 2 and 3. He also held that plaintiff was in possession of the disputed properties and was not dispossessed by defendant 4 after the latter obtained symbolical possession through Court. Defendant 4 took an appeal to the lower appellate Court. The learned Additional District Judge has come to the conclusion that the plaintiff has not been dispossessed by defendant 4, that by the will the disputed properties were made absolute debuttar of the idol and were not liable to be sold in execution of the decree against defendants 2 and 3. He accordingly dismissed the appeal. Hence this second appeal by defendant 4. The point for determination in this appeal is whether the disputed properties are liable to be sold in execution of the decree obtained by defendant 1 against defendants 2 and 3.

Now if by the terms of the will of Uma Charan there was a complete or absolute dedication to the deity the properties are not liable to be sold. If on the other hand by the will only a charge for sheba of the deity and other usual annual festivities were created on the properties by the will the right, title and interest of defendants 2 and 3 subject to that charge are liable to be sold. The question in this case therefore ultimately resolves itself into a question of the construction to be put upon Umacharan's will. The first point which arises on the construction of the will is whether according to the true intent of the will the deity for whom the properties in suit was granted was intended to take the property absolutely. From the terms of the will quoted above it appears that the will begins with the dedication of the properties to the idol. The testator then appoints his wife and his son Durga Prasad, the manager or shebaites, and directs that out of the income of the properties dedicated the expenses for the maintenance of the deities mentioned in the will and for performance of all his usual annual festivities should be met first and the surplus is to be enjoyed by the members of his family in equal shares. He then prohibits his sons and grandsons from alienating the properties. Although the will purports to begin with an absolute gift in favour of the idol its subsequent provisions relating to the disposition of the surplus income to the members of his family cut down this absolute gift. In 39 All 553 (1), Viscount Haldane, while explaining the decision of Sir George Turner in 8 M I A 66 (2), observed as follows :

1. Jadunath Singh v. Thakur Sitaranji, 1917 P C 177=42 I C 225 = 44 I A 187 = 20 O C 200=39 All 553 (P C).
2. Sonatun Bysack v. Jagat Sundari, (1859-61) 8 M I A 66=2 Suther 37=1 Sar 721 (P C).

Although nominally there was a gift at the beginning to the idol, that gift was so cut down by subsequent disposition as to leave it clear that the subsequent disposition ought to prevail, rather than the earlier one and that consequently there was no gift to the idol so as to make the property pass an absolute and entire interest in its favour.

The intention of the testator as expressed in the will before us taken as a whole was not to apply the whole income of the estate for the benefit of the idol. We are therefore of opinion that by the provisions of the will the expenses for the maintenance of the idols and other usual annual festivities which were being carried on by the testator at the time of his death form a burden upon the properties left by him and that the properties were not made absolute debutter by the will. The next question that arises is whether the dispositions in favour of defendants 2 and 3 by the will created such an interest in them as are liable to be sold in execution of a decree against them. Applying the principle laid down by the Judicial Committee in the case of 6 I A 182 (3), to the directions in the will before us that the surplus income is to be enjoyed by the members of the family in equal shares, we are of opinion, that this direction amounts to a bequest of the surplus to them for their own use and benefit. There are no words in the will to indicate that the testator intended to limit this bequest to the lifetime of defendants 2 and 3. It is true that the testator has declared that defendants 2 and 3 or Karuna Kumar, shall not be competent to sell or gift away or alienate any portion of his properties. But these directions being inconsistent with the interest given were wholly beyond the power of the testator and must be rejected as having no operation: 6 I A 182 (3), cited above. This being so, under the will of Uma Charan, defendants 2 and 3 obtained a share in the properties in question which after satisfying the expenses actually incurred for the maintenance of the idols and the performance of the usual annual festivities may have some value and was therefore liable to be sold in execution of the decree obtained by defendant 1 against them. Defendant 4 has therefore acquired by his purchase at the Court-sale the right, title and interest of defendants 2 and 3 in the disputed properties under the will.

The learned advocate for the appellant contended that the share of defendants 2 and 3 was one half. This was not disputed by the respondent. The expenses with which these properties are charged are incurred for the maintenance of the idols mentioned in the will and certain usual annual festivities by which apparently the testator meant the periodical pujas and the customary sradh which, according to the finding of the trial judge, used to be performed by him during his lifetime and which are now being performed by the shebais. The trial Judge did not allow any evidence as to the actual amount spent in these connections. This amount will have to be ascertained in some future proceeding. The result therefore is that the appeal is allowed and the decrees of the Courts below are set aside. It is declared that the effect of the will of Umacharan was to charge the properties in suit with the payment of such sums of money as might be necessary to defray the expenses which might be incurred by the managers or shebais of the idol for the daily worship of the idols mentioned in the will in the manner in which such service was performed at the time of the death of the testator and with the expenses which might from year to year be incurred by them in performing the usual annual ceremonies which were being performed by the testator in his lifetime in the manner in which such ceremonies were being performed at the time of his death. It is also declared that defendant 4 has acquired by his purchase at the auction-sale the right, title and interest of defendants 2 and 3 in the disputed properties under the terms of the will as construed by us. The parties will bear their own costs throughout this litigation.

K.S./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 407

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Emperor

v.

Gostho Sardar and others—Accused.

Jury Ref. No. 80 of 1935, Decided on 8th April 1936.

(a) Criminal Trial—Reference in acquittal.

Judges must convince appellate Courts with extreme particularity in cases of references with regard to acquittals than in cases of reference with regard to convictions. [P 408 C 1, 2]

3. Ashutosh v. Durga Charan, (1878-79) 5 Cal 488=6 I A 182=4 Sar 58 (P O).

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 307—Reference—When it should be made.

Where a case entirely depends on the statement of an approver and two retracted confessions which are of usual type of non-incriminating confessions and the jury hold that evidence is not sufficiently corroborated and hence give a verdict of not guilty, a Sessions Judge has ordinarily no right to put up to High Court a report on such a pure question of fact, the jury being regarded as the masters of facts.

[P 408 C 2]

(c) Criminal Trial—Confessions—Confession implicating others and safeguarding the person confessing—Such confessions should be taken warily.

Confession which seeks to implicate a number of other persons whilst carefully safeguarding the conduct of the person cannot be read without seeing that they are of a kind very familiar to the Judges. This type of confessor never really does anything at all, but is always on the spot through compulsion and all that it is useful for is to testify the various happenings which involve other people. Such confessions should therefore be considered with great caution.

[P 408 C 2]

(d) Criminal Trial—Trial by jury—Jury refusing to convict on uncorroborated testimony of approver—Their action is not perverse.

Where the jury refuse to convict an accused on a mere uncorroborated testimony of an approver they cannot be said to be acting perversely.

[P 409 C 1]

(e) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 307—Unreasonable—Jury not satisfied that property was stolen in course of dacoity—Verdict is not unreasonable.

Where it is alleged by the approver that the accused told him that he had sold the stolen property to A, but A when put in the witness box claimed it as absolutely his own and the articles are not extraordinary, the opinion of the jury that they are not satisfied that the articles in question are proved to have been stolen in the course of dacoity, cannot be said to be unreasonable.

[P 409 C 1]

Khundkar (Deputy Legal Remembrancer)—for the Crown.

Sudhansu Sekhar Mukerjee and Sailendranath Mitra—for Accused.

Cunliffe, J.—By the terms of the reference before us now, Mr. S. C. Chakravarty the Assistant Sessions Judge at Alipore, indicates that he is by no means in agreement with the decision of the Jury sitting with him, who acquitted three persons; Gosto Sardar, Ishan Sardar and Haran Sardar of the crime of dacoity. We are getting a good many of these references now, and I may say, at once, that if the phrase may be used with propriety where acquittals are concerned there is a much greater onus upon the learned Judge to convince an appellate Court with extreme particularity than there is when he makes a reference with regard to a conviction. Now, here it seems to me that the learned Judge has absolutely no right to put up to this Court a report which is intended to substitute his judgment on a pure question of fact, rather than the judgment and opinion of the jury, who was sitting with him.

This dacoity case depended almost entirely upon tainted evidence. There was an approver, and two confessions were made, both of which were retracted, and the only view that the learned Judge seems to have taken with regard to bringing home the question of guilt to the accused was that he thought that the circumstantial evidence, such as it was, ought to have been accepted by the jury as confirming the facts contained in the retracted confessions and in the approver's testimony in the case. One cannot read these confessions without seeing that they are of a kind very familiar to the Judges of this Court, the sort of confession which seeks to implicate a number of other people whilst carefully safeguarding the conduct of the person confessing it. This type of confessor never really does anything at all, but is always on the spot through compulsion, and all that it is useful for is to testify to various happenings which involve other people. There was certain evidence with regard to the pawning of the articles, said to constitute the loot of the dacoity, but the answer to that contention on the part of the prosecution seems to have been that the articles in question were common objects, claimed equally by the persons who pawned them as being their property as well as by the persons who were the victims of the dacoity. The jury were perfectly entitled on this plain issue of fact to accept the evidence of ownership on the innocent side, if they wished to. In the circumstances of this case, we must reject this reference, and express the hope that references of this type consisting of very exiguous materials will be less frequent than they have been lately on our board. The accused must be acquitted and released forthwith.

Henderson, J.—I agree. The evidence by which the prosecution sought to establish their case consisted in the testimony of an approver, the recovery of certain articles which were said to be part of the loot, and in the case of the accused Gosto's and Haran's confessions. This should be enough to show that the case is one which is eminently suitable for trial by a jury, but it will be almost impossible to say that the verdict, whatever it might be, was unreasonable or perverse. With great respect to the learned Judge, so far as the accused Ishan is concerned, the view of the jury was eminently sound, because on going into the case we find that there is really nothing against him, except the uncorroborated testimony of the approver. We are certainly not prepared to say that a jury refusing to convict on such testimony is acting perversely. In addition to that deposition the prosecution produced Exs. 6, 7 and 8 said to be part of the loot which were recovered from prosecution witness No. 15 Paresh. Now, the approver said that this accused Ishan admitted to him that he sold some of the loot to Paresh. Supposing Paresh had come forward and supported that story, the prosecution might urge that there was some corroboration of the approver's evidence. But even then the jury might refuse to accept, as satisfactory corroboration, an exculpatory statement made by the person in whose possession the stolen property was actually found and in doing so would clearly be taking a thoroughly reasonable view of the matter. The present case is even weaker than that; when put into the witness box, Paresh absolutely denied that these articles had been sold to him by Ishan, and claimed them as his own.

The identification of the property alleged to have been stolen is common to the cases of all the three accused persons. It is also common to all the three cases that the persons, from whose possession these very ordinary articles were recovered claimed them as their own. Where in a case of counter-claims of this sort the jury are not satisfied that the property in question is proved to have been stolen in the course of dacoity, it cannot be said that their view is unreasonable.

The only other evidence consisted of two confessions made by the accused persons Gosto and Haran. As my learned brother has pointed out, those confessions are of a character which suggests that they are not made from any desire to tell the truth, but for some other purpose. We are not at all surprised that the jury refused to accept those confessions. Neither of them is a full or frank statement. Both the accused persons alleged that they were compelled to join in the dacoity against their will. That is always a suspicious circumstance because there is no advantage to the rest of the gang in taking reluctant persons to participate in the crime. Then again, neither of them did anything when he got there. As I have already said, we are not at all surprised that the jury refused to convict on these statements.

D.L./R.K.

Reference answered.

* A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 409

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Bank of Dacca, Ltd.—Decree-holder—Appellant.

v.

Gour Gopal Saha—Judgment-debtor—Respondent.

Appeals Nos. 2 and 3 of 1936, with Rule 206 (M) of 1936, Decided on 7th April 1936, against appellate orders of Dist. Judge, Dacca, D/- 6th September 1933.

(a) Banker and Customer — Relationship between, explained.

The relationship of banker and customer is generally that of agent and principal, of debtor and creditor or of pledgor and pledgee; there are however cases where the banker stands in the relation of trustee as well as agent for his customer. [P 410 C 2; P 411 C 1]

* (b) Banker and Customer—Relationship between—Banker no trustee of money deposited by customer for his own use—But case different where banker using securities deposited for bank's use and not for customer—Customer depositing securities with banker as cover for advances—Transaction held to be in nature of pledge.

The banker is not a trustee for the customer in respect of money paid in or responsible for him for the use he makes of it, but the position is not the same where the banker uses the securities deposited with him for his own use, and there is conversion of the securities for the purposes of the Bank and not for the purpose of customer. [P 411 C 1]

Where securities are deposited as cover for advances and for the purpose of securing overdrafts or advances, the transaction is strictly of the nature of pledge: Re Hallet's Estate, (1879) 13 Ch D 696 and 19 Cal 322 (PC), Rel. on. [P 411 C 1]

(c) Banker and Customer—Sale of securities—Payment of bank's loans—Customer held entitled to balance of money over and above his liabilities to bank.

The customer is entitled to enforce his ownership to the amount in the hands of the banker, after the sale of the Government Promissory Notes deposited in the Bank as security to cover overdrafts or advances after payment of loans from the Bank for which they are security: 19 Cal 322 (P C), Rel. on [P 411 C 1, 2]

* (d) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 19 and S. 47—Provisions in O. 21, R. 19 are not exhaustive regarding questions covered by S. 47.

The provisions contained in O. 21, R. 19, Civil P. C., cannot and should not be taken to be applicable and exhaustive in regard to questions arising for consideration under S. 47 of the Code relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of decrees. [P 411 C 2]

* (e) Executing Court—Powers of—Executing Court can give set-off even in cases not coming under O. 21, R. 19, Civil P. C.

On general principles and in the exercise of its inherent power, an executing Court can entertain and give effect to a claim to set off even in case which does not come strictly under O. 21, R. 19, Civil P. C. [P 412 C 1]

Bireswar Bagchi, Prokash Chandra Pakrasi, Jitendra Mohan Banerji and Nirmal Kumar Sen—for Appellant.

Nares Chandra Sen Gupta, Benoyendra Pr. Bagchi and Radhikaranjan Guha—for Respondent.

Misc. Appeal No. 2 of 1936.

Judgment.—This appeal has arisen out of an application under S. 47, Civil P. C. made by a person in the position of a judgment-debtor being a share-holder of a Bank, the Bank of Dacca, in liquidation against whom there were orders for recovery of money passed in favour of the Bank in liquidation in respect of unpaid calls for shares allotted to him. The applicant raising objections under S. 47, Civil P. C., respondent in this appeal, had an account with the bank of Dacca and as security against overdraft, had deposited Government Promissory Notes. These notes were deposited by the Bank of Dacca with the Bengal National Bank, and were sold by the Receiver appointed by the Court for the Bengal National Bank, and the sale-proceeds after certain deductions made therefrom on account of dues of the Bank of Dacca to the Bengal National Bank, were sent to the Liquidator of the Bank of Dacca. The amount received by the Liquidator exceeded the sum realisable from the appellant under the balance order put into execution. The objections to execution raised by the appellant related to the position that the Liquidator of the Bank of Dacca seeking to execute the balance order should meet the decretal dues out of the amount recovered from the Receiver of the Bengal National Bank which was the objector's property, being trust money which could not be applied for any purpose other than that for which the Government Promissory Notes were deposited. The contention of the debtor under the balance order was that money in the hand of the liquidator would fully satisfy their liability under the balance order and the execution should not therefore be allowed to proceed.

The Liquidator of the Bank of Dacca on the other hand, asserted that the applicant under S. 47, Civil P. C. was only a creditor of the Bank, and his objection by way of set off was not maintainable. The learned District Judge in the Court of Appeal below, in affirming the order passed by the Court of execution, held that on the facts and in the circumstances of the case, the Bank of Dacca was trustee in respect of Government Promissory Notes deposited by way of security for advances; that the debt of the Bank could be squared without taking the matter into Court at all, that the case was not one of set off or of a contributory claiming a deduction before a share out among the creditors. The respondent was not, according to the Judge, in the position of a creditor, but was entitled to enforce his ownership of the Government Promissory Notes deposited with the Bank. It appears that on 13th August 1931, the respondent addressed a letter to the Liquidator of the Bank of Dacca mentioning the Government Promissory Notes deposited by him as security for advances and claiming the amount covered by the same with interest up-to-date. There is a note on the letter showing that Rs. 5,601-7-10 was the amount the respondent was entitled to get from the Bank. It may be noticed that in view of the use of the word trustee in the judgment of the Courts below, which appears to us to have been used in a very general way, a great deal of time was taken by the learned advocates representing the parties to this appeal, for explaining the position created by the deposit of Government Promissory Notes as security for advances or overdrafts. The position was debated before us with a reference to some decisions of Courts in England, practically without reference to the facts of the case before us, and without consideration for a position which may be taken to be well established now. The relationship of banker and customer is generally that of agent and principal, of debtor and creditor or of pledger and pledgee; there are however cases where the banker stands in the relation of trustee as well as agent for his customer, as for example in the case of securities lodged for safe custody, the banker is not entitled to sell or pledge them, and must be prepared to hand back the identical securities deposited; should he convert them to his own use, he becomes criminally liable. (See Sykes on Banking, Edn. 6, pp. 126-127). As has been mentioned in Paget's Law of Banking the relation of banker is primarily that of debtor and creditor, and observations of Jessel, M. R. in 13 Ch D 696 at p. 727 (1) do not affect the general rule. The banker is not a trustee for the customer in respect of money paid in or responsible for him for the use he makes of it, but the position is not the same where, as in the case before us, the banker uses the securities deposited with him for his own use, and where there is conversion of the securities for the purposes of the Bank and not for the purpose of the customer.

In the circumstances of the case before us where securities were deposited as cover for advances, and for the purpose of securing overdrafts or advances, the transaction was strictly of the nature of a pledge, (Paget, p. 242), and this rule must be taken to be the rule guiding the relationship of a banker and a customer in the position of the respondent in this appeal in view of the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 19 I A 60 (2). On the principles adopted in 19 I A 60 (2), and on the facts and circumstances of the case before us, the bank became liable for the value of the G. P. Notes as for conversion. The bank had converted the G. P. Notes to its own use, and was liable for the value of them including interest on them. The customer was of course bound to pay the loans for which the G. P. Notes were security: see 19 I A 60 (2) at pp. 67-68. The position taken up by the respondent in his letter to the bank in liquidation dated 13th August 1931, mentioned above, was justifiable on principle and authority to which reference has been made, and the Judge in the Court below is right in holding that the respondent was entitled to enforce his ownership to the amount in the hands of the liquidator, after the sale of the G. P. Notes deposited in the Bank of Dacca as security to cover overdrafts or advances after payment of loans from the bank for which they were security.

The question for consideration next is whether the respondent against whom execution was levied for realization on unpaid share call moneys, in pursuance of a balance order made under the Companies Act, was entitled to take up the position that the Liquidator applying for execution should meet the decretal dues out of the amount in his hands, representing the sale-proceeds of the G. P. Notes, which is the respondent's own property. The Court of execution expressed the opinion that as soon as the respondent asserted as he did, that the money in the hands of the Liquidator was to be applied to the satisfaction of the decretal debt, the Liquidator should have entered satisfaction of the decree, as the money in the hands of the Liquidator was far in excess of the decretal amount. There was no question of set off in the case. The Judge in the Court of appeal below agreed with the Court of execution in the above view of the case and observed that the respondent simply sought to utilise his own property in the hands of the Liquidator for the purpose of meeting dues decreed against him as a contributor. It was urged before us in support of the appeal by the Liquidator that the question of a set off not having been raised in the liquidation proceedings, the respondent was not entitled to raise the question in the proceedings in execution started by the Liquidator. There is no question that the provisions contained in O. 21, R. 19, Civil P. C., relating to cross-claims, have no application to the case before us; but in our judgment those provisions cannot and should not be taken to be exhaustive in regard to questions arising for consideration under S. 47, Civil P. C., relating to execution, discharge or satisfaction of decrees. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 19 I A 166 (3) prohibited placing a narrow construction on the language of the statute, and expressed the opinion that an enactment of which the scope was to provide for expeditious procedure for trial of question without recourse to separate suit, should be used for the benefit.

1. Re Hallet's Estate, (1879) 13 Ch D 696=49 L J Ch 415=28 W R 732.

2. Nelkram Dobay v. Bank of Bengal, (1892) 19 Cal 322=19 I A 60 (P C).

3. Prosanna Kumar Sanyal v. Kalidas Sanyal, (1892) 19 Cal 633=19 I A 166 (P C).

cient purpose of checking needless litigation and disposing of objections to execution as speedily as possible. In this connection we desire to express our entire agreement with the position indicated by this Court in 39 C W N 106 (4) that on general principles and in the exercise of its inherent power, an executing Court can entertain and give effect to a claim to set off even in cases which do not come strictly under O. 21, R. 19, Civil P. C.

The result of the conclusion we have arrived at, as mentioned above, is that the order passed by the Courts below, against which this appeal is directed is affirmed; and this appeal is dismissed with costs. The hearing fee in this Court is assessed at two gold mohurs.

The connected Rule, Rule No. 206 (M) of 1936 is discharged. There is no order as to costs in this Rule.

Miscellaneous Appeal No. 3 of 1936.

The question arising for consideration in this case is similar to those decided by us in appeal from Appellate Order No. 2 of 1936. The point of difference as between this case and the other is that in a letter to the Liquidator, Bank of Dacca (in liquidation) the respondent mentioned that he was laying his claim to G. P. Notes deposited by him with the bank as security against overdraft, as creditor. There was also an endorsement on the letter showing that the respondent's claim was admitted. The G. P. Notes deposited by the respondent as security were made over to the Bengal National Bank by the Bank of Dacca. The National Bank sold these notes, and after deduction of the major portion of the sale proceeds in respect of the dues of the Bank of Dacca, the Receiver of the National Bank sent the remainder of the sale proceeds to the Liquidator of the Bank of Dacca. The respondent, raising objection to the proceedings in execution for realization of amounts due from the respondent in respect of unpaid share call moneys, sought to use the amount in the hands of the Liquidator towards the payment of the decretal dues, as shown in a balance order made in liquidation proceedings.

The questions arising for consideration in this appeal have been decided in our judgment in the other appeal No. 2 of 4. Krishna Chandra Bhowmik v. Pabna Dhanabhandar Co. Ltd., 1935 Cal 225=155 I C 991=39 C W N 106=62 Cal 298.

1936, and for the reasons stated in that judgment, this appeal must be dismissed as in our opinion the learned District Judge in the Court of appeal below is right in holding that the mere use of the words "as creditor" in the letter referred to above, could not reasonably be taken to mean that the respondent abandoned his rights of ownership in respect of property held by the Bank of Dacca for him. The word "trust" used by the Judge in this connexion, may be strictly accurate in view of the legal position created by the deposit of G. P. Notes as security for advances or overdrafts, and by the sale of the notes at the instance of the Bank. It may also be noticed as has been mentioned by the District Judge in his judgment the words "claim admitted" appearing on the letter addressed to the bank proves nothing, and could not result in the respondent's surrendering his right of ownership in the amount recovered in respect of his G. P. Notes from the Receiver of the National Bank by the Liquidator of the Bank of Dacca, or that the respondent had chosen to rank as a creditor. The respondent was not on the facts and circumstances of the case, and on the decision given by us in Appeal No. 2 of 1936, mentioned above, entitled to enforce his right of ownership and defeat the Liquidator's claim in the proceedings in execution giving rise to this appeal.

The appeal is dismissed with costs; the hearing fee in this Court is assessed at two gold mohurs.

R.W./R.K. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 412

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Mohini Mohan Saha—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Janaki Nath (dead) and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 128 of 1934, Decided on 27th April 1936, from original decree of Sub-Judge, Burdwan, D/- 28th March 1934.

Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 58 (f)—Deposit of title-deed under agreement to cover present and future advances—Each advance becomes charge on property and no fresh deposit of title-deeds is necessary.

Where title deeds are deposited under an oral agreement to cover present and future advances, as each advance is made, it becomes a charge on the property comprised in the title-deeds by the force of the prior oral agreement that it shall be so. Fresh deposit of title deeds for subsequent advances is not necessary: Ex parte Langson, 17 Ves 227; Ex parte Whitebread, 19 Ves 209 and 10 Bom 634, Ref.

[P 413 C 2]

Bijon Kumar Mukherjee and Biswanath Naskar—for Appellant.

Apurbadhone Mukherjee and Pannalal Chatterjee (for Deputy Registrar)—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The question for consideration in this appeal is whether a mortgage was created by delivery of documents of title to immoveable property with intent to create a security thereon, in respect of a transaction of loan evidenced by a hand note executed by Janaki Nath Samanta, the father of the respondents 1 to 5 (b) in this appeal in favour of Mohini Mohan Saha, the appellant, on 6th April 1932 for Rs. 2,500. The evidence in the case before us establishes the position that before the hand-note in question, Ex. 3 in the case, was executed, Janaki Nath Samanta handed over to the appellant his title deeds in respect of his rice mill at Burdwan and the site thereof and of the adjacent land and garden, on the date on which the title deeds were delivered, a loan of Rs. 12,500 was advanced by the appellant, and Janaki Nath Samanta stated that he would take loan up to a maximum of Rs. 20,000 and that the deposit of title deeds would be the security for loan up to the said sum of Rs. 20,000. This position is clearly made out on evidence coming from the side of the appellant; and we see no reason to hold that the evidence was untrustworthy and unreliable, as we were invited to do on behalf of the respondents in this appeal. It would appear that on the evidence, the Judge in the Court below came to the conclusion that it might probably have been intended that the second advance of Rs. 2,500 would come to be covered by the previous delivery of title deeds when an amount of Rs. 12,500 was advanced; but as there was no fresh deposit of title deeds it could not be held that there was any delivery of title deeds for the second hand-note for Rs. 2,500 from a "mere tacit intention" of the parties concerned. On the above conclusion the decision was given by the learned Subordinate Judge in the Court below, that so far as the hand-note of Rs. 2,500 was concerned, there was no mortgage. In our opinion the decision is erroneous and cannot be supported.

It is well settled that in the case of a mortgage by delivery of title deeds, the debts must be proved; the deposit of title deeds has to be established; and the intention that the title deeds deposited as a part of the transaction should be security for the debt made out. It may further be taken to be established on authorities, that a mortgage by delivery of title deeds as contemplated by law, is not created when the deeds are deposited before any money is advanced with a view to prepare a future mortgage, and there is no express agreement that they shall stand as security for future advances. Title deeds may be deposited under an oral agreement to cover present and future advances. As each advance is made, it becomes a charge upon the property comprised in the title deeds from the force of the prior oral agreement that it shall be so [see 17 Ves 227 (1) and 19 Ves 209 (2), referred to in 10 Bom 634 (3)]. Applying the rule mentioned above to the evidence in the case before us, the conclusion is irresistible that a mortgage was created by the transaction evidenced by the hand-note Ex. 3 in the case, by the deposit of title deeds, and by the force of the prior express oral agreement between the parties concerned, that the title deeds deposited were to cover the present and future advances up to Rs. 20,000. In our judgment, the plaintiff-appellant was entitled to get a mortgage-decree for the amount covered by the hand-note Ex. 3 in the case on the materials before us.

It may be mentioned that it was contended on behalf of the respondent in the appeal that the delivery of title deeds related only to the advance of Rs. 12,500 made at the time at which they were delivered, and the provisions contained in S. 91, Evidence Act, operated as a bar to leading oral evidence that the deposit of title deeds as made related to future advances. The argument in this behalf was based on the contents of a memorandum creating collateral security for the amount of Rs. 12,500, dated 10th March 1932, Ex. 2 in the case, in which the words "collateral security for the repayment of Rs. 12,500 only" were used. It is impossible for us to give effect to the argument, seeing that the oral agreement between the parties concerned did not relate to the transaction in which the amount of Rs. 12,500 was advanced, and for the reason that it was open to the appellant before us to prove a separate oral agreement as to any matter on which the document, Ex. 2, was silent. On the conclusion we have arrived at, the part of the decision and decree of the Court below against which this appeal is directed, must be set aside; and we direct accordingly. The claim of the plaintiff-appellant based on the hand-note dated 9th April 1932, Ex. 3 in the case, is allowed on the footing that a mortgage was created in respect of the loan of Rs. 2,500 advanced by delivery of title deeds. The Court below will now proceed to pass a mortgage-decree for the entire claim made in the suit in which this appeal has arisen, in accordance with law, entitling the plaintiff-appellant to recover the mortgage money claimed by him with costs in the litigation, up to the present stage, including the costs in this appeal. The hearing fee in this appeal is assessed at three gold mohurs.

1. Ex parte Langston, (1810) 17 Ves 227.

2. Ex parte Whitebread, (1812) 19 Ves 209.

3. Jaitha Bhima v. Abdul Syad Oosman, (1886) 10 Bom 634.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 414

LORT-WILLIAMS AND JACK, JJ.

Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal—Appellant.

v.

Kali Raman Bhattacharjee—Accused—Opposite Party.

Govt. Appeal No. 3 of 1935, Decided on 7th August 1935.

Assam Criminal Law Amendment Act (1934), S. 20 (1)—Act has no force outside Assam.

A resident of Assam was served with a notice under S. 16 (1) (a) of the Act directing him to notify his residence and any change of residence to the Superintendent of Police. He left for Bombay after duly notifying this to the Superintendent of Police at Sylhet. On his return from Bombay he wrote a letter to the Superintendent of Police stating that he had stayed at a certain place at Bombay and that he had arrived at Calcutta. On his return to Sylhet he was arrested:

Held: that the Act had no force outside Assam and was not intended to apply to such a person outside the limits of Assam.

[P 414 C 2; P 415 C 1]

D. N. Bhattacharji—for Appellant.

J. C. Gupta and Radhananda Bhattacharji—for Opposite Party.

Lort. Williams, J.—This is an appeal on behalf of the Government of Assam by the Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal, against the order of the Second Additional Sessions Judge of Sylhet, dated 13th February 1935, acquitting the accused respondent on appeal from the order of the Additional District Magistrate of Sylhet, who had convicted him under S. 20 (1), Assam Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1934, and sentenced him to suffer rigorous imprisonment for six months. The appellant was served with a notice under S. 16 (1) (a) of the Act on 7th August 1934, directing him to notify his residence and any change of residence to the Superintendent of Police, Sylhet. The appellant was then residing at Sylhet town and he notified his residence duly. On 21st October 1934 he wrote a letter to the Superintendent of Police, Sylhet, to say that he was starting for Bombay that evening to attend the Congress Session as a representative of a local weekly, and he left Sylhet on the same evening. The appellant returned to Sylhet on 2nd December 1934. On 26th November 1934 he wrote a letter from Calcutta stating that at Bombay he had stayed at Abdul Gafur Nagar (the Congress site) and had been detained by illness and that he had arrived at Calcutta a few days previously and was staying at 175/1 Upper Circle Road. On the appellant's return to Sylhet on 2nd December 1934 he was arrested on a charge under S. 20 (1), Assam Criminal Law Amendment Act.

Apart from the merits of the case, a point of law was raised on behalf of the appellant to the effect that the order under S. 16 (1) of the Act, being an Assam Act, has no force, so far as the appellant was concerned, when he was outside the boundaries of Assam. The extent of the application of the Act is defined by sub-s. (1) thereof, viz., that it extends to the whole of Assam. It is clear therefore that the Act has no force outside Assam. An Act intended to have effect outside the limits of the province would probably have to be passed by the Government of India. But it is not necessary for us to decide that point. This is a Provincial Act of the Assam Government. It was intended, as the learned Sessions Judge observed, to prevent subversive action within the jurisdiction of the Local Government of the Province of Assam. That Government is not prima facie concerned with the good government of areas outside its jurisdiction. Undoubtedly, it is necessary to take steps to prevent a person believed to be engaged in subversive activity in one province from working freely for the same object in another province. But as the learned Judge observed the remedy for this is that when such a person leaves the jurisdiction and enters the jurisdiction of another province, the authority which made the original order should notify the authority in the area to which that person has gone, and that authority should take the necessary steps.

For these reasons, it is necessary for such a person leaving Assam, before doing so, to notify his change of residence, that is, to state the place of residence to which he intends to go. With regard to this, the complaint is that all that he told the authorities was that he was going to Bombay. But it seems that he had some excuse for this omission, because when he started he did not know where he was likely to stay in Bombay, as he was only going there to attend the Congress Session as the representative of a local newspaper. However he gave the authorities this information, and if the police had been vigilant it would have been comparatively easy for them to have got into touch with the appellant when he was attending the Congress Session at Bombay. Instead of that they waited for over a month before they took any action in the matter. Apparently, the authorities had no objection to the appellant's going to Bombay to attend the Congress Session. But they complained of the fact that he had not informed them of his subsequent changes of address in Bombay and Calcutta. In my opinion the Assam Act does not and is not intended to apply to such a person outside the limits of Assam. But the Assam authorities are interested in the movements of such a person directly he returns within the limits of the province. If these restrictions are not considered to be sufficient by the various Local Governments, steps should be taken to obtain legislation which will affect the whole of India irrespective of the limits of any particular Province. Apart from the question of law I am satisfied that the appellant in this case acted in good faith as is shown by the letter which he wrote on 26th November 1934, and by his return to Sylhet on 2nd December 1934. In these circumstances the appeal must be dismissed.

Jack, J.—I agree.

D.S./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 415

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

(Shebaita of Sree Sree Idol Issur) Sridhar Thakur and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Jamini Sundari Dassya—Defendant—Respondent.

Appeal No. 184 of 1934, Decided on 6th May 1936, from original decree of Sub-Judge, Rajshahi, D/- 23rd April 1934.

(a) Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (9 of 1859), Ss. 6 and 7—Sale on account of arrears of revenue and cesses not amalgamated—Mention of arrears of cesses in notification does not make sale for arrears of revenue illegal.

Where a sale for arrears of revenue is held not only on account of arrears of revenue but in respect of the arrears of cesses due on the estate in question, the amount due on account of cesses having been separately mentioned in sale proclamation but not amalgamated with or included in the amount of revenue, the mention of the amount of cesses due along with the arrears of revenue in the sale notification does not make the sale for arrear of revenue illegal or ultra vires. [P 417 C 1]

(b) Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (9 of 1859), S. 6—Publication of notification of sale in Gazette—Period of 30 days does not apply.

The provision of S. 6 does not prescribe a period of 30 days in the matter of publication in the Gazette of the notification of sale; nor does the provision relating to affixing the sale notification at certain places, which precedes the one relating to the publication of the sale notification in the Gazette, fixing a period of 30 days, apply also to the publication of the sale notification in the Gazette. [P 417 C 2]

(c) Bengal Land Revenue Sales Act (9 of 1859), Ss. 6 and 7—Mere suit for declaration that sale was illegal is not maintainable.

A suit merely for a declaration that the revenue sale was illegal and ultra vires and without any force and effect, is not maintainable under the law, in the absence of any prayer for consequential relief for setting aside the sale held for arrears of revenue. A suit with a prayer for a declaration, pure and simple presumably for the purpose of avoiding payment of proper court-fees is not a suit which is contemplated by the Revenue Sale Law. [P 418 C 1, 2]

Sarat Chandra Basak and Bijan Kumar Mukherjee—for Appellants.

Bireswar Bagchi and Jatindra Mohan Sanyal—for Respondent.

Judgment.—This appeal has arisen out of a suit for a declaratory decree in respect of a revenue sale held on 24th June 1932, of Mahal Taraf Ratahar and others, appertaining to Touzi No. 365 of the Rajshahi Collectorate, after having the same determined to be bad and inoperative (illegal and ultra vires), and of no force and effect. In the plaint, there was also a prayer for temporary injunction against the defendant respondent, restraining her from taking possession of the disputed property till the disposal of the suit. The prayer for temporary injunction was withdrawn during the pendency of the suit. The case of the plaintiffs before the Court was that the revenue payable in respect of the Touzi in question for the March kist of 1932, became arrear only on 1st April 1932, and as such the sale that was held on 24th June 1932, was illegal and ultra vires; it was further stated by the plaintiffs that the revenue payable for the Mahal in suit was payable in four kists, namely, 12th January, 28th March, 28th June and 28th September, and that the plaintiffs paid the revenue in the said manner all along and could not pay the revenue for the March kist on account of the world wide economic depression. It was the case of the plaintiffs that the Mahal in question was advertised for sale not only for arrears of revenue but also for cesses due, and that as such the sale held on 24th June 1932, was not legal. It was asserted by the plaintiffs that the sale notices and the sale proclamations required to be served under the provisions of Ss. 6 and 7, Revenue Sale Law, were not served in the locality, and were not duly published in the Calcutta Gazette in the manner provided by law. It was the case of the plaintiffs also that owing to irregularity referred to in the plaint, the property having an annual income of Rs. 1,744, and worth Rs. 17,000, was sold at an inadequate price of Rs. 1,100 only and that thereby the plaintiffs suffered substantial injury. It was further stated by the plaintiffs that they had suffered extreme hardship as a Telegraphic Money Order for Rs. 1,000 was not delivered to their agent on the date of the sale by the Post Office, and that as such the arrears of revenue could not be deposited in the Collectorate on the date of the sale. The last of the above allegations of fact on which the plaintiffs' case before the Court rested, relating to hardship could not be considered to be the basis of a ground for holding that the sale was not in accordance with law. The evidence in the case does not establish the position that the telegraphic money order arrived at the post office on the 24th June, and that the amount covered by it could not be paid by the post office to the plaintiffs' agent on account of shortness of fund. The ground of hardships as aforesaid, was not made out, and no question of irregularity or illegality arose on the facts alleged, relating to non-deposit of arrears on the date of sale. The claim made by the plaintiffs in the suit was resisted by the defendant. The allegations of fact made in the plaint on which the plaintiffs' case before the Court was based were denied; and it was asserted by the defendant that notices of the sale were properly served and published in the manner provided by law. In addition to the denial of the allegations made in the plaint, there was the definite statement made by the defendant in her written statement filed in Court that the suit was not maintainable in the form presented in the plaint, without any prayer for setting aside the sale. On the pleadings of the parties, various issues were raised for determination in the case. The learned Subordinate Judge in the Court below gave his decision against the plaintiffs on the material issues arising for consideration in the case, and the plaintiffs' suit was dismissed. The plaintiffs have appealed to this Court against the decision and decree of dismissal passed by the trial Court on 23rd April 1934.

In support of the appeal to this Court the main questions raised by the learned Senior Government Pleader appearing for the plaintiffs-appellants may be dealt with under the following heads: In the first place it was urged in consonance with the statement made in the plaint that the revenue payable for estate No. 365 which was sold on 24th June 1932, was payable in four kists, and the kist of the 28th March, became arrear on the 1st April, and that the sale could not under the law, be held before the next kist day, the 28th June; and that as the sale was held on 24th June 1932, it was in law illegal and ultra vires. The question thus raised in has to be decided and the date on which the revenue payable by the plaintiffs for a particular kist became arrears has to be determined with reference to the materials placed on the record. The most relevant evidence on this part of the case was that afforded by the Douk Kistibandi, Ex. C in the case, in respect of Touji No. 365, dated 14th December 1813. It was apparent from that document, that the 28th March could not be the relevant date for a particular kist, inasmuch as the kists mentioned in the Douk Kistibandi were 12 in number according to the 12 Bengali months. The 28th March was not the date when any kist was payable; the Pous, Magh and Falgun kists became arrear on the 1st Chaitra, the 14th March; and the latest day of payment under the Revenue Sale Law was therefore the 28th March.

This view of the matter is established on other materials placed on the record, namely the Arrears List Ex. 7, and the sale notices, Exs. E (6) and E (7) series. That the plaintiffs themselves knew, and considered that the kist in question became arrear on the 1st Chaitra, i.e., 14th March, is apparent from their statement in Ex. A, the memorandum of appeal filed by them before the Commissioner, for setting aside the revenue sale that had taken place on 24th June 1932. It may be that the statement contained in Ex. A does not amount to an admission operating as an estoppel against the plaintiffs; but there is no doubt that it was a relevant piece of evidence which went to indicate clearly what the date was when the kist in question became in arrear, according to the plaintiffs themselves. On the materials before us, we are unable to come to the conclusion, as we were invited to do, that the trial Court was wrong in not coming to the conclusion that 28th March 1932 was subsequently fixed for payment of the kist in question, and it became arrear on 1st April 1932. The Douk Kistibandi, Ex. C, taken along with the other evidence on the record, establishes the position as indicated above, that the sale held on 24th June 1932 was not illegal and without jurisdiction. It was suggested in the course of argument that the sale for arrears of revenue in the case before us, having been held not only on account of arrears of revenue but on account of arrears of cesses due in respect of the estate in question, it could not be said that the sale was one for arrears of revenue. The contention was not however pressed, in view of the position, well established now, that in a case even of amalgamation of dues on account of cesses with revenue payable in respect of an estate, a sale for arrears of revenue could not be set aside on the ground that it was illegal or ultra vires. In the case before us, the amount due on account of cesses was mentioned in the sale proclamation; but it was not amalgamated with, or included in, the revenue; the amount of revenue in arrear and the amount of cesses due were separately mentioned. In this view of the case, there can be no question that the mention of the amount of cesses due along with the arrears of revenue in the sale notification, in pursuance of which the revenue sale in question was held, did not make the sale illegal under the law.

The next question raised before us related to the non-service or non-publication of the sale notifications and notices, as required by Ss. 6 and 7, Revenue Sale Law. The ground of irregularity in the matter of actual service of processes was not urged before us, and on the facts proved in the case, there can be no question that the conclusion arrived at by the Court below that the allegation of non-service of sale notification or notices, as required by law, had not been established, is correct. The ground urged before us on this part of the case related to the position that there was no publication in the Calcutta Gazette, of the sale in proper time as mentioned in S. 6, Revenue Sale Law. The position is this, the notification of the sale was published in the Calcutta Gazette at a time when there was remaining, not the full period of 30 days before the sale, but only 28 days. It was urged that the law enjoined publication of the notification in the Gazette leaving a full period of 30 days before the sale of arrears of revenue could be held. It has to be noticed in this connection that the provision of S. 6, Revenue Sale Laws does not prescribe a period of 30 days in the matter of publication in the Gazette of the notification of sale; and it cannot be said that the provision relating to affixing the sale notification at certain places, which precedes the one relating to the publication of the sale notification in the Gazette, fixing a period of 30 days was applicable also to the publication of the sale notification in the Gazette. Even if it were conceded in favour of the appellants that there was an irregularity in the matter of publication of sale proclamation in the Gazette, within the time prescribed by law, that amounted to an irregularity; and for the purpose of avoiding the sale on the ground of irregularity, it had to be made out by the plaintiffs that they had suffered substantial injury by reason of the irregularity complained of.

The next question therefore was whether it had been established in the case before us that there was substantial injury attributable to any irregularity in the matter of publishing the sale. The evidence in the case to which detailed reference has been made by the learned Subordinate Judge in the Court below, does not establish the case of inadequacy in the price fetched at the sale, as alleged by the plaintiffs, or that the inadequacy of price was attributable to the irregularity or illegality in publishing the sale, and that substantial injury had resulted by reason of the same. That the property sold used to fetch a net annual income of anything like Rs. 1,700 was not at all established in evidence, and it was made out that in view of the economic depression in the country, the price at which it was sold at the sale for arrears of revenue, at which sales prices are almost always low, was altogether inadequate. Evidence on the record went to show that properties in the locality have been sold at sales for arrears of revenue at their annual net profits or even at half of that. The position therefore is this: that conceding in favour of the appellants that there was any irregularity in the matter of publication of the notification of sale, although there was none established, no case of substantial injury, as contemplated by S. 33, Revenue Sale Law, having been made out, the plaintiffs were not entitled to avoid the revenue sale.

The conclusions arrived at on the different points raised in the appeal before us, as indicated above, dispose of the appeal; and on those conclusions the appeal must be dismissed. It may be mentioned that in view of the defence raised by the contesting defendant in the suit, respondent in this appeal, that the suit was not maintainable in the present form without a prayer for setting aside the sale, decision was given by the Court below on the question of the maintainability of the suit. It is not necessary to express any opinion on that question in view of the conclusions we have arrived at on the merits of the case. The inclination of our opinion however is that the suit as framed merely for a declaration that the revenue sale was illegal and ultra vires and without any force and effect, was not maintainable under the law, in the absence of any prayer for consequential relief. The relief that had to be applied for in the case was one for setting aside the sale held for arrears of revenue; that was not done and the suit with a prayer for a declaration, pure and simple, presumably for the purpose of avoiding payment of proper Court-fees, was not a suit which was contemplated by the Revenue Sale Law. In the result the appeal fails, and it is dismissed with costs.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 418

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Abdul Gafur—Accused—Petitioner.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 1074 of 1935, Decided on 15th May 1936.

Registration Act (1908), Ss. 35 (2) and 82—Harmless lie—Sentence of imprisonment is too heavy.

Where in an enquiry under S. 35 (2) a person makes an untrue statement, without any intention to benefit himself and cheat anybody, but solely with a view to save certain ladies of the household not accustomed to go to office from appearing in the Registrar's Office, no doubt the act constitutes an offence making such person liable under S. 82, but as the lie is harmless a sentence of imprisonment should not be passed. [P 419 O 2]

Ajit Kumar Dutt—for Petitioner.

Khundkar and Nirmal Chandra Das Gupta—for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—The petitioner here obtained a rule against his conviction and sentence under S. 82, Registration Act. When he was tried before the Magistrate of Comilla, there were two other men with him as co-accused and they were convicted of abetment. On an appeal being heard on the part of the three persons before the Sessions Judge at Tipperah, the two persons who were charged with abetting the petitioner were acquitted. The sentence, the petitioner received in the trial Court, was one year's rigorous imprisonment and before the appellate Court this sentence was reduced to six months.

The actual charge against the petitioner was that he made a false statement before the Sub-Registrar in relation to a certain deed. This is how the lower appellate Court describes the material facts. The learned Judge says : One Asafali executed a deed of gift in favour of the sons of his only son Abdul Gafur (who is the petitioner here). But before the deed could be registered, Asafali died. On a certain date Abdul Gafur presented the deed for registration before the Sub-Registrar of Muradnagar when Abdul Gafur himself as well as the attesting witnesses Ramijaddin, Fazarali and Chandmia said that Abdul Gafur was the only child and heir of Asafali. The Sub-Registrar was about to register the deed when a deed-writer, Baikuntha Debnath, who apparently knew Asafali, came forward and said that Asafali had left four daughters also who were his heirs along with Abdul Gafur. It is also found as a fact that thereafter the Sub-Registrar had refused to accept the deed for registration. The next day then turned up at the office the husbands of the four sisters and admitted the proper execution of the deed and after that it was registered in due form. Nevertheless Abdul Gafur was prosecuted.

The main point argued before us was that this scene before the Sub-Registrar was not really a happening which is contemplated by the Act and that there was not enough formality to bring it within the language of the Act and more especially within S. 35. The statute however does contemplate these informal inquiries such as the Sub-Registrar was making on this occasion. Sub-s. (2), S. 35, for example, seems to be particularly appropriate to what was taking place with regard to this execution. It lays down that the registering officer, may, in order to satisfy himself that the persons appearing before him are the persons they represent themselves to be, examine any one present in his office.

No doubt the statement made by Abdul Gafur was made in furtherance of the procedure under this section. It seems to be contemplated by the Act that particular care should be exercised when the executant of the document which was being presented is dead. One cannot understand this. But we are not convinced that the action of Abdul Gafur on this occasion and the statement he made, although undoubtedly untrue, was a very serious lie. We think there can be very little doubt that the reason which prompted him to give vent to this half truth was to save his sisters (who were Mahomedan ladies not accustomed to go to offices) from the trouble of turning up before the Sub-Registrar. To me it is rather irritating to find that the lower appellate Court Judge and the Magistrate pompously delivered themselves of the opinion that this was a very very serious offence indeed. No doubt it is an offence but it is certainly not a serious one. We shall reduce the sentence, whilst upholding the conviction, to the period the petitioner has already undergone and direct his release. The rule is made absolute to this extent.

Henderson, J.—I agree. I have no doubt that the reasons given by the learned Judge in reaching the conclusion at which he arrived have been rightly characterised as unsound by the learned advocate who has appeared in support of this rule. On the other hand, the learned Magistrate reached the same conclusion for reasons which appear to me to be good reasons. Under S. 35, sub-s. (2) of the Act, the Sub-Registrar was entitled to examine the petitioner for any purpose contemplated by the Act. Under the Act if a representative of Abdul Gafur appeared and denied execution, the Sub-Registrar would have been compelled to refuse to register this document. It seems to me to be impossible to say that this officer when endeavouring to find out whether there were such persons, was not carrying out some purpose contemplated by the Act.

I am bound to say that I find it difficult to appreciate why either the Magistrate or the Judge thought it necessary to impose a sentence of imprisonment. This lie was the most harmless lie that has ever been told. This petitioner was not attempting to benefit himself or to cheat his sisters. It is the Mukhtear who told him that if the Sub-Registrar became aware of their existence, they would have to be brought to the office in person and it is quite obvious that Abdul Gafur suppressed the fact of their existence in order to save them from this to their wholly unwarranted trouble.

V.B./R.K. Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 420

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Syed Fateh Ali Mirza—Appellant.

v.

Sahebzadi Meherunnessa Begum and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 510 of 1935, Decided on 23rd April 1936, from original order of Dist. Judge, 24-Parganas, D/- 16th September 1935.

(a) Mussalman Wakf Act (42 of 1923), S. 10—Order appointing receiver is not appealable.

An order appointing a receiver in a proceeding under Act 42 of 1923 is not appealable as no appeal lies against an order in a proceeding in the Act. [P 420 C 2]

(b) Mussalman Wakf Act (42 of 1923), Ss. 3, 9 and 10—District Judge has no jurisdiction to appoint receiver—Order appointing receiver is liable to be set aside in revision though appeal is not maintainable.

There is no jurisdiction conferred on the District Judge in the exercise of which a receiver can be appointed by him in a proceeding started on an application for direction on a mutawali to file particulars and accounts contemplated by Act 42 of 1923. An order therefore appointing a receiver being without jurisdiction is liable to be set aside in revision, though no appeal lies against such an order. [P 420 C 2]

A. N. Bose, Tarakeswar Nath Mitra and Bimla Charan Deb—for Appellant.

B. K. Mukerjee and A. S. Akram—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal has arisen out of a proceeding under Act 42 of 1923 (the Mussalman Wakf Act), started on an application made to the learned District Judge of 24-Pargannas praying that a mutawali in possession of wakf properties be directed to submit a statement of the particulars of the wakf as required by S. 3 of the Act, that the account submitted by the mutawali be examined and audited, and that the applicant be allowed to inspect and obtain copies of statements and particulars furnished by the mutawali. At a certain stage of the proceeding, parties other than the applicants who started the same, applied for the appointment of a receiver to take charge of all the wakf properties for reasons stated by them in their application before the Court. The application for appointment of a receiver was granted by the learned District Judge, and this appeal was directed against the orders appointing a receiver passed on 12th and 16th September 1935. An objection to the maintainability of the appeal was raised before us, and we are of opinion that an appeal from the orders complained of does not lie, as they are made in a proceeding under Act 42 of 1923. There can, however, be no question that a question of the exercise of jurisdiction by the Court below arises in the case before us. In our judgment, the orders appointing a receiver in the proceeding pending before the Court below were passed under an entire misapprehension of the scope and operation of the provisions contained in Act 42 of 1923, as there was no jurisdiction conferred on the District Judge in the exercise of which a receiver could be appointed by him in a proceeding started on an application for direction on a mutawali to file particulars and accounts as contemplated by Act 42 of 1923, which specifically provided for enforcement of orders in that behalf by penalties in the shape of fine.

The orders passed by the learned District Judge on 12th and 16th September 1935 must, in the above view of the case before us, be set aside as passed without jurisdiction, and we direct accordingly. The receiver appointed by the learned District Judge is to be discharged and the proceeding under Act 42 of 1923 pending before the Court below in which the receiver was appointed is to be dealt with by the learned District Judge, in accordance with law. No orders are necessary on the application filed by the appellant in Court on 8th April 1936. The application filed in Court to-day will be kept on the record and the decision in the case before us is given on that application the prayer made in the same being allowed. The appeal is dismissed. There is no order as to costs either in the appeal or in the application. Let the records be returned as soon as possible.

V.B./R.K.

Order set aside.

* A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 421

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Monmohini Das Purkayastha and others
—Appellants.

v.

Behari Shaha and others—Defendants
41 to 43—Respondents.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 37 of 1935, Decided on 25th March 1936, against judgment of R. C. Mitter, J., D/- 21st
May 1935.

(a) Decree—Setting aside — Revival of suit —No difference between decree set aside in subsequent proceeding and decree declared null and void and inoperative in subsequent proceeding — Suit can be revived against party in whose favour decree is set aside.

There is no difference in substance or principle between a case in which a decree passed against a person is set aside by a subsequent proceeding, and a case in which the decree is declared null and void and inoperative in subsequent proceeding; and the suit in which the inoperative decree was passed can be revived against a defendant in whose favour such a decree is passed in a subsequent proceeding.

[P 422 C 2]

* (b) Minor—Suit properly filed — Defendants minors—Defective procedure followed by Court in appointment of guardian—Guardian not objecting to appointment — Decree set aside by minors and suit revived—Minors should be deemed to be parties to suit at time of institution.

Where an institution of a suit is complete and there is no defect but the Court follows a defective procedure in the appointment of guardian for the minor defendants but such guardian takes no objection and the decree passed is subsequently set aside at the instance of the minors, the suit is revived and the minors should be deemed to be parties at the time of institution of the suit: 1917 All 477, Foll.; 31 All 572 (P C), Expl.

[P 423 C 1]

Birendra K. De—for Appellants.Bijan K. Mukherjee, Nripendra Ch. Das and Nikunja B. Ray — for Respondents.

Judgment.—This is an appeal from the decision of our learned brother R. C. Mitter, J. The plaintiff appellant instituted a suit, Title Suit No. 2149 of 1909, in the Court of the Munsif at Sunamgunj in the District of Sylhet, for possession, on declaration of his title, and there were other incidental and consequential reliefs prayed in the suit, which was filed in Court on 16th July 1909, against nineteen persons impleaded as defendants; to meet the objection on the score of defect of parties, raised by the defendants, 52 more persons were added as defendants.

Of these defendants subsequently made parties to the suit, defendants 41 to 43 were minors at the time when they were made defendants to the suit; the mother of these three defendants was proposed as their guardian and the order of the Court relating to the matter of appointment of guardian of defendants 41 to 43, passed on 11th June 1910 was this:

Service of notice pressed on 16th April 1910. No objection petition filed yet. The proposed guardian be appointed guardian for the minor defendants to conduct the case.

There was no appearance by any of the defendants in the suit and the suit was decreed in favour of the plaintiff. The decree of the Court of first instance was ultimately affirmed by this Court on 23rd April 1914, on a second appeal preferred by some of the defendants in the suit. In the year 1918, defendants 41 to 43 in the suit instituted a suit, Title Suit No. 47 of 1918 subsequently registered Title Suit No. 12 of 1919, for a declaration that the decree passed against them in Title Suit No. 2149 of 1909 was invalid and inoperative against them, on the ground that there was no proper appointment of a guardian to represent them in the suit. The aforesaid suit No. 47 of 1918, was decided in favour of defendants 41 to 43, the plaintiffs in that suit, on the ground that the mother proposed as guardian had not consented to her appointment, as the guardian-ad-litem of her minor sons, and that it was settled law that no person could be appointed guardian-ad-litem of a minor without express consent. It was held that the decree passed in the suit being ineffectual and inoperative against defendants 41 to 43, they were not bound by it. The decree passed in Title Suit No. 2149 of 1909 was declared null and void and inoperative against these defendants by the decision and decree passed by the Additional Subordinate Judge, Sylhet, on 20th September 1919. Thereafter, on the January 1928, the plaintiff filed an application in the Court of the Munsif at Sunamgunj, praying that the Title Suit No. 2149 of 1909, be proceeded with, as against defendants 41 to 43, and the application was allowed, the suit being revived.

The result of the hearing of the suit after its revival was that the suit against defendants 41 to 43 was decreed in part on contest by the said defendants. The decree passed by the trial Court on 16th December 1931 was affirmed by the Subordinate Judge, in the lower appellate Court, on 20th December 1932, with certain modification, as mentioned in the ordering portion of the judgment of the Subordinate Judge. On appeal by defendants 41 to 43 to this Court, the decision of the lower appellate Court was reversed, and the decree passed by the lower Court directed against defendants 41 to 43 were discharged by our learned brother R. C. Mitter, J., on the ground that the suit against the order of revival of the suit against defendants 41 to 43 was without jurisdiction. It may be noticed in this connexion that the decision of Mitter, J., is in favour of affirming the decision of the lower appellate Court on the other questions relating to the merits of the case before us and the question of limitation arising in the same.

In the appeal before us preferred by the plaintiff, the first ground urged was that the learned Judge of this Court was not right in the view taken by him that the rule was well settled that if a decree passed against a person was set aside by a decree passed in a suit brought to set it aside, the original suit was revived and must be proceeded with, could not be extended or applied to a case where the decree passed is null and void on the ground that it was passed against the minor who was represented by a guardian-ad-litem. In the case before us the Court made an order appointing a guardian-ad-litem without express consent, there having been no objection to the proposal for appointment of guardian; this was not strictly in accordance with law, in view of the provisions introduced some time before the order in question was made in the year 1910, that "no person shall without his consent be appointed guardian for the suit" [O. 32, R. 4 (3), Civil P. C.]. A decree followed, after the order defective under the existing law was made. Defendants 41 to 43 instituted a suit for avoiding the decree, and relief was given to them in terms of the prayer made by them. The decree passed in Title Suit No. 2149 of 1909 was declared null and void and inoperative as against them, on the finding that they were not bound by it. The expression that the decree was set aside was not used in view of the position that defendants 41 to 43 prayed for a declaration only and not for a consequential relief, which they could very well have done in the circumstances of the case before us. The effect of the decree of the suit of 1918, brought by defendants 41 to 43, was that there was a declaration that the procedure adopted in the matter of appointment of guardian was defective and the decree passed in suit was inoperative so far as those defendants were concerned.

There is no difference in substance as between declaration that a decree is null and void and inoperative as such and setting aside the same in a case in which the only prayer was for a declaration that a decree was inoperative. This distinction was far too technical to be appreciated properly; and it could not, in our judgment, be allowed to stand in the way of justice being done in a case. The authority of decisions of this Court are, as has been pointed out by our learned brother, in favour of the position that the original suit is revived, and must be proceeded with, in the case of a decree being set aside in a suit brought for the purpose of setting aside the same; and no authority of any decided case was pointed out to us that there is any difference in substance as between a decree declaring a decree null and void and inoperative as such and a decree setting aside a decree previously passed on the ground that a procedure followed was defective under the law. In our judgment, there is no difference in substance or principle between a case in which a decree passed against a person is set aside by a subsequent proceeding and a case in which the decree is declared null and void and inoperative in subsequent proceedings; and the suit in which the inoperative decree was passed can be revived against a defendant in whose favour such a decree is passed in a subsequent proceeding.

The question next raised in support of the appeal was, whether Mitter, J., was right in his decision that defendants 41 to 43 were not parties to the suit in the eye of the law, and the suit could not for that reason be revived later on, against persons who were not parties to it at all, at the time when the decree was passed in it. So far as this question was concerned, it would appear that Mitter, J., has dissented from the view taken not only by the Courts below, but from the decision in 39 All 8 (1). It appears to us however that the position indicated by the learned Judges of the Allahabad High Court is sound; and we see no difficulty in giving effect to the same in the case before us. The suit was instituted and could be instituted against defendants 41 to 43 by name. The institution of the suit was complete and was not defective under the law, and it was the duty of the Court to appoint a proper person to be guardian for the suit for the minors (O. 32, R. 3, Civil P. C.). The Court did appoint such a guardian; but the procedure followed was defective under the law; and a decree followed, to avoid the effect while a suit was instituted by defendants 41 to 43. The decree was ultimately declared null and void and inoperative, so far as the minor defendants 41 to 43 were concerned. The Court which followed a procedure held to be defective in a subsequent proceeding, and whose duty it was to see that a proper guardian was appointed had jurisdiction to revive the suit so as to restore the minors to the same position in which they were on the date on which the suit was filed against them. This is the position indicated in the judgment in 39 All 8 (1), referred to above; and we unhesitatingly follow the same. It would not be right to hold and it would amount to denial of justice in the case before us, if we hold that defendants 41 to 43 were not to be regarded as parties to the suit when the suit was instituted by the plaintiff, and hold further that the suit could not be revived at the instance of the plaintiff after the decree that was passed against the defendant was declared to be null and void and inoperative as against them for the reason of a defect of procedure followed by the Court, in the matter of appointment of their guardian for the suit. If any case of prejudice so far as defendants 41 to 43 were concerned were made out, the position might have been different.

- We are not unmindful of the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, and of the decision of Courts in this country, that in certain cases and in certain circumstances it has to be held that a minor not properly represented by a guardian must be treated as a person who was never a party to the suit. The observations of the Judicial Committee in 36 I A 168 (2), related to a case in which a guardian appointed by the Court had an interest adverse to that of the minor in question; and those observations in support of the position that in the case of an inherent defect in the matter of appointment of guardian, the minor should not be deemed to be party to a suit, could not be held applicable to a case like the one before us, in which the defect in the appointment of guardian was purely a formal one, arising out of the position that the mother proposed as guardian not having objected to her appointment, was taken to have consented to her appointment. The fact remains that in the suit not only the guardian of the minor defendants 41 to 43, appointed by the Court after an erroneous procedure was followed, but none of the defendants in the suit appeared to contest the same.

The conclusion we have arrived at, as indicated above, is that the suit was rightly revived in the year 1928, on the application of the plaintiff appellant before us. Defendants 41 to 43 who had attained majority by the time that the suit was revived defended the suit, and the decision of the final Court of fact substantially in favour of the plaintiff-appellant, has been affirmed by the learned Judge of this Court, on appeal. The decision of the learned Judge, R. C. Mitter, on the question of the Court's jurisdiction to revive the suit being reversed by us, the decision and decree of the Subordinate Judge in the Court of appeal below are restored. The plaintiffs-appellants in this appeal will get their costs in all the Courts from defendants 41 to 43, respondents in the appeal before us. The cross-objections filed in this Court are dismissed. There is no order as to costs in the cross-objections.

R.W./R.K.

Appeal accepted.

-
2. Rashidunnessa v. Mahammad, (1909) 31 All 572=36 I A 168=3 I C 864 (P C).

1. Bhagwan Dayal v. Param Sukh Das, 1917 All 477=36 I C 366=39 All 8=14 A L J 818.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 424

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Gopesh Chandra Aditya — Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Benode Lal Das and others—Respondents.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 12 of 1935, Decided on 24th January 1936, against judgment of R. C. Mitter, J., in Appeal No. 1854 of 1934, D/- 22nd March 1935.

(a) Appeal—Right of—Right of appeal not lost unless decree conditional, for benefit of appellant, and appellant accepts condition and benefit.

Right of appeal given to a person by statute should not ordinarily be taken away unless the decree or the order of the lower Court imposes term or condition on the opposite party and which is for the benefit of the appellant and the appellant accepts the benefit of the term or condition so imposed on the opposite party. The principle however ought not to be extended and the Courts should be jealous in granting that right and ought not to curtail it: 1929 Cal 796, Foll.; 12 C L J 556 and 1917 Cal 546, Ref.

[P 425 C 2]

(b) Assam Municipal Act (1 of 1923), Ss. 21-A, 10 and 14—Elections set aside by civil Court — Unseated candidate accepting appointment under S. 21-A—Right of appeal by unseated candidate is not lost.

Where the elections are set aside by the civil Court, and the Local Government in exercise of powers conferred upon it under S. 21-A, accepts the correctness of the decree and appoints the defendant—candidate unseated—Commissioner, such person by accepting the appointment does not lose his right of appeal against the decree of civil Court.

[P 426 C 1]

(c) Assam Municipal Act (1 of 1923), Ss. 13 and 296 (2) and rules thereunder—Jurisdiction of civil Court to adjudicate on election disputes is not ousted.

So long as the proviso to S. 13 is retained in the statute the jurisdiction of the civil Court to adjudicate upon the validity or the invalidity of the elections is not affected by anything contained in the rules framed under S. 296 (2) or by establishment of special tribunals to consider election petitions: Case law discussed.

[P 428 C 1]

(d) Assam Municipal Act (1 of 1923), S. 296 (2)—Rules—Rr. 13 and 14—Provision regarding submission of nomination paper to chairman is mandatory.

Provisions in S. 13 regarding submission of nomination paper to the chairman is mandatory and the candidate must send his nomination paper to the chairman. If he sends it to anybody else, even to the Magistrate appointed to hear objections under R. 14, he does not comply with the rule, nor does the fact that the Magistrate sends back the nomination paper to the chairman would satisfy the requirements: Merks v. Eackson (1876), 1 C P D 683, Ref.

[P 428 C 2]

(e) Eastern Bengal and Assam General Clauses Act (1 of 1909), S. 14—S. 14 cannot be invoked to shorten period fixed under R. 13 of rules under S. 296 (2), Assam Municipal Act.

Section 14 has no application when an act is required to be done in such a way as to leave a clear margin of a definite and stated period of time between the date of the act and the fixed date and consequently cannot be invoked for shortening the interval of fifteen days mentioned in R. 13.

[P 429 C 1]

Amarendra Nath Bose and Hemendra Kumar Das—for Appellant.

Sarat Chandra Basak, Krishna Kishore Basak, Biswanath Roy, Provash Ch. Chatterji, Provat Kumar Bose and Nagendra Kumar Dutt—for Respondents.

Appeal No. 1854 of 1934.

R. C. Mitter, J.—This appeal is on behalf of defendant 3 in a suit for a declaration by the plaintiff that his nomination paper has been illegally rejected and for a further declaration that defendants 2 to 4 have not been elected as members of the Municipal Board of Sylhet.

The plaintiff stood as a candidate for election from Ward No. 11 of the Sylhet Municipality, as also defendants 2 to 4. The 18th April 1934 was fixed for the election. The plaintiff filed two nomination papers: one on 28th March and one on 29th March 1934. These nomination papers are admittedly not in order. On 3rd April 1934 he, however, sent a nomination paper, otherwise in order, to the Election Magistrate. As under the rules framed by the Local Government under the Assam Municipal Act, nomination papers have to be sent to the Chairman of the Municipality and not to the Magistrate, the latter sent the said nomination paper to the Municipal Office, and it is admitted that it reached the Chairman of the Municipality on 5th April 1934. The Municipal Office was closed from 30th March to 4th April. Defendants 2 to 4 had filed valid nomination papers before 30th March 1934. An objection was preferred to the validity of the nomination paper of the plaintiff. The Magistrate heard the objection under R. 14, and held that it was not a good nomination. There being three seats, defendants 2 to 4 were declared elected after the rejection of the plaintiff's nomination paper.

The plaintiff filed this suit praying for the declaration set out above. In the suit the Municipal Board of Sylhet is made defendant 1, and the other defendants are the persons declared elected from Ward No. 2. The defence filed by all the defendants are on the same lines. The question on the merits is whether the plaintiff's nomination paper had been rightly rejected by the Magistrate. Two further questions have also been raised before me namely: (1) that the appeal before me is incompetent; and (2) that the civil Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit of this description. Both the Courts below have held that the civil Court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit, and that the plaintiff's nomination paper had been illegally rejected by the Election Magistrate. The plaintiff got a declaration that the election of defendants 2 to 4 was not valid. The judgment of the lower appellate Court was pronounced on 28th June 1934. As two Courts had held the election to be invalid the Local Government, under the Assam Municipal Act, has appointed, on 9th July 1934, some persons to be members of the Municipal Board to fill up the vacancies caused by the Courts below holding that defendants 2 to 4 have not been validly elected. One of the persons so appointed is defendant 3 who had alone filed, on 30th August 1934, the appeal to this Court.

The said defendant has accepted the appointment, and it is said that he is taking part in the proceedings of the Municipal Board. A preliminary objection has been taken to the competency of the appeal. It has been put on two grounds namely: (a) that the Municipal Board not being made a party to this appeal it is incompetent; and (b) that defendant 3 having accepted the appointment made by the Local Government, the appointment having proceeded on the footing that the decree made by the lower appellate Court is a good decree, cannot prefer or proceed with the appeal. I do not think that there is any substance in any of these objections. Regarding the first one defendant 3 had the undoubted right to prefer an appeal and proceed on with it. The Municipal Board, was a co-defendant. The defence of defendant 3, and of the Municipal Board was the same and the decree passed against all the defendants has proceeded upon a common ground. Defendant 3 has accordingly, by himself, the right to prefer the appeal and to proceed on with it. Regarding the second ground of the preliminary objection the position stands thus: S. 21-A, Assam Municipal Act runs thus:

If the persons entitled to elect a member or members to a Board at any election under this Act fail, within the prescribed time, duly to elect the member or the full number of members required, the Local Government, may, notwithstanding anything contained in S. 10 or S. 14, appoint a member or members to make up the deficiency.

Section 10 which is relevant to this case, provides that at least four-fifths of the total number of members of a Municipal Board shall be elected members. It may be conceded therefore that when the Local Government exercised the powers under S. 21-A, it accepted the correctness of the decree made by the learned Subordinate Judge on 28th June 1934. The question therefore is whether defendant 3 by accepting the position of an appointed commissioner had debarred himself from appealing from that decree. In my judgment he has not debarred himself. The right of appeal given to a person by statute should not ordinarily be taken away, unless the appellant brings himself definitely within those class of cases in which it has been laid down that by his conduct he had lost the right of appeal. The principle of these cases ought not in my judgment to be extended. The right of appeal is the creature of statute, and is a very valuable right. The Courts should in my judgment be jealous in guarding that right, and ought not to curtail it. My reading of the case law on the subject is that the right of appeal is lost if (a) the decree or the order of the lower Court imposes a term or condition on the opposite party and which is for the benefit of the appellant, and (b) if the appellant accepts the benefit of the term or condition so imposed on the opposite party. That is to say, in order that a preliminary objection may succeed, the first condition is that the decree or order must be in essence a conditional decree or order conferring a benefit on the appellant. If the decree or order is not a conditional order, the principle by which an appeal is held to be barred has no application. There is no principle that a plaintiff who has got a part decree loses his right of appeal in respect of the part of his claim disallowed either by receiving payment from the judgment-debtor or by executing the decree he has obtained.

In such a case the decree made confers on him a benefit and by getting the decretal amount either amicably or by execution he obtains the benefit under the decree, but inasmuch as the decree so obtained is not dependent upon any term or condition connected with the dismissal of the part of his claim, he does not lose the right of appeal by realising the decretal amount, or by accepting payment from the judgment-debtor. In any event there can be no scope for a preliminary objection unless there is a benefit conferred on the appellant by the decree itself. The principle and its precise scope which I have indicated above is borne out by the decision of Sir George Rankin, C. J., in 57 Cal 386 (1), where not only the earlier decisions of this Court on the subject, 12 C L J 556 (2) and 21 C W N 232 (3), but the English authorities are subjected to a critical analysis and close review. In the case before me no benefit has been conferred on defendant 3 by the decree of the Subordinate Judge, and I cannot persuade myself to the position that defendant 3 has lost his right of appeal simply because the Local Government thought that the decree made by the Subordinate Judge was a correct decree, and on that footing appointed defendant 3 as a member of the Municipal Board. I accordingly overrule the preliminary objection. On the merits two points have to be considered : (1) Whether the suit lies. (2) Whether the nomination paper of the plaintiff, which reached the Chairman of the Municipality on 5th April 1934, had been rightly rejected by the Magistrate.

For the purpose of deciding these points it is necessary to notice and examine some of the sections of the Assam Municipal Act 1 of 1923, and the rules framed by the Local Government under S. 296 of the said Act, as also the provisions of S. 9, Civil P. C., S. 42, Specific Relief Act, and S. 14, Eastern Bengal and Assam General Clauses Act 1 of 1909. S. 12, Municipal Act, defines the persons who are entitled to vote. They must possess certain qualifications and their names must appear on the Voters' Register. S. 13 defines the circumstances which would make a person eligible for election as member of the Municipal Board. They must be persons entitled to vote at an election and must not be under the disabilities mentioned in the section. Some of these disabilities may be removed by the Local Government. The section ends with a provision in these terms : "Provided further that nothing contained in this section nor in any rules made under the authority of this Act shall be deemed to affect the jurisdiction of civil Courts." S. 296 empowers the Local Government to make rules for the purpose of carrying out the provisions of the Act. Sub-s. (2) of the said section provides that such rules may "determine the mode and time of election of members, the qualifications and disqualifications and registration of voters and candidates". R. 16 of the Election Rules framed by the Local Government authorises the Magistrate to fix the date of an election. Such date must be notified in the Assam Gazette. Rr. 13, 14 and 15 are important. I will quote these rules at some length. R. 13 runs thus :

Every person who is a candidate for election shall send his name to the Chairman in writing in form B with necessary particulars filled up in Cols. 2, 3, 4 and 5 by a date not less than fifteen days before the date fixed for election supported by the signatures in Cols. 6 and 7 of two electors in each ward in which he proposes to stand, or of the section of the Municipal voters he proposes to represent, who propose, and second his nomination.

The Chairman is then to prepare the preliminary list of all candidates and forward a copy thereof to the Magistrate. R. 14 requires the Magistrate then to publish a notification fixing a date for hearing objections to candidates, such a date to be not less than three and not more than five days later than the date of the notification. The rule then states that "the Magistrate shall hear and decide all objections to candidates and his decision shall be final." R. 15 requires the Chairman to publish the final list of candidates at the Municipal Office after receipt of the Magistrate's orders made under R. 14. R. 32 provides for election petitions to the Magistrate. He is invested with judicial powers, and is authorised either to confirm the election or set

1. Hurry Bux Deora v. Johurmull Bhatia, 1929 Cal 796 = 123 I C 661 = 33 C W N 711 = 57 Cal 386.

2. Manilal v. Harendralal Roy, (1910) 12 C L J 556 = 8 I C 79.

3. Bankim Chandra Bose v. Marium Begum, 1917 Cal 546 = 37 I C 804 = 21 C W N 232 (S B).

it aside and direct a fresh election to be held. Apart from the proviso to S. 13, Municipal Act, and the provisions of S. 9, Civil P. C., and S. 42, Specific Relief Act, the position is clear in respect of the jurisdiction of the civil Court to entertain a suit of the nature I have before me. In the case of 6 C B N S 336 (4) at p. 337, Willes, J., states the principle in these words :

There are three classes of cases in which a liability may be established founded upon a statute. One is, where there was a liability existing at Common law, and that liability is affirmed by a statute which gives a special and peculiar form of remedy different from the remedy which existed at common law; there, unless the statute contains words which expressly or by necessary implication exclude the common law remedy, the party suing has his election to pursue either that or the statutory remedy. The second class of cases is where the statute gives the right to sue merely but provides for no particular form of remedy, there, the party can only proceed by Common law action. But there is a third class, viz. where a liability not existing at Common law is created by statute which at the same time gives a special and particular remedy for enforcing it. The remedy provided by the statute must be followed and it is not competent to the party to pursue the course applicable to cases of the second class. The form given by the statute must be adopted and adhered to.

There may possibly be a fourth class of cases as has been held by the Full Bench of the Patna High Court in 14 Pat 24 (5). It is where a right or liability has been created by statute, but the legislature had left to another authority the appointment of a tribunal to try such liability but the tribunal so contemplated by the legislature has never been brought into existence. In such a case the subject has the right to proceed in the ordinary civil Courts, unless and until the duty of appointing a special tribunal is carried. Sir Lawrence Jenkins states the third proposition of Willes, J., in 31 Bom 604 (6) in a slightly different form. He says thus :

But where a special tribunal, out of the ordinary course, is appointed by an Act to determine questions as to rights which are the creation of that Act, then except so far as otherwise expressly provided or necessarily implied, that tribunal's jurisdiction to determine these questions is exclusive.

To the same effect are the observations of Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee in 2 C L J 359 (7) which was a case coming within the first class of cases mentioned by Willes, J. In the case before me, applying these principles there would have been one answer, if there had been no proviso to S. 13. Municipalities are the creatures of statute, the right to vote and to stand as candidates flow from the statute. These rights are not, to use the expression of Willes, J., Common Law rights. The statute empowers the Local Government to set up tribunals to decide election disputes and such tribunals have been set up by the Rules by the Local Government. On the principles formulated above the jurisdiction of these tribunals would be exclusive and a party who wants to challenge an election would not have the right to commence an action in the civil Court. This would have been the result, as I have said, if there had been no proviso to S. 13, saving the jurisdiction of civil Courts. The question therefore is: Does the said proviso render inapplicable the principles I have formulated ?

In my opinion it does. To quote the words of Sir Lawrence Jenkins, the legislature has expressly provided that the civil Courts would also have jurisdiction. S. 13, although couched in negative terms, in essence defines the qualifications of candidates. S. 296 (2) empowers the Local Government to make rules to determine the qualifications and disqualifications of candidates and for registration of candidates. He must be a person qualified to vote and not otherwise disqualified. R. 13 requires a candidate to send in his nomination paper filled up in a prescribed form and in a prescribed manner to the Chairman, 15 days before the date of election. This rule is a rule which defines one of the qualifications of a candidate. It is that he must be duly nominated by certain persons in a certain way and before certain time: See Subhawardy, J., in 58 Cal 87 (8) at p. 90. The meaning of the proviso which is attached

4. Wolverhampton New Water Works Co. v. Hawkesford, (1859) 6 C B N S 336=28 L J C P 242=5 Jur N S 1104=7 W R 464=141 E R 486.

5. Lachmi Chand Sochanti v. Ram Protap, 1934 Pat 670=152 I C 805=14 Pat 24=15 P L T 623.

6. Bhai Sanker v. The Municipal Corporation Bombay, (1907) 31 Bom 604=9 Bom L R 417.

7. Bhandi Singh v. Ramdhan Roy, (1905) 2 C L J 359=10 C W N 991.

8. Ratish Chandra Munshi v. Amulya Charan Ghattak, 1931 Cal 36=129 I C 422=58 Cal 87=34 C W N 741.

to the section which defines the qualifications of candidates is that the civil Court's jurisdiction to adjudicate at least upon questions of qualifications of candidates shall not be taken to be affected either by anything contained in the Act or the rules framed by the Local Government under S. 296 of the Act. Section 9, Civil P. C., entitled a person to institute a suit of a civil nature in a civil Court unless the jurisdiction of the civil Court is either expressly or impliedly barred.

A suit for a declaration that a person was duly nominated as a candidate and that the election of his rivals is not valid is a suit of a civil nature. Such a declaration falls within S. 42, Specific Relief Act : 53 Cal 570 (9). If there had been no express saving of the jurisdiction of civil Courts, the jurisdiction of civil Courts to entertain a suit which is for impugning an election would have been impliedly barred on the principle that the special tribunals set up have exclusive jurisdiction on the principles I have already noted. The fact that by R. 32, election tribunals have been set up and provisions for election petitions made does not, in my judgment, having regard to the proviso to S. 13, modify in any way the cases decided under the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act of 1882 which are in the same terms as the proviso to S. 13, Assam Municipal Act. It was held in these cases that civil Courts had jurisdiction to entertain suits concerning elections: 24 Cal 107 (10), 53 Cal 570 (9), and 58 Cal 87 (8). The observations of Suhrawardy, J., at p. 92 in the last mentioned case, implying that the jurisdiction of the civil Court would have been ousted if the legislature provided for election tribunals and for election petitions, are obiter, which are not binding on me. I hold that so long as the proviso in question (proviso to S. 13) is retained in the statute the jurisdiction of civil Courts is not ousted although by the rules special tribunals have been set up before which election petitions would lie. It may be that on the principle of election of remedies a party, who has approached the special tribunal and has been unsuccessful, would be prevented from re-agitating the same matter by a suit filed in a civil Court. For this proposition there is support from a considerable body of weighty authorities, amongst which may be noticed the observations of Willes, J., which I have quoted above, and the decision in 2 C L J 359 (7). I accordingly hold that the suit is maintainable in a civil Court.

Regarding the last point I am of opinion that the Courts below have gone wrong. R. 13 provides that a candidate shall send to the Chairman his nomination paper "by a date not less than fifteen days before the date fixed for election." This rule is mandatory. In the first place the candidate must send his nomination paper to the Chairman. If he sends his nomination paper to anybody else, as in the present case to the Magistrate, he does not comply with the rule. I do not think that the fact that the Magistrate sends back the nomination paper to the Chairman would satisfy requirements of the rule. The Magistrate, when he received the nomination paper, was not bound to be prompt or to send or re-direct it to the Chairman. He did so in the present case, no doubt ; but that was only an act of courtesy. Rules of a pari materia have been construed very strictly. For instance where the rule required nomination papers to be delivered to the town clerk "by the candidate himself, or his proposer or seconder," it was held that there was no valid nomination of a candidate when the nomination paper was delivered to the town clerk by an agent of the candidate : (1876) 1 C P D 683 (11). But in the case before me there is a more formidable objection to the validity of plaintiff's nomination. The nomination paper reached the Chairman on 5th April; the date of the election was the 18th April; and hence there was not an interval of clear fifteen days between the date of the submission of the nomination paper and the date of election. The time mentioned therein is an essence of the thing. If there be not clear fifteen days' interval the nomination is not valid. This position is not challenged, but what is stated is that by reason of the provisions of S. 14, Eastern Bengal and Assam General Clauses Act, it must be taken that between the 5th and 18th April there was an interval of clear

9. Nishi Kanta Chaudhury v. Gopeswara Chatterjee, 1926 Cal 1070=96 I C 620 = 30 C W N 977=53 Cal 570=44 C L J 31.
10. Sabhapat Singh v. Abdul Gaffur, (1897) 24 Cal 107.

11. Merks v. Eackson, (1876) 1 C P D 683.

fifteen days. This contention has found favour with both the Courts below. I have already stated that the Municipal Office was closed from the 30th March to the 4th April and the Chairman got the plaintiff's nomination paper on the 5th April when the Municipal Office re-opened. S. 14 of the Act runs thus:

Where by any Act, any act or proceeding is directed or allowed to be done or taken in any Court or office on a certain day or within a prescribed period, then if the Court or office is closed on that day or the last day of the prescribed period the act or proceeding shall be considered as done or taken in due time if it is done or taken on the next day afterwards on which the Court or office is open: Provided that nothing in this section shall apply to any act or proceeding to which the Indian Limitation Act of 1908 applies.

The saving is made because there is no analogous provision in the Limitation Act, S. 4. This section does not in terms fix the period within which the nomination paper is to be filed or to fix the last date of presenting the nomination paper. The nomination paper is not to be filed in the Municipal Office but sent to the Chairman. No doubt the last date of presenting the nomination paper can be determined by a process of calculation, by a process of subtraction. But unless the last date for putting in the nomination paper is fixed, or the period for filing it is prescribed by an authority which has the power to fix the date or prescribe the period, the section has no application. This section has no application when an act is required to be done in such a way as to leave a clear margin of a definite and stated period of time between the date of the act and the fixed date. I hold accordingly that S. 14, General Clauses Act, has no application to the case before me and it cannot be invoked for shortening the interval of fifteen days mentioned in R. 13. I hold accordingly that the plaintiff's nomination paper was not illegally rejected by the Magistrate, and there being only three candidates validly nominated, and only three seats in Ward No. 2, the order declaring defendants 2 to 4 as duly elected was a right order. The appeal is accordingly allowed with costs, and the plaintiff's suit dismissed with costs throughout. Leave to appeal under the Letters Patent asked for is granted.

L. P. A. No. 12 of 1935.

Judgment.—This appeal must be dismissed for the reason that no ground has been made out, for interference with the decision of our learned brother, R. C. Mitter, J., against which it is directed. The questions arising for consideration in this appeal have been exhaustively dealt with by the learned Judge; and we do not consider it necessary to add anything to his judgment which was criticised before us at very great length, in support of the appeal. The appeal is dismissed with costs.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 429

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Alkasulla and others—Appellants.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 902 of 1935, Decided on 6th May 1936.

Criminal Trial—Trial by jury — Misdirection — Committing Magistrate charging accused with common object to take possession — Trial Judge adding common object of assaulting—It is wrong to include contradictory cases at the same trial and in one charge.

In a trial for rioting, it is one thing to say that common object of the accused was to get possession of disputed land, and it is quite another to say that common object was to beat apparently for the mere pleasure of beating. It is wrong to include those two contradictory cases at the same trial even more so in one charge. So where a Judge tells the jury that in the event of prosecution failing to establish the case of getting possession of disputed land, with which they come into Court or in the event of jury being unable to come to a decision on the real point of issue between parties, they are to consider the possibility as to the existence of another common object, such procedure is wrong and Judge ought to strike it out of the charge. [P 430 C 1, 2]

Hamidul Huq—for Appellants.

Khundkar and Bireswar Chatterjea — for the Crown.

Henderson, J. — The appellants have all been convicted of rioting and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. Two of them were also convicted under S. 323 I. P. C., but no separate sentence was passed. Unfortunately when the case came on at the trial the learned Judge adopted a procedure which has given us trouble in one or two other cases and the result is that it is quite impossible to uphold this verdict. The learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer, however, asked us in view of the prosecution case that the appellants' party were mortgagees attempting to get possession without the assistance of the Court to order a new trial on a suitably framed charge.

There can be as far as we can gather, no doubt whatever that this fight, in which persons on both sides were injured, took place in regard to the dispute about possession. The committing Magistrate took the commonsense view that if possession was really with the complainant, the common object of the accused was to take possession themselves. In our opinion, that must be so. However, when the trial was taken up at the request of the Public Prosecutor, the learned Judge added the words "and assaulting them"; the result was the introduction of not only inevitable but unjustifiable confusion. It is one thing to say that the common object was to get possession of the disputed land, it is quite another to say that the common object was to beat apparently for the mere pleasure of beating. It is quite wrong to include those two contradictory cases at the same trial even more so in one charge. The learned Judge dealt quite properly with the plain straightforward case which the prosecution originally made and he put the defence case with regard to the right of private defence in a manner to which no objection could be taken. Having done that, he went on to say this:

If you fail to find which of the parties was in possession, next consider the evidence whether the crown has been able to establish the alternative common object of assaulting the complainant's party. For this purpose, refer to the medical evidence. This shows that Farasatulla was fatally wounded, and Sukur Ulla and Mabarak Ulla were also wounded and it also shows that Gatha, a deadly weapon was used in the fight. You are to consider the evidence and decide whether the prosecution has established the existence of the common object of assaulting the complainant's party.

Unfortunately this was precisely what the jury did. The foreman said this:

We have not been able to find in whose possession the land in dispute is. In our decision, as regards conviction under S. 147, I. P. C., we have found that the common object of the assembly was that of assaulting the complainant's party.

When once the matter is logically examined, it becomes apparent that there was no justification for this at all. What the learned Judge told the jury to do really was that in the event of the prosecution failing to establish the case with which they came into Court or in the event of the jury being unable or too superior to come to a decision on the real point at issue between the parties, they were to consider the possibility as to the existence of another common object merely because certain persons were injured and weapons used, although in fact there never was a scrap of evidence to support the existence of this purely fictitious common object. What the learned Judge ought to have done was to have struck this out of the charge altogether and never put it before the jury at all. It is perfectly idle for the prosecution to pretend that there was any common object other than that of taking possession of the disputed land and there was no evidence at all to support this alternative theory. We have considered the suggestion made by the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer; but taking all the circumstances into consideration, we are not prepared to order a retrial. The appellants have already had a lengthy trial once and we do not see why they should be put in peril again because the prosecution has made a muddle of the case. The appeal, accordingly must be allowed and the conviction and sentence set aside. The appellants, who are on bail, will be discharged from their bail bonds.

Cunliffe, J.—I concur.

D.S./R.K. Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 430

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Ajit Kumar Basu—Judgment-debtor—Petitioner.

v.

Surendra Nath Mandal and others—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 1071 of 1935, Decided on 24th January 1936, from order of Sub-Judge, 3rd Court, Alipore, D/- 3rd August 1935.

Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 174 (3). Proviso (b)—Appeal cannot be preferred unless deposit is made—But deposit is not required for initial application.

The whole of the proviso read as a whole has this effect that whereas no deposit need be made on the initial application to the lower Court, no appeal can be preferred unless the deposit has taken place, thus directly postponing the payment of the necessary money before the appeal is heard but allowing the application to be put forward without making any deposit at all: 1936 Cal 275 and 1934 Cal 491, Rel on.

[P 431 C 2]

Bijan Behary Das Gupta and Mahendra Kumar Ghose—for Petitioner.

Abinash Chandra Ghose—for Opposite Parties.

Cunliffe, J.—In this matter the petitioner obtained a Rule against an order of the Subordinate Judge, 3rd Court, 24 Parganas, in which the Judge refused to entertain an application on the part of the petitioner judgment-debtor for rent on the ground that he had not made the preliminary deposit under S. 174, sub-s. 3, proviso (b), Ben. Ten. Act. The view taken apparently by the learned Subordinate Judge was an extremely common-sense one, but I am inclined to think although I had considerable doubts at first that the construction that he put upon the proviso was erroneous. He seems to have thought that the expression used in the proviso "shall be allowed" ought to mean and did mean "shall be entertained" and in taking that view he certainly had the support of a very experienced Judge of this Court, M. N. Mukerji, in 60 C L J 112 (1). I have no doubt whatever that Mukerji, J.'s view that the word "allowed" should be construed as meaning "entertained" is an exceedingly sensible one and it would be very much better if the word "entertained" were substituted in the section for the word "allowed" because as the section stands at the present time in my view; it is a direct encouragement to frivolous applications. The whole section deals with matters of arrears of rent and if a defaulting tenant is able, as I believe he can under the section, to put in what I may call, for want of a better expression, a rambling application, he can substantially stave off the final compliance with the decree made against him. Unfortunately the meaning of the proviso seems to be subsequently made clear by the specific language employed in the latter part of the proviso which deals with appeals.

The words which I consider to be conclusive deal also with the question of deposits and run as follows: "Provided that where the Court has refused to set aside the sale on the application of the judgment-debtor or any person whose interests are affected by the sale and the amount recoverable in execution of the decree is not in deposit in Court," (and those are the important words 'is not in deposit') "no such appeal shall be admitted unless the appellant deposits such amount in Court." So it can be clearly seen that the latter part of the proviso dealing with the appellate procedure contemplates directly the non-payment of the deposit up till the time that the lower Court has delivered its judgment. It really means that the whole of the proviso read as a whole has this effect, that whereas no deposit need be made on the initial application to the lower Court, no appeal can be preferred unless the deposit has taken place, thus directly postponing the payment of the necessary money before the appeal is heard but allowing the application to be put forward without making any deposit at all. To my mind, the effect of the section is not salutary. It certainly encourages persons of dishonest character to apply to Courts of law on the offchance that they may be successful in their application without giving any security but with the certainty that if they do make the application they will delay the payment of the just dues. For these reasons, I consider that the granting of the Rule is justified and the Rule must be made absolute. I might also note that the learned advocate for the opposite parties here did urge us to consider the question of exercising our discretion on the merits of the application. We should be very willing to do so if the Judge in the Court below had applied his mind to the merits of the case, thus giving us some kind of guidance as to what was to be done. It is quite obvious however from the short order that he passed that he did not consider and had no intention of considering the merits of the case. I consider that the application should be disposed of with all expedition in the Court below.

Henderson, J.—The point which arises for consideration in this Rule was considered by Khundkar, J., and myself, in 39 C W N 1176 (2) in which we reached the conclusion that the point had been correctly decided by Lort-Williams and M. C. Ghose, JJ., in 61 Cal 338 (3). While listening to Mr. Ghose's arguments on behalf of the opposite party, I have been impressed by the difficulties that beset one in attempting to solve this problem

1. Kuloda Prasad Majumdar v. Pratiba Nath Roy, 1935 Cal 91=154 I C 424=62 Cal 149=60 C L J 112.

2. Gunabhinnessa Choudhrani v. Gopendra Prosad Sukul, 1936 Cal 275=63 Cal 49=39 C W N 1176=62 C L J 356.

3. Mofjuddin Muhuri v. Mofjuddin, 1934 Cal 491=151 I C 94=61 Cal 338=38 C W N 334=59 C L J 69.

by speculating as to what was the intention of the legislature. It is suggested that that intention was to discourage frivolous applications. Now I could well understand that a provision which required the deposit of a certain sum assessed by the Judge to be awarded to the opposite party in the event of the application being unsuccessful would have a deterrent effect. But I cannot conceive how the deposit of the amount due should necessarily have such an effect: it may be merely a few annas or it may be hundreds of rupees. In a case such as the present where the parties are creditor and judgment-debtor, the creditor is entitled to get it anyhow: in other cases where the parties are not judgment-creditors and judgment-debtors Lord Williams, J., has pointed out the difficulties that there are in deciding what is to be done with the deposit. In my judgment it is quite impossible to interpret the section from this point of view and the only thing to be done is to examine the language used.

My learned brother has pointed out the precise terms employed and I agree with what he has said. To admit an application is not the same thing as to allow it. In proviso (b) the word "allowed" is used and in sub-s. 5, the word "admitted" is used. In my opinion that is decisive. I therefore agree that this Rule should be made absolute and the learned Judge directed to proceed with the case according to law. Costs will abide the result; we assess the hearing-fee at two gold mohurs.

K.S./R.K. Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 432

M. C. GHOSE, J.

Hrishikesh Ray and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Upendra Nath Mandal and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 199 of 1934, Decided on 6th May 1936, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, 1st Court, Midnapur, D/- 11th September 1933.

Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 7—Permanent lease by shebait not justified by necessity—Rent may be lawfully enhanced under S. 7 and fair rent fixed.

The power of a shebait of an idol to make an alienation is a limited power. Ordinarily a shebait cannot grant a permanent lease at a fixed rent, but he may do so in cases of unavoidable necessity. Where therefore the predecessor of the shebait has granted a permanent tenure, even though no justifying necessity like the preservation of the property was proved, the rent under the tenure is liable to enhancement under S. 7: 1922 P C 163 and 36 Cal 1003 (P C), Ref.; 1929 Cal 612, Disting.

[P 433 C 1; P 434 C 1]

The Court can in such a case consider the question as to what should be the fair and equitable rent (40 per cent of the gross collection allowed as fair rent to the landlord).

[P 434 C 1]

Sarat Chandra Basak, Sarat Chandra Janah, Asoke Nath Ray and Hiran Kr. Ray—for Appellants.

Atul Chandra Gupta and Indu Prokash Chatterji—for Respondents.

Satyendra Nath Mitra—for Deputy Registrar.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs in a suit for recovery of arrears of rent and for enhancement of rent under S. 7, Ben. Ten. Act. The main question in appeal is whether the plaintiffs are entitled to enhance the rent under S. 7. The trial Court decided the issue in favour of the plaintiffs. In appeal the learned Subordinate Judge has decided the issue in favour of the defendants holding that the defendants' tenure is held at a fixed rent and not liable to enhancement under S. 7.

Upon hearing the learned advocates on both sides it appears that the tenure consists of land over 700 bighas in area. The defendants' predecessors obtained the tenure from the predecessors of the plaintiffs in the year 1855. Previously, before 1848, the estate was resumed by Government under Regn. 2 of 1819. Then it was settled to the plaintiffs' predecessors for a period of 20 years. Afterwards in March 1868 it was permanently settled with the plaintiffs' predecessors. Only a very small portion of the land had been brought under cultivation when the plaintiffs' predecessors leased the land to one Gopal Nandi at a rent of Rs. 9 per annum. The said Gopal Nandi surrendered the lease. Then it was leased to Madhusudan Poddar at Rs. 19 per annum. He also surrendered the lease. Then in 1855 it was leased to the defendants' predecessors at a rent of Rs. 22 per annum. In the patta and kabuliati, which were executed by the parties, it was stated that the tenancy was permanent and that there would be no increase or decrease of rent at any time; in other words that the rent be fixed for ever. In 1874 the tenants instituted a suit for damages against the landlords on the ground that the landlords had cut away certain trees, etc. The suit was compromised between the parties. The plaintiffs' predecessors admitted that the defendants' tenure was a permanent tenure. In order to put an end to disagreement between the parties the defendants agreed to an increase of rent by Rs. 19 making the rent payable hereafter at Rs. 41 per annum and it was stated that the rent of Rs. 41 would never be increased or diminished. The present suit was instituted in 1932.

If the matter would be treated as one of contract between free parties then the defendants' claim would be correct that the rent of the tenure is fixed for ever. It is however proved that the property belongs not to the plaintiffs but to a certain idol, Sree Sree Krishna Rai Jiu, and the plaintiffs are shebait of the said idol. It is urged that as shebait of the deity their predecessors had no right to grant a permanent tenure at a fixed rate for ever. The law on the matter, which has been stated in many reported cases by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, is that the power of a shebait of an idol to make an alienation is a limited power. Ordinarily a shebait cannot grant a permanent lease at a fixed rent, but he may do so in case of unavoidable necessity. On one side it is urged that apart from such necessity, to create a new and fixed rent for all time, though adequate at the time, in lieu of giving the endowment the benefit of an augmentation of a variable rent from time to time, would be a breach of duty in the shebait: 36 I A 148 (1). It is urged that in this case upon the evidence it cannot be held that the predecessors of the plaintiffs were under any unavoidable necessity to grant a permanent tenure at a fixed rate for ever. On the other side it is urged that where the validity of a permanent lease granted by a shebait comes in question a long time after the grant, so that it is not possible to ascertain what were the circumstances in which it was made, the Court should assume that the grant was made for necessity: 49 I A 54 (2). Noting the principle of law we are to consider the facts of the present case. The learned Subordinate Judge noted his opinion thus:

I am satisfied that this lease of 1854 was the best bargain then possible for the idol and that it was absolutely necessary for the very preservation of the property. Thus I find there was justifying necessity.

It is urged for the appellant that this conclusion of the learned Subordinate Judge does not follow from the facts of this case. The lands were over 700 bighas in area. Only a small portion had been brought under cultivation at the time of the lease in 1855. It is a mere assumption that a fixed rent of Rs. 22 per annum was the best bargain possible for the idol. All that is in evidence is that previous to that the land had been leased to one tenant at Rs. 9 per annum and subsequently to another tenant at Rs. 19. Both of them had surrendered the lease. From this it is urged for the respondents that Rs. 22 was the highest rent that the land could bear at the time. Accepting the argument that in 1855 Rs. 22 was the best rent which the shebait of the idol could obtain, the question still is whether there was any necessity for them to contract that the rent of Rs. 22 would be fixed for ever, that their successors would be precluded in future time to enhance the rent though such enhancement would be fair and equitable. It does not appear that any premium was asked for or paid in 1855. Further, when there was a dispute between the parties barely 20 years after the lease of 1855, the defendant agreed with the plaintiff that the rent would be enhanced by Rs. 19. Though the rent fixed in 1855 was adequate at the time, the parties voluntarily agreed to increase it to Rs. 41 in 1874. It does not appear that, though the rent fixed in 1855 and 1874 were the best bargain the shebait could make at the time, there was any necessity to give up for ever the benefit of an augmentation of the rent. The cases where a mokarari patta of a Debutter land has been upheld as against the successor of the shebait were all cases where the shebait required the money either for the repair and completion of a temple for which no other funds could be obtained or for a purpose which fell into the category of protecting the estate from injury or deterioration: 34 C W N 135 (3). In the present case there is nothing to show that there was any such necessity for granting a fixed rent for ever.

1. Abhiram Goswami v. Shyama Charan Nandi, (1909) 36 Cal 1003=4 I C 449=36 I A 148 (P O).

2. Bawa Magniram Sitaram v. Kasturbhai Manibhai, 1922 P O 163=66 I C 162=49 I A 54=46 Bom 481 (P O).

On the facts of the case I am of opinion that the conclusion of the Court of appeal below is wrong and the conclusion of the trial Court is correct, that the rent of the tenure may be lawfully enhanced under S. 7. The Court of appeal below found that the suit was defective inasmuch as all the persons who are shebaita did not join as plaintiffs in the suit. The facts are that there are a great number of shebaita, but they periodically select six of them to represent the body of shebaita and those six persons who were duly elected by all the shebaita instituted the present suit. These were showed their bona fides by getting their names registered in the Collectorate as the owners. In the circumstances it cannot be said that the suit is bad for defect of parties. The question then is what is the fair and equitable rent to which the plaintiffs are entitled. The trial Court found that the defendants tenure-holders got Rs. 200 a year from the tenure. That Court thought fit to enhance the rent to Rs. 125. The increase appears inequitable towards the tenants who have for over 60 years paid at a rent of Rs. 41. Taking Rs. 200 to be the gross collection of the tenants 40 per cent of the same may be allowed as fair rent to the landlords and the remaining 60 per cent be allowed to the tenants for collection charges and profits. The fair rent in my opinion should be Rs. 80 per annum and this enhancement will take effect from the beginning of the present Bengali year, namely 1343.

The arrears of rent were claimed for the period of two months only. This is in violation of S. 53, Bengal Tenancy Act, under which, in cases where there is no agreement or established usage, the rent is to be paid in four equal instalments falling due on the last day of each quarter of the agricultural year. The learned advocate for the respondents stated that they would not object to the decree for rent provided this is not taken as a precedent for claiming rent except as laid down in S. 53. In the result the rent for the two months will be decreed, but the plaintiffs will not get any interest or compensation for the same. The appeal is accordingly allowed. The plaintiffs appellants will get their costs in all the Courts. Leave to appeal is refused.

V.B.B./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

 A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 434

R. C. MITTER, J.

Arjun Das Kundu—Appellant.

v.

Marchia Telini—Respondent.

Appeal No. 283 of 1934, Decided on 30th April 1936, from original order of Dist. Judge, Hooghly, D/- 8th February 1934.

(a) Insolvency—Adjudication—All assets at time of petition and all assets subsequently acquired before absolute discharge vest in Court for distribution among creditors.

When a debtor is adjudicated an insolvent, whether at his instance or at instance of creditor, all his assets which he has at the time of the presentation of the application and all assets which he may acquire before his final discharge, must come in the hands of the Court in order that the said assets may be administered, and his creditors whose debts can be proved in the insolvency proceedings may get their debts pro rata from these assets. Hence an insolvent has no title in the properties in which he had beneficial rights at the date of the presentation of the application or which was acquired subsequently by him at any time before his absolute discharge. All such properties vest in the Court or in the Receiver appointed by the Court. [P 435 C 2; P 436 C 1]

(b) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 44(2)—S. 44 (2) does not extinguish altogether claims of creditors—It only limits remedy for realising claims.

The effect of S. 44 (2) is not to extinguish altogether the claims of the creditors whose claims are provable under the Act, but to limit their remedy for the purpose of realising the same from the assets vested in the Court or Receiver according to the provisions of S. 28, Insolvency Act. [P 436 C 1]

(c) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Ss. 33 (3) and 64—Debt provable in insolvency—It need not be proved before final discharge—Creditor can prove it as long as there are assets and till final dividend is distributed—S. 33 (3) is only directory.

There is no express period of limitation for a creditor, whose debt is provable in insolvency proceedings to prove his debt. A debt is to be proved ordinarily before any dividend is declared. That is necessary in order that the officer of the Court administering the insolvent's estate may have in his possession materials which will enable him to make pro rata and equitable distribution of the assets. The provisions of S. 33 (3) are directory and he can come on the schedules of creditors as long as there are any assets available for distribution amongst the creditors and till the final dividends are distributed and till the administration is complete. The same principle finds support in S. 64 for, that Section requires a Receiver, before declaring a final dividend, to serve notice in the manner prescribed to persons whose claims to be creditors have been notified but not proved; and if such persons come and prove their claims within the time limited by the notice, they will be entitled to a share in the final distribution. The time of the discharge of an insolvent has no relation to and can have no relation to in any case to the time for declaring the final dividend: McMurdo Penfield v. McMurdo, (1902) 2 Ch D 684, Foll.; 1924 Mad 163; 1925 Pat 438 and 1927 Rang 263, Rel. on. [P 436 C 1, 2; P 437 C 1]

Gunendra Krishna Ghose and Durga Charan Chakravarti—for Appellant.

A. Quasem—for Respondent.

Judgment.—The respondent before me applied under S. 10, Provincial Insolvency Act for being adjudicated as an insolvent. She said in her application that her assets were almost nil. She mentioned the names of her creditors, the appellant being one of them. The application was dated 1st September 1930 and the adjudication order was passed on 25th August 1931, by which the insolvent was directed to apply for discharge within six months of the said order. As there were no appreciable assets, the Court did not appoint a Receiver on her adjudication. In the application she gave an information that she had instituted a suit for some land against her husband and if she won that suit, her assets could be used for the purpose of meeting the creditors, but she had no present means for satisfying her creditors. The present appellant, although his name was given in the application as a creditor, did not take any steps to prove his debt before the discharge of his insolvent. The insolvent applied for her discharge and on 9th September 1932, the Court directed that the final discharge should await the disposal of the suit then pending in the Serampore Munsif's Court, the suit which the insolvent had filed against her husband.

On 9th December 1932, the insolvent informed the Court that she had won the suit. The Court stated in its order that the creditors had not taken any interest in the case and she was not responsible for her debts in that they were caused by litigation forced on her. The Court accordingly granted an absolute order of discharge on 9th December 1932. After this order the appellant appeared on the scene. He wanted to prove his debts and wanted the property of the insolvent which she got as a result of the said suit, to be brought under the administration of the Court in the insolvency proceedings. The insolvent opposed subsequently, and it is against the order passed by the Court below on 8th February 1934, the present appellant has filed the present appeal. For the purpose of deciding the controversy in this case, two facts are important, firstly, that it was known to the Court from the time of the filing of the application for adjudication that the appellant was a creditor of the insolvent, and secondly that no dividend has been declared up to now, much less the final dividend. The learned District Judge in support of the order he passed, has held that the effect of the absolute discharge under the provisions of S. 44, Provincial Insolvency Act, was to release the insolvent from all debts provable under the act and that such debts had to be proved in the proceedings before the order of absolute discharge was made.

Under S. 33 (3) of the act, says he, it is imperative on the creditor to prove his debt before the discharge of the insolvent. The learned Judge has further remarked that as none of the creditors of the insolvent had proved their debts before the final discharge, the property which has been recovered by the insolvent as a result of the aforesaid suit is no longer available for distribution in the insolvency proceedings, but that property though acquired before the discharge order, is to be enjoyed by the insolvent absolutely and without any restriction. In my judgment none of these reasons appears to me to be sound and the learned Judge has overlooked not only certain important provisions of the Insolvency Act but has committed fundamental errors with regard to matters of principle applicable to such cases. The principle underlying all bankruptcy proceedings, in my judgment, is this: that when a debtor is adjudicated an insolvent at his instance all his assets there which he has at the time of the presentation of the application and all assets which he may acquire before his final discharge, must come in the hands of the Court in order that the said assets may be administered, and his creditors whose debts can be proved in the insolvency proceedings may get their debts pro rata from these assets. When an insolvency proceeding takes place at the instance of the creditor there is the self-same principle.

The man adjudicated an insolvent is given a chance to become a freeman after his discharge, after he had placed in Court for the benefit of his creditors his assets. The next principle is that when this is done and he gets an absolute discharge, he is a free man and the legislature makes him a free man on high policy, that after his properties had been taken out of him for the purpose of meeting his creditors, he ought to begin again in his career without any impediment.

It follows therefore that an insolvent has no title in the properties in which he had beneficial rights at the date of the presentation of the application or which was acquired subsequently by him at any time before his absolute discharge. All such properties vest in the Court or in the Receiver appointed by the Court. This is the express provision of S. 28 of the Act. The effect of absolute discharge is defined in S. 44 of the Act. The insolvent is not freed in respect of certain particular debts which are specified in sub-s. (1) of S. 44. With regard to other debts provable in insolvency he is freed from the liability. It is on this principle the creditors are entitled to look only to those assets which had vested in the Court or receiver by reason of the adjudication. That is to say, the claims of such creditors are transferred from one fund to another. The claims of such creditors can only be realised from the assets which had vested in the Court or the Receiver and not against the assets which the insolvent may acquire after absolute discharge. The effect of S. 44 (2) in my judgment is not to extinguish altogether the claims of the creditors whose claims are provable under the Act, but to limit their remedy for the purpose of realizing the same from the assets vested in the Court or receiver according to the provisions of S. 28, Insolvency Act. There is no express period of limitation for a creditor whose debt is provable in insolvency proceedings to prove his debt. A debt is to be proved ordinarily before any dividend is declared. That is necessary in order that the officer of the Court administering the insolvent's estate may have in his possession materials which will enable him to make a pro rata and equitable distribution of the assets. If the Receiver has got materials in his hands to show that there are creditors who have not proved their debts because they reside at distant places, and that they have had no time to tender proof of their debts, he can set apart a sum of money sufficient for the purpose of paying them, if and when they prove their debts, after meeting his expenses.

The learned District Judge has referred to the provisions of S. 33, Cl. (3) of the Act, for the purpose of laying down the proposition that a creditor is bound to come with the proof of his debts before the discharge of the insolvent, and if he comes after the discharge he is too late. The whole question is whether that subsection bears the meaning which the learned Judge has put upon it. That sub-section says that "a creditor of the insolvent may, at any time before the discharge of the insolvent, tender proof of his debt. . ." The only question is whether that sub-section makes it obligatory on the creditor to come in before the discharge of the insolvent. For the reasons which I shall indicate later on, my judgment is that the provisions of that subsection are directory and that he can come on the schedules of creditors as long as there are any assets available for distribution amongst the creditors and till the final dividends are distributed and till the administration is complete. This view of mine has the support of the weighty authority of Vaughan Williams, L. J., in (1902) 2 Ch D 684 (1). The principle is laid down by that learned Judge at p. 699 of the report in these words :

Now according to my experience of bankruptcy practice, there never has been any doubt as to the right of a creditor, whether he is secured creditor, or whether he is an unsecured creditor, to come in and prove at any time during the administration, provided only that he does not by his proof interfere with the prior distribution of the estate amongst the creditors, and subject always, in cases in which he has to come in and ask for leave to prove, to any terms which the Court may think it just to impose.

Some indication is given in the Insolvency Act itself that the correct principle is the principle which is formulated by the said Lord Justice S. 64. Provincial Insolvency Act, required a Receiver before declaring a final dividend, to serve notice in the manner prescribed, to persons whose claims to be creditors have been notified but not proved; and if such persons come and prove their claims within the time limited by the notice, then they will be entitled to a share in the final distribution. That contemplates that creditors who have not proved already can come in and prove their debts in time before the final dividend is declared and distributed by the Receiver. The time of the discharge of an insolvent has no relation to and can have no relation to in any case, to the time for declaring the final dividend. When making the order of adjudication the Court limits the time within which the insolvent is to apply for his final discharge and this without reference to the time that may possibly be taken up for the administration of the estate of the insolvent. Then when the insolvent makes an application for discharge the question whether he will get absolute discharge or not or from what date depends upon circumstances which have no relation to the administration of his estate. It may be that where the causes of his insolvency are his misfortunes he ought to be made a free man quickly, but the administration of his estate may be a complicated one, and it may take a large number of years to get in the assets and to distribute them amongst the creditors. S. 64 therefore will still have to be invoked in such cases where the discharge order has been made a long time ago but the assets have been realized by the Receiver a long time thereafter, and the time for making a final dividend may have arrived a long time after the discharge of the insolvent.

1. In re Mo Murdo Penfield v. Mo Murdo, (1902) 2 Ch D 684=71 L J Ch 691=86 L T 814=50 W R 644.

In such a case, on the wording of the statute, clearly a creditor who has not already proved his debt, will not be debarred from proving his debt within the time given in the notice issued under S. 64 of the Act. This principle leads me to think that the words of S. 33, Cl. (3), which include creditors whose claim had already been notified but whose debts have not already been proved, are merely directory. It is on this principle and on this limited ground, that I follow the decision of the Madras High Court in 47 Mad 120 (2), of the Patna High Court, in 4 Pat 128 (3) and of the Rangoon High Court in 5 Rang 384 (4). I do not base my decision on the distinction which has been drawn in some of these cases between a conditional order of discharge and an order of absolute discharge. I go upon the principle laid down by Vaughan Williams, L. J., and on the principle laid down in S. 64 of the Act. I accordingly discharge the order of the learned District Judge and I direct that the Court would take immediate steps for the purpose of bringing the said property in its possession through any of its officers, that it would take steps for sale of the said property, and after the assets are realised would take steps (after complying with S. 64) for their distribution amongst those creditors who would prove their debts before the final dividend is declared. The appellant before me and all other creditors who may wish, may tender proofs of their debts at any time before the assets realized by the sale of the said property are distributed, that is before the final dividend is declared. The appellant before me will get his costs of this appeal not from the insolvent personally but from the assets realised in the insolvency proceedings, hearing fee being assessed at one gold mohur.

V.B.B./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

4. Jhan Bahadur Sing v. The Baliff of the District Court, Toungoo, 1927 Rang 263=104 I C 816=5 Rang 384.

* A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 437

NASIM ALI, J.

Light of Asia Insurance Co., Ltd.— Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Karatoya Debi—Plaintiff—Respondent.
Appeal No. 859 of 1934, Decided on 12th February 1936, against Appellate Decree of Addl. Sub-Judge, Sylhet, D/- 6th April 1934.

* Insurance—Life—Some answers in form giving family history false—Policy is void irrespective of question of materiality.

If some of the answers given by the assured in his proposal and declaration forming the basis of the contract of insurance are untrue, the policy is void irrespective of the question of its materiality. [P 439 C 1,2]

Where in the form headed 'Family History' the assured had to give the total number of brothers and sisters separate and also as to how many of them were dead and how many alive, but the assured mentioned under 'total number' only the actual number alive on date when he filled it up and left blank the other two columns without mentioning how many had died and particulars of death;

2. Sivasubramania Pillai v. Theethiappa Pillai, 1924 Mad 163=75 I C 572=47 Mad 120=45 M L J 166.

3. Babu Lal Sahu v. Krishna Prosad, 1925 Pat 438=85 I C 543=4 Pat 128=6 P L T 410.

Held: that 'total number' meant the total of living and dead members and that as the answers to questions which formed the basis of contract were false, the policy was void: English Cases referred. [P 439 C 2, P 440 C 1]

Amarendra Nath Bose and Hemendra Kumar Bose—for Appellant.

Priya Nath Dutta—for Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the defendant in a suit for recovery of money due on a policy dated 29th December 1928 assuring Rs. 1,000 to be paid by the defendant-company to the representative of one Parbati Charan Chakravarty on the expiry of 20 years from the date of the policy or on his prior death. He died on 11th August 1929 in his house at Mahmudpur, P. S. Habiganj, in the district of Sylhet. Before his death he paid premium in accordance with the terms of the policy. The plaintiff, who is the sole heiress of the insured, instituted the present suit in the first Court of the Munsif at Habiganj on 31st August 1932 against the defendant-company for recovery of Rs. 1,000. The defence of the defendant, so far as it is relevant for the purposes of the present appeal, is that the risk under the policy does not attach inasmuch as some of the answers to the questions put by the defendant's medical examiner which formed the basis of the contract were false. The Courts below have overruled the defence and have decreed the suit. Hence this second appeal by the defendant. The only substantial point for determination in this appeal is whether the policy is void on the grounds stated by the defendant in his defence. The relevant portion of the policy is in these terms:—

This policy of Insurance granted by the Light of Asia Insurance Co. Ltd., of Calcutta hereinafter called the Company witnesseth that in consideration of the payment already made to the Company of the first premium or the first instalment thereof as stated in the sub-joined Schedule for the Insurance the particulars of which are stated in the said Schedule and of the subsequent premiums or instalments of premiums if any to be paid as thereby provided the Company doth hereby agree that upon proofs satisfactory to the Directors of the happening of the event or events on which the sum assured is to become payable as mentioned in the said Schedule and of title of the person claiming, they will pay the sum assured to the assured's representative or assignee. Provided always (1): That the proposal for Insurance and declaration and answers to questions mentioned in the Schedule shall be held to form the basis of this contract. . . .

The Schedule shows that the answers which formed the basis of the contract were given by the insured on 5th December 1928. It is however, not stated in the policy that if the answers be false the policy would be void and no risk would attach. Neither is it stated in the policy that the conditions mentioned therein were warranties. In 1922 A C 413 (1), Viscount Cave observed as follows:

The basis of a thing is that upon which it stands, and on the failure of which it falls; and when a document consisting partly of statements of facts and partly of undertakings for the future is made the basis of a contract of insurance, this must (I think) mean that the document is to be the very foundation of the contract, so that if the statements of fact are untrue or the promissory statements are not carried out, the risk does not attach. No doubt the stipulation is more concise in form than those which were contained in the policies which fell to be construed in 4 H L C 484 (2) and 9 A C 671 (3), in each of which cases the policy contained an express provision to the effect that if anything stated in the proposal was untrue, the policy, should be void; but I think that the effect is the same as if those words had been found in the present policy. Indeed, it is remarkable that in 4 H L C 484 (2), Lord Cranworth referred to the abovementioned provision, as to the avoidance of the policy, if any, if the statements in the proposal should be untrue, as a provision making those statements the basis of the contract; and in 9 A C 671 (3), Lord Blackburn said, "But I think when we look at the terms of the contract, and see that it is expressly said in the policy, as well as in the declaration itself, that the declaration should be the basis of the policy, that it is hardly possible to avoid the conclusion that the truth of the particulars is warranted". Lord Esher in 72 L T 140 (4) used the word 'basis' in the same sense. Upon the whole, it appears to me both on principle and authority that the meaning and effect of 'basis' clause taken by itself, is that any untrue statement in the proposal, or any breach of its promissory clauses, shall avoid the policy and if that be the contract of the parties, it is fully established by decisions . . . that the question of materiality has not to be considered.

Again in 1921 P C 195 (5), Lord Shaw observed as follows:

If in point of fact the answer is untrue, the warranty still holds, notwithstanding that

1. Dawsons v. Bonnia, (1922) A C 413=91 L J P C 210=128 L T 1=38 T L R 836=1922 W C & Ins Rep 302=1922 H C 156=59 Sc L R 599.
2. Anderson v. Fitzgerald, (1852) 4 H L C 484=17 Jur 995.
3. Thomson v. Weems, (1884) 9 A C 671.
4. Hambrough v. Mutual Life Insurance Co. of New York, (1895) 72 L T 140.
5. Condogianis v. Guardian Assurance Co. Ltd., 1921 P C 195=(1921) 2 A C 125=90 L J P C 168=125 L T 610=37 T L R 685.

the untruth might have arisen inadvertently and without any kind of fraud. Secondly, the materiality of the untruth is not in issue, the parties having settled for themselves by making the fact the basis of the contract, and giving a warranty that as between them their agreement on that subject precluded all enquiry into the issue of materiality.

It is therefore clear from the authorities which I have cited above that if some answers are untrue the policy is void irrespective of the question of its materiality. The learned advocate for the appellant contends that the following answers which were declared by the insured to be true and to have been correctly recorded are false.

No. 4 Family History.

Living.				Dead.
Total number	No. alive	Ages.	Present state of health.	No. dead.	Ages at death.	Cause of death.	Description of last illness	Date of death	Previous health Brothers Nil.
Sisters 2	2	30 yrs. 27 yrs.	Good

It is an admitted fact that the insured had one brother who died before the declaration. It is also admitted that he had four sisters of whom two were dead at the time when he made the declaration. The Courts below however have held that the word 'nil' under the column 'Total number of brothers' and the number 2 in the column 'Total number of sisters' mean that the insured had no brother living but had two sisters alive at the time. The learned Judge has recorded the following findings in this connexion :

The column Total number is rather ambiguous. It is very probable that when the insured was asked what was the total number of his brothers he replied that it was nil as he had no brother living at the time and in case of sisters also had said that the total number of sisters was 2 for he had then only two sisters alive. The columns 'No. dead, ages at death, and causes of death,' etc., were left altogether blank which would go to show that no question was asked by the doctor to the insured to fill up these columns.

The learned Judge says that the answers were given by the insured when he was asked to give the total number of his brothers and sisters. The medical examiner who put the questions was examined by the defendant. In his examination-in-chief he definitely stated that he had put all the questions mentioned in the report correctly. This statement was not challenged in cross-examination by the plaintiff. The questions therefore were correctly put. As regards the answers the insured declared that they are correctly recorded. 'Total number' means the number obtained by adding the number living and the number dead. There is, therefore, no ambiguity in this. The word 'nil' under the heading 'total number' of 'brothers' evidently means that the insured had no brother living or dead. The learned Judge says that the fact that the other columns were left blank would go to show that no question was asked by the doctor to fill up these columns. But if question about the total number of brothers is answered by the word 'nil' the question for filling up the other columns cannot possibly arise. The learned Judge seems to think that by the word "nil" the insured meant that he had no brother living at the time, for in the case of sisters the total number is recorded as 2 as he had two sisters then living. This is really arguing in a circle. This argument proceeds on an assumption that the reply under the total number of sisters was in answer to a question about the number of sisters alive, which is the very thing to be determined. A separate answer about the number of sisters alive shows that after the insured had stated that the total number of sisters alive and dead was two, the further question about the number of sisters alive naturally arose. When the insured stated that the number alive was also two, the questions under the other headings namely, number dead, ages at death, and causes of death, etc., could not possibly arise.

The other columns were left blank because the total number being two and the number alive being two the question about the number of sisters dead and the question of filling up the remaining columns did not arise. It is, therefore, clear that the answers about the number of brothers and sisters in the column 'Total number' did not mean brothers and sisters alive at the time. The answers clearly show that while giving his family history the insured represented to the company that he had no brother and that he had only two sisters both of whom were alive. He concealed the deaths of his brothers and two sisters which were necessary for the purpose of ascertaining the family history. In view of the declaration of the insured that the answers were correctly recorded the onus was heavily upon the plaintiff. The Courts below did not look at the case from a correct point of view. Their judgments show that they did not properly place the onus, and that they have given a meaning to the answers of the insured not justified by their plain language but only on surmises and conjectures. I have, therefore, examined the answers and the evidence in this case in detail and do not find any materials to justify the conclusions of the Courts below. My conclusion, therefore, is that the answers to the questions which formed the basis of the contract were false and that the appellant is not liable under the policy in question. I, therefore, allow the appeal, set aside the judgments and decrees of the Courts below and dismiss the suit. But in view of the facts and circumstances of this case I direct the parties to bear their own costs throughout the litigation. The prayer for leave to appeal is refused.

V.B.B./R.K.

*Appeal allowed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 440

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Jatindra Nath Sircar and another—Accused—Petitioners.

v.

*Emperor—Opposite Party.*Criminal Revn. Nos. 458 and 459 of 1934, Decided on 6th August 1934.Penal Code (1860), Ss. 420, 120-B—'Snowball' scheme—Rules set out in black and white—Scheme though rightly speculative cannot be held to be dishonest.

Where a company is floated and registered under Companies Act and one of the schemes launched by the Company is advancing loans, as stated in Memorandum of Association and the conditions of loans and rules are set out in black and white, merely that the scheme is of 'snow ball' nature and highly speculative cannot make it dishonest or of fraudulent nature. Nor can directors be held responsible for the acts of the agents and supervisors in inducing persons to become members, by misrepresentations so long as they did not induce anybody to apply for loans and pay money: 1934 Bom 48, Foll. [P 441 C 2; P 442 C 1]

A loan scheme provided that every applicant for loan was to pay an admission fee and make deposit which alone was refundable in case loan was not granted, and provided that in order to entitle the applicant to loan he must secure co-members or secondaries who were also required to pay admission fee and the deposit, and that the applicant would be paid his loan or part thereof on his securing particular number of co-members or secondaries. The scheme was set out in Memorandum of Association deposited with the Registrar, Joint Stock Companies, and the rules and conditions of loans were set out in black and white and were made available to the public. The agents and supervisors appointed by the Company made misrepresentations and induced villagers to apply for loan and pay admission fee and deposit. The directors however did not induce anybody to apply for loan or pay any money to the Company:

Held: that the scheme was of 'snowball' nature and though highly speculative was not dishonest or of fraudulent nature; [P 441 C 2]

Held also: that so long as the directors did not themselves induce anybody to apply for loan and pay money to the Company, they cannot be held to be party to any fraud or conspiracy so as to attract operation of penal law. [P 442 C 1]

*C. C. Biswas, Bhagirath Ch. Das and Mahendra Nath Mitra—*for Petitioners.

Order.—The petitioners were tried by the Sadar Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Hooghly, for having committed offences under S. 120-B and S. 420, I. P. C., and on conviction were sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for six months under each of the above provisions of the law. The sentences as passed were to run concurrerently in the case of the petitioner Jatindra Nath Sircar, and consecutively in the case of other petitioner Dhirendra Nath Ghose. The conviction of and the sentences passed on the petitioners were upheld on appeal, by the learned Sessions Judge of Hooghly. The charges against the accused persons were: (1) that they were party to a criminal conspiracy to commit the offence of cheating by dishonestly inducing people to deliver money to them, through three other persons, and in pursuance of that conspiracy one Thakimani Dasi and others, were cheated of different sums of money, and (2) that through the agents in pursuance of the conspiracy mentioned above cheated Thakomani Dasi and others by dishonestly inducing them to deliver different sums of moneys to the accused persons and which moneys were the property of the Thakomani Dasi and others. The case for the prosecution, it appears to be clear, was based on the memorandum of association, and the loan rules of a Company started under the name and style of the Bengal Industrial Loan Co., Ltd. The accused Dhirendra Nath Ghose was the Managing Director of the Company, and the other accused Jatindra Nath Sarkar replaced Dhirendra Nath Ghose as such, a position which was accepted by the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies.

The loan rules of the Company contemplated different classes of loans and a reference to the scheme launched by the Company in question is necessary for the purpose of forming an idea as to the nature of the offence charged against the petitioner. The applicant for the loan was to pay an admission fee and make a deposit. He was required to secure two co-members or secondaries who were also required to pay admission fee and the deposit called the opening deposit. After payment by the secondaries, the company was to advance loan up to a fixed maximum to the original applicant within a fixed period of 45 to 60 days. After the two co-members had paid admission fees and deposits, the original applicant was to get a refund of his opening deposit; the co-members or secondaries were in the same way to get loans from the company on their securing two co-members or secondaries each. If however the original applicant failed to secure two co-members within a week of his application, he was, on sending a notice to the company, to get a refund of his deposit money with interest at the rate of six per cent per annum within 180 days of the date of receipt of notice by the company. What was sought to be established on the side of the prosecution was that the accused persons engaged agents in villages and realised money from villagers and created confidence by giving loans to a few persons, but that in a large number of cases they put off payment of loans on various pretexts; the position taken up by the prosecution was that the acts of the accused persons in this behalf amounted to cheating.

There is no question that the petitioners did not induce any one to be a member or to apply for loan or to pay any money; it was the supervisors and the agents who were alleged to have induced persons to become members after they had complied with the loan rules of the company as has been mentioned already; the offence charged against the accused persons was sought to be established solely with reference to the scheme launched by the company of which they were managing directors in succession. The question therefore is whether the Courts below are right in their decision that those responsible for the framing of the scheme and the loan rules, and for their coming into operation, were guilty of cheating as contemplated by S. 420, I. P. C. The learned Judge's view that it was "safe to presume" that it was the petitioners who were alone responsible for the rules may be accepted to be correct on the materials on the record; but the question remains whether the scheme evidenced by the loan rules of the company of which the petitioners were the managing directors, and who may be held responsible for the same, was dishonest or fraudulent in the sense that it represented to the public something which was not true or concealed from them something which the company ought to have disclosed. In the words of Broomfield, J., in 35 Bom L R 1181 (1), the scheme in the case before us might be of the 'snow ball' nature but the literature of the scheme, principally the loan rules of which mention has been made above, could not be described as misleading and deceptive. All the conditions of the scheme launched by the company were set out in black and white. There was no room for misunderstanding. On a careful consideration of the scheme floated by the company of which the petitioners were the managing directors, and of the loan rules made available to the public, it is not possible to hold, in the case before us, that the petitioners were responsible for the starting and carrying through a scheme of a fraudulent nature, so as to attract the operation of the penal law against the petitioners. The scheme was a speculative one but could not be said to be dishonest. In the above view of the case, the conviction of the petitioners and the sentences passed on them cannot be affirmed. The rules are made absolute. The conviction of the petitioners and the sentences passed on them are set aside. The petitioners must be discharged from their bail bonds, and set at liberty.

1. Emperor v. Durgadas, 1934 Bom 48=1934 Cr O 245=148 I C 271=35 Cr L J 644=35 Bom L R 1181.

V.B./R.K. Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 442

NASIM ALI AND EDGLEY, JJ.

Satish Chandra Basu—Appellant.

v.

Harendra Kumar Ghose—Respondent.

Appeal No. 1872 of 1933, Decided on 27th March 1936, from appellate decree of Addl. Dist. Judge, Second Court, Bakarganj, D/- 3rd April 1933.

Registration Act (1908), S. 35 — "Person executing" means principal executing document.

The words "person executing" in the Act cannot be read merely as "person signing." They mean something more, namely the person who by a valid execution enters into obligation under the instrument: 1928 P C 38 and 1925 Cal 703, Foll.; 4 I A 166 (P C) and 1927 Bom 487, Disting. [P 443 C 2]

Atul Chandra Gupta and Prafulla Kumar Roy—for Appellants.

Sarat Chandra Basak, Rajendra Chandra Guha and Surajit Chandra Lahiri (for Deputy Registrar)—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of a suit for recovery of arrears of rent. Plaintiffs claimed rent at the rate of Rs. 3 per kani on the basis of a lease of the year 1264 B. S. in respect of their 5 annas 3 gandas 1 kara and 1 krant share of the land demised. The defence of the tenants is that the plaintiffs are entitled to get rent at the rate of Rs. 2 per kani. The trial Judge overruled the defence and passed a decree for arrears of rent at the rate claimed by the plaintiffs. The defendants appealed to the lower appellate Court. The learned Additional District Judge has allowed the appeal in part. He has affirmed the rate decreed by the trial Judge in respect of 1 anna share but in respect of the remaining share he has reduced the rate to Rs. 2. Hence this second appeal by the plaintiffs. The defendants have also filed cross-objections.

Mr. Gupta appearing on behalf of the plaintiffs appellants has raised two points in this appeal. The first contention is that the learned Additional District Judge was wrong in reducing the rate of rent on the basis of the two subsequent leases of the years 1289 and 1290 B. S. inasmuch as these documents were not registered in accordance with the provisions of Registration Act and are therefore inadmissible in evidence. His argument is that though there was no intention to demise certain shares in some properties lying within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Registering Officer at Dacca where these documents were registered, these lands were included in the two documents simply for the purpose of getting the documents registered at the Dacca Registration Office and consequently the registration was void as the properties really intended to be demised by the two leases were situated wholly in the district of Bakarganj. The question about the intention is primarily a question of fact and it appears from the judgment of the lower appellate Court that the lessees being men of the Dacca District really took settlement of these properties in the Dacca District along with the lands in the District of Bakarganj. This contention therefore is overruled. The second point raised by Mr. Gupta is that the registration of the lease of the year 1289 B. S. (Ex. B-2) is invalid inasmuch as it was presented for registration by a person who had no power to do so. It appears that the name of the lessor who granted the lease was signed on these documents by the pen of her son on the basis of an ammuktearnama. It further appears that the son presented the document for registration before the Registering Officer and admitted the execution of the document and on that admission the document was registered. The question is whether the presentation of this document for registration by the son was a valid presentation. By S. 32, Act 3 of 1877, a person executing a document or the agent of any such person is entitled to present the document for registration.

The words "persons executing the document" are capable of two constructions. They may mean persons actually signing the document by their own hands or persons executing the document by the hand of another duly authorised to sign on their behalf. In 4 I A 166 (1), Sir Montague E. Smith, while construing the provisions of S. 34, Registration Act of 1871 made the following observations:

There the persons described are the persons executing the document not those who on the face of the deed are parties to it, or by whom it purports to have been executed, but those who have actually executed it:

There has been a divergence of judicial opinion in the Courts in India as to the precise effect of this passage. In some cases although these observations have been taken as obiter, nevertheless they have been taken to imply that the words "persons executing the document" in the Act mean persons who actually execute the document by their own hands and do not include the principal who only executes by means of an agent. In 29 C W N 539 (2) decided by this Court it was however observed that the observations of the Judicial Committee must be confined to the facts of that particular case and that the only question in that case was whether a partial registration of a document was valid. In this case it was held that the ordinary meaning of "executing a document" is signing a document as a consenting party thereto and that in case of Bakalam signature the person whose name is put with his authority in evidence of his assent to a document is executant within the meaning of S. 35. When this case went up in appeal to their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, 55 I A 81 (3), Lord Sumner, in affirming the judgment of this Court observed as follows:

The appellant contends that in these words "the person executing the document" executing means and means only actually signing. Their Lordships cannot accept this. A document is executed when those who take benefits and obligations under it have put or have caused to be put their names to it. Personal signature is not required and another person duly authorised may, by writing the name of the party executing, bring about his valid execution and put him under the obligations involved. Hence the words "person executing" in the Act cannot be read merely as person signing. They mean something more, namely the person who by a valid execution enters into obligation under the instrument.

The decision of the Full Bench of the Bombay High Court in 51 Bom 971 (4) was given before the decision of the Judicial Committee in 55 I A 81 (3). Under these circumstances we are of opinion that the son who signed the name of the lessor on the lease is not the person executing the document. Now after the execution of the document the son presented it for registration. He admitted the execution of the document on the basis of a power of attorney which is noted by the Registering Officer in his endorsement of the document itself. The learned Additional District Judge on a consideration of the facts and circumstances disclosed in the evidence in this case has drawn the presumption that the son had authority not only to execute the document and to admit its execution before the Registering Officer on the basis of the power of attorney but he had the power also on the basis of that power of Attorney to present it to the Registering Officer for the purpose of registration. It appears that the lessor was very old about 90 years of age, at the time of the execution of this document. She had already executed a will appointing the son as her executor. There is nothing to show that the son practised any fraud on the mother. It is true that Ammuk-tearnama by which the son was appointed agent is not forthcoming and the extract of this document which has been exhibited in this case does not specifically mention the power to present the document for registration. The extract however is not exhaustive. The deed was executed and registered about 50 years ago. In view of these facts and the circumstances, as the final Court of fact has held that the son had authority on the basis of the power of attorney all the terms of which cannot be proved now to present the document for registration, we are not

1. Mohammad Ewaz v. Birj Lall, (1875) 1 All 465=4 I A 166=3 Sar 735 (P C).

2. Monmotho Nath Mukerji v. Puran Chand Nahatta, 1925 Cal 703=88 I C 33=29 C W N 539.

3. Puran Chand Nahatta v. Monmotho Nath Mukerji, 1928 P C 38=108 I C 342=55 I A 81=55 Cal 532 (P C).

4. Sitaram Laxmanrao Kadam v. Dharmasukhram, 1927 Bom 487=103 I C 906=51 Bom 971=29 Bom L R 1124 (F B).

prepared to say that the son had no such authority to present the document for registration and the registration of the document was invalid.

The two contentions raised by Mr. Gupta on behalf of the appellants therefore fail. The appeal is accordingly dismissed. The cross-objections filed by the respondents were not pressed and are therefore dismissed. There will be no order for costs either in the appeal or in cross-objections.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 444

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Lalit Mohan Saha and others—Appellants.

v.

Debendra Nath Thakur and others—Respondents.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 11 of 1935, Decided on 25th March 1936.

(a) Bengal Village Self-Government Act (5 of 1919), Ss. 19 and 31—"Vest" and "control"—Words are not used together but in connection with two different states of things.

The words "vest" and "control" have been used in the Bengal Village Self Government Act in connection with two different states of things, as mentioned in the two different and separate provisions contained in S. 19 and S. 31 of the Act. The works constructed by the Union Board were to vest in the Board under S. 19: the Union Board was given the control of roads not being private property under S. 31 of the Act. [P 445 C 2]

(b) Bengal Village Self-Government Act (5 of 1919), S. 31—Union Board cannot exercise control over private property.

The Union Board had no authority to exercise control over the private property purporting to act under S. 31. [P 445 C 2]

(c) Bengal Village Self-Government Act (5 of 1919), S. 31—Union Board exercising control under S. 31—It can act only consistent with rights of user of public.

The control and the power of the Union Board to make improvement under S. 31 can be exercised only in a manner consistent with the rights of user, so far as the members of the public are concerned. Hence where the public have acquired a right to use a halot as a boat passage during the rainy season and a footpath during the dry season, the right to use it as boat passage cannot be interfered with by the Union Board purporting to act under S. 31. [P 446 C 1]

S. C. Basak, Gopal Chandra Das and Bhuban Mohan Saha—for Appellants.

Atul Chandra Gupta, Bhagirath Ch. Sen and Ramendranath Roy Choudhury—for Respondents.

Bireswar Chatterjee—for Deputy Registrar.

Judgment.—The plaintiffs in the suit in which this appeal has arisen, suing as representatives of the public under O. 1, R. 8, Civil P. C., prayed for possession of what was mentioned as a public Halot, on removal of obstruction therefrom and for permanent injunction. The case of the plaintiffs was that the Halot described in the plaint and which was the subject of the litigation was a public pathway in dry season and a public boat passage in the rainy season, that the defendants had in collusion with one another totally obstructed the boat passage and made the same unfit for use as a pathway in dry season, and that the public had been inconvenienced by the obstruction thus caused. Defendant 1 was the President of the Bhagyakul Union Board, and represented the Board as such, and he supported defendants 2, 3 and 4, who filed written statements and pleaded that earth was raised on the part of the Halot mentioned in the plaint, in accordance with the resolution of the Union Board passed on the application of the defendants for the improvement of the Halot. The fact that boat passage of the public through the Halot was discontinued, as asserted by the plaintiffs, was not controverted. The case of the defendants was that the members of the public could use the Halot as a pathway in dry season, that so far as passage of boats were concerned, boats could easily pass through the northern portion of the Halot in question. According to the defendants the suit was not maintainable inasmuch as the action of the Union Board, which was sought to be challenged, was legal and bona fide in the discharge of their duties.

As it would appear from the judgment of the trial Court, defendants 1 to 4 admitted the Halot in suit to be a public Halot; it was further admitted that the boat passage had been totally obstructed by the raising of earth in front of the baris of defendants 2 to 6. The Halot, before the obstruction complained of was used as a footpath during the dry season and as a boat passage in the rainy season, by the public. The Munsif noticed the position, which was beyond the pale of controversy, that in the part of the country in which the Halot in question was situate, most of the big Halots were used as boat passages in the rainy season; and has observed that the power of the Union Board to improve the public Halot used both as pathway and boat passage by the public, consistently with its user could be denied. It has to be noticed that according to the learned Munsif the disputed Halot was a waterway in the rainy season, and public pathway during the dry season, and that the action of the Union Board was not legal and bona fide. The trial Court, on the conclusions arrived at by it, on the interpretation of the provisions of the Village Self Government Act, 1919, and on the materials placed on record, passed a decree in favour of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs were held entitled to get possession of the disputed Halot after removal of all obstructions therefrom. The Halot in suit was declared to be a public Halot for footpath during dry season and for waterway in the rainy season for all purposes as alleged in the plaint.

On appeal by the contesting defendants the decree of the trial Court was affirmed by the learned Subordinate Judge in the Court of appeal below. On the evidence in the case, the Court of appeal below held that at least for three months in a year the Halot was used as a boat passage. The user was from time immemorial, and the plaintiffs and the public had acquired a right to use the Halot as a boat passage during the rainy season. The finding on evidence, arrived at by the lower appellate Court, was also to the effect that the boat passage would entirely disappear by the raising of the Halot in the manner mentioned in the plaint. The Subordinate Judge has referred to acquisition of easement by the plaintiffs and of giving up of that right, so far as the user of the Halot as a boat passage was concerned; and gave his decision that the Union Board had no power to close the waterway. In the concluding part of the judgment, the Subordinate Judge has held that S. 31, Village Self-Government Act, did not apply to the Halot in suit, inasmuch as the Halot was the private property of the plaintiffs and some of the defendants.

The contesting defendants appealed to this Court from the decision of the Subordinate Judge; and the concurrent decisions of the trial Court and the Court of appeal below, were reversed by our learned brother R. C. Mitter, J., This appeal under S. 15, Letters Patent, is by the plaintiffs in the suit.

The learned Judge of this Court has rightly held that there was confusion of ideas, so far as the Subordinate Judge was concerned, in identifying easement with a public right of passage, concepts which were inconsistent. The learned Judge has dealt with the provisions of the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, bearing upon the facts of the case before us, and has given his decision based on certain observations contained in the judgment of Brett, L. J., in 4 Q B D 104 (1), in which S. 149, Public Health Act (38 and 39 Vict. Ch. 55), was interpreted. In that provision of the English statute, the words "shall vest" and "be under control" were used together, in connexion with vesting and control of streets within urban districts; and in our opinion the observations to which reference has been made are not of any assistance for the purpose of a decision in the case before us. The words "vest" and "control" have been used in the Bengal Village Self-Government Act in connexion with two different states of things, as mentioned in the two different and separate provisions contained in S. 19 and S. 31 of the Act. The works constructed by the Union Board were to vest in the Board under S. 19: the Union Board was given the control of roads not being private property under S. 31 of the Act.

On the facts found in the case before us that the Halot in question was private property of the plaintiffs and some of the defendants, the question of application of S. 31, Bengal Village Self-Government Act, could not arise; and we have no hesitation on the facts found in coming to the conclusion that the decision of this Court in 36 C W N 119 (2), a decision with which our learned brother R. C. Mitter, J., has expressed dissent, is right. On the fact found by the Court of appeal below, that the Halot in question is private property, the proprietary rights being with the plaintiffs and some of the defendants, the Union Board had no authority to exercise control over the same purporting to act under S. 31, Bengal Village Self-Government Act. It may be mentioned that Mr. Gupta, the learned advocate for the respondents before us, did not rely on the observations of Brett, L. J., in 4 Q B D 104 (1), in support of the decision against which this appeal was directed. In our judgment the observation of Brett, L. J., in 4 Q B D 104 (1) can have no application to the facts of the case before us: and the operation of S. 31 was excluded on the facts found.

1. Caverdale v. Charlton, (1843) 4 Q B D 104

2. Khowaj Ali v. Syed Mia, 1933 Cal 284=143 I O 110=36 C W N 119.

The above decision arrived at by us concludes the question argued in this appeal, arising upon the judgment of our learned brother Mitter, J., in favour of the appellants before us. There is however another aspect of the case before us, which cannot be ignored. Even on the assumption that S. 31, Bengal Village Self-Government Act, applied to the case and that the Union Board had the control and power to make improvement in regard to the Halot in question, there can, in our judgment, be no question that the control and the power to make improvement could be exercised only in a manner consistent with the rights of user, so far as the members of the public were concerned. As has been indicated by the trial Court and by the Court of appeal below, and as has been pointed out above, with reference to the judgments of those Courts, the public had acquired a right to use the Halot as a boat passage during the rainy season; this passage of boats was totally obstructed by raising of earth as sanctioned by the resolution of the Union Board. On this aspect of the case before us the decision must be that the right of the public to use the Halot as a boat-passage during the rainy season could not be interfered with by the Union Board purporting to act under the provisions contained in S. 31, Bengal Village Self-Government Act, on the footing that the said provision of the law was applicable to the case of the Halot in question. The Halot was a public Halot in the sense that it was a public pathway during the dry season, and was a public passage for boats during the rainy season. It may be mentioned that the boat passage in the case before us could not be denominated a waterway as contemplated by S. 31, Bengal Village Self-Government Act, as has been done by the trial Court in its judgment.

The result of the conclusions we have arrived at, as mentioned above, is that the appeals must be allowed. The decision of our learned brother R. C. Mitter, J., is set aside, and the decree of the Court of first instance passed in favour of the plaintiffs-appellants, which was affirmed by the Subordinate Judge in the Court of appeal below, is restored. The plaintiffs-appellants are entitled to get their costs in all the Courts.

R.W./R.K.

Appeals allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 446

R. C. MITTER, J.

Makhan Lal Samadder — Plaintiff — Appellant.

v.

Khagendra Nath Chakravarty and another—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1836 of 1933, Decided on 29th November 1935, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, Khulna, D/- 22nd May 1933.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885), S. 174-A—Dispute as to rent between landlord and tenant settled by agreement—Agreement embodied in decree—Consent decree contravening provisions of S. 174-A—Rights of parties are governed by consent decree till it is avoided—Portion of compromise dealing with question of rent alleged to be in contravention of S. 174-A outside scope of suit—It has no force of decree but amounts to mere agreement—Party alleging agreement to be in contravention of S. 174-A need not avoid decree.

Where the dispute between the landlord and tenant as to the rate of rent is settled by an agreement between the landlord and the tenant, and if that agreement is embodied in a decree, the rights of the parties are to be regulated by the consent decree till it is set aside. If the consent decree is based by overlooking the provisions of S. 174-A, Bengal Tenancy Act, the decree is not void but it is to be avoided.

[P 448 C 1]

A petition of compromise may however deal with various matters extraneous to the suit in which the parties may agree. In such a case the whole of the petition of compromise and not a part thereof is to be recorded, that is to say, the petition of compromise must be introduced either by way of recital in the decree or by way of an annexure to the decree, but the decree itself must be confined to the subject-matter of the suit.

[P 448 C 1, 2]

Where therefore the portion of a compromise which deals with the question of payment of rent by the tenant to the landlord, and which is alleged to be in contravention of S. 174-A, is clearly beyond the scope of suit in which the compromise is made, it has no force beyond a mere agreement between the parties concerned and has not the force of a decree. It is not therefore necessary for the party alleging the agreement as being in contravention of S. 174-A, to avoid the decree before he can raise the contention: 1931 Cal 87 and 1919 P C 79, Ref.

[P 448 C 2]

(b) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885), S. 29—There cannot be any question of enhancement unless both parties to contract agree upon one point, namely that there is to be enhancement.

Where there is no dispute between the parties as to the existing rent, and there is an intention to enhance rent on the part of both the parties, and there is an agreement between them as to the amount of enhancement, the matter is governed by S. 29, and if the agreement contravenes the provisions of S. 29 the landlord is not entitled to claim the enhanced rent: 1915 Cal 211, Rel on; 19 Cal 333; 28 Cal 90 and 11 C L J 106, Ref. [P 450 C 1]

Srish Chandra Dutt—for Appellant.

Hemendra Chandra Sen—for Respds.

Judgment.—This appeal is on behalf of one Makhan Lal Samaddar against the judgment and decree of the Subordinate Judge of Khulna, dated 22nd May 1933. The question involved in the appeal is as to the rate of rent payable by the defendants to the plaintiff. The plaintiff before the year 1924 purchased a Ganti tenure in execution of a rent decree. It is said that thereafter he served a notice under S. 167, Ben. Ten. Act, on the Dar Gantidars, who may conveniently be called the Bachars, and on the predecessors in interest of the defendants before me who were under tenants of the Bachars. Thereafter Makhan instituted a title suit (No. 16 of 1924) against the Bachars and the present defendants and others in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Khulna. The basis of his claim was that the defendants of that suit were trespassers. He accordingly claimed recovery of khas possession and wasilaut. The rights of the parties were not adjudicated upon by the Court, as on 11th May 1925 a petition of compromise was filed signed by the plaintiff and some of the defendants.

The defendants in the present suit were defendants 5 and 6 in that suit. The material terms of the compromise are these: defendant 2, one of the Dar Gantidars, was accepted as such by the plaintiff, but he stipulated to pay rent at an enhanced rate to the plaintiff, viz., at the rate of Rs. 3 per bigha. Para. 8 is relevant for the purpose of the present suit. It is stated that as the rent of defendant 2 is being increased, defendants 5 and 6, the present respondents, and defendants 9 and 10 (we have no concern with them) would pay to defendant 2 an enhanced rent, viz. Rs. 3-6-0 per bigha. It is found that the previous rent of the holding which defendants 5 and 6 held under the Bachars with two other persons Jogendra and Nagendra who ought to have been made parties to the aforesaid title suit was at the rate of Rs. 2-6-3 per bigha, that is to say the total rent of the holding was Rs. 44-13-7½. As a result of the compromise the rent went up to Rs. 60-12-0 per year, and the enhancement admittedly was more than two annas in the rupee. This compromise was recorded and a compromise decree was passed on 26th May 1935. The terms of the decree are these: "the suit is decreed in terms of compromise against defendants 1 to 11 and 16 and dismissed against the remaining defendants." The solenama filed formed a part of the decree. Later on the plaintiff purchased the interest of the Bachars, and he became the immediate landlord of the defendants before me.

On the basis of the said decree in title suit No. 16 of 1924, the plaintiff instituted the present suit and wanted to recover rent at the rate of Rs. 60-12-0 per year. The defence is (1) that the suit is not maintainable inasmuch as the heirs of Jogendra and Nagendra have not been impleaded in the suit, and (2) that the plaintiff can get a decree for rent only at the rate of Rs. 44-13-7½ per year. The last mentioned defence which raises a very important question of law, is based on the provisions of S. 29, Ben. Ten. Act. The defendants say that inasmuch as the agreement appearing in para. 8 of the petition of compromise filed in the suit of 1924 contravenes the provisions of S. 29, Ben. Ten. Act, the plaintiff is not entitled to claim the enhanced rent of Rs. 60-12-0 per year. This defence was given effect to by the Courts below. The said Courts held that S. 29 is a bar to the plaintiff's claim and that he is entitled to get rent at the rate of Rupees 44-13-7½. On a further finding which is not necessary to consider in this appeal that the tenants were entitled to claim abatement of rent on account of diminution in area the rent was fixed at Rs. 36-13-0 per year. On this basis the plaintiff has been given a decree. The plaintiff has preferred an appeal to this Court and he has contended that the conclusions of the Courts below that S. 29 is a bar to his claim, is erroneous. Mr. Sen who appears on behalf of the respondents supports the judgments of the Courts below and he raises a further point that even if the Courts below have decided this point erroneously, the plaintiff cannot maintain his suit on the basis of the agreement in title suit No. 16/24 inasmuch as all the tenants were not parties to it and the heirs of Nagendra and Jogendra were not made parties to this suit. It will not be necessary to consider this point if my decision is in his favour on the other point.

The main ground on which the appellant raises his contention is that his suit is based on a compromise decree and until that decree is set aside he is entitled to claim rent as provided for in the compromise decree. He further says that where a bona fide dispute is settled by a compromise there is no scope for the application of the provisions of S. 29, Ben. Ten. Act. The argument advanced by the learned advocate for the appellant has to be taken into two parts: first of all he says that if a bona fide dispute between a landlord and a tenant is settled by an agreement that agreement is not touched by S. 29, Ben. Ten. Act, even if the agreement is not recorded in a decree. As for instance, if there is a dispute as to the rate of rent between the landlord and tenant and the dispute is settled out of Court and if a kabuliyat only is given by the tenant undertaking to pay rent at a certain rate a suit can be successfully brought on the kabuliyat by the landlord. The second branch of his argument is that where the dispute is settled by an agreement between landlord and tenant, and if that agreement is embodied in a decree the landlord stands on a better footing, for says he, that the rights of the parties are to be regulated by the consent decree till the consent decree is set aside. If the consent decree is based by overlooking the provisions of S. 174 A, Ben. Ten. Act, the decree is not a void decree but it is to be avoided, and for that purpose he draws my attention to some of the cases decided on this point. Some of these cases have no doubt laid down that such a decree is not void, but it must be avoided. I may mention in this connexion the case in 34 C W N 887 (1).

I do agree in this contention of the learned advocate for the appellant, but the question is what was the decree which was passed or could have been passed in suit No. 16 of 1924? A petition of compromise may deal with various matters extraneous to the suit in which the parties may agree. In such a case the correct procedure has been pointed out by Lord Buckmaster in 46 I A 240 (2). No doubt the question raised there was as to whether the provisions of S. 49, Registration Act, affected the petition of compromise filed in a suit between the Rani and Robert Wortson and Company, but the observations of Lord Buckmaster at p. 246 of the report lay down the principle in clear terms. He says that in such a case the whole of the petition of compromise and not a part thereof is to be recorded, that is to say the petition of compromise must be introduced either by way of recital in the decree or be made an annexure to the decree, but the decree itself must be confined to the subject-matter of the suit. If that be so, having regard to the scope of suit No. 16 of 1924, Cl. 8 of the petition of compromise which dealt with the question as to what rent was to be paid thereafter by the under-tenants of the Bachars to the Bachars was clearly beyond the scope of the title suit of 1924, inasmuch as there was no controversy as between the Bachars and their under-tenants who were their co-defendants in that suit, on any matter whatsoever. Cl. 8 of the petition of compromise ought not to have been made the decree of the Court, nor in my judgment has it been so made although the decree is loosely drawn up. It no doubt might have been annexed as a schedule to the decree. It has no force beyond that of an agreement between the Bachars and their under-tenants. Cl. 8 and other clauses which went beyond the scope of the suit would not have the force of a decree of the Court in the sense that the rights conferred thereby could be enforced in execution. Having regard to this view I am clearly of opinion that the contention urged by Mr. Dutt, that his client's claim ought to have been decreed in full till the said consent decree is avoided by appropriate proceedings, cannot be given effect to on the facts of this case.

Having regard to the observations made above, Cl. 8 of the petition of compromise can only be regarded as an agreement between the Bachars and defendants 5 and 6 in that suit. It is an agreement and has not got a greater force than that of an agreement.

1. Esahque Mia v. Dula Mia Patwari, 1931 Cal 87=129 I O 855=34 C W N 887.

2. Hemanta Kumari Debi v. Midnapur Zamin-dari Company, 1919 P O 79=53 I O 534=46 I A 240=47 Cal 485 (P C).

The next question is whether S. 29, Ben. Ten. Act, affects the said agreement. There has been in the past controversy as to whether the plain words of S. 29 can be modified by introducing an exception in the case of an agreement to settle bona fide disputes between the landlord and tenant as to the rate of rent. If I am aware, the question was raised for the first time before Sir Comer Petheram, C. J., and C. M. Ghose, J., in 18 Cal 333 (3) and the matter was fully argued for the landlord by Mr. Woodroffe. There the facts were these: the landlord instituted a suit against the tenant in the year 1886. The landlord claimed Bhawli rent that is produce rent.

The defence was that the tenancy was held at Nagdi rent, that is cash rent. The pleadings of the parties in the suit of 1886 did not require the adjudication as to what was the amount of cash rent annually payable. Mr. Tweedie, the learned District Judge, held that the rent was cash rent, but he went out of his way, as was pointed by the learned Chief Justice, in making an observation that the amount of cash rent was Rs. 153-1-6 a year. After the suit of 1886 the landlord and the tenant put their heads together and agreed on the amount of the cash rent. On the facts of the case as it was pointed out by Sir Comer Petheram, there was a scope of a further suit between them for the determination of the amount of the cash rent annually payable. The landlord and tenant did not however take any recourse to further litigation. With a view to avoid further litigation the tenant executed a kabuliyat in favour of the landlord by which he undertook to pay cash rent at a certain rate which was more than two annas in the rupee over the sum of Rs. 153-1-6. A suit was instituted by the landlord to recover rent on the basis of the said kabuliyat and the defence was that inasmuch as the enhancement was at the rate of more than two annas in the rupee, S. 29, Ben. Ten. Act, affected the kabuliyat and the landlord was not entitled to get rent at more than the pre-existing rent, Rs. 153-1-6. This defence of the tenant was given effect to by the lower Courts. The landlord appealed to this Court. At p. 338 of the report Sir Comer Patheram said :

It is I think apparent that the arrangement of 10th May 1885 (date of the kabuliyat) was come to, not as an enhancement of an existing rent, but as a settlement of a dispute as to the amount and character of the rent, and is not within the provisions of S. 29 at all.

Sheo Sahoy Panday's case (3) was followed in 28 Cal 90 (4). In that case some ambiguities in the judgment pronounced in the case of Sheo Sahoy Panday (3) was removed and the principle that was laid down was this: that an agreement embodied in a kabuliyat to pay a certain amount of rent agreed upon by the parties in settlement of a bona fide dispute regarding the rate of rent and to avoid further litigation is not an agreement in violation of the terms of S. 29, Ben. Ten. Act. In 11 C L J 106 (5) the correctness of the aforesaid decisions was sought to be challenged on the ground that those decisions introduced into S. 29 certain words which were not there. It was argued that S. 29 controls all agreements between a landlord and tenant for enhancement and there is nothing in the section that that section would not apply if the agreement has been arrived at as a result of a settlement of a bona fide dispute. But this contention was not given effect to. The matter was fully argued in 21 C L J 325 (6). Mookerji, J., examined in detail the scheme of this part of the Bengal Tenancy Act beginning from S. 27. He pointed out that S. 29 dealt with the validity of a contract for enhancement of rent and that there could not be any question of enhancement of rent unless both the parties to the contract agreed upon one point, namely that there was to be an enhancement.

It has been further pointed out that there can be a common intention to enhance rent if (1) there is no dispute as to the existing rent and (2) there can be an intention to enhance rent even if there is some dispute as to the existing rent, e. g. the landlord says that the existing rent is Rs. 5 a year, and the tenant says Rs. 4; still if they agree to pay Rs. 3 there is an intention to enhance rent although there is no agreement between the landlord and tenant as to what the existing rent previously is; in fact there was a dispute

3. Sheo Sahoy Panday v. Ram Bachia Roy, (1892) 18 Cal 333.

1936 C/57 & 58

4. Nath Sing v. Damri Sing, (1901) 28 Cal 90.

5. Kedar Nath v. Manindra Chandra Nandi, (1910) 11 C L J 106=5 I C 309.

6. Bata Mandal v. Manindra Chandra Nandi, 1915 Cal 211=25 I C 329=19 C W N 321=21 C L J 325.

between them on the point. Cases falling within the second class may give rise to difficulties, but so far as cases falling within the first class, I do not find any difficulty. The argument must be concluded by S. 29. In the present case it is admitted that the defendants who were the under tenants of the Bachars had to pay before the year 1924 rent, Rs. 44-13-7½ a year. There was no dispute between them and the Bachars as to what was the rent payable. In the suit of 1924 there was no dispute also between the Bachars and defendants 5 and 6 in that suit as to the amount of rent payable. It is only because that the Bachars had to pay to the plaintiff, as the purchaser of the ganti tenure, rent at the rate of Rs. 3 per bigha that the defendants 5 and 6 and the other under-tenants agreed to pay enhanced rent to the Bachars at the rate of Rs. 3-6-0. In fact this is expressly stated in para. 8 of the petition of compromise. Here, as Mookerji, J., pointed out, there was an intention to enhance rent both on the part of the Bachars and on the part of defendants 5 and 6 in that suit and there was an agreement between them as to the amount of enhancement.

On these facts I am clearly of opinion that S. 29, Ben. Ten. Act, hits the matter and the decisions of the Courts below are correct. In this view of the matter it is not necessary for me to consider the further point raised by Mr. Sen appearing for the respondents. The result is that I maintain the decrees of the Courts below and dismiss the appeal with costs.

R.M./R.K. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 450

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Prithi Missir—Accused—Petitioner.

v.

Harak Nath Singh — Complainant—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 14 of 1936, Decided on 8th May 1936.

Penal Code (1860), S. 498—"Detain" must be interpreted ejusdem generis with enticement and concealment.

Word "detain" in S. 498 has to be interpreted ejusdem generis with enticement and concealment; and in order to find an accused guilty of "detaining" there must be evidence to show that the accused did something which had the effect of preventing the woman from returning to her husband: Criminal Revision No. 618 of 1935, Ref. [P 450 C 2]

Sudhansu Sekhar Mukerjea—for Petitioner.

Khundkar—for the Crown.

Henderson, J. — This is a rule calling upon the District Magistrate of the 24-Perganas to show cause why the conviction of the petitioner of an offence punishable under S. 498, Penal Code, should not be set aside. The case made by the complainant was one of enticement. But the Magistrate, who tried the case, was not satisfied that this had been made out; he, however, found the petitioner guilty of "detaining" the complainant's wife. This decision was affirmed on appeal by Mr. N. N. Sen, a Magistrate of the First Class vested with appellate powers under S. 407 (2), Criminal P. C.

The question that has been argued before us is the meaning of the word "detain" in S. 498, Penal Code. In support of this rule, Mr. Mukerjea contended that detention implies that the woman is being kept against her will and in support of that proposition relied upon the judgment of Lord-Williams, J., in Criminal Revision Case No. 618 of 1935. I cannot find that this decision goes to such a length. On the other hand, it is clear that some definite meaning must be attached to the word and, in my opinion, it is of ejusdem generis with enticement and concealment. There must be evidence to show that the accused did something, which had the effect of preventing the woman from returning to her husband.

The evidence in the present case is extremely scanty. In dealing with it, the learned Magistrate in the Court below has not come to any definite findings of fact. Had he done so, it would have been possible for us to determine whether on those findings the conviction is sustainable. There is, however, no finding whether the petitioner was keeping the complainant's wife as his mistress, whether they were living together or whether they were having merely casual intercourse. In these circumstances, it becomes necessary to examine the evidence in order to see whether the conviction can be supported. The only evidence bearing on the point relates to the incident when the complainant went with his father and some other persons to the house of the petitioner's father. The witnesses are unanimous that the woman ran out of the room, as soon as she saw her husband: it is clear that the petitioner was in no way responsible for this. The only other fact proved is that the petitioner expressed a hope that there would be no disturbance and asked the husband to go to Court. The most that could be inferred from this is that he was unwilling to use force to compel the woman to return to her husband against her will. In my opinion, such conduct would not amount to "detention" within the meaning of the section. The rule must accordingly be made absolute and the conviction and sentence are set aside. The petitioner is discharged from his bail and the fine, if paid, will be refunded.

Cunliffe, J.—I agree.

V.B./R.K. Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 451

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Emperor

v.

Abul Hossain Sikdar—Accused.

Jury Ref. No. 3 of 1936, Decided on 12th May 1936.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 307—Power of reference should be sparingly used—Verdict of jury must not be disturbed unless verdict is perverse.

Power of making references should be sparingly used. Reliance must be placed upon the decisions of the juries and they must not be disturbed unless it can be shown beyond a peradventure that a perverse verdict has been arrived at. Where, therefore, the only ground for making reference was "giving effect to the verdict of the majority of the jury will lead to the anomalous result of letting off the principal offender who evaded a regular trial for a pretty long time ever since the alleged occurrence," it is quite insufficient and the application should be rejected. [P 451 C 2]

Khundkar and Hari Dev Chatterjee—for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—We cannot accept this reference which is put forward by the learned Assistant Sessions Judge of Faridpore. The learned Judge shows by the terms of his Letter of Reference that he has taken a very strong view in favour of the prosecution in this case. He asks us to consider his charge to the jury in which no doubt he brought to their notice once again the facts upon which the prosecution rested the case before him. The letter is divided into eight paragraphs; seven of these are concerned with surmises on the part of the learned Judge as to the exact view that the jury must have taken when they retired with regard to the evidence produced by the Crown.

It is, however, in para. 8 of the letter that one finds, I think, the real reason that induced the learned Judge to bring this case before us. In that paragraph he said that Giving effect to the verdict of the majority of the jury will lead to the anomalous result of letting off the principal offender who evaded a regular trial for a pretty long time ever since the alleged occurrence, and no doubt that state of affairs is very often produced in the District Courts in similar circumstances. Although one can appreciate the anxiety on the part of the learned Judge to have what he considers to be equal justice done with reference to all the persons concerned in this disturbance, yet this reason put forward in para. 8 is in no way a determining reason to be considered judicially by a Court of appeal. If the letter of reference was stripped of all the matter contained in the preceding 7 paragraphs, and para. 8 was alone brought before us to consider, this question would be all the more apparent as not being a consideration that we can act upon as an appellate Court. The power of making references on the part of Judges engaged in criminal work in the districts is one that should be used very sparingly. It is an artificial power which is the creature of statute only. And in my experience it is most often utilised by Judges, zealous indeed to perform their duties but usually somewhat inexperienced in the principles of criminal procedure. I repeat again what I have said on several occasions since sitting in this Court, that as long as it is the policy of the Government of this country to rely on the verdicts of juries in the district, a policy which is supported by both the profession and the public and a policy which is cherished by the accused persons who are brought up for trial, so long must reliance be placed upon the decisions of juries and they must not be disturbed unless it can be shown beyond a peradventure that a perverse verdict has been arrived at, which can be demonstrated clearly from a perusal of the proceedings of the Court. The reference therefore is rejected. The accused must be set at liberty immediately.

Henderson, J.—I agree.

D.L./R.K.

Reference rejected.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 452

M. C. GHOSE, J.

Humayun Raja Chaudhury and another—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Jyotirmoyee Debi—Plaintiff and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 434 of 1933, Decided on 25th July 1935, from appellate decree of Dist. Judge, Murshidabad, D/- 31st August 1932.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885), S. 102 (dd)—Settlement Officer is authorised to decide disputes between two neighbouring proprietors.

A Settlement Officer has authority to decide a dispute between two neighbouring proprietors under the provisions of S. 102 (dd): 19 Cal 641, Dissent. [P 453 C 1]

(b) Limitation—Assumption of title—Decision of boundary disputes under S. 40, Survey Act, amounts to civil Court decree creating rights under it—Disputants or their successors must bring suit for establishing their title within limitation period or else their rights will be extinguished.

Where a dispute about the boundary between the two mouzas was decided in favour of one party under S. 40, Survey Act, the decision operated as a civil Court decree and created rights under it until the other party set it aside by a proper suit. But where the legal successors of the other party did not dispute the decision against them within 12 years from the date of decision and allowed limitation to run against them, their title to property would be extinguished: 1921 Pat 31, Rel. on. [P 453 C 1]

Bankim Chandra Mukherjee and Muktipada Chatterjee—for Appellants.

Surendra Madhab Mallick and Ramani Mohan Banerjee—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the defendants in a suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession of certain lands. The plaintiff, who may be called the Rani of Pakur, is the widow of Kalidas Pandey, who died in 1928. The plaintiff is the tenure holder of Mouza Chak Purapara and the defendants are the tenure holders of Mouza Purapara. In the old days between the two Mouzahs ran the river Bhagirathi, Purapara being on the west and Chak Purapara being on the east. In course of time the river shifted over to the east or to the west and thereby threw up lands either side till the boundaries of the two villages have become difficult to ascertain. In the present case the suit lands were divided into three schedules. The Ka schedule lands which were fit for cultivation from before 1914, and the Kha schedule lands which were sandy and not fit for cultivation in 1916 and, lastly, the Ga schedule lands which were under water in 1916 and rose above water thereafter. A Commissioner was appointed and he made a map of the locality. On consideration of all the evidence, the trial Court decreed the plaintiff's suit against the appellant (defendant) holding that the plaintiffs had proved their title to the lands as appertaining to their Mouza Chak Purapara, and that the lands being in possession of cultivating tenants, the plaintiffs would be entitled to receive rent from them. Against that judgment the defendant made an appeal unsuccessfully in the Court of the District Judge.

The tenants defendants did not appeal. Their position is more or less secure as they will hold as tenants, and it is a matter of not much importance whether they are tenants under the plaintiffs or the defendant landlords. The contest is between the plaintiffs putnidars on the one side and the defendants putnidars on the other. On the question of title, both the Courts below have found that the lands appertained to Mouza Chak Purapara and the plaintiffs are entitled to the same. That finding is not challenged in this Court. As to the Ga schedule lands which rose above the water, within less than 12 years, the learned advocate for the appellants does not press the appeal. But he has strongly urged that both as to the Ka and Kha schedule lands, the plaintiff's title has been extinguished by the law of limitation. Taking first the Ka schedule lands: These were sub-divided in the Court into Ka, Ka-1 and Ka-2, according to the possession of tenants, but it is not necessary at this stage to consider the sub-division. The Ka schedule lands consist of 22 plots in the petty settlement of village Purapara. It has been proved that the defendants Chaudhurys applied for a petty Record of Rights of their Mouza Purapara and work began in 1914 and was finished in 1916. In this petty settlement there was a dispute about the boundary between the two mouzahs, namely Purapara and Chak Purapara. The dispute was raised by the defendants Chaudhurys. It was defended by Miah Shahebs, who were the four annas co-sharers of the tenure of Chak Purapara. It was not defended by the 12 annas co-sharer tenure holder Kalidas Pandey, predecessor of the plaintiff.

Upon hearing the learned advocates it is clear that Kalidas ought to have defended the matter, but he did not choose to defend it. It appears that shortly before this he had been defeated in a suit by the Chaudhurys against him, and he did not choose to contest the matter further. The dispute was decided on 7th April 1915 by the Assistant Superintendent of Survey. He declared that these 22 plots, constituted in the Ka schedule lands, were part of Mouza Purapara and the defendants were entitled to possession of the same. This decision was made under S. 40, Survey Act.

It is urged that under S. 40, Survey Act, the decision operates as a civil Court decree and it stands good until it is set aside by a proper suit. The question is whether the plaintiff, the successor of Kalidas, is bound by the decision of 7th April 1915. It was urged on the authority of the case in 19 Cal 641 (1) that a Settlement Officer has no authority under the provision of the Bengal Tenancy Act to entertain any dispute between persons interested in neighbouring estates as to the title of any land. This proposition is incorrect as the law has been amended since 1891. At present the Settlement Officer has authority to decide a dispute between two neighbouring proprietors under the provisions of S. 102 (dd). The preparation of survey and record of rights consists of four stages. The first stage is of the survey and preparation of the map. The second stage is as to the writing of the draft record. The third is the publication of the draft record and disposal of objections. The fourth stage is the publication of the final decree. It was in the first stage that the question of boundary between the village Purapara of which the record was prepared, and the adjacent village Chak Purapara, came into question and the Assistant Superintendent of Survey had legal authority, and it was, in fact, his duty to decide the dispute. The fact that Kalidas did not appear and defend his interest in that dispute is of no avail to the plaintiff. She is clearly bound by the decision of the Superintendent of Survey and limitation will run against her from 7th April 1915 as regards this schedule lands. I am fortified in this view by the decision in 6 Pat L J 51 (2). The suit not having been instituted within 12 years from that date, her title has been extinguished and the suit is dismissed in respect of the lands of the Ka schedule.

In respect of Kha schedule lands it has been found that they just rose above water in 1916, and were sandy and not fit for cultivation. In the Record of Rights, which was finally published on 22nd December 1916, they were recorded to be within the tenure of the defendant tenure holders. If it be held that the adverse possession commenced on 22nd December 1916, the date of publication of the final record, the suit is within time having been instituted on 22nd December 1928. It has however been urged by the learned Advocate of the defendants-appellants that the final publication did indeed finally state that these lands were within the tenure of the defendants, but this was not the first date when such a statement was publicly made. The statement had been made by the defendants and accepted by the settlement authorities long before that date and the draft Record of Rights contained the same, and must have been published at least a month before the final record. It should therefore be held that the plaintiff must have received notice of the defendants' adverse possession long before 22nd December 1916. The argument is not without force, but having regard to the circumstances of the case the Courts below were not wrong in not accepting the same. These lands were sandy lands and they were actually possessed by tenants who were indifferent as to which of the rival tenure holders claimed the rent from them. Actually these lands were not under cultivation on the date of the final record. They came under cultivation afterwards and there was a dispute between the rival tenure-holders which was decided in favour of the defendants on 15th November 1918. In the circumstances it cannot be held that the Courts below were wrong to hold that this claim is not barred by limitation. In the result the appeal is allowed in part with costs in proportion to success throughout. Leave to appeal under S. 15 of the Letters Patent is refused.

1. Norendra Nath Roy v. Srinath Sandel, (1891) 19 Cal 641.

2. Probhu Charan Bharti v. Secretary of State, 1921 Pat 81=61 I C 46=6 Pat L J 51=2 P L T 118.

R.W./V.V.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 454

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Khaje Habibulla and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Bepin Chandra Rai and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 545 of 1932, Decided on 28th November 1935, against decree of Dist. Judge, Bakargunj, D/- 18th June 1931.

(a) Lease—Construction—Land settled at certain rental—Kabuliat providing that rent is not to be enhanced—In event of diluvion tenant not entitled to abatement of rent—No provision showing surrender by landlord of his right to additional rent in event of accretion to land—Landlord held entitled to settlement of rent on accretion.

Where certain land was settled after measurement at a certain rental and the kabuliat provided that the rent for the land was not to be enhanced and that in event of diluvion the tenants would not get any abatement in rent but it was nowhere provided that the landlord was willing to surrender his right to additional rent for any land which may subsequently form by accretion:

Held: that the landlord was entitled to settlement of fair rent for the land accreting to the tenure of the tenant and that it could not be implied that the landlord has agreed to surrender his right to additional rent for land which may subsequently form by accretion.

[P 455 C 1]

(b) Landlord and tenant—Rent—Suit for settlement of fair rent under Bengal Tenancy Act on ground of accretion—Tenants contending that at the time of passing of Bengal Tenancy Act predecessors of landlord had no right to additional rent—Burden of proof is on them to establish plea.

Where a suit is instituted under the Bengal Tenancy Act by a landlord for settlement of fair rent for certain lands on the ground of accretion to the tenure of the tenants and the tenants contend that at the time the Bengal Tenancy Act was enacted, the predecessors of the landlord had no right to additional rent, the burden of proof of establishing the plea taken by them rests on them. They must show that at the time of the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act the predecessors of the landlords had no right to enhancement of rent. [P 455 C 2]

(c) Practice—Plea—Res judicata—Plaintiffs appealing from suit dismissed—Defendants although entitled to support order of dismissal on ground of res judicata not raising plea—They are precluded from raising it subsequently.

Where in an appeal by the plaintiffs from a suit which has been dismissed, although it is open to the defendants to support the order of dismissal on the ground of res judicata, they do not do so and the suit is remanded to be heard on merits they are precluded from raising the plea of res judicata subsequently.

[P 455 C 2]

(d) Landlord and Tenant—Rent—Suit for—Fixing of fair rent—Opinion formed by expert revenue officer is entitled to consideration.

There can be no better material in fixing a fair rent than the opinion formed by an expert revenue officer who is actually working on the spot.

[P 456 C 1]

S. C. Basak and Bijan Kumar Mukherjee—for Appellants.

Brojolal Chakrabarty, Surendra Nath Das Gupta and Surojit Chandra Lahiry (for Deputy Registrar)—for Respondents.

Henderson, J.—The litigation which has now culminated in the present appeal has had an extremely chequered history but it will not be necessary for our present purpose to set out all the facts. Suffice it to say that the suit out of which this appeal has arisen was instituted for the purpose of settling a fair rent for certain lands which have accreted not only to the plaintiff's Zamindary, but also to the tenure of the defendants. The revenue authorities have fixed certain revenue upon it which the plaintiff is bound to pay and the plaintiff now asks that he also should be given an increase of rent from the defendants. But briefly his case is that he is entitled to it under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act. The respondents resist the claim upon three main grounds. Their first contention is that they are exempted by the terms of the Patta and Kabuliat which were executed when the holding was originally created as long ago as the year 1273. In the second place they contend that they are not liable under the law, and in the third place they contend that the matter has been concluded in their favour and that the question has now become res judicata. The learned Subordinate Judge who tried the suit decided the first point in favour of the plaintiff. This decision was reversed by the learned District Judge on appeal.

The translation of the Kabuliat has been placed before us and in our opinion the learned Subordinate Judge was right on this point. It is quite clear that a certain area of land was settled after measurement at a certain rental and there can be no question that the intention of the parties was that the rent for that land was not to be enhanced. Then in the second place there was a provision that in the event of any diluvion the defendants will not get any abatement of rent. On this point it seems desirable to stress the fact that the defendants were getting a quid pro quo. They were maintaining in fact their right to any re-formation in situ and any further accretion which might take place in future. There is really nothing in this provision to entitle us to say that it implies something else of a totally different character. This really disposes of the provisions in the lease. It is nowhere said that the landlord is willing to surrender his right to additional rent for any land which may subsequently form by accretion. We are not prepared to imply that any such agreement was intended. It is obvious that in such an event the landlord had before him the danger, which has actually materialized, that in the event of any accretion his revenue might be greater than the rent which he was entitled to realize. For these reasons we are of opinion that there is nothing in the lease itself which would defeat the present claim of the plaintiff.

The second point is based upon the provisions of Regulation 11 of 1825, but has ultimately to be decided upon the burden of proof. The learned Subordinate Judge did not find, and in the absence of any evidence could not find, that the plaintiff was not entitled to any enhancement under the terms of that Regulation. In fact the position is that we simply do not know whether he was or was not. What the learned Judge did was to approach the case as though the Bengal Tenancy Act had never been passed and the suit was one for enhancement of rent under the terms of the Regulation. No doubt in a suit of that character it would be necessary for the plaintiff to show that there was an established usage under which the defendants were liable to pay additional rent for any accretion to their tenure.

The present suit however was one under the Bengal Tenancy Act, and there can be no question that under the provisions of that Act the plaintiff is entitled to enhancement. The answer made by the defendants is that the plaintiff's claim is defeated by sub-s. 4, S. 2. That sub-section is in these terms: "The repeal of any enactment by this Act shall not revive any right, privilege, matter or thing not in force or existing at the commencement of this Act." Put shortly the contention of the defendants is that at the time when the Bengal Tenancy Act was enacted the plaintiff's predecessor had no right to additional rent. Now we are clearly of opinion that if a defendant wants to meet a claim by a plea of this kind, the burden of establishing it clearly rests upon him. If the defendants wish to show that at the time of the passing of the Bengal Tenancy Act the plaintiff's predecessor had no right to an enhancement of rent, it is clearly for them to establish it. They made no attempt to do so and there was no evidence at all on which the question could be determined. As I have already indicated we are completely in the dark on the point, and in these circumstances it must be held that this sub-section is of no avail to the respondents.

The third point of res judicata is based upon the judgment of Mr. Chotzner as he then was sitting in appeal in the District Court by which he dismissed a suit for enhancement brought by the plaintiff in the year 1910. There are several reasons why this plea cannot be substantiated. In the first place, the suit in 1910 was instituted in the Court of the Munsif and not in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. In the second place the claim of the plaintiff was quite different. He was then asserting that the disputed land was part of his permanently settled estate and on such a case it would be very difficult to say that he could claim any enhancement of rent in view of the terms of the lease. In the third place the present question, i.e. the right of the plaintiff to enhancement under S. 52, was deliberately left open. In the fourth place this matter has already been before this Court on a previous occasion. The suit was dismissed. On appeal by the plaintiff the learned District Judge upheld the order of dismissal on the ground that the suit was barred by limitation. On the point of res judicata he held in favour of the plaintiff. The plaintiff appealed to this Court. The appeal was heard by Suhrawardy, J., and Patterson, J., and they overruled the finding of the District Judge with regard to limitation. It was then open to the defendants to support the order of dismissal on the ground of res judicata. They did not do so with the result that this Court, instead of dismissing sing the suit remanded it to be heard on the merits. In view of that order it is now too late to say that the suit is barred by res judicata.

The result is that in our opinion the plaintiff is entitled to a decree. The present litigation has been going on for many years and we feel very strongly that it ought to be put an end to. It is therefore with the greatest reluctance that we should remand it again. In our opinion it is not necessary to do so. The plaintiff claimed rent at the rate of Rs. 627-2-0 basing his claim on what he alleged to be the prevailing rent. Before us that claim has not been pressed. It appears that when the revenue authorities, in the course of the dearrah operation, assessed the revenue which the plaintiff is liable to pay; they also assessed the rent of the defendants at the rate of Rs. 550-3-0. The defendants attempted to recover that rent but failed as it was held by Walmsley and B. B. Ghose, JJ. that this assessment was not of a binding character. We are not now concerned with the question whether it is binding or not. We are only concerned with the question whether it is fair. We find it difficult to imagine what better materials there could be in fixing a fair rent than the opinion formed by an expert officer who was actually working on the spot. Mr. Chakrabarty has not said anything which would lead us to suppose that that rent is in any way unfair and we therefore propose, instead of remanding the case again, putting the parties to the expense of another hearing and possibly another appeal to this Court, to fix the rent at the rate of Rs. 550-3-0.

The result is that this appeal is allowed and the decrees of both the Courts below are set aside. The plaintiff will be given a decree settling Rs. 550-3-0 as rent and a decree to recover rent at that rate for a period of three years. In this connection we may note that Dr. Basak has abandoned the claim for the year 1329. The appellant will also get his costs in all the Courts.

Cunliffe, J.—I agree.

R.M./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 456

R. C. MITTER, J.

Rai Kiran Chandra Roy Bahadur and others—Appellants.

v.

Tarak Nath Gangopadhyay and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1817 of 1933, Decided on 5th December 1935, against decree of Sub-Judge, Jessore, D/- 10th April 1933.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 111-A—Suit for declarations that plaintiff has status of Kaimi-Mokarari Mourasidars and that entry in Record of Rights recording them as Korfis is wrong, is one for declaration of title and is not barred by S. 111-A—Plaint in suit discloses cause of action.

If there is an entry adverse to the plaintiff he is not bound to institute a suit for a declaration that the entry is wrong. He can wait, and when an invasion on his rights is made on the basis of the entry, he can come and sue for a declaration of his title on the ground that the record is wrong, and the suit is in time if brought within six years of the threatened invasion. But he can also make the entry in the Record of Rights as the basis of his cause of action on the ground that the said entry has cast a cloud upon his title. One of the purposes of a suit for declaration is the removal of the cloud. If he makes the said entry as his cause of action he has to institute the suit within six years from the date of the final publication of the record of rights and not from the date of the certificate of the final publication.

[P 458 C 1]

A suit for a declaration that the plaintiffs have the status of Kaimi-Mokarari Mourasidars in respect of certain land, and that the entry in the Record of Rights recording them as Korfis is wrong, is one for declaration of the plaintiffs' title and is not barred by S. 111-A, Bengal Tenancy Act.

[P 457 C 2]

The plaint in such a suit discloses a cause of action as the entry in Record of Rights having recorded the status of the plaintiffs as that of Korfis, while they claim a higher status, viz. that of Kaimi-Mokarari Mourasidars, casts a cloud upon their title: 1935 Cal 801, Foll.; 1932 Cal 842, Disting.

[P 457 C 2]

(b) Evidence—Admissibility—Document—Recitals—Statement as to boundaries in kabuliat executed between two persons is admissible as against one of them.

A statement as regards boundaries of certain land, in a kabuliat executed between two persons, is admissible as against one of them, not being a recital of boundaries in a third party document.

[P 458 C 2]

(c) Bengal Cess Act (9 of 1880), S. 95—Cess return can also be used against heirs of persons filing them.

A cess return which can under S. 95 be used as against the person filing it can also be used against the heirs of the persons filing them. Evidence, if admissible for one purpose is admissible as evidence for all purposes: Higham v. Ridgway, 2 S M L C 284, Rel. on.

[P 458 C 2; P 459 C 1]

Hemendra Chandra Sen and Surendra Nath Basu (Sr)—for Appellants.

Dr. Mukherji, Biswa Nath Naskar and Ramendra Mohan Mazumdar (for Deputy Registrar)—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The subject matter of the suit out of which this appeal arises are settlement plots Nos. 58 and 63. In the Record of Rights published in 1922 the Narail Babus, who are the appellants before me, and the contesting defendants in the lower Court, are recorded as proprietors. There is a further entry in the settlement record that defendants 1 and 2 are occupancy raiyats under the Narail Babus, and that the plaintiffs are Korfa raiyats under defendants 1 and 2. On 23rd December 1927 certain persons, whom I may call the Chakrabortties, as plaintiffs instituted the suit out of which this appeal arises. In the plaint they stated that the said two plots were their Niskar Brahmatter lands, that defendants 1 and 2 are tenure-holders under them and the plaintiffs are under-tenure-holders under defendants 1 and 2. They further stated that the settlement record in rendering the lands as the mal lands of the Narail Babus had cast a cloud upon their title and for that purpose they wanted a declaration of title and confirmation of possession through their tenants. In the suit as originally filed the present plaintiffs were pro forma defendants. Later on the Chakrabortties filed an application in Court to withdraw from the suit on the ground that they were satisfied that the said two plots were not their Niskar Brahmatter, but they were the mal lands of the Narail Babus. On that the present plaintiffs, who were then pro forma defendants, made an application for their transfer to the category of plaintiffs.

They stated that the lands in suit appertained to the Niskar of the Chakrabortties, that defendants 1 and 2 were permanent tenure-holders under the Chakrabortties and they are also permanent under-tenure-holders under defendants 1 and 2, and that the entry in the Record of Rights which had recorded them as Korfas was wrong. They wanted a declaration of their title as Kaimi under-tenure-holders in respect of the lands. The Court passed an order by which they were transferred to the category of plaintiffs and Chakrabortties were transferred to the category of pro forma defendants being made pro forma defendants 15 to 25 and the allegations made in the application for the transfer were ordered to be made part of the plaint by way of amendment. The plaint was corrected, but all the said allegations were not embodied. After that the suit proceeded and both the Courts granted a decree in favour of the present plaintiffs. A point was raised that so far as the present plaintiffs were concerned, the plaint disclosed no cause of action. That point was considered by the learned Subordinate Judge who held that the suit was maintainable at the instance of the present plaintiffs and the plaint disclosed a cause of action. In my judgment S. 111-A, Ben. Ten. Act, is no bar to the suit, inasmuch as the suit is one for declaration of plaintiffs' title. The plaintiffs claim in the plaint that they have the status of Kaimi Mokarari Mouresidars, a status higher than that recorded in the settlement record.

The decision in the case in 40 C W N 22 (1), delivered by Mukerjee, J., fully supports the view which I am taking. The plaint in my opinion discloses a cause of action. The Record of Rights having recorded the status of the present plaintiffs as Korfas, had certainly cast a cloud upon the plaintiffs' title. The case in 36 C W N 783 (2) has been cited before me by Mr. Sen appearing on behalf of the appellants for the purpose of supporting his contention that if a plaintiff simply states that the Record of Rights is incorrect and by reason of that great obstacles in the matter of exercising plaintiff's possession will arise in future, the plaint does not disclose any cause of action. In that case however the Record of Rights was prepared more than six years before the suit, and the allegations in the plaint were that great obstacles will arise in future. A Division Bench of this Court said that the plaint did not disclose any cause of action, and if the entry in the settlement record be taken as furnishing

1. Keshab Chandra Banerjee Bahadur v. Madan Mohan Poddar, 1935 Cal 801=160 I O 96=62 Cal 969=61 C L J 519=40 C W N 22.
2. Nagendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury v. Brojendra Kishore Roy Chowdhury, 1932 Cal 842=139 I O 759=56 C L J 316=36 C W N 783.

the cause of action in the suit, it would be a serious question as to whether the suit was not then barred by limitation. In that case however the earlier cases decided by this Court were not cited. As I read the law, the position seems to be this: that if there is an entry adverse to the plaintiff he is not bound to institute a suit for declaration that the entry is wrong. He can wait, and when an invasion on his rights is made on the basis of the entry, he can come and sue for a declaration of his title on the ground that the record is wrong, and the suit is in time if brought within six years of the threatened invasion. But he can also make the entry in the Record of Rights as the basis of his cause of action on the ground that the said entry has cast a cloud upon his title. One of the purposes of a suit for declaration is the removal of the cloud. If he makes the said entry as his cause of action he has to institute the suit within six years from the date of the final publication of the Record of Rights and not from the date of the certificate of the final publication. In 40 C W N 22 (1) that position is clearly indicated and a number of cases beginning from the case in 23 C W N 883 (3) is noticed in the judgment. In my judgment, therefore, the very fact that the present plaintiffs have been recorded as Korfa raiyats, gives them a cause of action for this suit. Their case is that the entry is wrong as according to them their status is that of a Mourasi Mokararidars. For these reasons I hold that the plaint did disclose a cause of action, even after the Chakrabortties had been transferred to the category of pro forma defendants. This disposes of the main point argued before me.

In the merits Mr. Sen urges that the findings of the learned Subordinate Judge are vitiated inasmuch as he relied upon inadmissible evidence for the purpose of supporting his argument, he says that the kabuliat executed by Abhoy is inadmissible in evidence, as also the cess returns which have been filed by the predecessors of the Chakrabortties, namely pro forma defendants 15 to 25. In so far as the said kabuliat is concerned it is a kabuliat given by Abhoy in favour of Narail Babus in respect of some mal lands. The Narail Babus accepted the kabuliat. In the southern boundary is given the land of Bhawani Prosad Chakraborty, that is to say the Niskar Brahmatter land of the Chakrabortties. The plaintiffs identified Abhoy's land to be the northern boundary of the lands in suit. Having regard to these facts, I do not see why the statement made in that kabuliat should not be admissible in evidence against the Narail Babus. It is not a case of recital of boundaries in a third party document.

Regarding the cess returns the position is this: in them the lands in suit are described as Niskar lands. It is admitted that the predecessors of the Chakrabortties had Niskar lands somewhere in the same village and the question is as to the identity of the said lands. Mr. Sen says that under the provisions of S. 95 of the Cess Act, these cess returns could not be used in evidence. He says that a person who files a cess return cannot use the statement made therein in his favour and the same disability attaches to his heirs and legal representatives of the person actually filing the same and also to persons who claim derivative title either by sale or lease from the persons filing the returns. It seems to me that there is great force in this argument, but it is not necessary for me to decide that point having regard to certain circumstances present in this case which I am going to recite just now. In the application for withdrawing the suit the Chakrabortties stated that the lands were not Niskar lands and that they were satisfied to that extent after the filing of the suit. In fact this was the reason which they gave for abandoning the suit. The present plaintiffs thereafter filed these cess returns and they wanted to show that the statement of the Chakrabortties was false, and the position they had taken at the time when they were transferred to the category of the plaintiff was a position which could not be maintained by them having regard to the admissions made in the cess returns. In my view the cess returns could be used for the said purpose, because of the express provisions of S. 95 of the Cess Act, which says that a Cess return can be used against the person filing it. If they can be used against persons filing them, certainly they can be used against the heirs of the persons filing them. If they are admissible in evidence for one purpose, then according to the principles laid down in 2 S M L C 284 (4) (the same case appears in Campbell's Leading Cases, Vol. 11, p. 266), the cess returns will be admissible for all purposes. In fact that is how Best in his book on Evidence takes the scope of 2 S M L C 284 (4) to be. At p. 423, Edn. 12, the learned author says this: "the evidence if admissible, is admissible as evidence for all purposes." In this view of the matter I do hold that the cess returns had been properly admitted in evidence, and the contention of Mr. Sen must be overruled.

The result is that this appeal must be dismissed with costs.

The prayer for leave to appeal under S. 15, Letters Patent is refused.

R.M./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

4. Higham v. Ridgway, 2 S M L C 284.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 459

NASIM ALI AND EDGLEY, JJ.

Bengal Coal Co., Ltd.—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Sri Sri Janaradan Kishore Lal Singh Deo and another—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Appeals Nos. 856 and 1003 of 1933, Decided on 24th March 1936, from appellate decrees of Dist. Judge, Burdwan, D/- 7th December 1932.

(a) Bengal Cess Act (9 of 1880), S. 5—Road cess—Road cess amounts to cess imposed on mines.

The Cess Act provides for the imposition of a cess on all immoveable property situated in the province and mines are included in the definition of immoveable property. In the case of mines the road cess is assessed on the annual net profits of which the royalty receiveable by the landlord is a part. It is therefore a cess imposed on the mines: 38 Cal 372 (P C), Ref.

[P 460 C 2]

(b) Lease—Construction—Intention of parties should be ascertained from all terms in contract between parties.

The decision in the case should not turn on the magic of a particular word or words in one covenant. What matter may be reasonably supposed to be in the contemplation of the parties at the time of the contract is to be ascertained from a conspection of all the terms of the contract: Foulger v. Arding, (1902) 1 K B 700, Rel. on.

[P 461 C 2]

(c) Bengal Mining Settlement Act (2 of 1912), S. 10 (4)—Lease—Lessee to pay and discharge all taxes, rates, etc., "which shall be charged, assessed or imposed upon the said mines"—Obligation held could not be limited to charges on mines themselves but extended to charges imposed in respect of them on persons, viz. landlord or tenant.

The relevant clauses in a lease were these:

"All the aforesaid royalties shall be paid free from any deduction. The lessee shall pay the royalty and royalties reserved in the lease at the time and manner appointed in that behalf and shall also pay and discharge all taxes, rates, assessments and imposition whatever being in the nature of public demand which shall from time to time be charged, assessed or imposed upon the said mines or any part thereof by the authority of Government of India or the said local Government except demand of the land revenue, etc." The question was whether the burden of the obligation in the present case namely, road cess, mine cess and income-tax, which was on the landlords, had been thrown on the tenant by the operation of the covenants in the lease. The contention on behalf of the tenant was that these impositions did not come within the covenants in the lease as they were not charged upon the mines but were charged upon the landlord in respect of the mines:

Held: that though in the covenant of lease the words used were "upon the said mines" and there were no words of the type "or in respect of them," still on a consideration of all the terms of the lease, the obligation under it could not be limited to charges on the mines but extended to charges imposed in respect of them on persons, namely landlord or tenants. The tenant undertook the liability to pay all charges of a recurring nature imposed by the statutes whether they were described in the statute as imposed on the mines or on the lessor or the lessee in respect of them. [P 462 C 1]

Per Edgley, J.—The expression "charged, assessed, or imposed upon the said mines" conveys the idea of direct and separate assessment arising from ownership of the mines or the receipt of profits therefrom, and if the covenant be read as a whole, this was the meaning of the expression, which the parties had in contemplation at the time of the execution of the lease. Regarding income-tax, it is a personal tax. Having regard to the provisions of the Income-Tax Act with regard to assessment, it would in this particular case be impossible to separate any income-tax which might be payable upon the mine from the total amount of income-tax payable by the landlord. The amount of the income-tax payable by a person who owns mines or derives any portion of his income therefrom is not separately assessed upon the mines and the income arising therefrom but is assessed upon his total income which is determined according to certain specific directions contained in the Income-Tax Act. Hence such a tax could not be said to be a tax upon the said mines and the tenant was not liable to pay it. [P 464 C 1]

Sarat Chandra Bose, Santi Kr. Roy Chowdhury and Manmatha Nath Das Gupta—for Appellant.

S. N. Banerji, Narendra Chandra Bose, Satyendra N. Mitra and Karunamoy Ghose—for Respondents.

Nasim Ali, J.—These two appeals arise out of a suit for recovery of road cess, mine cess and income-tax charged on the royalty payable for a certain colliery under the terms of a registered indenture of lease. The trial Judge decreed the suit. On appeal by the defendants to the lower appellate Court the learned District Judge has affirmed the decree of the trial Judge for road cess and mine cess, but has dismissed the plaintiffs' claim for income-tax. Hence these two second appeals, one (S. A. 856) by the defendants and the other (S. A. 1003) is by the plaintiffs. The point for determination in the two appeals is whether under the terms of the lease the plaintiffs are entitled to recover: (a) road cess, (b) mine cess (c) income-tax, paid by them on the royalties reserved in the lease. The relevant clauses in the lease are these:

(a) All the aforesaid royalties shall be paid free from any deduction (Cl. 1 of Part 6 of the indenture).

(b) The lessee shall pay the royalty and royalties reserved in the lease at the time and manner appointed in that behalf and shall also pay and discharge all taxes, rates, assessments and imposition whatever being in the nature of public demand which shall from time to time be charged, assessed or imposed upon the said mines or any part thereof by the authority of the Government of India or the said local Government except demand of land revenue, and shall also pay interest at the rate of 12 per cent per annum on all arrears of such royalty or royalties from the due date thereof (Cl. 1, Part 7 of the Indenture).

It is contended on behalf of the lessee that the object of the covenant to pay taxes, rates, assessments and impositions was not to throw upon the lessee the burden of the assessments payable by the lessor under the statutes but only to state the liability of the lessee to pay his share of the assessment under the Statute Laws. The words "all taxes etc." indicate that the lessee was made liable by the covenant for the whole of the impositions upon the demised mines payable by the lessor and the lessee and not simply for the portion payable by the lessee only. If the object of the covenant was to make the tenant liable for his share of the assessments only there was no necessity for inserting it in the lease because the liability was already fixed by the Statutes. The covenant was not intended to be a mere surplusage but was framed with the object of throwing on the tenant the burden of obligations which in the absence of such a covenant might have fallen on the landlord. The question is whether the burden of the obligations in the present case namely, road cess, mine cess and income-tax which was on the plaintiffs has been thrown on the defendant by the operation of the covenants in the lease. The contention on behalf of the tenant is that these impositions do not come within the covenants in the lease as they are not charged upon the mines but are charged upon the landlord in respect of the mines. Now what is the difference between an imposition upon the mines and an imposition in respect of the mines? All impositions are ultimately charged to the landlord or the tenant or both. Mr. Bose's contention however is that when parties to a covenant use the words "imposed, assessed or charged upon the premises" the meaning of the words is the sense in which the words are used in the Statute. In support of his contention he invited our attention to the following passage in the judgment of Banks, J., in (1914) 2 K B 361 (1):

When parties to a covenant use the words "charged on premises" the meaning of "charged" includes the sense in which the word is used in the statutes.

In this passage the word "includes" has been used by the learned Judge. This word is wider than the word "means." The plaintiffs have been assessed for Road cess under the provisions of the Cess Act (Bengal Act 9 of 1880) in respect of the royalty received or receivable by them. The Cess Act provides for the imposition of a cess on all immoveable property situated in the province. For the purposes of the Act "mines etc. are included in the definition of immoveable property." In the case of mines the cess is assessed on the annual net profits of which the royalty receivable by the landlord is a part: 38 Cal 372 (2). It is therefore a cess imposed on the mines; and comes within the covenant. Mine cess is a cess imposed by the Bengal Mining Settlement Act (Bengal Act 2 of 1912). It appears from S. 10 of the Act that certain expenses incurred by the Mines Board of Health for the better sanitation of mining settlements are charged to the owner of mines and all persons who receive any royalty from such mines, and the assessment in the case of receivers of royalty are based on the road cess payable by them. In view of these provisions in the Act, Mr. Bose contends on the authority of the observations of Jessel M. R., in (1882) 9 Q B 632 (3) that the mines cess is not charged or imposed upon the mines but is a personal demand on the plaintiffs who are the receivers of royalty from the mines and is therefore not within the covenant as there are no words in the covenant to the effect "or in respect of the mines" "or on the lessor in respect of the mines." The liability in (1882) 9 Q B 632 (3) arose under S. 105, Metropolis Management Act 1855, 18 & 19 Vict. Ch. 120, the relevant portion of which is as follows: "The owner of such houses forming such street (laid out or made by the Vestry or District Board under that Act) shall on demand pay to such Vestry or Board the amount of actual expenses of providing and laying such pavement." The real question for determination in that case was about the liability under the covenant not for annual charges but for payment which was to be made once for all for the permanent improvement of the property. A covenant to pay charges, etc., is "not construed to throw expenses of permanent improvement on the tenant unless there are words clearly requiring such a result": Halsbury's Law of England, Vol. 18, p. 491. In general the tenant is "liable to bear all expenses which are of a regularly recurring nature and which are incident to the occupation of the premises": Ibid. In discussing the nature of the charge in question in (1882) 9 Q B 632 (3), Jessel M. R., observed:

1. East Wood v. McNab, (1914) 2 K B 361=83 L J K B 941=110 L T 741=12 L J R 517.
2. Manindra Chowdhury Nundy v. Secy. of State, (1911) 38 Cal 372=9 I C 311=38 I A 31 (P C).

The charge in question was for making a new street which was a charge naturally payable by the owner. The tenant is not usually made liable to any charges for the permanent improvement of the property. But this is not conclusive. Then there is another circumstance in favour of the tenant. The other charges mentioned in the covenant are annual charges; but this is a payment which is to be made once for all and is therefore not similar to the other payments which are to be thrown on the tenant.

In (1902) 1 K B 700 (4), the charge in question was also a capital charge. The covenant in that case contained the words "or in respect of the said premises or in respect thereof on the landlord and tenant." But the following observations in that case are instructive:

It appears to me that a lamentable waste of judicial time and power is often involved in examining decisions with regard to the meaning of words which with one context are capable of one meaning and with another context of another meaning. Underlying the whole matter is the consideration that we are dealing with a contract of demise between landlord and tenant and the covenant must be assumed to relate only to matters which may reasonably be supposed to have been contemplated by the parties as being within the purview of such a contract: per Collins M. R.

The authorities on the subject are in a very unsatisfactory condition. The general current of decisions has been in favour of the landlord and not in favour of restricting the meaning of such covenants: per Romer, L. J.

The general tendency of the decisions is strongly in the direction of increasing liability upon the tenant by reason of the intention now generally imputed to the covenant of enabling the landlord to receive his rent free from all deductions: Landlord and Tenant, Edn. 6, pp. 212-213.

The decision in the case should not therefore turn on the magic of a particular word or words in one covenant; what matter may be reasonably supposed to be in the contemplation of the parties at the time of the contract is to be ascertained from a conspection of all the terms of the contract. The liability for the mine cess is on both the owner and occupier. The policy of the Act is that all persons who benefit by the maintenance of the works of sanitation should bear the liability of paying the same. It is a charge of a regularly recurring nature and is incident to the occupation of the premises. It is payable in respect of the mines benefited. The covenant to pay rates, taxes, etc., in this case described these impositions as being in the nature of public demands. If the words in the covenant are to be taken as used in the same sense in which they are used in the statute, we must look to the statute which imposes the obligation on the landlord to ascertain whether it is in the nature of a public demand. S. 10, Cl. (4), Bengal Act 2 of 1912, lays down that all expenses chargeable under the section shall be recoverable as if they were arrears of land revenue. S. 3 (6) and Cl. (3) of Sch. 1, Bengal Public Demand Recovery Act (Bengal Act 3 of 1913), make these charges public demands for the purposes of that Act. The words "being in the nature of public demands" were inserted in the covenant for some purpose and some meaning must be given to it. Demand of land revenue and not demands "in the nature of land revenue" are excluded from the covenant. Public demands which are not land revenue but are recoverable as if they were arrears of land revenue can be therefore reasonably supposed to have been in the contemplation of the parties. Again the covenant about the payment of royalty contains the words "free from any deductions." The words must be given some meaning. They suggest an increase in the liability of the tenant. Mr. Bose however contends that the object of the covenant was to lay down that the tenant will have to pay the minimum royalty of Rs. 2,170 per annum whether the lessee raises sufficient quantity of coal or not. But in Cl. (1), part 5 of the lease there is a distinct provision that the minimum royalty of Rs. 2,170 shall always be paid whether the quantity mentioned in that clause in fact be raised or not.

3. Allum v. Dickinson, (1882) 9 Q B 632=52 L J Q B 190=47 L T 493=30 W R 980=47 J P 102.

4. Foulger v. Arding, (1902) 1 K B 700=71 L J K B 499=86 L T 488=50 W R 417.

It is true that in the covenant the words used are "upon the said mines" and there are no words of the type "or in respect of them." But on a consideration of all the terms of the lease, I am of opinion that the obligation cannot be limited to charges on the mines themselves but extends to charges imposed in respect of them on persons, namely landlord or tenant, and that the tenant undertook the liability to pay all charges of a recurring nature imposed by the statutes whether they are described in the statute as imposed on the mines or on the lessor or the lessee in respect of them. The lessee paid this cess without any objection for several years before the institution of the present suit. I am therefore not prepared to say that the decision of the Courts below on the point is wrong. As regards the claim for income-tax the contention of the lessor is that it is also within the covenant. For the purposes of the decision in the case I do not express any opinion on this question as the plaintiffs' claim under this head fails for want of any materials to show what amount was imposed on them under the Income-Tax Act for the demised mines only. The amount claimed by the plaintiffs as Income-tax has not been separately assessed on them by the Income-Tax authorities under the Income-Tax Act. The amount claimed in the plaint has been laid at a certain figure by the plaintiffs on calculation at a certain rate on their income from the mines. This rate is not the rate imposed on the plaintiffs' income from mines alone by the Income-tax authorities. It has been fixed not only with reference to the income from the mines but also with reference to their other source of income. The amount claimed under this head is not therefore the amount imposed by the Income-tax authorities under the Income-Tax Act in respect of the mines only. The result therefore is that both the appeals are dismissed. The parties are directed to bear their own costs in these two appeals.

Edgley, J.—In Appeal No. 856 of 1933 one of the main arguments addressed to us in favour of the appellant Company was to the effect that the road and public health cesses are charged not upon the mines but in respect of the mines, and this being the case, the company are not liable to pay the cesses under the terms of their lease. During the course of the argument learned counsel referred to certain English cases in order to show that a delicate distinction must be drawn between the expression "upon" and in "in respect of." A distinction of this nature appears to have been drawn in (1882) 9 Q B 632 (3), in which it was decided that the proportion of the expense of paying a new street assessed upon the demised house was not a rate payable by the tenant under the covenant. It was however, pointed out by Jessel, M. R., in that particular case that the pavement in question was one for the permanent improvement of the property and was a personal demand on the owner which might be enforced on his premises. In a subsequent case, (1897) 1 Q B 525 (5), in which the tenant was held liable to pay the plaintiff the amount expended by her in complying with a notice of the sanitary authority, the decision turned mainly upon a construction of the expression "duties imposed in respect of the premises" and it was held that this expression was wide enough to enable the plaintiff to succeed in the case in question. From the decision in these two cases on which learned counsel for the Bengal Coal Company mainly based his argument, it is difficult to deduce any clear principle with reference to the precise meaning of words in covenants relating to assessments. The principal authorities were however reviewed by the Court of Appeal in 1902 in (1902) 1 K B 700 (4). In that case it was pointed out by Collins, M. R. that in dealing with a contract of demise between landlord and tenant,

5. Brett v. Rogers, (1897) 1 Q B 525=66 L J Q B 287=76 L T 26=45 W R 334.

The covenant must be assumed to relate only to matters which may reasonably be supposed to have been contemplated by the parties as being within the purview of such a contract.

Romer, L. J. further pointed out that the authorities on the subject were in a very unsatisfactory condition and that the general current of decision had been in favour of the landlord and not in favour of restricting the meaning of such covenants. In the case in question the decision turned mainly upon the construction to be placed upon the expression :

'Impositions charged or imposed upon or in respect of the said premises on the landlord, tenant or occupier of the same.'

And it was held that the obligation in respect of which the suit had been brought was one within the natural meaning of the terms of the covenant and clearly within the contemplation of the parties to the lease. In the lease with reference to which these appeals arise, the lessees have clearly covenanted to pay :

All taxes, rates, assessments and impositions whatsoever being in the nature of public demand, which shall from time to time be charged, assessed or imposed upon the said mines or any part thereof by authority of the Government of India or the said local Government or otherwise, except demands for land revenue.

The question therefore, arises as to what were the payments in contemplation of the parties at the time when the lease was executed. Land revenue was clearly to be paid by the lessors but other taxes in the nature of a public demand and upon the said mines were to be paid by the lessees. The only taxes with regard to which we have been asked to adjudicate in this connection are road cess, Mines Board of Health Cess, and income-tax. No question has so far arisen with regard to any other tax and it is in fact not suggested that any other tax, besides land revenue, which has been expressly excluded, has been imposed either upon or in respect of the mines covered by the lease. At the outset I may say that, having regard to what appears to have been the intention of the parties to this lease as expressed in the language of the covenant, it would have made little practical difference even if the expression "in respect of the said mines" had been used instead of the expression "upon the said mines." The latter is the expression which appears in the covenant, but it is obvious that, although the taxes which were in contemplation of the parties might have been assessed upon the mines or upon income arising therefrom, such taxes would actually be paid in respect of the mines. The main point, therefore, seems to be whether the three taxes mentioned above are really taxes upon the mines as contemplated by the parties to the lease. The three taxes in question are all in the nature of public demands although the principles upon which they are assessed are different. To my mind, the expression "charged, assessed, or imposed upon the said mines" conveys the idea of direct and separate assessment arising from ownership of the mines or the receipt of profits therefrom and I am of opinion that, if the covenant be read as a whole, this was the meaning of the expression, which the parties had in contemplation at the time of the execution of the lease.

Learned counsel for the Bengal Coal Company admits that, in view of the preamble to the Cess Act (Bengal Act 9 of 1880) and the provisions of Ch. 5 thereof, there is some difficulty in contending that road-cess is not a tax upon the mines. The preamble clearly authorizes the levy of such a cess on immoveable property and under the provisions of Ch. 5 of the Act this tax is assessed, in the case of mines, on the average of the annual net profits thereof. Further, in the case of the Mines Board of Health Cess, it is provided in S. 10 of the Act that the cess shall be charged to the owners of mines, and to persons who receive any royalty, rent or fine, from such mines. It seems to be clear therefore that the liability to pay the road-cess and the Mines Board of Health Cess arises directly in connexion with the ownership of the mines or the receipt of income arising therefrom. These taxes are also separately assessed upon the persons concerned and they must, I think, be regarded as charges which the lessees have rendered themselves liable to pay under the terms of the covenant, and I am of opinion that the lessors have clearly contracted themselves out of any statutory liability which they would otherwise have incurred with reference to these taxes.

Different considerations apply however in the case of income-tax. With regard to this tax I am in agreement with the learned District Judge in thinking that it is a personal tax. Further, as was pointed out by Lord McNaughten in (1901) 70 L J K B 77 (6), income-tax is a tax on income. It is not meant to "be a tax on anything else; it is one tax not a collection of taxes essentially distinct." In this connexion it is argued by learned counsel for the appellants in Appeal No. 1003 of 1933, that income-tax must also be regarded as having been contemplated by the parties to the covenant, in view of the fact that mines are property and that property is one of heads of income chargeable to income-tax under S. 6, Income-tax Act (Act 11 of 1922). It must however be remembered that income-tax is assessed under S. 23 of the Act not separately in respect of the various items mentioned in S. 6, but upon "total income" of the assessee. Under S. 2 (15) of the Act the expression "total income" means the "total amount of income, profits and gains from all sources to which this Act applied computed in the manner laid down in S. 16," which latter section relates to exemptions and exclusions in determining the total income. Having regard to the provisions of the Income-tax Act with regard to assessment, it would in this particular case be impossible to separate any income-tax which might be payable upon the mine from the total amount of income-tax payable by the party concerned. The amount of the income-tax payable by a person who owns mines or derives any portion of his income therefrom is not separately assessed upon the mines and income arising therefrom but is assessed upon his total income which is determined according to certain specific directions contained in the Income-tax Act. In my view such a tax cannot be said to be a tax upon the said mines and could not have been in contemplation of the parties when the lease was executed. I therefore agree that these two appeals must be dismissed.

R.W./R.K.

Appeals dismissed.

6. London County Council v. The Attorney-General, (1901) 70 L J K B 77.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 464

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Akhil Kanta Lahiri and another—Appellants.

v.

Aswini Kanta Bhattacharji and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 270 of 1935, Decided on 13th January 1936, from appellate order of Dist. Judge, Rajshahi, D/- 18th April 1935.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 148 (o)—Decree for rent—No assignment of landlord's interest—Assignee of decree cannot execute it.

It may be taken to be a settled rule, (in spite of some amount of diversity of judicial opinion, that the provision of S. 148 (o) is a complete bar to an application for execution of a decree for rent by an assignee who has not obtained assignment of the landlord's interest, even on a simple decree for money under the Code of Civil Procedure: 1933 Cal 919 and 28 C L J 33n, Foll. [P 465 C 1]

(b) Assignment—Assignment includes assignments by law and by deeds.

An assignment must be taken to include an assignment by deed and an assignment by operation of law, as in the case of executor. [P 465 C 2]

Atul Chandra Gupta and Baidyanath Banerji—for Appellants.

C. C. Biswas and Priyanath Bhattacharji—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal has arisen out of an application for execution of decree. The application was made by three persons as executors to the estate of the late Manimukta Debya who had a life estate in certain properties. During the lifetime of Manimukta, rents due in respect of these properties which were leased out to Annada Kanta Lahiri by her, in Patni, fell in arrears, and a decree was obtained for realization of the same. A portion of the rents decreed in favour of Manimukta was realized during her lifetime, and the decretal amount which was still outstanding along with all the outstanding profits of the properties in which Manimukta had a life interest, were bequeathed to the three applicants for execution of decree with which we are concerned in this case, who were also appointed executors by the will executed by Manimukta before she died.

The application for execution as made by the legatees under the will of Manimukta, who were also the executors appointed by her will, was resisted by the sons and heirs of Annada Kanta Lahiri on the ground that the provisions contained in S. 148 (o), Ben. Ten. Act, operated as a bar to the execution as applied for. It was asserted that an application for execution of a decree for arrears of rent obtained by a landlord was not maintainable by an assignee of the decree unless the landlord's interest in the land has become and is vested in the applicant for execution. The objection so raised was overruled by the Courts below; hence this appeal. It may be taken to be a settled rule (in spite of some amount of diversity of judicial opinion) that the provision of S. 148 (o) is a complete bar to an application for execution of a decree for rent by an assignee who has not obtained assignment of the landlord's interest, even on a simple decree for money under the Code of Civil Procedure (see in this connection the decision of this Court in 54 C L J 596 (1), in which the state of authority of decisions of this Court is fully indicated). As it has been pointed by Rankin, C. J., in 37 C W N 901 (2), it would not be safe to desert the plain and natural meaning of the language of the statute upon any theory that has to be based on the supposed policy of the legislature. The intention of the law as it now stands is however clear that the only person who could be allowed to execute a decree for rent was the person who at the execution was entitled by reason of a vested landlord's interest to demand rent: 28 C L J 33n (3).

In support of the position that the application for execution was maintainable under the law, it was contended on behalf of the respondents that the application was made by executors to the estate of Manimukta Debya, who were not assignees as contemplated by S. 148 (o), Ben. Ten. Act, but were persons on whom the interest of Manimukta had devolved by operation of law, and the execution as applied for should have been allowed to proceed on the ground that the applicants were transferees by operation of law as contemplated by O. 21, R. 16, Civil P. C. It is not possible to give effect to this contention, inasmuch as an assignment must be taken to include an assignment by deed and an assignment by operation of law, as in the case of an executor. Furthermore, in the case before us the application for execution was by persons who are themselves the legatees under the will appointing them executors, and the position taken up that they cannot be taken to be assignees as contemplated by S. 148 (o), Ben. Ten. Act, is wholly insupportable. It was pointed out in support of the order passed by the Courts below that in the present case the landlord's interest so far as the Putni lease was concerned had altogether ceased to exist with the demise of Manimukta Debya, and had merged in the interest of the lessee Annadakanta Lahiri and his heirs, and had no separate existence, and that that interest could never be acquired by the transferees of the arrears of rent, the applicants for execution. The position thus indicated does not however afford any justification for the violation of the provisions of the law as contained in S. 148 (o), Ben. Ten. Act, that the only person who could execute a decree for rent who at the time of the execution was entitled to do so for the reason that the interest of the landlord had vested in him enabling him to demand rent. In our judgment, on the clear and definite provision of the law as contained in S. 148 (o), Ben. Ten. Act, the application for execution of decree in the case before us must be held to be not maintainable. The appeal is allowed; the decisions of the Courts below are set aside and the application for execution giving rise to this appeal is dismissed. There is no order as to costs in this appeal.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 465

M. C. GHOSE AND R. C. MITTER, JJ.
Abdul Khaleque Mondal and others—
Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

*Bepin Behari Bose and others—*Respondents.

Appeal No. 384 of 1934, Decided on 6th April 1936, from appellate decree of Addl. Dist. Judge, 24-Parganas, D/- 6th June 1933.

(a) Practice—New case—Party cannot set up new case absolutely inconsistent with case in plaint.

It is not open to a party to ask for relief by setting up a new case which is absolutely incon-

1. Rahimuddi Lupti v. Jogendra Kumar Sinha, (1931) 54 C L J 596.

2. Gopendra Prasad v. Ram Kishore, 1933 Cal 919=37 C W N 901=60 Cal 1181=149 I C 386.

3. Gopal Chandra Kundu v. Drastulla Sheikh, (1918) 28 C L J 33n.

1936 O/59 & 60

sistent with the case in the plaint. The test in such cases is whether the defendant will be taken by surprise. There will be no surprise if the relief not specifically claimed is consistent with the relief specifically claimed as well as with case raised by pleadings: 1916 Cal 829 (FB), Rel. on. [P 468 C 1, 2]

(b) Will—Construction—Will executed by Mahomedan in favour of his wife—Apart from rule of Mahomedan law, only life-estate held conferred upon her—Her heirs held could not claim anything whether life-estate is valid or invalid under Mahomedan law.

A Mahomedan executed a will in favour of his wife, the relevant terms of which were as follows:

"You shall as owner enjoy during your life-time all the moveable and immoveable properties described in the schedule and boundaries given below lying in village Mominpur, etc. No one shall be entitled to make any claims during your life-time to the moveable and immoveable properties to which you are appointed executrix by this will or to get a share in them or to claim any profit or income arising out of them. No one except yourself shall be entitled to realise those moneys or to take them. My sons shall not get any share or income of the aforesaid moveable and immoveable properties during your life-time; they shall get immoveable properties, due shares in them, after your death according to the Mahomedan law. During your life-time they shall not be entitled to claim any property or any share in it nor shall they be entitled to realise and to appropriate any income relating to the properties. They shall live as members of the family and get their regular food and clothing. If they do not live in the family or do not live in the same mess and remove elsewhere they shall not get their food and clothing from the estate and would not be entitled to claim it. Whatever kind of income the aforesaid moveable and immoveable properties may yield shall remain in your custody. You shall be entitled to spend the whole amount of the said income according to your will and discretion and you shall discharge the family expenses with it: no one shall be entitled to demand any account of it from you and you shall not be bound to render any account to any one and you shall not be liable for that money to any one":

Held: that on the terms of the will and apart from any rule of Mahomedan law, only a life estate was conferred upon her; [P 468 C 2]

Held further: that her heirs could not claim anything in such property for if she got a life estate which was valid according to the Mahomedan law, then heirs could not get anything as her heirs because she had not a heritable estate. If the life estate which was conferred on her by the terms of the will was an estate not recognised by the Mahomedan law then in that case the gift in favour of her was an invalid gift and the heirs' claim as her heirs could not succeed: 1929 P C 149, Rel. on.

[P 468 C 2; P 469 C 1]

Gopendra Nath Das and Benoy Kumar Mukherjee—for Appellants.

Atul Chandra Gupta and Kshitindra Nath Basu—for Respondents.

R. C. Mitter, J.—This appeal is on behalf of the plaintiffs and arises out of a suit for a declaration that they are entitled to the whole of the properties in suit and that the mortgage which defendant 1 had obtained from one Abdul Mataleb and the decree obtained therein is not binding on them. For the purpose of following controversy between the parties the following genealogy is material:

MEHER ALI (died 3-4-1908), w. KARIMANNESHA.

The property belonged to Meher Ali who died on 3rd April 1908. Just before his death, that is to say on 7th March 1908, he executed a will by which he appointed his wife Karimannessa executrix to his estate. In para. 1 of the will he states that "you shall as owner enjoy during your life-time all the moveable and immoveable properties described in the schedule and boundaries given below lying in village Mominpur, etc." In para. 3 he says "no one shall be entitled to make any claims during your life-time to the moveable and immoveable properties to which you are appointed executrix by this will or to get a share in them or to claim any profit or income arising out of them. No one except yourself shall be entitled to realise those moneys or to take them." Para. 4 of the will is in these terms:

I have at present three sons alive of whom the eldest is Abdul Mataleb Mondal, the second Abdul Rahman Mondal, and the youngest Abdul Khaleque Mondal. They shall not get any share or income of the aforesaid moveable and immoveable properties during your life-time. They shall get immoveable properties, due shares in them, after your death according to the Mahomedan law. During your lifetime they shall not be entitled to claim any property or any share in it nor shall they be entitled to realise and to appropriate any income relating to the properties. They shall live as members of the family and get their regular food and clothing. If they do not live in the family or do not live in the same mess and remove elsewhere they shall not get their food and clothing from the estate and would not be entitled to claim it.

Then in the subsequent paragraphs the testator recites that he had three daughters and that they had given up all their claims to his properties and that they would not be entitled to any share of the properties left by him. Para. 9 of the will is as follows :

Whatever kind of income the aforesaid moveable and immoveable properties may yield shall remain in your custody. You shall be entitled to spend the whole amount of the said income according to your will and discretion and you shall discharge the family expenses with it ; no one shall be entitled to demand any account of it from you and you shall not be bound to render any account to any one and you shall not be liable for that money to any one.

Para. 10 is in these terms :

After my death you shall out of the income of the properties left by me spend such sum as you think proper for my spiritual benefit.

Para. 14 is in these terms :

If money is required for any particularly necessary business and if the income of the estate is not sufficient to meet the requirement you shall be entitled to do the business by mortgage or sale of any property included in the estate of any share thereof as you think proper, etc.;

and Para. 15 provides for the case of acquisition by the Government of any property under the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act. It says that Karimannessa would be entitled to take the compensation money that might be awarded on such acquisition. Shortly after the death of Meher Ali, Abdul Mataleb, his eldest son, borrowed money from defendant 1 mortgaging the 1/3rd share of the properties which belonged to his father Meher Ali. This was on 5th July 1910. This transaction was followed by two other mortgages executed by Abdul Mataleb in favour of defendant 1 on 29th September 1910 and 21st January 1911 respectively. Defendant 1 instituted a suit on his mortgages and has recovered a decree. It is just after this event that the present suit was instituted by Abdul Khaleque, the youngest son of Meher Ali and the heirs and legal representatives of the other son Abdul Rahaman Mondal and also by the daughters of Meher Ali. This suit was brought in the year 1930 after the death of Karimannessa which took place in the year 1922. In the plaint the plaintiffs recited the fact of the aforesaid will executed by Meher Ali and said that although the will was in favour of the heirs of Meher Ali the will was validated by the consent given by all the heirs of Meher Ali after his death. The whole of the plaint proceeds upon the footing that Meher Ali died testate and the will had effectively disposed of all his properties. Then in the plaint it is stated that according to the rules of Mahomedan law Karimannessa got by the will an absolute property in the subject-matter of the suit. It then recites the death of Karimannessa and states that the plaintiffs are the heirs of Karimannessa and it is in that character they instituted the suit. They say that Abdul Mataleb according to the will did not get any interest in the property because an absolute interest was in effect conferred upon Karimannessa by the terms of the will and they further state that by the mortgages defendant 1 had acquired nothing. On these allegations the plaintiffs instituted the suit for the declaration that the mortgages executed by Abdul Mataleb in favour of defendant 1 did not pass any title to the property and that the plaintiffs are not affected either by the mortgages or by the decree obtained thereon by defendant 1.

Both the Courts below have dismissed the suit. Mr. Dass appearing on behalf of the plaintiffs-appellants urges before us that although by the terms of the will a life estate was conferred by Meher Ali on his wife Karimannessa under the rules of Mahomedan law, Karimannessa became entitled to the estate absolutely. For the purpose of supporting this contention he says that a life estate is unknown by the Hanafi Law by which the parties in the present case are governed and if a life estate is conferred by a will or by a gift inter vivos the Hanafi Jurists consider it to be the gift of the corpus subject to a condition limiting the enjoyment for life; and says Mr. Dass that the condition is always regarded as void by the Hanafi Jurists. He accordingly says that by the aforesaid rule of Mahomedan law what is in terms the gift of a life estate is in reality an absolute estate. This is how he puts his first part of his argument. His second case is that even if it be held that the gift in favour of Karimannessa was invalid then there was intestacy and Abdul Mataleb was entitled to 7/36 share and the mortgages and the mortgage decree which defendant 1 has obtained against the heirs of Abdul Mataleb can only operate upon 7/36th share of the properties in suit. We can at once overrule the second contention urged by Mr. Dass. This is not the case which is pleaded in the plaint. The plaint proceeds upon the footing that Meher Ali died not intestate but testate. The will is recited. Then there is a further recital that after the death of Meher Ali all the heirs of Meher Ali assented to the will, and it is stated that Karimannessa obtained under the will an absolute estate and that the title on which the plaintiffs are suing is stated to be on the footing that they are the heirs of Karimannessa and not the heirs of Meher Ali. We hold that it is not open to the plaintiffs to come in and ask for relief on the footing that Meher Ali died intestate. That would be certainly a new case which is absolutely inconsistent with the case in the plaint. The principle governing such cases are formulated by Sir Asutosh Mookerjee in 22 C L J 419 (1), at p. 451. The passage is as follows:

The only other question for consideration is whether a declaration should be granted in the suit as framed. Here, I think, the Court should be guided by well settled principles now embodied in R. 7, O. 7 of the Code of 1908. The principle is best stated in the words of Lord Erskine in (1806) 13 Ves 114 (2). The rule is that if the bill contains charges putting facts in issue that are material the plaintiff is entitled to relief which those facts will sustain under the general prayer; but he cannot desert specific relief prayed and, under the general prayer, ask specific relief of another description, unless the facts and circumstances charged by the bill will consistently with the rules of the Court maintain that relief. This formulation of the rule, it may be parenthetically observed, is attributed per incuriam to Lord Eldon by Baron Parke in 2 M I A 353 (3). In the application of this salutary rule, the test is whether the defendant will be taken by surprise: 3 Russel 171 (4), and there can be no surprise, if the deficient relief not specifically claimed but supplied as the Courts think just, is consistent with the relief specifically claimed as well as with the case raised by the pleadings: (1878) 10 Ch D 502 (5). This rule has been repeatedly recognised and approved by the Judicial Committee, 2 M I A 353 (3), 31 Cal 614 (6) and 27 All 325 (7). The decision in 35 Cal 189 (8) is not really opposed to this view, and only illustrates the position that to entitle plaintiff to judgment under the claim for general relief, different from that specifically claimed, the allegations relied upon must not only be such as to afford a ground for relief claimed, but they must have been introduced for the purpose of showing a right to relief and not to the mere purpose of corroborating the plaintiff's right to the specific relief claimed.

If the plaintiffs had put forward an alternative claim based on intestacy of Meher Ali, it would have been open to defendant 1 to meet that case by showing that the daughters of Meher Ali had relinquished their shares. It would be unjust, in our opinion, in these circumstances to rob defendant 1 of that specified defence by allowing the plaintiffs now in this Court to base their claim on the footing that there was no effective will by Meher Ali and that he died intestate. So on this ground we overrule the second contention urged before us by Mr. Dass. Regarding the first point the position seems to us to be this: By taking into consideration all the material terms in the will it seems to us that there was a gift of the income of the properties in favour of Karimannessa by Meher Ali. At least when this will came up for consideration before this Court on a previous occasion that was the view taken by this Court of this particular will. No doubt in that case the parties were not the same as in the present case, but we mention that case because our view of the terms of the will agree with that which was taken by a Division Bench of this Court. There cannot at any rate be any doubt that only a life estate was intended to be conferred upon her. In fact Mr. Dass admitted that on the terms of the will, and apart from any rule of Mahomedan law, only a life estate was conferred upon Karimannessa. If that be so Mr. Dass's clients are in a difficulty.

1. Hemendra Nath Roy v. Upendra Narain Roy, 1916 Cal 829=32 I C 437=22 O L J 419=20 C W N 446=43 Cal 743 (F B).
2. Hiren v. Mill, (1806) 13 Ves 114=33 E R 287.
3. Cockerell v. Dicken, (1837-41) 2 M I A 353=3 Moo P C 98=1 Mont D & D 45.
4. Stevens v. Guppy, (1826) 3 Russel 171=6 L J (N S) Ch 164.

5. Cargill v. Bower, (1878) 10 Ch D 502=47 L J Ch 649=38 L T 779.
6. Durga Prosad v. Bhajanlal, (1904) 31 Cal 614=31 I A 122 (P C).
7. Gopi Narain v. Banshidhar, (1905) 27 All 325=32 I A 123 (P C).
8. Wallihan v. Joggeswar, (1908) 35 Cal 189=35 I A 38 (P C).

In the case in 56 I A 213 (9), where the facts were almost similar to the facts of the present case, their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council put the case in an alternative form. They stated that if a life estate conferred by a will or a gift is an estate recognised by Mahomedan law then the plaintiffs claiming as heirs of the donee in that case could not claim anything because the donee had only a life estate. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee further stated that if the life estate is not recognised by the Mahomedan law then the donee did not get anything, and the plaintiffs claiming as heirs of the donee got nothing. In that view of the matter the donee herself got nothing by the will. The facts of the present case are precisely similar, as we have stated above, to the facts of the suit before the Judicial Committee. Here the only case, which is in the plaint, that the plaintiffs are the heirs of Karimannessa, if Karimannessa got a life estate which was valid according to the Mahomedan law then the plaintiffs cannot get anything as her heirs because she had not a heritable estate. If the life estate which was conferred on Karimannessa by the terms of the will is an estate not recognised by the Mahomedan law then in that case the gift in favour of Karimannessa was an invalid gift and the plaintiffs' claim as heirs of Karimannessa cannot succeed. In this view of the matter we do not think that the plaintiffs are entitled to any relief. The result is that this appeal fails and is dismissed with costs.

M. C. Ghose, J.—I agree.

K.S./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

9. Amjad Khan v. Ashraf Khan, 1929 P C 149 = 116 I C 405 = 56 I A 213 = 4 Luck 305 (P C).

* A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 469

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Raikhon Boro and others—Appellants.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 978 of 1935, Decided on 19th May 1936.

* Evidence Act (1872), S. 54 — Prosecution bringing evidence of previous conduct of similar character to suggested crime — S. 54 is not infringed — Evidence pointing to directly similar conduct is admissible.

In cases of crime where it is thought desirable by the prosecution to bring evidence of previous conduct of similar character to the suggested crime, before the jury, the intention of S. 54 is not infringed and evidence pointing to directly similar conduct is admissible. S. 54 refers to specific evidence of bad character not confined to acts similar to the crime, which was being investigated, which may influence the jury on the question of motive which is dealt with the same conviction. Such a motive must be the same kind of motive that in all probability actuated the mind of the accused or may have actuated his mind in committing the crime for which he is being tried.

[P 470 C1]

Shudhansu Sekhar Mukherjee — for Appellant.

Khundkar and Bireswar Chatterjee — for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—The four appellants here were tried before the Assistant Sessions Judge of the Assam Valley Districts (Gauhati) on charges of abduction and rape. The appeals were admitted by our predecessors on this Bench. The main, I may almost say, the only argument advanced on behalf of the appellants was that the learned Judge misdirected the jury in relation to the admission of certain evidence with regard to an earlier incident in which these four appellants were concerned.

The girl, who was the victim of the attack, had been sent by her parents to work off a debt by acting as a domestic servant to appellant 1 who was a married man and before the debt was discharged under the arrangement, she ran away from appellant 1's house, as she told her parents when she arrived that appellant 1 was bothering her to marry him. She stayed in her parents' house for a short time and then appellant 1 turned up one day, accompanied by his friends appellants 2, 3 and 4, and forcibly took her away back to his house. But she was rescued by her father and some of his friends. Subsequently, another attempt was made which was more successful, because the four appellants turned up once again, dragged the wretched girl back to Budang, appellant 1's house, formally asked her to say "yes" or "no" on the question of this marriage, and when she refused to accept Budang, they took her away, according to her story, into a patch of jungle and in a very cold-blooded manner proceeded to illtreat her by means of rape. There was other evidence, e. g. the medical evidence which certainly showed that she had been interfered with. But the complaint against the summing up of the learned Judge which, I may say once again this morning, as this is the second charge of his with which we have been dealing, was a most excellent one, is that he admitted the evidence of first carrying off of the girl; and then it is argued that if it is true that the appellant Budang with his friends came and behaved in this way, he certainly ought not to have admitted such evidence to the jury because it might have prejudiced them as it is evidence of Budang's bad character and therefore cannot be admitted under S. 54, Evidence Act. The answer to this contention seems to me to be that in cases of crime where it is thought desirable by the prosecution to bring evidence of previous conduct of a similar character to the suggested crime before the jury, the intention of S. 54 is not infringed, because that section as I understand it, refers to specific evidence of bad character not confined to acts similar to the crime which was being investigated which may influence the jury on the question of motive which is dealt with in the same connexion and such a motive, of course, must be the same kind of motive that, in all probability actuated the mind of the accused or may have actuated his mind in committing the crime for which he is being tried. There is no doubt that for a long time both in England and in India, and I should imagine in all parts of the British Empire where our principles of criminal jurisprudence are administered, this admission of evidence pointing to directly similar conduct has always been admitted. If it were not admitted, it is quite certain that a great many criminals would escape justice. In these circumstances, we reject these appeals, as we cannot accept this argument. We do not propose to interfere with the sentences which were imposed upon the appellants for a particularly revolting type of offence.

Henderson, J.—I agree.

R.M./R.K. Appeals rejected.

 A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 470

R. C. MITTER, J.

Prosanna Kumari Mazumdar—Plaintiff—Petitioner.

v.

Tripura Charan Chowdhury and another—Defendants—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 186 of 1936, Decided on 14th May 1936, from decree of Sub-Divisional Munsif, Patiya, D/- 13.11.1935.

* Limitation Act (1908), Art. 64—Debt due on promissory note — Settlement of account between debtor and creditor—Endorsement to the effect that certain amount is found due signed on back of promissory note by debtor — Endorsement amounts to account stated—Suit for recovery of amount is governed by Art. 64.

Where on settlement of an account in respect of a debt on a promissory note a certain amount is found due on a particular date on calculation of interest at a reduced rate, and an endorsement to that effect made on the back of the promissory note is signed by the debtor, such an endorsement amounts to an account stated between the parties and a suit for recovery of the amount alleged to be due is governed by Art. 64. Such a suit is not one based on the promissory note and the cause of action for the suit arises on the settlement of the accounts as shown by the endorsement: 1934 P C 144 and 147, Rel. on. [P 472 C 2]

Narendra Kumar Das and Durgesh Prosad Das—for Petitioner.

Anil Kumar Das Gupta—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—This Rule has been obtained by the plaintiff in a suit to recover a sum of money. It has been dismissed by the Court of first instance on the ground of limitation. The suit was instituted on 17th July 1935. The plaintiff's case in the plaint is that the defendant borrowed money from him on 11th January 1932 on a promissory note executed on the said date. In the promissory note there is a stipulation to pay interest at the rate of 3 pies a day. Then the plaint recites that on 3rd July 1933 there was a settlement of accounts between the plaintiff and the defendant, and the dues of the plaintiff were calculated at a rate of interest which was not the rate of interest provided for in the promissory note. The rate of interest on which the calculation proceeded was at the rate of one anna per month. On that date the sum of Rs. 137-8-0 was found due from the defendant to the plaintiff. Rs. 100 on account of the principal and Rs. 37-8-0 on account of interest. Then the plaintiff says in his plaint that he is entitled to claim on the basis of this settled account and he added interest to the sum of Rs. 100 at the rate of one anna per month. He dates his cause of action to be this settlement of account and says expressly in his plaint that the cause of action arose on 3rd July 1933, the date of this settlement. For the purpose of supporting his case he put in the promissory note because on the back of it the following is the endorsement over the signature of the defendant :

Interest is calculated at the rate of 12 pies per month from the date of the pro-note to 3rd July, that is for one year five months and twenty-two days. Rs. 137-8-0 is found due, that is Rs. 37-8-0 for interest and Rs. 100 being the principal.

Then there is the endorsement over the signature of the defendant "that the sum of Rs. 137-8-0 remains due (बाकी रहिला)." This endorsement on the back of the promissory note was not stamped. The learned S. C. C. Judge proceeded upon the basis as if the suit was a suit on the promissory note. Then he said that the suit was filed admittedly beyond three years from the date of the promissory note and the loan, and it would be barred unless the endorsement on the back of the promissory note could be proved as an acknowledgment of liability. He said that the endorsement on the back of the note is an acknowledgment of liability within the meaning of Art. 1-A, Stamp Act, and, inasmuch as the said endorsement has not been stamped with a one anna stamp, the endorsement cannot be admitted in evidence, by virtue of the provisions of S. 35, Stamp Act. It is not necessary in this case for me to decide whether the endorsement on the back of the promissory note is an acknowledgment within the meaning of Art. 1-A, Stamp Act, for in my view the Court below in deciding the question of limitation has proceeded wholly upon a misconception of the plaintiff's case as made in the plaint. The plaintiff's suit is not based on the promissory note. The plaintiff expressly states that his cause of action arose upon the settlement account as endorsed upon the back of the promissory note over the defendants' signature, and he dates his cause of action not from the date of the promissory note but from the date of the said settlement of account, and further states that the settlement account as contained on the back of the promissory note is his cause of action, that is to say he states that he is entitled to sue upon an account stated, the said account being stated on the back of the promissory note.

It is therefore necessary to consider whether his suit as framed is barred by limitation or not. If the endorsement on the back of the promissory note brings the case within Art. 64, Lim. Act, the suit is clearly within time because the suit has been instituted within three years of 3rd July 1933. In my judgment the case comes within Art. 64, Lim. Act, and in the view which I am taking I am supported by two recent decisions of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 38 C W N 813 (1) and the case in 38 C W N 961 (2). The first case was a case instituted by the plaintiff for sums of money said to be due to him on account of his salary. The plaintiff in that case was an assistant of the defendant firm. He was employed in the year 1913 and at the time of his employment his salary was not fixed, but he withdrew moneys on his own account from time to time, during the course of 15 years, when he was in service. At the time when he ceased to be in service, Mr. Rodrigues, the managing partner of the firm, gave him a letter in which the accounts were stated, that is to say his salary was fixed and calculated and the amounts drawn by him from time to time taken into account, and it was stated in that letter that a certain amount was due to the plaintiff. This account was given to the plaintiff within three years of his suit. As has been pointed out in the latter case I have referred to, Lord Wright observed that in this case, namely the case in 38 C W N 813 (1), the figures were taken from the account books of the firm which contained entries only on one side, namely the debit side, showing different amounts drawn by the plaintiff on different occasions on his own account, but the credit side, namely that where his pay was to be included, was left blank inasmuch as his pay was not settled. In the course of his judgment Lord Atkin pointed out that there were two classes of accounts stated. The second class is a class where there are on the account book itself cross demands between the plaintiff and the defendant and the cross demands are set off against each other. That is what is usually called accounts stated and the account so stated itself furnishes a cause of action, the set off on one item against another is the consideration to pay by one party to the other the balance found on settlement of account as due from one to the other. The other class of account stated is that where there are no cross demands or set

1. Siqueria v. Noronha, 1934 P C 144=151 I C 90=38 C W N 813 (P C).

2. Firm Bishnu Chand v. Girdhari Lal, 1934 P C 147=150 I C 6=61 I A 273=38 C W N 961=56 All 376 (P C).

offs. At p. 816 of the report, Lord Atkin makes the following observation with regard to this class of account stated. He says this:

Their Lordships think that what has been forgotten is that there are two forms of account stated. An account stated may only take the form of a mere acknowledgment of a debt, and in those circumstances, though it is quite true it amounts to a promise and the existence of a debt may be inferred, that can be rebutted, and it may very well turn out that there is no real debt at all, and in those circumstances there would be no consideration and no binding promise.

Then he deals with the other form of account stated, which I have already referred to above. When at the settlement of account a balance is struck and signed by the debtor, and it only takes the form of what Lord Atkin calls an acknowledgment, it is still an account stated, because, as Lord Atkin puts it, it amounts to a promise to pay the amount found due on the account. It itself furnishes a cause of action and the only thing is that it would be open to any party to lead evidence by showing that in fact there was no debt. That is the only difference between the first and second form where there are cross demands, and cross demands are set off against each other. In the second of the Privy Council cases, namely the case in 38 C W N 961 (2), Lord Wright pointed out that there can be account stated within the meaning of Art. 64, Lim. Act, where there are no cross demands between the plaintiff and the defendant in the strictest sense of the term. He says that where the relationship between the parties is that of a creditor and debtor and a loan is advanced by the creditor to the debtor either in one lump or on different occasions and if there is payment from time to time by the debtor and after certain intervals, the credit side and the debit side are squared up and the amount found due is calculated by addition and subtraction and the final result is stated and the debtor signs it, it would come within the meaning of Art. 64, Lim. Act. At p. 967 of the report there are the observations which are relevant to the present case:

Indeed, the essence of an account stated is not the character of the items on one side or the other, but the fact that there are cross items of account and that the parties mutually agree to the several amounts of each and, by treating the items so agreed on the one side as discharging the items on the other side pro tanto, go on to agree that the balance only is payable.

Then there is this passage which is very important:

Such a transaction is in truth bilateral, and creates a new debt and a new cause of action. There mutual promises, the one side agreeing to accept the amount of the balance of the debt as true (because there must in such cases be at least, in the end, a creditor to whom the balance is due) and to pay it, the other side agreeing the entire debt as at a certain figure and then agreeing that it has been discharged to such and such an extent, so that there will be a complete satisfaction on the payment of the agreed balance. Hence there is mutual consideration to support the promise on either side and to constitute the new cause of action.

Relying upon these two principles formulated by these two judgments I do hold that the plaintiff had an independent cause of action accruing in his favour on 3rd July 1933. The endorsement on the back of the promissory note must be taken as an account stated between the parties, and as the suit has been brought within three years, it is within time. I therefore overrule the decision of the lower Court on the point of limitation. Inasmuch as there has not been any trial on the merits I remand the case in order that the other points raised by the parties may be gone into. The result is that the rule is made absolute: cost one gold mohur to abide the final result.

R.M./R.K.

Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 472

COSTELLO AND PANCKRIDGE, JJ.

Shamlal Singh—Plaintiff—Appellant.
v.

Hiru Singh—Defendant—Respondent.

Appeal No. 93 of 1934, Decided on 20th November 1935, in Suit No. 94 of 1930.

(a) Hindu Law—Partition—Agreement to partition pleaded—Burden of proving alteration in status lies on defendant.

Where in a suit for partition the plaintiff's case is that the plaintiff and the defendant remained throughout a joint undivided Hindu family, till the date of the suit and the defendant pleads a previous partition by agreement but admits continuity of the joint family so far as externals are concerned right up to the date of suit, the burden of establishing that the status of parties was altered by the terms of the agreement, falls on the defendant. [P 474 C 1]

(b) Hindu Law—Partition—Agreement to separate must clearly indicate intention to separate and hold what was joint family property till date of agreement in defined shares as separate owners.

There is no doubt that a joint undivided Hindu family can cease to be such and members of it can become separate merely by an agreement to that effect. But any such agreement must clearly indicate on the face of it an intention to separate and to hold the property up to that time in defined shares as separate owners. If on the face of it the agreement is clear and unambiguous and it manifests the intention of the parties to separate, then nothing more is necessary to bring about an alteration of the status of the persons who are the parties to that agreement. [P 474 C 2]

(c) Deed—Construction—Agreement must be construed as whole.

Every agreement must be looked at as a whole, and for the purpose of understanding and interpreting the terms of any one clause it is right and proper that the Court should look at the rest of the provisions of the instrument and construe the agreement as a whole.

[P 474 C 2]

Sudhir Ray and S. C. Mitter—for Appellant.

S. M. Bose, B. C. Ghose and S. P. Choudhury—for Respondent.

Costello, J.—In the suit out of which this appeal arises the plaintiff, who is now the appellant before us, was seeking partition of certain properties which were family properties belonging to the plaintiff's father, Ramgopal Singh and after his death, to the plaintiff and his two brothers. The defendant is the half brother of the plaintiff and the plaintiff's case was that he and the defendant Hiru Singh together with another brother Kissen Singh formed a joint undivided Hindu family, Kissen Singh was the full brother of Hiru Singh those two being the sons of the second wife of Ramgopal. Ramgopal died on 11th June 1928, and Kissen Singh on 11th November 1928. The only point which was argued in the suit is the question whether or not the three brothers, Sham Singh, Hiru Singh and Kissen Singh, formed a joint undivided Hindu family at the time of the death of Kissen Singh, that is to say, on 11th November 1928. The plaintiff's father, Ramgopal had five brothers and in the year 1926 a suit was brought by the sons of one of these brothers against Ramgopal and his three sons for partition of what was alleged to be the family property. In that suit Kissen Singh was represented by a guardian-ad-litem as he was under age. That suit was still pending at the time when Ramgopal died on 11th June 1928. On 3rd September 1928, there was a consent decree made in that suit and that consent decree embodied certain terms of settlement which had been arrived at between the parties to the suit of 1926. The case in the Court below and in this Court really falls to be determined by reference to the terms of settlement embodied in the consent decree of 3rd September 1928, and the matter which we have to decide is confined to a very small compass, by reason of the fact that it has been conceded on behalf of the defendant-respondent in this appeal that the family of Ramgopal including of course the plaintiff and the defendant and Kissen Singh did constitute a joint, undivided Hindu family up to the time when the consent decree was made on 3rd September 1928, and it has further been conceded on behalf of the defendant that no alteration was made after the passing of the consent decree as regards the manner and method of living of the family of Sham Singh, Hiru Singh and Kissen Singh up to the time of the death of the latter on 11th November 1928 or, indeed, as between Sham Singh and Hiru Singh upto the time when the present suit was instituted on 11th January 1930.

The plaintiff's case, therefore, as argued before us is a simple one, for he says that the family of Ramgopal was and remained throughout a joint undivided Hindu family. In those circumstances the plaintiff upon a partition as between himself and Hiru Singh is entitled to one-half of the joint family properties. It was admitted in the Court below and it has been categorically admitted before us that if the plaintiff and the defendant do constitute a joint Hindu family then the position is that each of the brothers Sham Singh and Hiru Singh is entitled to one-half of the family properties. If on the other hand, by reason of any event which has happened, Shamlal and Hiru Singh ceased to be a joint Hindu family and became separate in estate, then the plaintiff would only be entitled to one-third of the family property and the defendant Hiru Singh, as the full brother of the deceased Kissen Singh, as such, his heir, would be entitled to two-thirds of the family property. There is therefore no dispute whatever as to the effect of the decision of the Court concerning the question whether this family was joint or was not joint at the time when this suit was brought.

By reason of the admissions on the questions of fact which I have already indicated, all we are concerned with is to consider and give our opinion as to what was the effect of the terms of settlement arrived at between the parties in the 1926 suit and embodied in the consent decree of 3rd September 1928. The only clauses in the terms of settlement which are material for our present purpose are Cls. 26 and 32. The rest of the provisions of the terms of settlement have only been referred to in an endeavour on the part of the appellant and the respondent before us to bring some light to bear upon the real meaning of Cl. 26. Having regard to the admissions which were made on behalf of the defendant-respondent concerning the continuity, so far as externals are concerned, of the joint undivided Hindu family with which we are concerned, the burden of establishing that the status of the parties was altered by the terms of the consent decree of 3rd September 1930, falls on the defendant-respondent and he has to satisfy us, on the provisions of Cl. 26, that there was manifested on the part of the sons of Ramgopal a definite, clear and unequivocal intention to change their status and to bring about what is frequently called a disruption of the joint undivided Hindu family which upto that time, they undoubtedly were. Cl. 26 reads as follows: "The sons of Ramgopal Singh are entitled to the following properties and income thereof will be divided by them equally." Then follows a list or catalogue of various properties. In Cl. 27 it is stated: "The defendant, Sham Singh, alone is entitled to the following properties." There was mention of one bigha of land with garden and pucca building near Darjipar's Lane, Gowari Krishnanagore.

It is argued on behalf of the defendant that the fact that Cl. 26 states that the income of the properties therein mentioned will be divided among the sons of Ramgopal Singh indicates that it was the intention of these three brothers thenceforward to cease to be an undivided family and to divide up the properties mentioned in Cl. 26 into three equal shares and to enjoy those properties in severalty. The appellant prays in aid the provisions of Cl. 27 as providing an antithesis as regards the properties therein mentioned and thus emphasizing and reinforcing the jointness indicated by Cl. 26. So on the one hand we have it argued on behalf of the defendant-respondent that

Cl. 26 indicates an equivocal intention of breaking up of the undivided Hindu family on behalf of the plaintiff appellant, it having been argued that reading Cl. 26 in conjunction with Cl. 27 shows that it was intended that the three brothers would still remain joint though they were to enjoy the income in separate shares.

There has been a great deal of controversy touching the law which is applicable in a matter of this kind and a great many authorities have been cited before us particularly on behalf of the plaintiff-appellant. In my opinion no difficulty whatever arises as regards the law applicable to this case. There is no doubt that a joint undivided Hindu family can cease to be such and members of it can become separate merely by an agreement to that effect. But any such agreement must clearly indicate on the face of it an intention to separate and to hold the property which was joint family property up to that time in defined shares as separate owners. If on the face of it the agreement is clear and unambiguous and it manifests the intention of the parties to separate, then nothing more is necessary to bring about an alteration of the status of the persons who are the parties to that agreement. The defendant-respondent in these proceedings would have us accept his contention that the language of Cl. 26 is such as to manifest a definite intention on the part of the sons of Ramgopal Singh to cease to be joint and thenceforward to become separate, and in support of that contention we have been referred to the provisions of Cl. 32 of the terms of settlement.

Mr. S. M. Bose has urged that an agreement of this character like every other agreement must be looked at as a whole, and for the purpose of understanding and interpreting the terms of any one clause it is right and proper that we should look at the rest of the provisions of the instrument and construe the agreement as a whole. No exception can be taken to that statement as a proposition of law. Mr. Bose has argued on behalf of the defendant-respondent that the scheme set up by the terms of settlement was broadly speaking of this nature. By Cls. 2 and 3 it was agreed that the sons of Hargopal Singh who were the opposite parties in the suit of 1926 should divide up certain properties mentioned in Cl. 2 and they should become separate and cease to form a joint undivided Hindu family, and a similar provision as regards the sons of Ramgopal is contained in Cl. 26. Then following upon that broad differentiation between the sons of Har-gopal on the one hand and the sons of Ramgopal on the other, there was a general provision in Cl. 32, which was applicable to both sides. Accordingly, says Mr. Bose, we find that there is a provision in Cl. 32 for the destination of the title deeds of the lands which would be allocated to each party in severalty and there are provisions relating to the custody of the title deeds, in case some of the properties would remain joint.

Mr. Bose then goes on to say that the word 'joint' as used in Cl. 32 had no reference to the estate of a Mitakshara undivided Hindu family, but merely had reference to a state of things which would exist if for the purposes of their own or for mutual convenience, any member of either branch of those families chose to enjoy the properties allotted to them, jointly in fact if not jointly in law. This interpretation is indicated, says Mr. Bose, by the last sentence of Cl. 32 which says:

If such oldest member sells his share in the said property to which the said title deeds will relate he will make over the title deeds to the oldest of the remaining joint members.

Mr. Bose says that that cannot have any application to a condition of jointness under the Mitakshara Law, because no member of a Mitakshara joint family can sell his share in law, and therefore it can only have application to a situation where there was jointness in fact. Therefore says Mr. Bose, Cl. 32, so far as it indicates anything at all for our present purpose, certainly sheds light on the meaning of Cl. 26, and indicates that it was the intention of the sons of Ramgopal to cease to be joint in legal sense, even though they might for their own purposes decide to remain joint in fact. We have however come to the conclusion that the provisions of Cl. 26 are not such as to enable us to say that there is a clear, unequivocal and definite manifestation of intention on the part of the sons of Ramgopal to put an end to the condition of jointness in law which admittedly existed up to 3rd September 1923, the date on which the agreement was presented. We are more-over of opinion that the provisions contained in Cl. 32 are not sufficiently explicit and unambiguous, or not so free from ambiguity as to enable us to say that they were of any material assistance to the Court in construing Cl. 26. In these circumstances, it being admitted by the defendant-respondent that the whole of this case rests upon the contention that the plaintiff and his brothers ceased to be joint by reason of the terms of Cl. 26, we must come to the conclusion that this appeal should be allowed. We are unable, with all respect to the learned Judge, to accept the view which he took that there was a sufficient indication that these parties by agreement had changed their status from that of a joint undivided Hindu family to that of individuals holding family properties in severalty.

The appeal is allowed with costs, and the decision of the Court below will be varied in the manner following, namely that part of it which declares that there will be a decree for partition by metes and bounds of the immoveable properties, i. e., the properties referred to in para. 26 of the terms of settlement will stand, but in place of the declaration of the share of the defendant as two-thirds and of the plaintiff one-third, there will be a declaration by this Court that the share of the defendant is one-half and that of the plaintiff one-half. There will be a declaration that the share of the defendant in those properties is one-half and of the plaintiff one-half and also in the property mentioned in Cl. 17 of the plaint which will be included in the partition. It is further declared as stated in the judgment of the learned Judge at p. 167 of the paper book that there will be an enquiry as to the moveable property of the family which was not included in the consent decree and that there will be an enquiry as to the rents and profits realised by the defendant up to the time of the decree of this suit. The enquiry should apply to all other properties of the family. The costs of the enquiry will abide the result of it. We think that it will be reasonable and fair to say that the plaintiff will get one day's costs of the suit from the defendant and the costs for three days of the trial will come out of the estate. The plaintiff will be entitled to get costs of this appeal from the defendant.

Panckridge, J.—I agree. It is common ground that the sons of Ramgopal Singh continued to be members of a joint Mitakshara family upto 3rd September 1928.

Accordingly it was for the defendant to satisfy the Court that that state of things was put an end to by the terms of settlement put in on that day. We have had the advantage of exhaustive argument on the subject of the proper construction of those terms and, in my opinion, the highest, at which the defendant's case can be put, is that the terms are ambiguous. That being so, it is permissible to scrutinise the conduct of the parties to see if such conduct throws any light upon the true character of the agreement at which they arrived. It is admitted that after the consent decree, the three sons continued to live exactly in the same fashion as they had done prior to the decree when they were admittedly members of a joint Mitakshara Hindu family. It is pointed out that Kissen Singh only survived for 2½ months after the making of the decree. Having regard to this, and having regard to the fact that he was a minor, it would not be reasonable to expect any conduct on his part which would support the defendant's contention. That is true. But it must not be forgotten that the defendant himself did not alter his way of life for a considerable period after the consent decree. It is no one's case that the arrangement was that Kissen Singh should leave the joint family and that his half brother and full brother should continue as joint members of it. In these circumstances it appears to me that the behaviour of Hiru Singh upto the date of the initiation of this suit is a matter which must be taken into consideration and that it is inconsistent with the case of separation in September 1928.

With regard to Cl. 32 of the terms of settlement, upon which considerable reliance has been placed by the learned counsel for the respondent, the position appears to me to be as follows: The clause contemplates two classes of property, firstly, property which under the terms of settlement is to be physically partitioned as soon as possible, and secondly, the property which although it has ceased to be part of a joint Mitakshara estate, is, none the less to be possessed by the owners as tenants-in-common. Among the properties which by the consent decree are allotted to the sons of Hargopal there are properties which answer to each of these descriptions. I know of no canon of construction, nor do I find anything in the terms of settlement, which compels me to hold that all the properties covered by the terms of settlement must fall into one or other of the two clauses which I have mentioned. In my opinion, Cl. 32 is not inconsistent with an intention on the part of the sons of Ramgopal that they should remain joint as Mitakshara owners of the properties allotted to them by the terms of the settlement.

I have no more to say on the merits of the suit. But there is one aspect of the matter upon which I desire to make some observations. This appeal furnishes an example of what frequently happens on the Original Side of this Court, namely of terms of settlement being put in which are so carelessly and so ambiguously drafted that in fact they settle nothing, but merely give rise to fresh disputes and further expense. I have little doubt that if the terms of settlement had been properly and regularly submitted to learned counsel on both sides for settlement by them jointly, the result would have been a document which would have expressed the intention of the sons of Ramgopal and Hargopal beyond all possible doubt. The very phraseology which was employed in the terms of settlement and the mistakes in grammar contained in it, indicate that attention was not bestowed on that document. I have no more to add except to say that I agree with my lord in the decree and the order passed.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 476

MCNAIR, J.

Surput Sing and others—Plaintiffs.

v.

Maharaj Bahadur Sing—Defendant.

Suit No. 1533 of 1935, Decided on 15th November 1935.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 37, Rr. 2 and 3—Suit on promissory note—Jewellery pledged as security for loan—Leave under O. 2, R. 2 to reserve rights as pledgees sought by plaintiff—Defence re-payment—Leave to defend suit allowed on furnishing security for costs.

In a suit on a promissory note the plaintiff referred to the pledges in respect of the jewellery for payment of money due in respect of the promissory note but asked leave under O. 2, R. 2 to reserve his right as such pledgee. The defendant applied for leave to defend on the ground that since the execution of the promissory note various amounts had been paid in satisfaction and that upon proper account being taken it would be found that the amount claimed was in excess of the amount due:

Held: that leave to defend be granted on the defendant giving securities for costs only: Abrey v. Cruz, (1870) 5 C P 37 and 1928 Cal 123, Disting. [P 477 C 2]

N. C. Chatterjee and S. R. Bachwat—for Plaintiffs.

S. R. Das Gupta—for Defendant.

Order.—In this suit the defendant applies for leave to defend. The suit was filed on 12th August of this year under O. 37, Civil P. C. The plaintiffs' claim is based on two promissory notes dated respectively 24th August 1934 and 27th August 1934, and the amount due on those two notes is said to be nearly Rs. 3,15,000. In para. 3 of their plaint the plaintiffs further state that they are pledgees in respect of certain articles of jewellery for payment of the money due in respect of the said notes and they ask for leave under O. 2, R. 2, Civil P. C., to reserve their rights as such pledgees. It is not denied that these two promissory notes were executed on the cancellation of the two promissory notes which had been made in 1931. There is no doubt that jewellery was pledged sometime in 1931 with the father of the plaintiffs, and it also appears quite clear that that jewellery was given as security for the loan for which the promissory notes were also executed. On behalf of the plaintiffs Mr. Chatterjee has referred to the case in 5 C P 37 (1) and contends that the defence which the defendant now seeks to put forward attempts to alter or limit his liability as it appears on the face of the promissory notes, namely to pay the amount there shown on demand. He also refers to the judgment of this Court in 32 C W N 125 (2) where the Court decided, "that where a triable issue was not of fact but one of law only which was decided against the defendant it was justified in passing summary judgment." In my opinion, this case is distinguishable from the case in 5 C P 37 (1) inasmuch as this is not merely a simple suit on promissory notes, but it does definitely refer to the pledges which have been made and the plaintiff asks for leave to reserve his rights with regard to the jewellery which has been pledged.

The defendant also states that since the execution of the promissory notes various sums of money have been paid in satisfaction of the amount due and that upon a proper account being taken it will be found that the amount claimed is in excess of the amount due. No particulars have been given, but there is a definite allegation in the petition which has been verified by the defendant himself. For the defendant an offer has been made to give any security for costs which the Court may direct. There is no question, it is contended, of giving security for the amount of the claim because that is secured already by the jewellery. The defendant states that the jewellery is worth over 6 lakhs, and there is no definite traverse of that statement. On giving security for Rs. 600 within ten days the defendant will have leave to defend, and will file his written statement within a week thereafter, and the costs of this application will be costs in the cause. In default of security being furnished within the time allowed this application will stand dismissed with costs.

V.B./R.K.

Leave granted.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 477

JACK, J.

Burmah Shell Oil Storage and Distributing Co. of India, Ltd.—Petitioner.

v.

Sudhansu Bhushan Chatterjee—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 101 of 1936, Decided on 10th March 1936.

Calcutta Municipal Act (3 of 1923 as extended to Howrah), Ss. 175 and 492—Company carrying on trade in Shell Oil receiving oil from various places and storing it at Howrah—Oil distributed to customers from Howrah—Headquarters of company at Calcutta—Transactions negotiated there and profits collected there—Company carries on trade both in Howrah and Calcutta within meaning of S. 175—They are liable to take license in each Municipality.

The word "trade" in S. 175 is used in its ordinary sense, and means exchange of goods for money or goods for goods with the object of making profits. The words in S. 175 should be taken in their ordinary meaning instead of putting an unusual construction on them in accordance with a special meaning given to the word "trade" in reference to income-tax charges on firms having international business. [P 479 C 2; P 480 C 2]

Where a company carrying on trade in Shell Oil receives oil from various places and stores it in their godown at Howrah and distributes it to their customers from Howrah, the transactions being negotiated at Calcutta, they must be said to be carrying on their trade both in Howrah and Calcutta within the meaning of

1. Abrey v. Cruz, (1870) 5 C P 37=39 L J O P 9=21 L T 377.

2. Shyam Sunder Chakravarti v. Tittaghar Paper Mills Co., Ltd., 1928 Cal 123=106 I C 848=32 C W N 125.

S. 175, although their headquarters are at Calcutta and delivery orders are sent from and the profits are collected at Calcutta. The trade of the company being carried on partly in one and partly in another Municipality they are liable to take a separate license in each Municipality and on failure to do so they are liable under S. 492 : Sully v. Attorney-General, (1860) 29 L J Ex 464 ; Grainger & Son v. William Law Gough, (1896) A C 325 and 1928 Cal 531, Disting. [P 479 C 1,2]

N. K. Basu, Jitendra Nath Roy and Sudhansu Sekhor Kar—for Petitioners.

Santosh Kumar Bose and Debabrata Mukherjee—for Opposite Party.

Order.—This rule was issued on the District Magistrate of Howrah and the opposite party to show cause why the conviction of the petitioners, namely the Burmah Shell Oil Storage and Distributing Co. of India, Ltd. under S. 492, Calcutta Municipal Act (Act 3 of 1923 as extended to Howrah), and the order sentencing the company to pay a fine of Rs. 375, should not be set aside on the ground that the learned Judge was wrong in holding that the petitioners carried on trade at Howrah because goods were delivered from their storage godown at Howrah. The complaint was made by the License Inspector of the Howrah Municipality to the effect that the accused company was carrying on trade in engine oil, lubricating oil and other kinds of oil at 97/1, Foreshore Road, Howrah, for which they were required to take out a license under S. 175, Municipal Act, for such purpose. They were assessed by the Howrah Municipality as liable to pay an annual fee of Rs. 250 in terms of Sch. 6 of the Act. A demand notice was sent to the company but they failed to take out a license. They are, therefore, liable under S. 492, Municipal Act.

The defence of the company is that they do not carry on trade in Howrah and hence they are not bound to take out any license. The only question for decision is whether the company was actually carrying on trade in Howrah so as to be liable to take out a license. S. 175 is as follows :

Every person who exercises or carries on in Calcutta, either by himself or by an agent or representative, any of the professions, trade or callings indicated in Sch. 6, shall annually take out a license and pay from the same such fee as is mentioned in that behalf in the said schedule.

According to the terms of the schedule any company or association whose paid-up capital is equivalent to 20 lacs of rupees or upwards exercising any trade must take out a license. In the absence of evidence to the contrary we must take it that the word "trade" is used in its ordinary sense in the section, that is to say exchange of goods for money or goods for goods with the object of making a profit. It is admitted that the company has a capital of not less than 20 lacs and that they receive oil from various places, and store it in their Howrah premises and distribute it to their customers from there, the transactions being negotiated in Calcutta. Undoubtedly, in the ordinary sense of the term, they must be said to be carrying on their trade both in Howrah and in Calcutta and although their Headquarters are in Calcutta and although it is in Calcutta that the business is arranged the evidence being that deliveries are made from Howrah on delivery orders which are sent from the Calcutta office. But as all the business arrangements are made in Calcutta it is urged that it should be held that they were exercising their trade in Calcutta only. In support of this, reference is made to some English cases, in particular to the case in (1860) 29 L J Ex 464 (1). In this case, Cockburn, C. J., states:

It is perfectly true that where a merchant is established the details of his trade must necessarily extend over various places. He buys in one country and sells in another ; but he has one given place of business in which he may be said to trade, and where his profits always come home to him. He carries on his trade where he is established as in his principal place of business. That I take to be the place where he exercises his trade, within the true meaning of the expression exercising trade in this Act of Parliament.

In that case, a firm of merchants had their principal establishment at New York and had also branch establishments in England and other countries, carrying on the business of buying goods in America, England and other European countries and selling them at a profit in New York. In that case the defendant was a partner resident in England in charge of the branch establishment there. It was held that the firm was not liable to be assessed to income-tax in respect of the profits earned by the firm from the purchase of goods in England as it was considered that the firm did not exercise trade in that country within the meaning of the Income-tax

1. Sully v. Attorney-General, (1860) 29 L J Ex 464 = 5 H & N 711 = 6 Jur (N S) 1018 = 2 L T 439 = 8 W R 472.

Acts, but in America where the profits were received and the principal place of business was situated. In arguing the case counsel urged that income-tax is a tax on profits and is not a tax on the carrying on of a trade or on exporting goods, that if no profits are derived no tax is due. It is only if the same thing applies in the case of taking out a municipal license that we can apply the dictum from this income-tax case. The question is whether the taking out a license is meant to be a tax on the profits made by the firm or whether it is intended to control the carrying on of a trade. I think that in the absence of any authority to the contrary (and there appears to be no ruling directly in point) the words of the section must be taken as they stand and, if (as appears to be the case) the company was carrying on trade in Howrah, whether they were collecting their profits in Howrah or not, and though negotiating the transactions elsewhere, it should be held that they were liable to take out a license. The other cases referred to on behalf of the petitioners are also income-tax cases. One of these cases is (1896) A C 325 (2). In that case it was held that :

The place where the contracts were made was the essence in deciding whether the trade was being carried on there or not.

In that case it was held that a foreign merchant, who canvasses through agents in the United Kingdom for orders for the sale of his merchandise to customers in the United Kingdom, does not exercise a trade in the United Kingdom within the meaning of the Income-tax Acts, so long as all contracts for the sale and all deliveries of the merchandise to customers are made in a foreign country. This case is distinguishable inasmuch as there not only all contracts for sale were made outside the United Kingdom but all deliveries to customers were made in foreign countries. In the present case, although the contracts were made outside Howrah, deliveries were made to customers within Howrah. The only case referred to which is not an income-tax case is 48 C L J 54 (3), where it was held that a firm which had its place of business in Calcutta but supplies goods to the Howrah Municipality without having any place of business in Howrah cannot be said to exercise a trade or carry on business in Howrah and as such no trade license need be taken from the Howrah Municipality. That case is, of course, distinguishable as there was no place of business of the company in Howrah. A firm does not, of course, necessarily carry on business at the places to which it sends goods sold or where its customers reside.

On the other hand, it is pointed out that in the present case storage was an essential part of the business of the company, their business being to store oil at convenient centres for supply to the public. Taking the word "trade" in its ordinary meaning I think that it can hardly be said that the company does not carry on trade in Howrah merely because the contracts for sale of their goods are made in Calcutta. It is suggested for the petitioners that the storage and delivery of the goods in Howrah are merely auxiliary to their business in Calcutta in the sense referred to in Sch. 6, S. 5 of the Act which provides that separate licenses shall not be required in respect of any business carried on in adjacent premises which form one place of business or in any yards, godowns or factories which are auxiliary to any place of business. This appears to indicate that even where the trade is carried on at different premises within one municipality more than one licenses will not be required within that municipality. But it is different where the trade of a company is carried on partly in one and partly in another municipality. In that case it would appear that separate licenses will be required in each municipality. In this case, no claim on behalf of the company is pressed on the ground of hardship.

A license is required merely because some part of the trade of the company is carried on within the municipality. It is not suggested that the tax is levied because the municipality has to make special arrangements for big business, and it seems probable that the tax merely means that the municipality is taking advantage of their position to levy a tax on a big company. Even so the income-tax cases where the tax is levied on profits are not quite analogous and I think the words of the section should be taken in their ordinary meaning instead of putting an unusual construction on them in accordance with a special meaning given to the word "trade" in reference to Income-tax charges on firms having international business. The rule is accordingly discharged.

2. Grainger and Son v. William Law Gough, (1896) A C 325=65 L J Q B 410=74 L T 435=44 W R 561=60 J P 692.

3. S. N. Banerjee v. Bengal Paint and Varnish Co., 1928 Cal 531=111 I C 114=29 Or L J 786=48 C L J 54.

R M./R.K.

*Rule discharged.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 480

D. N. MITTER AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Commissioner of Wakfs, Bengal—Petitioner.

v.

Mahmuda Bibi and others—Opposite Parties.

Appeals Nos. 36 of 1933, 239 of 1935, and 25 and 26 of 1936, Decided on 23rd April 1936, from original decrees.

Bengal Wakf Act (13 of 1934), S. 70 (4)—"Suit or proceeding" in Ss. 69 and 70 does not include appeal.

Words "suit or proceeding" in Ss. 69 and 70 of the Act do not include appeal. Where, therefore the High Court had made prior to promulgation of this Act orders of consent of parties for the appointment of a receiver in appeal, the Commissioner of Wakfs, Bengal, cannot apply to the High Court under S. 70 (4) of the Act for vacating the orders: 23 Cal 415 and 1925 Bom 241, Foll.; 1914 Cal 614 and 62 Cal 1132, Not Foll. [P 480 C 2]

S. H. Suhrawardy and Abul Hussain—for Petitioner.

D. P. Chatterji and Ranjit K. Banerjee—for Receiver.

Charu Chunder Biswas, Narendra Nath Mitter, I. P. Mukherjee, Khetra Mohan Chatterjee, Khitis Chandra Chakaravarti, Provash Chandra Basu and Rakhal Chandra Dutt—for Opposite Parties.

D. N. Mitter, J.—This is an application by the Commissioner of Wakfs, Bengal, who has been appointed under the Bengal Wakf Act (Bengal Act 13 of 1934). The application purports to be under S. 70 (4) of the said Act. It appears that two appeals are pending in this Court in which the question in controversy is as to the accuracy of the findings of the Subordinate Judge with regard to certain properties being wakf properties. In these two appeals by consent a receiver was appointed during the pendency of these two appeals. The application for appointment of a receiver was made on the 2nd March this year, a day after the Act in question came into force. The present application is for vacating the orders made by this Court on consent in those two appeals for the appointment of a receiver. By that order Mr. P. N. Tagore was appointed a receiver of rents, issues and profits of all the properties comprised in the Estate found to be the Wakf Estate of Prince Kamar Kader Mirza Bahadur excepting as regards premises No. 4, Kailassarak Road and certain other properties, the details of which it is not necessary to enter into. It appears that the application, as has already been stated, is one under S. 70 (4) of the Act. The questions which have to be considered with reference to the maintainability of this application really turn on the construction of the two sections of the Bengal Wakf Act, namely Ss. 69 and 70. S. 69 is in these terms:

"No suit or proceeding by or against a Mutwalli as such in any Court shall be compromised without the sanction of the trying Court." S. 70 (1) enacts that notice must be given to the Commissioner of Wakfs in every suit or proceeding excepting certain suits for rent, etc., at the cost of the party instituting such proceedings. S. 70, Cl. (4) enacts that in the absence of a notice under sub-s. (1) any decree or order passed in the suit or proceedings would be void if the Commissioner applies to the Court within one month of his knowledge. It is contended that the words "suit or proceedings" would include an "appeal" and as the proceedings for the appointment of the receiver were initiated in the appeal, it must be regarded as a suit or proceedings within the meaning of S. 69 or S. 70. We are unable to accede to this contention. The words 'suit or proceeding' must be regarded in its ordinary sense and cannot be held to include 'appeal.' A reference to Ss. 11 and 15, Civil P. C., 1908, would show that a suit does not include an appeal. With reference to res judicata (S. 13 of 1882) it has been held that a suit does not include an appeal, see 23 Cal 415 (1). See also 49 Bom 442 (2), at p. 449. Our attention has been drawn by Mr. Suhrawardy to a decision of this Court to which I was a party, and the language used there is to the effect that an appeal is really a continuation of the suit. Something of that kind is also said in the decision of the case in 19 C W N 359 (3). The decision to which I was a party is reported in 39 C W N 951 (4).

1. Bharasela Choudhury v. Sartchandra, (1896) 23 Cal 415.

2. Amarsangji Dunderji v. Dipsingji Jhala, 1925 Bom 241=87 I C 588=49 Bom 442=27 Bom L R 345.

It is a decision of Faizunnessa Bibi v. Gholam Rabbani (4). The state of facts in those cases are entirely different and those cases are no authority for the proposition that the word 'suit' must be taken to include an 'appeal.' Besides, if one looks to the policy underlying the provisions of Ss. 69 and 70 there can be no doubt that the legislature intended that the Commissioner of Wakfs can intervene where the suit or proceeding initiated is pending at the time when the provision of the Act regarding Commissioner of Wakfs came into force. Besides, it will be noticed under S. 83 (a) and (b) there are certain saving clauses. In our opinion Ss. 83 (a) and 83 (b) furnish a complete answer to the contention of the applicant. The suit was instituted long before the promulgation of the Act of 1936, and any right or rights, which were acquired at the time of the institution of the suit or even after the passing of the decree which was long before the promulgation of the Act in 1936, cannot be affected by the provisions of the latter Act. It was open to the parties before the promulgation of the Act to settle their dispute in a suit by or against a Mutwalli without reference to the officer who had not come into existence then. That right cannot be said to have been taken away by anything which was done without any reference to or notice to the officer appointed long after. We are of opinion that Ss. 83 (a) and 83 (b) are intended to cover a case of this kind. The word 'suit' or 'proceeding' in S. 70 (1) have the same meaning as the said words in S. 69.

We therefore hold that this application of the Commissioner is incompetent and must be rejected. The receiver will pay his own costs and also the costs of the different parties who have appeared to oppose this application. The hearing for Mr. Biswas's clients is assessed at three gold mohurs and that for the other parties at two gold mohurs.

Patterson, J.—I agree.

D.L./R.K. Application rejected.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 481

NASIM ALI AND EDGLEY, JJ.

Ananda Lal Chakravarty and others—
Pro forma defendants—Appellants.

v.

Narayan Chandra Bhattacharji —
Plaintiff and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 110 of 1934, Decided on 13th May 1936, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, Second Court (Special Judge), 24 Parganas, D/- 18th September 1933.

Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885). Ss. 106, 50 (2)—Suit under S. 106, by occupancy raiyat claiming certain jamas to be Maurashi Mekarari for correction of Record of Rights—Plaintiff entitled to presumption under S. 50 (2)—Defendant landlords relying on collection papers, in rebutting presumption—Absence of entries relating to jamas, in collection papers is evidence in case—Court excluding from consideration collection papers commits error of law.

Where in a suit under S. 106 by a person recorded as an occupancy raiyat, in respect of certain jamas, claiming them to be Maurashi Mekarari and praying correction of the Record of Rights accordingly, the plaintiff is entitled to the benefit of the presumption, under S. 50 (2), by reason of his having been paying a uniform rent for a period over 20 years before the institution of the suit, and the defendant landlords in rebutting the presumption rely upon their collection papers, the absence of entries relating to the jamas in the collection papers is evidence in the case, although its evidentiary value depends upon other facts disclosed in the case. The collection papers are admissible in evidence and are relevant to the question whether the jamas came into existence after the permanent settlement. If the Court excludes from consideration the collection papers and finds that the landlords have failed to rebut the presumption under S. 50 (2) its finding is vitiated by an error of law. [P 482 C 1]

Sarat Chandra Roy Choudhury and Radhika Charan Chatterjee—for Appellants.

Sitaram Banerjee and Prokash Chandra Ghose—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal arises out of a suit under S. 106, Ben. Ten. Act. The plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest Purna Chandra Dutta was recorded as an occupancy raiyat in respect of certain Jamas in the finally published Record of Rights. The plaintiff's case is that these Jamas are Maurashi Mekarari. He therefore prays for the correction of the Record of Rights. The defendants who are the landlords under whom these Jamas are held, contested the plaintiff's claim on the ground that these holdings were merely occupancy holdings and that the Record of Rights was correct. The Revenue

3. Samed Sheikh v. Naba Gopal Ghose, 1914 Cal 614=23 I C 12=19 C W N 359.

4. Faizunnessa Bibi v. Gholam Rabbani, (1935) 62 Cal 1192=61 C L J 469=39 C W N 951.

Officer came to the conclusion that the disputed holdings were occupancy holdings and in that view dismissed the suit. On appeal by the plaintiff to the lower appellate Court the learned Special Judge has come to the conclusion that the holdings are Mokarari holdings. He has accordingly reversed the decision of the Revenue Officer and has decreed the plaintiff's suit. Hence this Second Appeal by the defendant landlords.

It appears that the plaintiff and his predecessors in interest had been paying rent at an uniform rate for more than 20 years before the institution of the present suit. The plaintiff is therefore entitled to the benefit of the presumption under S. 50 (2), Ben. Ten. Act. The question is whether the landlords have succeeded in rebutting this presumption. In order to rebut this presumption the landlords rely upon their collection papers of the year 1271, 1277, 1278, 1298. They also rely upon the admission of the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest, Purna Chandra Dutta, to the effect that these holdings were non-transferable occupancy holdings in certain rent suits instituted by the landlords against the original raiyats from whom the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest, Purna Chandra Dutta, purchased these jamas. From the collection papers of 1271, 1277, 1278 it appears that the disputed Jamas are not mentioned therein. The learned Special Judge was of opinion that the absence of any entry relating to these Jamas in these collection papers is no evidence against the tenant. We are unable to agree with the learned Judge in this view of the matter. Absence of entries relating to these Jamas in these collection papers is evidence in the case but its evidentiary value would depend upon the other facts disclosed in the case. The learned Judge's finding that the landlords failed to rebut the presumption under S. 50 (2) is therefore vitiated by an error of law, inasmuch as he excluded from his consideration these collection papers which are admissible in evidence and are relevant to the question whether these Jamas came into existence after the permanent settlement. As the evidence on the record is sufficient for the determination of the question we now proceed to determine it, because we are of opinion that no useful purpose would be served by remanding the case to the lower appellate Court.

We have already pointed out that in collection papers of 1271, 1277, 1278 and 1298 these disputed Jamas are not mentioned. Only five of these Jamas are mentioned in the collection papers of 1298. The learned advocate for the appellant contends that these Jamas must have come into existence sometime after 1278 B. S. and consequently the presumption under S. 50 (2) is rebutted by these collection papers. The learned advocate for the respondent however contended in view of certain decisions of this Court that the absence of any entry in the collection papers was not conclusive and did not prove that these Jamas were not in existence before 1278. It appears however that in 1926 the landlords instituted certain rent suits against their recorded tenants, that is, the persons from whom the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest, Purna Chandra Dutta, purchased these holdings. They did not recognise the transfer in favour of Purna Chandra Dutta by the recorded raiyats. Ultimately however Purna Chandra appeared and filed a petition stating that he was the purchaser of these holdings which were not transferable by law or by custom and that his transfer was recognised by the landlords on receipt of Selami. On the basis of this application the purchase by Purna Chandra Dutta was recognised by the landlords and he was impleaded as a defendant in the rent suits. This admission of Purna Chandra indicates that in 1926 these holdings were admitted to be not Mokarari. It is not the plaintiff's case that the holdings were created by any Mokarari grant.

The only ground on which the plaintiff now claims Mokarari rights to these Jamas is under S. 50 (1), Ben. Ten. Act, namely, that the rent of these holdings remained unchanged from the time of the permanent settlement. In order to substantiate this ground he relies upon the presumption under S. 50 (2), Ben. Ten. Act. In 1926 Purna was entitled to the benefit of this presumption and if really these holdings were in existence from the time of the permanent settlement, Purna would not have made the admission then that the holdings were not Mokarari. His admission consequently indicates that these holdings are in existence from the time of the permanent settlement. The admission of Purna therefore corroborates the appellants' case that these holdings came into existence after 1278. We are therefore of opinion that the collection papers of 1271, 1277, 1278 and the aforesaid admission of the plaintiff's predecessor-in-interest, Purna Chandra Dutta, in 1926 rebut the presumption which arises in favour of the plaintiff under S. 50 (2), Ben. Ten Act. The result therefore is this appeal is allowed, the judgment and decree of the lower appellate Court are set aside and those of the Revenue Officer are restored with costs in the lower appellate as well as in this Court.

R.M./R.K. Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 483

M. C. GHOSE AND R. C. MITTER, JJ.

Ananda Lal Chakravarty and others—
Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Girindra Nath Chatterjee and others—
Plaintiffs—Defendants—Pro forma Respondents.

Appeals Nos. 206 to 214 of 1934, Decided on 26th March 1936, against decree of Dist. (Special) Judge, 24-Parganas, D/- 13th September 1933.

Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 105—
Suit for assessment of rent in respect of land recorded as liable to rent—Assertion of claim of Niskar not made to knowledge of landlord 12 years before suit—Suit is not barred.

Before the landlord's right to assess rent in respect of land which has been recorded as liable to rent, can be barred, it is necessary that the assertion of a claim of Niskar must be made to the knowledge of the landlord 12 years before the proceedings for assessment of rent: 39 Cal 453 and 1931 Cal 25, Rel. on; 15 I C 64, Expl. [P 484 C 1]

*Sarat Chandra Roy and Radhika Charan Chatterjee—*for Appellants.

*Gopendra Nath Das, Ramendra Mohan Majumdar, Khemendra Nath Tagore and Upendra Kumar Roy (for Deputy Registrar)—*for Respondents.

R. C. Mitter, J.—The lands which are the subject matter of these appeals are in two touzies, namely Touzi No. 51 and Touzi No. 47 of the Alipore Collectorate. The appellants before us are the owners of Touzi No. 51 and the plaintiffs-respondents in these appeals are the owners of Touzi No. 47 having purchased the said Touzi at a revenue sale within 12 years of the suit. In the year 1911, there was a petty settlement and all the lands except the lands of Khatian No. 959 and plot No. 1050 of Khatian No. 1024 were recorded in the possession of the defendants as not paying rent but liable to pay rent. The lands of Khatian No. 959 and plot No. 1050 of Khatian No. 1024 however were recorded in the petty settlement as Niskar lands in the possession of the defendants. The finding of the Assistant Settlement Officer in these cases is that the proprietors of Touzi Nos. 51 and 47 knew of the entries made in the petty settlement of 1911. After the petty settlement there was a regular settlement under Ch. 10 Bengal Tenancy Act. The Record of Rights was finally published in the year 1931. The lands which are the subject matter of all these nine appeals were recorded in the possession of the defendants with an entry that no rent was being paid but the persons in possession were liable to pay rent. After the final publication in the year 1931 the proprietors of Touzi Nos. 47 and 51 within whose estates the lands so recorded lie instituted proceedings under S. 105 Bengal Tenancy Act. The defendant raised an issue under S. 105-A that the lands are Niskar.

The findings of both the Courts below are that the lands are not Niskar, that is to say, the defence raised, namely, that the lands were in fact valid Niskar grants have been negatived as we read the judgments by both the Courts below. The claim however of the appellants before us, who are the proprietors of Touzi No. 51, have been rejected on the ground that they cannot at the date of the suit apply for assessment of rent. We will deal with the grounds given by the learned Special Judge and by the Assistant Settlement Officer in detail hereafter. But the claim of the proprietors of Touzi No. 47 to assess rent has been allowed, the Court holding that they being the revenue purchasers at a revenue sale within 12 years of the suit their claim cannot be defeated on the ground of delay. The position therefore is this that the lands are all joint lands of the aforesaid two Touzies. The proprietors of Touzi No. 47 have got decrees for assessment of rent on the basis that they are not Niskar lands, but the claims of the proprietors of Touzi No. 51 have been dismissed. The learned Assistant Settlement Officer said in his judgment that in the year 1911 the proprietors of Touzi No. 51 knew of the entries made in the Record of Rights in the petty settlement and inasmuch as they had not made any attempt to assess the rent within 12 years of the publication of the Record of Rights of the petty settlement, the defendants who were in possession without payment of rent so long have by adverse assertion acquired the right to hold the land rent free for ever as against them. This argument, says the Assistant Settlement Officer and the Special Judge cannot prevail against the proprietors of Touzi No. 47 because they are recent revenue purchasers.

The finding of the Assistant Settlement Officer appears to us to mean that it were the entries in the petty settlement record which really affected the proprietors of Touzi No. 51. The Special Judge however does not discuss any question of fact. He simply noted certain rulings, amongst them being the case in 16 C W N 929 (1), 39 Cal 453 (2) and the judgment of the late Chief Justice in 57 Cal 796 (3). He also notes another case, namely, 22 C W N 685 (4). He seems to think that there is a conflict of authorities on the point he had to decide, and was of opinion that he was constrained to follow the latest case, meaning thereby 57 Cal 796 (3). He accordingly held that the right of the proprietors of Touzi No. 51 has been barred by limitation. There is no doubt that there is some conflict between the case in 16 C W N 929 (1) and the cases in 39 Cal 453 (2) and 57 Cal 796 (3) referred to above. But that conflict is not at all material for the purpose of the present case.

The cases are agreed and lay down the proposition that in order that the landlord's right to assess rent might be barred, it is necessary that there must be (a) an assertion by the man in possession to hold that lands rent free, (b) that the said assertion must be made to the knowledge of the landlord and (c) that the said assertion must be made to the knowledge of the landlord beyond 12 years of the institution of the proceedings for assessment. That is 39 Cal 453 (2) and series of cases of the Maharaja of Tippierrah to be found in 22 C L J. That is a principle from which the late Chief Justice did not depart from in 57 Cal 796 (3). In 16

C W N 929 (1) however the position adopted is this: There was an assertion in the preparatory stage of the Settlement Khatian by the man in possession to the knowledge of the landlord that he had a rent free title, but in spite of that assertion the entry which was made in the finally published Record of Rights was that the man was an occupancy raiyat liable to pay rent. An interval of some years elapsed between the dates of assertion by the man in possession in the presence of the landlord's agent in the preparatory stage of the Record of Rights and the final publication of the said record and the question arose as to whether 12 years' limitation should run from the date of the first adverse assertion at the preparatory stage of the Record of Rights or from the date of the final publication. In that case it was held that the effect of the previous adverse assertion by the man in possession at the preparatory stage of the record was washed out by the entry being made in the Record of Rights that lands were liable to rent and the suit for assessment was in time as it was filed within 12 years of the final publication of the Record of Rights.

It is on this proposition, namely that the entry in that manner would wash out the effect of the previous adverse assertion on the part of the man in possession claiming Niskar right, that doubts were cast in the later cases, specially in 57 Cal 796 (3), decided by the late Chief Justice. But as we have said above no doubt has been cast upon the rule that before the landlord's right to assess rent in respect of lands, which have been recorded as liable to rent be barred, the assertion of a claim of Niskar must be made to the knowledge of the landlord 12 years before the proceedings for assessment of rent. In the present case there is no finding of the learned Special Judge that the person in possession had made that hostile assertion to the knowledge of the landlords beyond 12 years of the dates of the applications under S. 105, Ben. Ten. Act. Prima facie therefore the proprietors of Touzi No. 51 are entitled to assess rent and their claim has neither been barred by limitation nor has been taken away or affected by any adverse assertion for the requisite period. In two cases however, namely with regard to Appeal No. 208 which relates to Khatian No. 959 and to plot No. 1050 of the Khatian No. 1024

1. Aman Gazi v. Birendra Kishore, (1912) 16 C W N 929=15 I C 64.

2. Birendra Kishore v. Roshan Ali, (1912) 39 Cal 453=13 I C 518=16 C W N 931.

3. Jnanendra Narayan v. Sarada Sundari, 1931 Cal 25=129 I C 355=57 Cal 796.

4. Dhananjay Manjhi v. Upendra Nath Deb, 1919 Cal 989=46 I C 428=22 C W N 685.

which is the subject-matter of Appeal No. 206, the position stands in a different way. Although there is no finding of the learned Special Judge with regard to the date of assertions made to the knowledge of the landlord in these two cases at all, it is quite clear from the findings of the learned Assistant Settlement Officer that the landlords, namely the proprietors of Touzi No. 51 did know that the persons in possession of the lands recorded in Khatian No. 959 and of plot No. 1050 of Khatian No. 1024 had been claiming Niskar right since 1911, because the entry in the petty settlement with regard to these lands was that they were rent free lands.

We accordingly hold that the proprietors of Touzi No. 51 cannot now have the rent assessed in respect of the lands in Khatian No. 959 and in respect of plot No. 1050 of Khatian No. 1024, but with regard to the lands recorded in other Khatians which are the subject-matter of the remaining appeals and of Appeal No. 206 also the landlords are entitled to assess rent. The net result therefore is that Appeal No. 208 is dismissed with costs. Appeals Nos. 207 and 209 to 214 are decreed with costs against the defendants respondents in all the Courts. The appellants in these appeals would get a decree for assessment of rent at the same rate at which the rent had been assessed in favour of the proprietors of Touzi No. 47 in respect of the Khatians relating to these appeals. Appeal No. 206 is decreed in part. The plaintiffs-appellants claim in this appeal to assess rent on plot No. 1050 of Khatian No. 1024 is dismissed. But they would be entitled to have the rent assessed in respect of the remaining plots of the said Khatian. As rent has not been assessed separately for these plots this case must be remanded to the Court of first instance in order that the rent in the share of the plaintiffs-appellants may be assessed in respect of the plots of Khatian No. 1024, save and except plot No. 1050. In this appeal the plaintiffs-appellants will be entitled to their costs in proportion throughout against the defendants-respondents. The proportion would depend upon the final result after the decision by the Court of first instance, and would be determined by that Court.

M. C. Ghose, J.—I agree.

R.M./R.K.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 485

R. C. MITTER, J.

Mohendra Chandra Dutta Roy—Decree-holder—Petitioner.

v.

Basiruddin and others—Judgment-debtors—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 689 of 1935, Decided on 6th May 1936, from order of Sub-Judge, Mymensingh, D/- 23rd February 1935.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 43, R. 1, Cl. (d), O. 9, R. 13—Case is "not open to appeal" when no appeal lies against decree under any circumstance—Rent suit valued at less than Rs. 50 per cent decreed ex parte by Munsif having final jurisdiction under S. 153 (b), Ben. Ten. Act—Application for setting aside ex parte decree rejected by another Munsif not having final jurisdiction—Order rejecting application is appealable.

The words "in a case open to appeal" in O. 43, R. 1 (d) are general words and have no reference to the appeal against the decree actually passed. A case is not open to appeal within the meaning of O. 43, R. 1, Cl. (d) when no appeal would lie against the decree under any circumstance.

An appeal against a decree in a simple rent suit (i. e. when the proviso to S. 153, Ben. Ten. Act, does not come into play) valued at Rs. 50 or less does not lie only under one circumstance, namely when the Munsif has been vested with final jurisdiction, and would lie under all other circumstances. Where, therefore, a rent suit valued at less than Rs. 50 is decreed ex parte by a Munsif vested with final jurisdiction, and an application for setting aside the ex parte decree is subsequently rejected by another Munsif not vested with final jurisdiction an appeal lies under O. 43, R. 1, Cl. (d) against the order rejecting the application: 1916 All 51 and 1928 Mad 969, Rel. on; 1932 Cal 687; 27 Cal 484; 1914 Cal 614 and 1924 Pat 603, Disting.

[P 488 C 1]

Birendra Kumar De, Upendra Kumar Roy for Nani Gopal Das—for Petitioner.

Jatis Chandra Banerjee, Kali Kinkar Chakravarty and Ramendra Mohan Muzumdar (for Deputy Registrar)—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—The petitioner before me instituted a rent suit against the opposite parties in respect of an agricultural holding. The suit was valued at less than Rs. 50. None of the opposite parties appeared, so the said suit was decreed ex parte by the learned Munsif, Mr. S. C. Bose, who had been vested with final jurisdiction under S. 153 (b), Ben. Ten. Act. None of the questions coming within the proviso to that section was decided. Accordingly an appeal against his decree would not have been maintainable. Some of the defendants, namely opposite parties

Nos. 1 to 15, applied to set aside the said ex parte decree by an application made under O. 9, R. 13 of the Code. The said application was heard by another learned Munsif, Mr. A. B. Ganguly, who had no final jurisdiction under S. 153 (b), Ben. Ten. Act. He dismissed it holding that the summons of the suit had been served on all the defendants and that it was time-barred. An appeal was taken against this order to the Court of the learned District Judge. The said appeal was heard by the learned Subordinate Judge who allowed it, he holding that the application under O. 9, R. 13, was not time-barred and that no summons had been served on opposite parties Nos. 1 to 15. He set aside the ex parte decree in its entirety. It is against this order that the plaintiff petitioner has obtained this rule. Two points have been taken before me in support of the rule namely: (i) that the appeal to the lower appellate Court was incompetent, (ii) and that the ex parte decree, at any rate, ought not to have been disturbed so far as the other defendants, namely opposite parties Nos. 16 to 19 were concerned. I do not consider the second ground to be substantial. Having regard to the defence which will be taken by the opposite parties Nos. 1 to 15, if the ex parte decree be set aside, of which defence there are indications in the orders of the Munsif by which he refused to set aside the ex parte decree, the ex parte decree, if it has to be set aside, must be set aside in its entirety.

The first point urged before me however raises, so far as I am aware, a question of first impression in this Court, and depends upon the interpretation to be put on O. 43, R. (1), Cl. (d), Civil P. C. There cannot be any doubt that the right of appeal is a creature of statute and when no such right is expressly conferred by the statute there is no such right. The right of appeal against decrees and orders passed in rent suits for agricultural lands has been conferred by the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code; See S. 143 (2), Ben. Ten. Act, and S. 153, Ben. Ten. Act restricts that right so conferred by the Code in certain cases. To establish the right to appeal to the lower appellate Court against the order passed in this case, the opposite parties must show in the first instance that they come within the provisions of O. 43, R. (1), Cl. (d), Civil P. C., and in the second instance that S. 153, para. 1, Tenancy Act, does not affect him. O. 43, R. 1, Cl. (d) of the Code runs thus :

An appeal shall lie from the following orders under the provisions of S. 104, namely,

(d) an order under R. 13, O. 9 rejecting an application (in a case open to appeal) for an order to set aside a decree passed ex parte.

The controversy in the case before me is as to the meaning to be attached to the words "in a case open to appeal." S. 153, Bengal Tenancy Act, by itself does not bar the appeal in the case before me as Mr. A. B. Ganguly had no final jurisdiction, and it is for this reason that I consider that the case in 56 C L J 145 (1) does not touch the point which I have to consider. There the order refusing to set aside the ex parte decree in the rent suit valued at less than Rs. 50 was passed by a Munsif who had final jurisdiction under S. 153 (b), Tenancy Act. All that was decided there was that such an order was an order passed in a suit, and so came within the provisions of para. 1, S. 153 which took away the right of appeal. Nor do I consider the cases in 27 Cal 484 (2) and 19 C W N 359 (3) relevant to the point in controversy before me. The first case decided that an order passed in a proceeding for execution of a rent decree passed under the provisions of the Tenancy Act is an order passed in a suit, the word 'suit' used in S. 153, Tenancy Act, being not used in a limited sense of a proceeding in the Court of first instance before the decree. It accordingly held that there was no second appeal against an order passed in appeal in execution proceedings by a Subordinate Judge in a rent suit valued at Rs. 100 or less. The second of these cases also related to the interpretation of the word "suit" as used in S. 153. It was held that an order refusing to set aside an ex parte decree passed in appeal by a Subordinate Judge in a rent suit valued at Rs. 100 or less was not appealable as it was an order by such an officer passed in a rent suit. All the above mentioned three cases hold that the right of appeal which the aggrieved party had under the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure had been taken away by S. 153, Bengal Tenancy Act. In the case before me the order refusing to set aside the ex parte decree was passed by a Munsif who had not been vested with final jurisdiction by the Local Government under S. 153 (b). Here in the case before me the question is whether the Civil Procedure Code has given the opposite parties the right to appeal.

1. Badiur Rahman v. Mokram Ali, 1932 Cal 687 = 139 I C 502 = 36 C W N 540 = 56 C L J 145.

2. Shyama Charan v. Debendra Nath, (1900) 27 Cal 484 = 4 C W N 269.

3. Samed Sheikh v. Nabanepal Ghosh, 1914 Cal 614 = 23 I C 12 = 19 C W N 359 = 19 C L J 310.

The learned advocate for the petitioner has argued before me that the words "in a case open to appeal," occurring in O. 43, R. 1, Cl. (d) mean that if there is no appeal against the ex parte decree actually passed in the suit there is no appeal against the order refusing to set it aside. He says that S. 153 barred the appeal against decree passed by Mr. S. C. Bose, as that officer had been vested with final jurisdiction under S. 153 (b), and there is accordingly no appeal against the order of Mr. A. B. Ganguly, although the latter had no such final jurisdiction. In support of this proposition he has referred to the observations made in 3 Pat 839 (4). There a reference to arbitration was made through the intervention of Court and an award was made. The defendant filed an objection to the award, but at the date of the final hearing of his objection did not appear in Court with the result that the Court passed a decree on the award. The defendant's application under O. 9, R. 13 was dismissed and it was against this order of dismissal that the appeal was preferred to the High Court at Patna. Dass, J. pointed out that it was not a case of an ex parte decree being passed but was really a case of dismissal of the defendant's petition of objection to the award. The correctness of this view of the matter need not be considered in this case. But the other point that was raised has a material bearing on the point which I have to decide. On the assumption that the decree was an ex parte decree it was contended successfully by the respondent in the Patna High Court that the appeal was incompetent. Dass, J., at p. 841 of the report said thus :

Two questions however arise : first, was the case open to appeal ? and secondly, was the decree passed ex parte ? It is clear to my mind that an order under O. 9, R. 13 is appealable only when the decree sought to be set aside is appealable.

Having regard to the provisions of para. 16 (2), Sch. 2 of the Code the decree actually passed in that case was not appealable, the decree being in accordance with the award made with the intervention of the Court. The case has been explained and distinguished, and the correctness of the proposition so laid down by Dass, J., has been doubted. As for instance when an ex parte decree in accordance with the award made without the intervention of the Court had been made, and an application made to set aside the said decree was refused by an order, it has been held that an appeal against the said order was competent although the decree actually passed being in accordance with the award was not appealable under para. 21 (2), Sch. 2 of the Code. In my judgment the words "in a case open to appeal" are general words and have no reference to the appeal against the decree actually passed. If there could be no appeal under any circumstances against a decree that could be passed in the suit or proceeding, there would be no appeal against an order to set aside the ex parte decree passed in such a suit or proceeding by virtue of the limiting words of O. 43, R. 1, Clause (d). It has been pointed out that an appeal lies against a decree when the decree is in excess of the award and a view has been expressed that on that footing an appeal would lie against an order refusing an application under O. 9, R. 9 in a proceeding under Sch. 2 of the Code. In my judgment the correct principle has been laid down by Piggott, J., in 38 All 297 (5) and by Ramesam, J., in 1928 Mad 969 (6). The observations of Piggott, J. are as follows:

The words in O. 43, R. 1, Clause (d) are perfectly general; they are in a case open to appeal: Now the case between the parties in the Court below was whether or not an award made without the intervention of the Court should be filed as a decree of the Court. In that case an appeal lay under S. 104 (1) (f) from any order which a Court might pass, filing or refusing to file the award. It was therefore a case open to appeal. Moreover an appeal might lie from the decree itself on certain grounds and to this extent the decree itself was open to appeal. The fact that no appeal has been brought from the decree is irrelevant because the question before us is whether the decree was open to appeal. Nor is it relevant to ask us to consider whether the decree is or is not in fact in accordance with the award, because that only amounts to arguing that any appeal brought against the decree, would be bound to fail. The question for determination is not whether an appeal could have been successfully prosecuted against the decree but whether it was 'open to appeal'. It seems obvious it was.

5. Nehal Singh v. Khushlal Singh, 1916 All 51 = 33 I O 80 = 38 All 297 = 14 A L J 332.

6. Selvarayan Samsan v. Amalorpavanadan, 1928 Mad 969 = 112 I O 691 = 55 M L J 262.

4. Roshan Lal v. Bridhi Chan, 1924 Pat 603 = 88 I O 26 = 6 P L T 212 = 3 Pat 839.

There the decree sought to be set aside by an application under O. 9, R. 13 was a decree in accordance with the award.

Ramesam, J. agreed with this interpretation put by Piggott, J., when he said that a case is to be regarded as "open to appeal" when though an appeal against the decree would not lie under certain circumstances, it will lie under "certain other circumstances". In my judgment a case is not open to appeal within the meaning of O. 43 (1) (d) when no appeal would lie against a decree under any circumstances. An appeal against a decree in a simple rent suit (i. e. when the proviso to S. 153 does not come into play) valued at Rs. 50 or less would not lie under only one circumstance, namely, when the Munsif has been vested with final jurisdiction and would lie under all other circumstances.

I accordingly hold that the appeal to the lower appellate Court was competent and discharge the Rule with costs, hearing fee one gold mohur.

R.M./R.K. Rule discharged.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 488

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Ashutosh Das — Complainant — Petitioner.

v.

Keshab Chandra Ghosh — Accused — Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 195 of 1936, Decided on 29th May 1936.

Trade mark—Dispute over trade mark and commercial designs—Jurisdiction—Civil and criminal Courts — Criminal Courts should try dispute only in simple and clear cut cases requiring speedy relief.

In deciding whether a dispute between the parties over trade marks and commercial designs should be brought in a civil or a criminal Court, the real practical test is that the Criminal Procedure is only to be used in simple and clear cut cases where a speedy relief is required by the prosecution. In all cases where complicated matters of registration, abandonment of user and so on are concerned, it is desirable that the dispute should be decided in a civil Court. [P 489 C 1]

Santosh K. Basu and Debatrata Mukherjee—for Petitioner.

D. N. Bhattacharjee — for Opposite Party.

Cunliffe, J. — The opposite party in this case was convicted and fined in the Magistrate's Court under S. 483, I. P. C. for counterfeiting a trade mark. When the matter came on appeal to the Sessions Judge of Howrah, for the reasons which commended themselves to him, he ordered the acquittal of the opposite party and reversed the conviction and the sentence. The learned Sessions Judge took the view that the dispute between the parties (the complainant and the accused) was in reality a civil dispute and not a criminal one.

The facts revealed in the trial Court were somewhat curious. The complainant, it appears, inherited a business from his father, a concern of manufacturing weights and measures with a special trade mark stamped on the various articles of weights and measures with the father's name incorporated in the design. It appears that the complainant carried on the business for a short while and then he abandoned it owing to extreme competition. The trade mark on the weights and measures had been registered as far back as 1897. The learned Sessions Judge found that the abandonment by the son of the business persisted for about 20 years, but after that lapse of time he recommenced the business in weights and measures only to find that the accused was carrying on trade, having adopted his father's on trade-mark stamped upon the weights and measures.

There is some evidence to show that there were other traders who had done the same thing. One of the tests which is always applied as to whether a dispute between the parties over trade-marks and commercial designs should be allotted on the one hand to a civil Court, on the other hand to a criminal Court is the question of diligence in bringing the action. It has been held in number of cases that if the criminal Courts observe that there has been a delay in asserting proprietary rights in designs, they will not entertain prosecution of that kind. From this point of view, I think it can be said that the laying by on the part of the complainant ought ordinarily to have driven him from the criminal Court into the civil Court.

Another point which has to be considered is, of course, the question of abandonment of user. Abandonment of user for such a lengthy period would militate very much against the success of the plaintiff in a civil Court from obtaining damages or injunction. I do not say that it would be an insuperable obstacle to obtaining such relief, because it might be shown that there were stocks in existence of the articles which were still on the market in the hands of other people, but ordinarily it would be so. The real practical test, in my opinion, as to the difference controlling prosecutions with regard to statutory crimes of this character in civil actions is this, that the Criminal Procedure Code is only to be used in simple and clear cut cases where a very speedy relief is required by the prosecution. In all cases where complicated matters of registration, abandonment of user and so on are concerned, it is very much better that the dispute should be given to the civil Courts. Consequently, this Rule must be discharged.

Henderson, J. — In my opinion, it would be against the long and settled practice of this Court to interfere in revision in a matter of this kind. I therefore agree that this Rule should be discharged.

R.M./R.K. Rule discharged.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 489

CUNLIFFE, J.

Panchi Cowri Sadhu Khan—Plaintiff.
v.

Satya Dhenu Ghosal—Defendant.

Suit No. 321 of 1934, Decided on 30th January 1936.

Negotiable Instruments Act (26 of 1881), S. 76 (d)—Promissory note in hands of drawee—No hardship resulting to drawer—He cannot contend that he would suffer damage for want of presentation.

Where no hardship is shown in the case of a note which has not passed into other hands but is still in the hands of the drawee, it is not open to the drawer to contend that he would suffer damage for want of presentation especially when drawer admits execution of the note, and acknowledges that the money has passed. [P 489 C 2]

S. N. Bose—for Plaintiff.

S. R. Das and P. K. Sen—for Defendant.

Judgment.—This is a simple case upon a promissory note, in which I have the advantage of having a considerable argument on an earlier occasion from Mr. Das who appeared for the defendant. On the last occasion I expressed a wish that the case should be definitely disposed of to-day, but on being called on Mr. Das asked for a further adjournment on the ground that one of his witnesses was not available, or rather his client was not here. But I refused his application to adjourn. This suit is on a promissory note and there appears to be very little defence upon the pleadings. The execution is admitted, and it is also admitted, that payments upon the contract had been made from time to time in the past. At the last hearing an exceedingly interesting argument was developed, however of a technical nature, which amounted to a plea in bar by way of demurrer. It was contended that this note was never presented, as it should have been within the language of the note at Calcutta the place in which payment was to be made, or at all, and reliance was placed upon various sections in the Negotiable Instruments Act which deal with the question of presentation.

The answer to that which was made by Mr. Bose for the plaintiff is, I think, sound in law. He argued that the particular facts of this case brought it well within the ambit of sub-s. (d) to S. 76, Negotiable Instruments Act, and that subsection indicates that where no hardship is shown in the case of a note which has not passed into other hands but is still in the hands of the drawer, the drawer cannot possibly say to any body that he is going to suffer any damage for want of presentation. Now, this seems to me to be exactly this case. It is acknowledged that the note was properly executed. It is acknowledged also that the money passed, as I have said, and here we find too that from time to time the drawer showed that he recognized his indebtedness by making various payments. In these circumstances it seems to me that there is no defence to the action at all, and I shall give judgment for the plaintiff for the amount claimed with a deduction of Rs. 910 being an amount which is not mentioned in the plaint. The costs will follow the event. The plaintiff will also be entitled to interim interest.

R.M./R.K.

Claim decreed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 490

R. C. MITTER, J.

Mukti Devi—Transferee—Petitioner.

v.

Monorama Mitra and others—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 1004 of 1935, Decided on 20th May 1936, from order of Munsif, Third Court, Narail, D/. 29th April 1935.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 26-F—Application for pre-emption—Benamidar of co-sharer landlords made party—Application is not defective—Benamidar represents co-sharer landlords—Co-sharer landlords can at any time be substituted in place of benamidar.

A benamidar fully represents in a suit or proceeding, the beneficial owner. Where therefore in an application for pre-emption under S. 26-F of the Act, the benamidar of certain co-sharer landlords is made a party, the application is not defective by reason of failure to implead the co-sharer landlords. The benamidar represents the co-sharer landlords and the co-sharer landlords can at any time be added as parties in place of the benamidar, in case they want to come in and represent themselves instead of their benamidar representing them: 1918 P C 140, Ref. [P 491 C 2]

(b) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), Ss. 26-F and 188—Application for pre-emption—One of opposite parties impleaded is minor—Application is not defective—Minor should be deemed party for purposes of S. 188—Subsequent proceedings without appointment of guardian are however irregular—Order of pre-emption is liable to be set aside—Minor is entitled to apply to be made co-applicant, although period of limitation for such application is over.

An application for pre-emption under S. 26-F is not defective merely because one of the opposite parties impleaded in it is a minor and no guardian is appointed to act for him. The minor must be taken to have been made a party for purposes of S. 188. The subsequent proceedings are however irregular if the Court fails to appoint a guardian to act for the minor and the order for pre-emption passed therein is liable to be discharged and the case remitted to the lower Court in order that the proceedings may be continued after appointment of a guardian of the minor. If after the appointment of the guardian, the minor wants to be made a co-applicant, his application is competent, although made after the period of limitation for making it is over, provided it is made promptly. The minor should not be allowed to suffer by reason of the failure of the Court to discharge its duty: 1936 Cal 343, Ref. [P 492 C 1]

(c) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), Section 26-F (1)—Application under S. 26-F (1) by co-sharer landlord—Applicant added as co-applicant in another application by other co-sharer landlords—Latter application dismissed as being defective—Applicant is not debarred from continuing his own application.

Where a co-sharer landlord making an application for pre-emption under S. 26-F is added as a co-applicant, on his request, in another application by his co-sharer landlords and the latter application is dismissed by reason of certain defects, he is not debarred from continuing his own application. Each of the co-sharer landlords has an independent right to make an independent application under Section 26-F (1) and he is not entitled to exercise his right of pre-emption only by becoming a co-applicant in other co-sharer's pending application for pre-emption. Two applications for pre-emption can go on simultaneously. [P 492 C 2]

Amiruddin Ahmed for Syed Nausher Ali—for Petitioner.

Hemendra Chandra Sen, Rajendra Bhusan Bakshi, Suresh Chandra Sen and Surajit Chandra Lahiry (for Dy. Registrar)—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—This case raises interesting points of law and some of them are points of first impression. The matter has been very ably and fairly argued by Mr. Ahmed appearing on behalf of the petitioner, and although I am in substance holding against him it must not be taken that I have not taken into consideration the arguments he has advanced. Three points have been raised before me which I will state hereafter after setting out the relevant facts which are as follows: Abdul Malek Molla held an occupancy holding under a large number of co-sharer landlords. He sold a portion thereof by a registered instrument to the petitioner before me, Mukti Devi. The notice of transfer was duly served and within two months of the service of the said notice two sets of co-sharer landlords made two independent applications for pre-emption under S. 26-F, Ben. Ten. Act. The first of these applications was filed on 20th November 1934 by three of the co-sharer landlords, Sudhir Kanta Ghose, Kamakhya Prosad Ghose and Haridas Ghose. Most of the remaining co-sharer landlords, including one Monorama Mitra, was made opposite parties to this application, but this application was, as has been ultimately found by the Court, defective because one co-sharer landlord had not been made a party to this application. On 23rd November 1934 another application was made under S. 26-F by Monorama Debi to whom two of the co-sharer landlords joined later on. In this application all the remaining co-sharer landlords or their benamidars were made parties. The first application was numbered Misc. Case No. 203 and the second Misc. Case No. 207 of 1934.

On 8th December 1934 Monorama who was a co-applicant on Misc. Case No. 207 made an application in Misc. Case No. 203 for joining as a co-applicant with the applicants of that case and this application of hers was granted on 8th December 1934. Case No. 203 then proceeded, but that case was ultimately dismissed by the Court on the ground that one of the co-sharer landlords had not been made a party to the application and therefore the application was not maintainable in view of the provisions of S. 188, Ben. Ten. Act. After the dismissal of the said application the application which was numbered 207 was proceeded with. The lower Court has allowed that the application, and it is against the order of the lower Court passed in that case, the present Rule has been granted.

It is necessary to state two other facts in connexion with Misc. Case No. 207 for the purpose of following the three points which have been raised by Mr. Ahmed. In that application Haridas, a co-sharer landlord, was made an opposite party. He was described as a minor, but no guardian was ever proposed or appointed. Later on an application was made on his behalf, unrepresented by any guardian, to become a co-applicant and that application was granted, and ultimately Haridas, described as a minor, but not in fact represented by a guardian or a next friend, continued on the record. One of the opposite parties to this application was Lalan Chandra Ghose. Later on two persons, Nirode Gopal Ghose and Nani Gopal Ghose, filed an application on 19th December 1934 to become co-applicants along with Monorama. They made their case that their benamidar was Lalan who had been named as an opposite party in Monorama's original application. They were allowed on that date to become co-applicants in Misc. Case No. 207.

Mr. Ahmed raises three points: (i) that S. 188, Ben. Ten. Act, has not been complied with inasmuch as Haridas cannot be deemed to be a party to the proceedings at all, because being a minor he was not represented by a guardian. The application which is the subject-matter of Misc. Case No. 207, he says, must be considered to be an application in which one co-sharer has been left out namely Haridas (ii) that Monorama could not continue the application which is the subject matter of Misc. Case 207, inasmuch as she became a co-applicant later on in Misc. Case 203 which has ultimately been dismissed on account of defect of parties and (iii) that the Court could not add Nirode and Nani parties to Misc. Case 207 after the period of limitation provided for under S. 26-F. With regard to the third point the Court has remarked that there is no defect in the original application for pre-emption, inasmuch as Lalan, the benamidar of Nirode and Nani, was on the record from the very beginning, the application therefore if it is not otherwise bad by reason of the defect regarding Haridas, was a good application. In my judgment this view of the Court below is sound because a benamidar represents in a suit or proceeding fully, the beneficial owner. The fact is that Lalan made a party to these proceedings from the very beginning, represented Nirode and Nani as their benamidar. This principle has been laid down in 46 I A 1 (1). This is a case where the beneficial owners wanted to come in and represent themselves instead of their benamidar representing them. There is on this score no difficulty as regards the application, which is the subject matter of Misc. Case No. 207 and I, accordingly, overrule the third point.

With regard to the first point there can be no doubt that if Haridas was, in fact, a minor the proceedings which have been continued in the Court below, and which have terminated with the order of pre-emption were irregular proceedings. Evidence was led on behalf of the applicants for pre-emption, that Haridas was an adult at the date when Monorama filed an application of 23rd November 1934. Evidence to that effect that Haridas was a minor then and is still a minor, has been led on behalf of the purchaser, but the Court below has not recorded any finding on the question of minority of Haridas at the material point of time. In my judgment, the Court below ought to have recorded a finding on this point, and if it came to the conclusion that Haridas was a minor it was under the duty to appoint a guardian for him, under the provisions of O. 32, R. (3), Civil P. C. I have examined the evidence myself: No relation of Haridas has been examined to prove his age. The only witness examined is a neighbour of Haridas. His evidence goes counter to the statement made in Monorama's petition where he was described as a minor. I cannot rely on this evidence adduced on behalf of the applicants for pre-emption, that Haridas was aged 22 years in the year 1934. His school register has been proved by the purchaser and it shows that at that date he was a little over 15 years. In this state of the evidence I must record a finding that Haridas was a minor at the date of the application and is still a minor.

1. Gur Narayan v. Sheo Lal Singh, 1918 P C 140=49 I O 1=46 I A 1=49 Cal 566 (P C).

Mr. Ahmed said that inasmuch as Haridas was a minor at the date when the application was made, and no guardian was appointed he cannot be considered to be a party to those proceedings at all, and so S. 188 has not been complied with. I do not see how I can give effect to that contention. If the provisions of O. 32, R. 3 be examined it leads to this that the appointment of the guardian of a minor defendant is to be made after the institution of the suit or proceedings against him, the duty of making the appointment of a proper person as guardian of a minor is on the Court and there must be, having regard to the procedure that has to be followed by the Court in selecting a guardian for a defendant or opposite party, an appreciable interval, it may be short it may be long, between the filing of the suit against the minor or the filing of the application for pre-emption with a minor as opposite party, and the selection and appointment of his guardian. An application for pre-emption, or a suit, cannot be instituted with a guardian of a minor defendant or opposite party already appointed. I, accordingly, hold that Haridas must be taken to be made a party to the application for pre-emption at the time when that application was presented, but the subsequent proceedings are irregular because the Court has not discharged its duty in appointing a guardian of a person whose name appeared in the proceedings with the description that he was a minor. The application filed on behalf of Haridas purporting to act himself to become a co-applicant was also an irregular application and the order thereon is an irregular order. On this point, as I have said already, S. 188 does not hit the application for pre-emption and the proper order which must be passed, having regard to these defects, is to discharge the order for pre-emption which has been passed and to remit the case to the lower Court in order that the proceedings may be continued after the Court has appointed a proper person as guardian of Haridas.

Unless there is some substance in the second point (it has not, for the reasons which I shall hereafter state) I may mention, at this stage, that the order which I propose to pass is the order which I have indicated above. This leads me to the second point. Before the Misc. Case No. 207 was actually taken up for hearing the Court had made an order by which Nirode and Nani became co-applicants with Monorama, and they continued as co-applicants. At the stage when Misc. Case No. 207 was heard the position is this that there were at least two other co-applicants with Monorama. It is said that Monorama could not prosecute two applications for pre-emption passed on the self same transfer, namely the application in case 203 in which she had become a co-applicant by reason of the order of the Court dated 8th December 1934 and Misc. Case No. 207 in which she was alone the original applicant but later on had two other applicants with her. It is quite clear from a comparison of S. 148-A (9), Ben. Ten. Act, with the provisions of S. 26-F, that a co-sharer landlord is not bound to exercise his right of pre-emption by becoming a co-applicant in his or her co-sharer's application for pre-emption filed under S. 26-F (1). There is no provision corresponding to S. 148-A (9), in that part of the Bengal Tenancy Act which deals with the co-sharers' right of pre-emption. In fact the provisions of S. 26-F (4) (a), indicate that co-sharer landlords have independent rights to make independent applications under sub-s. 1 of S. 26-F and they are not bound to exercise their rights of pre-emption only by becoming co-applicants in their co-sharers pending application. The applications in Misc. Cases Nos. 207 and 203 could accordingly, go on simultaneously and the second application for pre-emption which was the subject matter of Misc. Case No. 207 was not incompetent by reason of the filing of the earlier application by other co-sharer landlords which was numbered Misc. Case No. 203. I go further, that Monorama when she had ultimately two other co-applicants with her could not in law withdraw from her application by an express application without the consent of her co-applicants. Here the position was that of a co-plaintiff and it is a principle of law, as has been held by Swinfen Eady, J., in (1905) 2 Ch 460 (2), that "where there are co-plaintiffs one cannot sever as of right."

If Monorama could not sever, as of right, from her application for pre-emption by an express act I do not see on what principle it can be said that she cannot maintain her application for pre-emption along with her co-applicants because of her act in connection with Misc. Case No. 203 which can at most lead to an inference that she wanted to withdraw from her own application, and wanted to pursue her remedy for pre-emption as a co-applicant in Misc. Case No. 203. On this principle I overrule also the second point. There remains only another point to be considered. As I have said above that the proceedings of the Court below have been irregular by reason of the non-appointment of the guardian of Haridas, the order complained of must be discharged and the proceedings must be remanded to the lower Court, in order that they may be continued after the Court appoints a proper person as his guardian, but it is necessary to guard against the interest of Haridas, when he would be so represented by a proper guardian if Haridas, represented by a guardian wants to become a co-applicant for pre-emption. The application for pre-emption has been filed, as I have said, on 23rd November 1934. In accordance with the provisions of S. 26-F (4) (a), a co-sharer landlord opposite party has to make his application for becoming a co-applicant within two months from the date of the service of the notice of the transfer on him, or within one month from the date of the filing of his co-sharer's application for pre-emption. These periods have long expired. If the Court had done its duty and had promptly appointed a guardian for Haridas, that guardian would have had time to make an application for joining as a co-applicant within the period mentioned in sub-s. 4 (a) of S. 26-F. The fact that the Court overlooked that Haridas was a minor, a fact which appeared on the face of the application for pre-emption, is a fact which must be considered.

In 40 C W N 680 (3), I have held that where by reason of some act or omission on the part of the Court or its officers an injury has been done, it is the duty of the Court to relieve parties against the injustice caused by its own acts or defaults or the acts or defaults of its officers. That was a case of pre-emption under S. 26-F and was a case where by reason of a sad omission on the part of the Court to look to the records of the case, a co-sharer opposite party could not come in and make his application for becoming a co-applicant within the time limited in sub s 4 (a), of S. 26-F, Ben Ten. Act. In my judgment, the principle which I have laid down in that case governs the present case and my direction is that after a proper guardian has been appointed for Haridas, the Court would entertain an application on behalf of Haridas, made by such guardian for becoming a co-applicant, if that application is made promptly, that is to say, as soon as the person so appointed assumes his office as guardian of the minor. The rule is made absolute in these terms, the case is sent back to the lower Court in order that the directions given above may be carried out. So far as the costs of this Court are concerned the parties do bear their own costs. Let the affidavits filed be kept with the record.

2. In re Mathews Oates v. Mooney, (1905) 2 Ch 460=74 L J Ch 656=93 L T 158 = 54 W R 75.

3. Gadadhar Sarkel v. Gopal Chandra Das, 1936 Cal 343=40 C W N 680.

R.M./R.K.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 493

LORT-WILLIAMS, J.

Calico Printers Association, Ltd.— Plaintiffs.

v.

D. N. Mukerjea—Defendant.

Suit No. 1707 of 1935, Decided on 12th February 1936.

(a) Evidence Act (1872), Ss. 101, 106, 114—Suit under S. 53 (2), Patents and Designs Act, for damages and injunction restraining defendant from infringing plaintiff's copyright—Onus of proving knowledge of plaintiff's right on part of defendant lies on plaintiff—S. 106 does not apply—Presumption under S. 114 does not arise.

In a suit under S. 53 (2), Patents and Designs Act, for damages and for injunction restraining the defendant from infringing the plaintiff's copyright in respect of certain designs, the onus of proving that the defendant had knowledge of the plaintiff's right in the said design lies on the plaintiff and S. 106, Evidence Act, has no application to such a case nor does a presumption under S. 114, Evidence Act, arise in such a case. [P 496 C 1]

(b) Patents and Designs Act (2 of 1911), S. 53 (2)—Suit under S. 53 (2) for damages and injunction restraining defendant from infringing plaintiff's copyright — Costs—

Plaintiff unable to prove claim for damages—Defendant giving unconditional undertaking not to infringe copyright—Plaintiff should ask for judgment in form of order embodying undertaking—Plaintiff failing to do is not entitled to costs subsequently incurred.

Where, in a suit under S. 53, Patents and Designs Act, for damages and for an injunction restraining the defendant from infringing the plaintiff's copyright in respect of certain designs, the plaintiff is unable to prove his claim for damages and the defendant gives an unconditional undertaking to the plaintiff and to the Court not to infringe the plaintiff's copyright so long as it subsists, the plaintiff should ask for judgment in the form of an order embodying the undertaking. If he fails to do so and goes on with the suit, he is not entitled to the costs incurred by him subsequently but is, on the contrary, liable to pay to the defendant the costs incurred by him subsequent to the undertaking: Winkle & Co., Ltd. v. Gent & Sons, (1914) 31 R P C 473, Ref. [P 496 C 2]

B. N. Dutt Roy—for Plaintiffs.

S. Chaudhuri and D. R. Das—for Defendant.

Judgment.—This is a suit asking for a perpetual injunction restraining the defendant, his servants and agent from importing, printing, offering and exposing for sale and selling, or in any way dealing with cotton materials not being those of the plaintiffs, with any or all the designs printed thereon, and from otherwise infringing the copyright of the plaintiffs' designs, and for an order for inspection of the books of account and stock of the defendant, and ordering him to deliver up to the plaintiffs for destruction all the stocks in his possession of the infringing cotton materials, and for damages and costs.

The plaintiffs in their plaint stated, inter alia, that they were the proprietors of three new and original designs relating to cotton goods which were duly registered and the copyright in them duly extended by the Controller of Patents, which copyright is still in existence. Further they alleged that on 27th August 1935 it came to their knowledge that the defendant, with the knowledge that certain designs were imitations of the plaintiffs' designs, had imported into Calcutta and stored and exposed for sale cotton materials manufactured in Japan not being the goods of the plaintiffs or manufactured by them, with the plaintiffs' designs on them or close imitations thereof, and that thereby the defendant had infringed the copyright of the plaintiffs. Further they charged the defendant with applying or causing to be applied thereto fraudulent or obvious imitations of the plaintiff's designs for the purpose of selling his goods, without obtaining any license or consent from the plaintiffs. Further that he had knowingly applied or caused to be applied the said designs or fraudulent or obvious imitations thereof to the goods imported by him with the object of defrauding the public into the belief that they were purchasing the plaintiffs' goods.

The defendant by his written statement denied the originality or novelty of the designs and stated that any such copyright, registration or protection obtained was invalid. He admitted selling certain cotton goods manufactured in Japan with designs similar to the plaintiffs' designs, but he denied that he sold the goods with the knowledge that the designs were similar to or imitations of the plaintiffs' designs or that he had imported such goods into Calcutta, and he denied that he had infringed the plaintiffs' copyright. Further he denied that for the purpose of sale or at all he had applied or caused to be applied to his cotton goods fraudulent or obvious imitations of the plaintiffs' designs, or with knowledge of the plaintiffs' claim to any such copyright he had applied or caused to be applied the said designs or with such knowledge had exposed them for sale or had defrauded the public as alleged. Further he stated that the goods sold by him were offered and sold in ignorance of the rights of the plaintiffs, if any, in the alleged designs, and denied that he had imported any such goods, or that the plaintiffs had suffered any damages. In conclusion he said that he had been and still was ready and willing to undertake to the plaintiffs and to the Court not to deal with any goods printed with the plaintiffs' designs aforesaid or any obvious imitations thereof in case and for such period as the plaintiffs established their copyright in the said designs.

Prior to the delivery of pleadings, on 28th August 1935, the solicitors acting for the plaintiffs had addressed a letter to the defendant alleging the infringement and asking him forthwith for a written undertaking in a form enclosed, and stating that the undertaking, if given was not to prejudice the plaintiffs' full legal rights including their right to take proceedings. If the defendant gave the undertaking then the plaintiffs would require a further undertaking to be given (to the Court if their clients so required) to deliver up all goods bearing the copyright and designs of the plaintiffs and an account of all goods sold which infringed their registered designs, and payment of damages. In answer to that letter the defendant wrote saying that without admitting the plaintiffs' right to the designs claimed by them he had not caused any alleged infringements nor had he any goods bearing such infringed designs in his possession, the question of giving a written undertaking therefore did not arise. The result was that notice of motion was given to ask for an order for an interlocutory injunction against the defendant.

In answer to that the defendant swore an affidavit reiterating that he had no knowledge of and did not admit the novelty and originality of the designs claimed by the plaintiffs, and explaining that he was the selling agent of a Japanese firm which had sent him the goods for sale in Calcutta and other places in India, and denying that he had imported or indented for or sold any other goods than those mentioned in his affidavit and that he did not intend to deal any further in such goods in any manner whatsoever. Further he denied that he knowingly or at all applied or caused to be applied to any cotton goods any imitations of the plaintiffs' registered designs, or that he had imported or sold any goods with such designs with knowledge that they could be claimed to be imitations. Further he said as follows :

I state that I sold as aforesaid the aforesaid goods with the said designs in complete ignorance of the plaintiffs' claim to or rights in them and of the fact of their registration, and as agent of my said Japanese principals and for and on behalf of them. Since I came to know that the plaintiffs were claiming rights in them I have been willing and am still willing to undertake not to sell, publish for sale or otherwise deal in any piecegoods with the aforesaid designs or any obvious imitations thereof for so long as plaintiffs' copyright in such designs subsists and am further willing to give such undertaking to this Court.

The motion was not heard because the defendant agreed to be bound by an interim injunction in terms of the notice. That was the position when the suit was called on for hearing. Thereupon counsel for the plaintiffs stated that plaintiffs abandoned any claim to damages, and counsel for the defendant stated that he abandoned his plea of want of originality, that is to say, he admitted the plaintiffs' copyright in these registered designs. The only issues submitted were :

(1) Did the defendant sell or expose for sale goods with the designs contained in Exs. D, E and F to the plaintiff knowing that they were imitations of the designs contained in Exs. A, B and C to the plaintiff? (2) Has the defendant applied or caused to be applied to the said goods fraudulent imitations of the aforesaid registered designs of the plaintiffs? (3) To what relief, if any, are the plaintiffs entitled?

Section 53, Patents and Designs Act, (II of 1911) provides that :

During the existence of copyright in any design, it shall not be lawful for any person (a) for the purpose of sale to apply or cause to be applied to any article in any class of goods in which the design is registered, the design or any fraudulent or obvious imitation thereof except with the license or written consent of the registered proprietor, or to do anything with a view to enable the design to be so applied, or (b) knowing that the design or any fraudulent or obvious imitation thereof has been applied to any article without the consent of the registered proprietor, to publish or expose or cause to be published or exposed for sale, that article.

Sub-s. (2) provides that:

If any person acts in contravention of this section, he shall be liable for every contravention, (b) if the proprietor elects to bring a suit for recovery of damages for any such contravention and for an injunction against repetition thereof, to pay such damages as may be awarded and to be restrained by injunction accordingly.

Counsel for the defendant submitted that the only real question left in issue was whether the defendant had applied or caused to be applied to his goods the plaintiffs' design, or had exposed for sale such articles knowing that the design or any fraudulent or obvious imitation of it had been applied to any such articles. Counsel for the plaintiffs then stated that he did not propose to call any witness but would rely upon the documents to prove these facts. He further argued that as such facts were peculiarly within the knowledge of the defendant, the onus of proving them lay upon him under S. 106, Evidence Act, and he referred to a number of documents such as invoices, sale notes, telegram and copies of indents. These went to show that the defendant might have been the seller of the goods in Calcutta instead of being merely the agent of the Japanese importer. But even upon this point they were inconclusive, and they wholly failed to establish the facts which were essential in this case, namely, that the defendant had knowledge of the plaintiffs' rights in these registered designs, or that he had applied or caused to be applied such designs to the articles which he had sold. There can be no doubt that the onus of proving knowledge on the part of the defendant lay upon the plaintiffs, and that S. 106, Evidence Act has no application. Counsel for the plaintiffs, as a last resort, asked me to draw a presumption under S. 114, Evidence Act, but no such presumption arose nor could arise upon the facts of this case and the evidence which was tendered.

These being the facts, the question remains to what, if any, relief are the plaintiffs entitled, and whether they are entitled to any, and if so what, costs. At first sight it would appear that the plaintiffs have failed to prove their case, and that the defendant is entitled to judgment, but in my opinion that is not the real position. As the pleadings stood when the case was called on, the defendant had stated therein that he had been and was still ready and willing to give an undertaking to the plaintiffs and to the Court, for such period as the plaintiffs were able to establish their copyright. That was a conditional offer of an undertaking, and the plaintiffs were not bound to accept it upon such term. But, as I have already stated, counsel for the defendant, abandoned his denial of the plaintiffs' rights. Thereupon the undertaking became an unconditional undertaking.

This should have been accepted by the learned counsel for the plaintiffs and he should have asked for judgment in the form of an order embodying the undertaking. I am willing however to treat his further argument in this case as being in fact an application for judgment upon the terms which were then offered. It is clear that he could not be entitled to a perpetual injunction as asked for in the plaint, because the period of copyright granted by the comptroller is only for five years, with possibly two further extensions of five years each. The result would have been that the plaintiffs were entitled to a judgment or order in the form of the undertaking offered, and costs up to the date when the condition was withdrawn, namely, the date upon which this case came on for hearing. But in considering the question of costs one must have regard to the date when first the plaintiffs could have obtained the relief which such an order would give them. If they failed to ask for relief at a time when they could have obtained it, and went on with the suit, they ought not to get the costs incurred by so doing. On the contrary they ought to pay such costs to the defendant. Now in my opinion the time when the plaintiffs could have obtained the relief which they are asking for to-day was upon 5th September 1935, when the defendant swore the affidavit to which I have referred, and offered unconditionally to give an undertaking for so long as the copyright in the plaintiffs' designs subsisted. That is the most which the plaintiffs can ask for in any case. Applying to this case by analogy the case in 31 R P C 473 (1), the proper course for the plaintiffs to have pursued was to have asked the Court hearing the motion, to make an order in the terms of the undertaking offered by the defendant. In this way the plaintiffs' would have secured all the relief to which they were entitled, or which they required.

All the costs incurred subsequent to that date were unnecessary. For these reasons I give judgment for the plaintiffs with costs up to and including the costs incurred with reference to the notice of motion and all costs incidental thereto including the costs of the affidavits sworn in connexion therewith, and including the costs of briefing counsel on the motion. There will be an injunction restraining the defendants in terms of the prayer of the plaint, except that it will be limited to the period during which the plaintiffs' copyright in the designs subsists, that is to say, so long as it is extended by the comptroller. Costs from the date to which I have referred, onwards to date, must be paid by the plaintiffs to the defendant.

R.M./R.K.

Suit decreed.

1. Winkle & Co., Ltd. v. Gent & Sons, (1914)
31 R P C 473.

* A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 497

FULL BENCH

M. N. MUKERJI, JACK, D. N. MITTER,

S. K. GHOSE AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Bejoy Kumar Addya and others — Defendants—Petitioners.

v.

Nagendra Nath Palit — Plaintiff — Opposite Party.

Full Bench Ref. No. 1 of 1935, Decided on 1st May 1936, from reference of Nasim Ali and Henderson, JJ., D/- 6th August 1935.

* (a) Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (1887), Sch. 2, Cl. 8—Powers need not be conferred by name of Judge: 19 C W N 1236 =22 C L J 249=1916 Cal 574=31 I C 177, Overruled.

In a notification under Cl. (8) of the second Schedule it is not necessary to confer powers by reference to the name of a particular Judge of a Court of Small Causes in order to enable him to try suits for the recovery of rent of homestead land under the Small Cause Court procedure.

The words "the Judge of the Court of Small Causes" are not used to emphasize any distinction between those words and "Court of Small Causes," but are used only as a compendious form of expression which include not only Court of Small Causes as defined in S. 4, but also officers invested with Small Cause Court's powers under S. 25 of the Bengal, N. W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act; nor is there anything in the words used in the clause which can legitimately form the foundation for the view that in vesting the Judge with authority to exercise special jurisdiction under that clause it is necessary to confer such authority by reference to the name of a particular Judge:
19 C W N 1236=22 C L J 249=1916 Cal 574=
31 I C 177, Overruled; 1916 Cal 574, Approved; 85 Cal 677; 1916 Bom 106; 1928 Bom 265 and 28 Mad 547, Ref. [P 500 C 1]

(b) Provincial Small Cause Courts Act
(1887), S. 25—Scope.

A finding on pure question of fact supported by documentary evidence cannot be assailed in revision under S. 25. [P 503 C 2]

(c) Limitation — Plea, can be raised before High Court.

A plea of limitation can be raised for the first time before the High Court. [P 503 C 2]

Anilendra Nath Roy Chowdhury, Gour Mohan Dutt and Jnanendra Nath Baksi
—for Petitioners.

*Amarendra Nath Bose and Hemanta
Kumar Bose*—for Opposite Party.

M. N. Mukerji, J.—The plaintiff instituted this suit to recover arrears of rent with damages in respect of a piece of homestead land. The claim was for a period of four years. The suit was tried and decreed by Mr. Sharuddin Ahammed, Munsif, 3rd Court, at Alipore, District 24-Parganas, exercising the powers of a Court of Small Causes. The defendants moved this Court for revision of the decision, and on their application a rule was issued to show cause why it should not be set aside. One of the contentions urged on behalf of the defendants at the hearing of the rule before the Division Bench was that Mr. Ahammed had no jurisdiction to try the suit. In having to deal with this contention, the Division Bench came to be of opinion that there was a conflict of judicial opinion bearing upon the question. Hence this reference. The relevant facts are the following: The second Schedule to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (9 of 1887), in its different clauses, enumerates the classes of suits, of which Courts of Small Causes are precluded from taking cognizance. Cl. (8) of that Schedule runs in these words:

A suit for recovery of rent other than house rent, unless the Judge of the Court of Small Causes has been expressly invested by the Local Government with authority to exercise jurisdiction with respect thereto.

Mr. Ahammed is the Munsif of the 3rd Court at Alipore. It is not disputed that, as provided in S. 25 of the Bengal, N. W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887), the Local Government has, by a Notification in the Official Gazette conferred upon him the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes for the trial of suits up to the value of Rs. 50 cognizable by such Courts and that consequently he had jurisdiction, pecuniary as well as territorial, to entertain the present suit. But Mr. Ahammed, admittedly, has never been personally invested by the Local Government with authority to exercise jurisdiction with respect to suits for recovery of rent, as required by Cl. (8) aforesaid. And as conferring on him the authority to try this suit—his jurisdiction having been questioned at the trial—he has relied upon a Notification of the Government of Bengal, dated 21st June 1904, which was issued in these words:

It is hereby notified that the Munsifs of Alipore and Sealdah in the District of the 24-Parganas are vested under Cl. (8) of the second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (Act 9 of 1887) with power to try under the Small Cause Court Procedure suits for the recovery of rent of homestead land within their respective jurisdiction when the value does not exceed Rs. 50.

The Division Bench were of opinion that a Notification such as this, which conferred jurisdiction upon the Court and not upon the Judge, is not a proper Notification under Cl. (8). This was the view taken by Mookerjee and Beachcroft, JJ., of this very Notification in 19 C W N 1236 (1), with which the Division Bench were inclined to agree. They referred to two other decisions as supporting the contrary view: 35 Cal 677 (2); and 19 C W N 1238 (F N) (3). They have formulated the following question for the decision of the Full Bench:

Whether in a Notification under Cl. (8) of the second Schedule of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, it is necessary to confer powers by reference to the name of a particular Judge of a Court of Small Causes in order to enable him to try suits for the recovery of rent of homestead land under the Small Cause Court Procedure.

And, as the question has arisen in a civil revision case, the whole case also has been referred to the Full Bench for final decision. Now the foundation for the view that it is necessary to invest the particular officer by name rests upon two arguments: One is that in Cl. (8) the words 'the Judge of the Court of Small Causes' are used; and the other is that the Act makes a distinction between 'Court of Small Causes' and 'Judge of the Court of Small Causes.' On both these grounds it is sought to be maintained that a general notification, by which all presiding officers of such a Court are once for all invested, would not be sufficient for the purposes of the clause. So far as the first of these arguments is concerned it does not seem to me strong enough to support the contention, because I do not see how the use of the words 'the Judge' suggests that the investing of the authority should be by name any more than by reference to the designation. It is quite true that there may be a point in requiring the notification to be made in respect of only such Judges of the Courts of Small Causes as may happen to have special merit deserving the conferment of special authority, as a means of ensuring a proper standard of efficiency in the Court. But at the same time, it is not unreasonable to assume that the Court itself, by reason of the volume of litigation of the particular type arising within the area covered by its territorial jurisdiction, may be considered deserving of being armed with such special power. And in the latter case the efficiency of the Court will be equally maintained if only the authorities concerned will be careful in their selection of the officer who is to take charge of it. As regards the second argument I am unable to agree that any such distinction as is supposed in it is intended by the Act. To begin with S. 4, that section says:

..... Court of Small Causes means a Court of Small Causes constituted under this Act and includes any person exercising jurisdiction under this Act in any such Court.

The distinction between the Court as an institution and the person who is the presiding officer of the Court—a Judge appointed under S. 6, an additional Judge appointed under S. 8, a Bench of two Judges appointed under S. 10, and the Registrar authorized under S. 12—is not kept in view in this definition. Then, there is a group of Ss. 32 to 35, which speak of "Courts invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes," meaning thereby Courts presided over by Subordinate Judges or Munsifs who are invested with Small Cause Court jurisdiction under S. 25, Bengal, N. W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887). If the wordings of the said sections of the two enactments, viz. Ss. 32 to 35, Provl. Small Cause Courts Act (9 of 1887), and S. 25, Bengal, N. W. P., and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887), both of which Acts came into force on 1st July 1887, be compared, it will be seen that, while the former Act describes the Court as being invested with the jurisdiction of the Court of Small Causes, under the latter Act, it is the presiding officer, that is to say Subordinate Judge or the Munsif, who is so invested. So far, therefore, there was no distinction intended by the legislature. But the argument is that Cl. (8), Sch. 2 to the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act should be interpreted on the footing that the legislature means such a distinction. The referring Judges, in agreement with the decision in 19 C W N 1236 (1), have expressed the view that the argument is well founded. Now, in 19 C W N 1236 (1), it has been observed:

1. Safar Ali Mandal v. Golam Mandal, 1916 Cal 574=31 I C 177=19 C W N 1236=22 C L J 249.

2. Akshoy Kumar v. Hiraram, (1908) 35 Cal 677=7 C L J 407.

3. Mathur Hazra v. Paban Hazra, (1914) 19 C W N 1238 (F N).

Clause 8 of the Schedule must be read along with sub-s. 1, S. 15, and when they are so read, it becomes obvious that a distinction is drawn by the legislature between "a Court of Small Causes" and "the Judge of the Court of Small Causes." Cl. 8 requires that the Judge should have been expressly invested with authority to exercise jurisdiction and not that jurisdiction should have been conferred upon the Court. The distinction between the Court as an institution in which the Judge exercises judicial function and the particular individual who presides in that Court is fundamental and well recognized: see for instance S. 6, Small Cause Courts Act.

It is true that there is always a distinction between the Court as an institution and the Judge as the presiding officer of the Court. That is a natural distinction that is to be found in the enactment contained in S. 6 of the Act, and also in various other enactments referred to in 19 C W N 1236 (1). All that S. 6 shows is that when a Court of Small Causes has been established the Local Government shall appoint a Judge of the Court and that the same Judge may be Judge of one such Court or more. And a comparison of sub-s. (1), S. 15 with Cl. (8), Sch. 3, only brings out this difference: that while under the former provision suits of certain classes are excepted from the jurisdiction of all such Courts, suits for recovery of rent, other than house-rent, will not be excepted from the jurisdiction of any particular Court of which the presiding officer, the Judge, has been expressly invested with authority to exercise jurisdiction with respect thereto. The question is whether, when the legislature says, as it does in Cl. (8), Sch. 2, "unless the Judge has been invested," it means that the particular officer who is the Judge at the time should be invested by name and that an investing of the Judge by reference to his office as Judge of the Court will not be sufficient. With all deference I am unable to see that the kind of distinction that is noticeable in the provisions aforesaid would justify us in answering this question in the affirmative.

In 35 Cal 677 (2), it was held by this Court that the expression "the Judge of the Court of Small Causes" in Cl. (8) must be taken to apply either to a Court of Small Causes constituted under the Act or to a Court invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes. The authority of this decision has not been, as indeed it cannot be, disputed. This very notification was the one on the strength of which in that case the Munsif who had not been personally invested, exercised jurisdiction; but the validity or otherwise of the notification on the ground that it did not purport to invest the particular officer by name with the special power was not considered in that case the question was not touched by the reference which this Court was dealing with. In the judgment in 19 C W N 1236 (1), there is a reference to the decision of this Court in 19 C W N 1030 (4). In that case N. R. Chatterjee, J. in the course of his judgment, referred to a general notification issued by the Madras Government under Cl. (8), Sch. 2 to the Act investing all Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs within the Presidency with jurisdiction to try on their Small Cause Court side all suits for rent falling within the pecuniary limits of their special jurisdiction. Beachcroft, J., who, as already stated, was a party to the decision in 19 C W N 1236 (1), far from disapproving of a general notification of the present character, observed thus

But the local Government has authority to vest Judges of Small Cause Courts with powers to try rent suits. No notification has been made vesting Small Cause Court Judges in Bengal in general, nor the Judge of first instance in this particular case, with such powers.

The notification that we are now considering came in for consideration before Jenkins, C. J. and N. R. Chatterjee, J., in 19 C W N 1238 (F N) (3). On the question of its validity the learned Chief Justice observed thus:

The notification is not happily worded and I can appreciate there are difficulties in the way of applying it to this case; still it seems to have been understood in a sense which makes it applicable to this case and we therefore feel that we ought not to interfere and disturb the jurisdiction which apparently has been exercised without question for a considerable number of years.

The facts of the case last cited are not set out in the report. As regards the wording of the notification it is certainly not happy, for it purports to confer powers on all the officers mentioned in it without stating that they would be competent to exercise such powers only in the event of their being posted as Judges of Courts of Small Causes established under S. 5, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (9 of 1887), or vested with Small Cause Court jurisdiction under S. 25, Bengal, N. W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887). Conceivably, there may be other difficulties as well in the way of applying the notification. But whatever difficulties may arise in other cases, there is none in the application of the notification to cases of the present nature, to which it has been applied ever since 1904. In such circumstances it would not, in my opinion, be right to read it too strictly and declare it invalid. I think I ought to mention here that it does appear that in the course of the arguments in 19 C W N 1238 (F N) (3), the decision in 19 C W N 1236 (1), was cited before the Court: see 18 C W N (Journal) ccxxii.

4. Sahodra Mudlali v. Sarbosabha Dasi, 1915 Cal 302=27 I O 258=42 Cal 638=19 C W N 1030.

In my judgment the words "the Judge of the Court of Small Causes," and not the expression "the Court of Small Causes;" were used in Cl. (8), not for emphasizing a distinction of the character suggested in 19 C W N 1236 (1), or in the order of reference, but only as a compendious form of expression which would include not merely Courts of Small Causes as defined in S. 4 but also officers invested with Small Cause Court powers under S. 25, Bengal, N. W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887). I am also of opinion that upon the words used in the clause there is nothing which can legitimately form the foundation for the view that in vesting a Judge with authority to exercise special jurisdiction under that clause, it is necessary to confer such authority by reference to the name of the particular Judge. It has been argued before us on behalf of the petitioners that the word "expressly" means that the conferment should be by name. I do not find any authority for this view; and in my opinion the word has been used in contradistinction to "impliedly" and to provide that no conferment of authority by implication will be sufficient. If the legislature intended a conferment of authority by name, such intention could have been easily expressed as, it has been in other enactments; as for instance, in S. 36 (1), Bengal, N. W. P. and Assam Civil Courts Act (12 of 1887), S. 39, Criminal P. C. (5 of 1898), etc. There is authority for the view that no vesting by name is necessary under Cl. (8): 30 Bom L R 741 (5).

My answer to the question formulated for our decision therefore is in the negative; and the petitioners' contention on the question of jurisdiction should, in my opinion, fail. It has been argued before us in support of the Rule that the plaintiff has not been successful in making out his title to the rents, because he has failed to establish that the jama in suit is included in the share of mauzah Mayapur which the plaintiff has purchased. This contention is sufficiently negated by the very clear findings which the Munsif has arrived at and recorded in his decision. The learned Munsif has observed that though it does not appear very conclusively that the jama lies within mouzah Mayapur, still there is ample documentary evidence satisfactorily establishing that a jama corresponding to the one in suit has been, from ancient times, held by the defendants' predecessors under the plaintiff's predecessors; that there is not a scrap of documentary evidence in support of the lakheraj title which the defendants set up; and that the relationship of landlord and tenants as between the plaintiff and the defendants has been established. A plea of limitation has also been urged. It is conceded that the plea is well founded. That plea succeeding, the plaintiff can get a decree in respect of his claim for three years only and not four. The decree will have to be modified accordingly. The Rule should be made absolute to the extent indicated above. No order for costs in this Court.

Jack, J.—The question referred to this Bench for decision is:

Whether in a notification under Cl. 8, Sch. 2, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, it is necessary to confer powers by reference to the name of a particular Judge of a Court of Small Causes in order to enable him to try suits for the recovery of rent of homestead land under the Small Cause Court Procedure.

It arises out of the trial of a suit for recovery of rent of homestead land for the years 1337 to 1340 B. S. in the Court of the third Munsif of Alipore in which one of the defences raised by the defendants was that the suit was not triable under the Small Cause Court Procedure because the Munsif had not been expressly vested with powers to try such suits under that procedure. Under Art. 8, Sch. 2, Small Cause Courts Act, a suit for the recovery of rent other than house rent is excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes unless the Judge of the Court of Small Causes has been expressly invested by the Local Government with authority to exercise jurisdiction with respect thereto. In the present case the third Munsif of Alipore, Mr. Ahmed, has been invested by the Local Government under S. 25, Act 12 of 1887, with the powers of a Court of Small Causes for the trial of suits cognizable by such Courts up to the value of Rs. 50, but he has not been personally invested with powers to try suits for the recovery of rent other than house rent. He is exercising this jurisdiction only by virtue of a notification of the Government of Bengal dated 21st June 1904 as follows :

It is hereby notified that the Munsifs of Alipore and Sealdah in the district of the 24-Parganas are vested under Cl. (8), Sch. 2, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (Act 9 of 1887) with power to try under the Small Cause Court Procedure suits for the recovery of homestead land within their jurisdictions when the value does not exceed Rs. 50.

The question then is whether as a Munsif of the third Court, Alipore, the Munsif can be said to have been expressly invested by the Local Government with jurisdiction to try the suit for recovery of the rent of homestead land, clearly he has been expressly invested with this jurisdiction by his appointment as Munsif of Alipore which, under the notification, includes the jurisdiction. In 19 C W N 1236 (1) a contrary view was taken on the ground that the notification merely invested the Court of the Munsif with jurisdiction, but this is clearly not correct for the notification expressly invested the Munsifs of Alipore with the jurisdiction and not merely the Courts at Alipore. This was recognized in 19 C W N 1238 (F N) (3), Civil Rule 500 of 1914, in which their Lordships Jenkins, C. J. and N. R. Chatterji, J., remark that the notification seems to have been understood in a sense which makes it applicable, and they therefore feel they ought not to disturb the jurisdiction which apparently had been exercised without question for a considerable number of years. This was in 1914 (13th July), 10 years after the notification, and there seems to have been no doubt that the notification conferred jurisdiction until the judgment of their Lordships Mukerji and Beachcroft nine days later (21st July 1914) based, I think, with all due respect, on a misreading of the terms of the notification which invests with jurisdiction not the Alipore Court but the Munsifs who preside in those Courts. The objection was clearly not to the general form of the notification because one of the learned Judges Beachcroft, J. in another case, 19 C W N 1030 (4) referred to in the judgment, suggests that the Bengal Government might have made a notification vesting Small Cause Court Judges in general in Bengal with such powers. I, therefore, agree with my learned brother Mukerji, J. that the question referred to the Bench should accordingly be answered in the negative. On the merits of the case since it has been found on the evidence that relationship of landlord and tenant exists, and that the rent is due, there is no ground for interference with the decree except as regards the rent of the 1st year which is admittedly barred by limitation and I agree that the decree must be modified accordingly.

D. N. Mitter, J.—The question which has been referred to the Full Bench for decision is framed in the following terms:

Whether in a notification under Cl. (8), Sch. 2, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, it is necessary to confer powers by reference to the name of a particular Judge of a Court of Small Causes in order to enable him to try suits for the recovery of rent of homestead land under the Small Cause Court Procedure.

This reference has arisen in a rule obtained by the defendant under S. 25, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (Act 9 of 1887), for the revision of a decree of Mr. Ahmed, the third Munsif of Alipore exercising the powers of a Court of Small Causes. It appears that Nagendra Nath Palit brought a suit valued at about Rs. 13 odd for recovery of arrears of rent with respect to homestead land for the years 1337 to 1340 B. S. in the Court of the said Munsif. Two defences were taken by defendant (1) that the Court has no jurisdiction to try the suit as Mr. Ahmed was not personally invested with powers to try suits for rent of homestead lands of the value of Rs. 50 or under, (2) that there is no relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties. The Munsif exercising the powers of the Court of Small Causes rejected both the defences and decreed the plaintiff's suit. The defendant obtained a rule on several grounds including the ground of want of jurisdiction of the trying Court to entertain the suit and including a further ground which was not raised in the Court below viz., that a portion of the plaintiff's claim was barred by limitation. As there was a conflict of opinion regarding the question of jurisdiction and as this question arises in a civil revision case the whole case is referred for the final decision of the Full Bench under Cl. 4, Ch. 7, Appellate Side Rules. The question of jurisdiction referred to the Full Bench depends on the construction of the provision of S. 15, Small Cause Courts Act, read with Cl. 8, Sch. 2. Under S. 15 a Court of Small Causes shall not take cognizance of the suits specified in Sch. 2 as suits excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes, and it is further enacted by Cl. (2) of that section that :

Subject to the exceptions specified in that schedule and to the provisions of any enactment for the time being in force, all suits of a civil nature of which the value does not exceed five hundred rupees shall be cognizable by a Court of Small Causes.

Under Cl. (8), Sch. 2 :

A suit for the recovery of rent, other than house rent, unless the Judge of the Court of Small Causes has been expressly invested by the Local Government with authority to exercise jurisdiction with respect thereto, has been exempted from the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court. The defendant contends that the Munsif who is the Judge of the Court of Small Causes in this case has not been expressly invested by the Local Government with authority to exercise jurisdiction in the matter of suits for the recovery of the rent of homestead lands and that, therefore, he has no jurisdiction to try the suit. The plaintiff on the other hand contends that the said Munsif with powers to try under Small Cause Court Procedure has been expressly invested to try such suits for the recovery of rent of homestead lands under Rs. 50 under the notification of 21st June 1904 although Mr. Ahmed, the trying Munsif, has not been personally invested with such jurisdiction. The Notification of the Government of Bengal, dated 21st June 1904, is in these terms :

It is hereby notified that Munsifs of Alipur and Sealdah in the district of 24-Perganas are vested under Cl. 8, Sch. 2 Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (9 of 1887), with power to try under the Small Cause Court Procedure, suits for the recovery of rent of homestead lands within their respective jurisdictions, when the value does not exceed Rs. 50.

The defendant replies that this notification is of no avail for the special authorization contemplated by Cl. 8 is entirely personal to the presiding Judge and he relies on the case in 19 C W N 1236 (1), in support of this view. 19 C W N 1236 (1) undoubtedly supports the contention of the defendant-petitioner. On the other hand the plaintiff opposite party relies on a decision of Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C J., and N. R. Chatterji, J., in 19 C W N 1238 (F N) (3), where the learned Chief Justice observed as follows with regard to the effect of this notification :

The Notification is not happily worded and I can appreciate there are difficulties in the way of applying it to this case ; still it seems to have been understood in a sense which makes it applicable to this case and we therefore feel that we ought not to interfere and disturb the jurisdiction which apparently has been exercised without question for a considerable number of years.

On the other hand the reasoning of Mukerji and Beachcroft, JJ., in 19 C W N 1236 (1), is expressed in the following language:

Clause 8 of the schedule must be read along with sub-s. 1 of S. 15 and when they are so read, it becomes obvious that a distinction is drawn by the Legislature between 'a Court of Small Causes' and 'the Judge of the Court of Small Causes.' Cl 8 requires that the Judge should have been expressly invested with authority to exercise jurisdiction, and not that jurisdiction should have been conferred upon the Court. The distinction between the Court as an institution in which the Judge exercises judicial function and the particular individual who presides in that Court is fundamental and well recognised;

and again the learned Judges proceed :

It is clear upon a clear reading of Cl. 8 and assigning to the term its natural meaning, that the Legislature intended that suits for the recovery of rent should be tried under the Small Cause Court Procedure, only by such Judges as had been expressly authorised to exercise jurisdiction in that behalf, it was not intended that jurisdiction should be conferred by a general order on a particular Small Cause Court irrespective of the qualifications by the individual officer who may preside therein.

It has been said that in some of the provisions of the Small Cause Courts Act a distinction is drawn between a Court of Small Causes and a Judge of a Court of Small Causes, and we were referred to S. 6, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act. S. 4 comes before S. 6 of the Act and under S. 4 which is the definition section, unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context "Court of Small Causes" means a Court of Small Causes constituted under this Act and includes any person exercising jurisdiction under this Act in any such Court.

The distinction between the Court as an institution and the person who is the presiding officer of the Court which runs through S. 6, S. 8, S. 10 and S. 12 is not observed in S. 4. Under S. 4 the Munsif of Alipore would be a person exercising jurisdiction under this Act in any such Court for under Cl. 8, Sch. 2, all Munsifs of Alipur exercising Small Cause Court powers have been expressly invested by the Local Government under the Notification of June 1904. The word "expressly invested" is used in contradistinction to the word "impliedly" or "inferentially". The word "expressly" in Webster's dictionary is stated to mean "in the express, direct or pointed manner, in direct terms, plainly" and the word 'Express' means according to Webster "directly stated; not implied or left to inference; distinctly or pointedly given, made unambiguous by special intention." In Chamber's Dictionary the word 'Express' means "pressed or clearly brought out, exactly representing, directly stated, explicit, clear, intended or sent for a particular purpose". In construing an Indian Statute as an English Act of Parliament the ordinary sense of the words must be looked into and Dictionaries have to be consulted. As Lord Coleridge, C. J. observed in 16 Q B D 636 (6) at p. 641:

I am quite aware that dictionaries are not to be taken as authoritative exponents of the meanings of words used in Acts of Parliament, but it is a well-known rule of Courts of law that words should be taken to be used in their ordinary sense and we therefore sent for instruction to these books.

The word "expressly invested" is not equivalent to "invested by name". This view has been adopted in Bombay in a recent case with reference to Cl. 8 and it has been held that it is not necessary to invest the powers by a reference to the name of a particular Judge: See 1928 Bom 265 (5). The view I am taking receives considerable support from a Full Bench of the Madras Court in 23 Mad 547 (7), where Sir Arnold White, C. J. observed as follows with reference to a Notification much more general in terms than the Notification of 21st June 1904:

Amongst excepted suits specified in the Schedule are suits for the recovery of rent other than house-rent, unless the Judge of the Court of Small Causes has been expressly invested by the Local Government with authority to exercise jurisdiction with respect thereto (article 8). By a Notification dated 24th January 1888, the Madras Government has invested all Subordinate Judges and District Munsifs within the Presidency with jurisdiction to try on their small cause side all suits for rent falling within the pecuniary limits of their special jurisdiction.

The effect of Art. 8 and the notification read together is to give a Judge jurisdiction to entertain a suit for rent as a small cause suit provided (i) he is a Judge of a class to whom the notification applies, and (ii) the amount claimed is not beyond the pecuniary limits of his special jurisdiction.

I am of opinion that the Notification of June 1904 although not very happily expressed is in substantial compliance with the provision of Cl. 8, Schedule 2, of the Small Cause Courts Act; that it is in accordance with the Notification under Cl. 82 in Madras—Notification which was issued so far back as 1888—that it is consistent with the notification issued under the same clause in Bombay—Notification which has been enforced since September 1911: see 41 Bom 367 (8), and has been acted upon in Bengal since 1904 notwithstanding the decision of Mookerji and Beachcroft, JJ. in 19 C W N 1236 (1). It seems to me that the intention of the Legislature was that if the Judge of the Court of Small Causes was an officer invested with jurisdiction to try Small Cause Court suits up to a certain limit, viz. whether a Munsif or a Subordinate Judge of a particular district, and if such officers were expressly invested by reference to a class of such officers with powers to try suits for rent of homestead lands by a Notification of the Local Government, such a notification would not be ultra vires of the statute but would be in substantial compliance with it.

For the aforesaid reasons I would answer the question referred to the Full Bench in the negative. The next point argued before us is that the Small Cause Court Judge has committed an error in law in coming to the conclusion that the relationship of a landlord and tenant exists between the parties. This is a pure question of fact and is supported by documentary evidence filed on behalf of the plaintiff. This finding cannot be assailed in revision under S. 25 of the Act. A plea of limitation has been raised for the first time before the High Court. Such a plea is permissible under S. 3, Limitation Act. It appears that the suit has been brought for four years' rent; as the case is not governed by the Bengal Tenancy Act it has been conceded on behalf of the opposite parties that the claim for rent beyond three years of the date of the institution of the suit is barred by limitation. The plaintiff's claim for the year 1337 B. S. must be dismissed. The decree of the Small Cause Court Judge will be varied accordingly.

6. Queen v. Peters, (1886) 16 Q B D 636=55 L J Mc 173=54 L T 545=34 W R 399=16 Cox C C 86.

7. Soundaram Ayyar v. Sennia Naicken, (1900) 23 Mad 547=10 M L J 329 (F B).

8. Ram Krishna Yeswant v. The President Vengurla Municipality, 1916 Bom 106=38 I C 881=41 Bom 867=19 Bom L R 83.

S. K. Ghose, J.—The question referred to the Full Bench is:

Whether in a notification under Cl. (8) of Sch. 2, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, it is necessary to confer powers by reference to the name of a particular Judge of a Court of Small Causes in order to enable him to try suits for the recovery of rent of homestead land under the Small Cause Court Procedure.

The reference arises out of an application made by the defendants under S. 25, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, against a decree in a suit for recovery of arrears of rent of homestead land situated within a Municipality. The suit was tried by Mr. S. Ahmed, Munsif of the Third Court at Alipore, under the Small Cause Court Procedure and one of the defences was that this procedure was not applicable. It appears that under S. 25, Bengal, Agra, and Assam Civil Courts Act 12 of 1887 the Local Government had by notification conferred upon Mr. Ahmed personally the jurisdiction of a Judge of a Court of Small Causes under the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, 1887 for the trial of suits cognizable by such Courts up to the value of Rs. 50. There is also a notification issued by the Local Government on 21st June 1904 which runs thus:

It is hereby notified that the Munsifs of Alipore and Sealdah in the district of the 24-Parganas are vested under Cl. (8) of Sch. 2, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (Act 9 of 1887), with power to try under the Small Cause Court Procedure suits for the recovery of homestead land within their respective jurisdiction when the value does not exceed Rs. 50.

The point is whether this notification is sufficient to confer upon Munsifs of Alipore and Sealdah in general and upon Mr. Ahmed in particular jurisdiction to try a suit for recovery of rent, other than house rent, under the Small Cause Court Procedure. The answer would be in the affirmative, it is contended, in accordance with the decisions in 35 Cal 677 (2), and 19 C W N 1238 (F N) (3); but it would be in the negative in accordance with the decision in 19 C W N 1236 (1). In the referring judgment Nasim Ali, J. states that he is inclined to take the latter view. Now, sub-s. (1) of S. 15, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act 9 of 1887, runs thus:

A Court of Small Causes shall not take cognizance of the suits specified in Sch. 2 as suits excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes.

Schedule 2 is headed "suits excepted from the cognizance of a Court of Small Causes," and Cl. (8) runs thus:

A suit for the recovery of rent, other than house rent, unless the Judge of the Court of Small Causes has been expressly invested by the Local Government with authority to exercise jurisdiction with respect thereto.

That there is a distinction made between a "Court" and a "Judge of the Court" is quite clear and it is borne out by the other provisions of the Act. Under S. 4:

"Court of Small Causes" means a Court of Small Causes constituted under this Act and includes any person exercising jurisdiction under this Act in any such Court.

Therefore, the expression "Court of Small Causes" under the Act would include the Judge presiding in the Court; in other words "unless there is something repugnant in the subject or context," a provision in the Act relating to a Court of Small Causes would apply also to the Judge. On the other hand "Judge" is not defined and "the Judge of the Court of Small Causes" (to use the expression in Cl. 8) is not necessarily an officer appointed under S. 6 of this Act, but may be an officer invested with powers under S. 25, Civil Courts Act 12 of 1887. In this connexion it may be noted that the natural distinction between a Court and a Judge as a person is recognized and maintained in the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act as a glance at Chap. II will show. Thus under S. 5 the Court may be established; under S. 6, the Judge may be appointed and he may be Judge of more than one Court; under S. 9, the Judge is liable to suspension or dismissal; and so on. S. 31 provides that a Judge of a Court of Small Causes may be appointed to some other office. Mr. Bose for the plaintiff opposite party has contended that the distinction is lost sight of in Ss. 32 and 33, but these two sections deal with the Court only and indeed the argument does not help Mr. Bose. So in the material Cl. (8), Sch. 2 it is the Judge that is the presiding officer of the Court who must be "expressly invested," with the necessary authority.

The next point is, what is a Munsif? Is he a Court or is he a person? Here again the provisions of Act 12 of 1887, which came into force on the same date as Act 9 viz., on 1st July 1887 preserve the natural distinction between an officer and the holder of the office. See for instance, Chap. 2 of the Act. S. 3 gives the four classes of Courts and S. 4 provides for the number of Judges and Munsifs. The succeeding sections deal with the different classes of officers, Ss. 7 and 12 in particular deal with Munsifs. S. 13 provides for the local limits of the jurisdiction of Courts while S. 19 deals with the jurisdiction of a Munsif. Chap. V deals with misfeasance which is purely personal to the officers concerned. The same distinction is seen in S. 38 which speaks of the presiding officer and S. 39. So far as the material S. 25 is concerned, its terms ensure that a particular Subordinate Judge or Munsif shall be given the necessary jurisdiction. But in Cl. (8), Sch. 2, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act, the terms require that the Judge of the Court shall be invested. Where a Munsif of Alipore is the Judge, and a notification like the one of 21st June 1904 invests such a Munsif with the necessary jurisdiction, it would seem to be sufficient compliance with the law. The case in 35 Cal 677 (2) did not touch the point at issue now. It merely held that Cl. (8), Sch. 2, would apply either to a Court of Small Causes constituted under the Act or to a Court invested with the jurisdiction of a Court of Small Causes. On the other hand, in C. R. 500 of 1914, 19 C W N 1238 (F N) (3) the material question came up expressly before Jenkins, C.J., and N. R. Chatterjea, J. The learned Judge said :

The notification (of 21st June 1904) is not happily worded and I can appreciate there are difficulties in the way of applying it to this case; still it seems to have been understood in a sense which makes it applicable to this case, and we therefore feel that we ought not to interfere and disturb the jurisdiction which apparently has been exercised without question for a considerable number of years.

What is stated here is almost a principle of factum valet, though not quite. On the other side is the decision in the case in 19 C W N 1236 (1), which the referring Judges are inclined to follow. In that case the judgment proceeded by first pointing out that a distinction is drawn by the legislature between a "Court of Small Causes" and a "Judge of the Court of Small Causes," and next that Cl. (8) requires that the Judge should have been expressly invested with authority to exercise jurisdiction. The judgment proceeds :

It is clear upon a clear reading of Cl. (8) and assigning to the term its natural meaning, that the legislature intended that suits for the recovery of rent should be tried under the Small Cause Court Procedure, only by such Judges as had been expressly authorised to exercise jurisdiction in that behalf, it was not intended that jurisdiction should be conferred by a general order on a particular Small Cause Court, irrespective of the qualification of the individual officer who may preside therein.

The judgment however did not go further and discuss the question whether a Munsif is a Court or an officer, in other words a Judge of the Court. Undoubtedly the notification of 21st June 1904 is not happily worded as pointed out by Jenkins, C. J. and N. R. Chatterjea, J. It also overlooks the question of the qualifications of the individual officer as pointed out by Mookerjea and Beachcroft, JJ. Still the notification confers the authority on the Judge when the latter belongs to a particular class of Munsifs. Therefore it complies with the terms of Cl. (8). It has been sought to be argued that the word "expressly" means "by name." There is no authority cited beyond the fact that in some cases Government have invested the officer by name. On the other hand, Government have also invested officers with powers ex officio. See for instance the list given at p. 588 of the Bengal Civil List up to 1st January 1936 showing various investments of powers ex officio in the case of certain Judicial Officers of the 24-Perganas, e. g. the Judge of the 24-Perganas is ex officio special Judge in that district under S. 115 (c), B. T. Act, which enacts that "the Local Government shall appoint one or more persons to be special Judge, etc." In such cases, to quote the language of Jenkins, C. J. "it seems to have been understood in a sense which makes it applicable to such particular case. On the other hand, the word "express" is defined thus in Wharton's Law Lexicon : "that which is not left to implication as express promise, express covenant." This is not dissimilar to the ordinary dictionary meaning (Oxford Dictionary) "definitely stated, not merely implied." This was the view taken by Patkar and Baker, JJ. in 30 Bom 741 (6) relying on 35 Cal 677 (2). Thus a notification investing the Judge of a particular Court of Small Causes in a particular district would be express enough to satisfy clause (8), though the name of the Judge is not mentioned. Yet the notification of 21st June 1904 is really not different from that. There are also such provisions as Section 36 of Bengal Act XII of 1887, where.

by the " Local Government may invest with the powers of any Civil Court under this Act by name or in virtue of office" etc. In my judgment, the question referred to the Full Bench for decision should be answered as follows: "In a notification under Cl. (8), Sch. 2, Provincial Small Cause Courts Act it is not necessary to confer powers by reference to the name of a particular Judge of a Court of Small Causes in order to enable him to try suits for the recovery of rent of homestead land under the Small Cause Court Procedure." On the merits of the case, it is conceded that one year's rent is barred by limitation and the decree must be modified accordingly. In other respects there is no case for interference.

Patterson, J.—I concur in the judgment of my learned brother Mukerji, J., and have nothing to add.

V.B./R.K. Reference answered in negative.

 A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 506
FULL BENCH

M. N. MUKERJI, JACK, D. N. MITTER,
S. K. GHOSE AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Nirode Chandra Mukherjee and others
—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Chairman of Commissioners of Kamarhati Municipality—Defendants—Respondents.

Full Bench Ref. No. 1 of 1936. Decided on 1st May 1936, from appellate decree of Addl. Dist. Judge, 24 Parganas, D/- 12th June 1933, in A. F. A. D. No. 1621 of 1933.

* (a) Bengal Municipal Act (3 of 1884 as amended by Act 4 of 1894), Ss. 30 and 22—Inserting words "including the subsoil and all" do not disjoin "not being private property etc." by which "all roads" is governed: 9 I C 562 and 62 Cal 692=163 I C 109: Overruled.

By inserting the words "including the subsoil and all" between the words "roads and bridges" in the opening sentence of S. 30 the legislature did not intend to disjoin the clause "not being private property, etc.", by which the words "all roads" had been governed all along since 1864. All that the legislature intended to do by the enactment was to include the vesting of the soil along with the surface of the road on the resting that takes place under S. 30 of the Act: 33 Cal 1290, Foll.; 1917 Cal 629, Ref.; 9 I C 562 and 62 Cal 692=163 I C 109, Overruled; English cases referred.

[P 510 C 1, 2]

(b) Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), S. 95—S. 95 does not make any substantial change in rights of Municipality in such pathway as Act 3 of 1884 deals with.

Section 95, Bengal Municipal Act, 15 of 1932, has not, beyond doing away with the definition of 'road' as contained in the Act of 1884 which led to some confusion and difference of opinion and introducing two definitions of 'private street' and 'public street' S. 3, Cl. (43) and S. 3 Cl. (44), which more precisely define the owners of the land concerned, has not made any substantial change in the rights of the Municipality in such pathways as the Act purports to deal with. [P 512 C 2]

(c) Interpretation of Statutes—Grammatical construction producing inconsistent results—Construction applying more consistently to Act in all parts is to be preferred.

A grammatical construction, which is open to so many objections and produces results which are unsatisfactory, can hardly be preferred to a construction, which though not strictly grammatical, applies more consistently to the Act, in all its parts: Easter Counties & Cos. v. Marriage, (1860) 9 H L C 32, Ref.

[P 512 C 1]

(d) Bengal Municipal Act (4 of 1884 as amended by Act 4 of 1894), S. 30—Road over which public have right of way vest in Municipality under S. 30.

Roads over which the public have a right of way, if they are not private property, vest in the Municipality under S. 30 of Act 3 of 1884, as amended by Act 4 of 1894: Case law discussed. [P 513 C 1]

Panchanan Ghose, Rama Prosad Mukhopadhyay, Sourindra Narain Ghose and Paresh Nath Mukherjee—for Appellants.

Bijan Kumar Mukherjee, Benoyendra Prosad Bagchi and Sourindra Kumar Ghose Chowdhury—for Respondents.

M. N. Mukerji, J.—The suit in connexion with which this reference has been made was in respect of a strip of land, said to be about 616 sq. ft. in area. The strip is in continuation of a public road known as the Pithuri Ghat Road, and is bounded on the east by an admittedly public road and on the west, by a pucca bathing ghat. In the plaint it is stated that there is a burning ghat adjoining the bathing ghat. On the north and south of the strip of land are admittedly lands belonging to the plaintiffs. It is also stated in the plaint that the said strip of land and the two ghats are private properties of the plaintiffs, belonging solely to them in rent-free right. The cause of action for the suit was described in the plaint as follows:

" The defendant Municipality has of late been trying to convert the plaintiffs' land into a Municipal road, and with that fraudulent object in view, is about to open up the disputed land so that 'solings' (i. e., bricks) and khoa (i. e., brick-bats) may be spread for making the same into a part of Pithuri Ghat Road."

The substantial prayers in the plaint were: that the plaintiffs' title to the strip of land be declared and that it be also declared that the defendant Municipality has no right, title or interest in the same or to open any road through the same, and also that an injunction might issue restraining the defendant Municipality from interfering with or disturbing the plaintiffs' possession of the said strip of land and from opening any road or passage through the same. The defendant Municipality in their written statement, besides taking other defences, denied the plaintiffs' title to and possession in the said strip of land and alleged in substance, that the same was a part and parcel of the Pithuri Ghat Road which belongs to the Municipality. It was further alleged that the ghats were public ghats and that the said strip of land is a road and is the only access to the bathing ghat and has all along been maintained by the Municipality.

The Munsif dismissed the suit, holding that the plaintiffs had failed to establish their title to the suit land and that the same was a part of the public road named the Pithuri Ghat Road and as such had vested in the defendant Municipality. The Additional District Judge, on appeal by the plaintiffs, held that the plaintiffs' title was made out. He held however that the strip of land was a public road or a public street, the evidence making it clear that:

The public in general and not the residents of the neighbourhood only have a right of way over the strip of land in question, and there is no instance of any member of the public having been disallowed the use of the strip of land as road.

On this finding he held that under S. 95, Bengal Municipal Act of 1932, which came into force on 1st December 1932, the strip of land, being admittedly a "public street" as defined in the Act, had become the property of the Municipality under S. 95 of the Act. He observed that even if it be held that the land, being private property, had not vested in the Municipality under S. 30, Bengal Municipal Act of 1894, and a declaration to that effect be made in favour of the plaintiffs the Municipality would be able to get rid of the declaration by instituting a separate suit for that purpose and relying on S. 95, Bengal Municipal Act of 1932. On this view of the matter the learned Judge affirmed the decision of the trial Court, dismissing the suit. The plaintiffs then preferred a second appeal to this Court. The Division Bench which heard the appeal has referred it to the Full Bench with the following order:

As we dissent from the decision pronounced by a Division Bench in 43 Cal 130 (1), under R. 2, Ch. 5 of the Appellate Side Rules we refer the appeal for the decision of the Full Bench and frame the following questions for decision: (1) Do roads over which the public have a right of way in a Municipal area vest in the Municipal Commissioners? (2) Was 43 Cal 130 (1) correctly decided?

The learned referring Judges in the order of reference have observed thus:

Our view is that under S. 30, Act 3 of 1884, as amended in 1894 a road including the subsoil vests in the Municipal Commissioners if the pathway is one over which the public have a right to pass. The phrase "not being private property" in that section, in our opinion, qualifies the words "bridges, tanks," etc., only. In our judgment, this is the grammatical interpretation of the section as amended, and if any other interpretation were given we should find it impossible to attach any meaning to the words "and all." This was pointed out by Coxe, J. in 9 I C 562 (2), which decision was followed by Nasim Ali, J. in 62 Cal 692 (3). We are however pressed by the decision of a Division Bench in 43 Cal 130 (1), where Fletcher and Richardson, JJ. following an obiter dictum made in 33 Cal 1290 (4), have held otherwise. We are of opinion, for the reasons stated above, that the said case has been wrongly decided and consider that Cl. (a), S. 95, Act 15 of 1932, has made no change in the law but it is of a declaratory nature, and that the decision of the Courts below is correct.

To deal with this reference I propose first of all to examine some of the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act 3 of 1884. S. 6, Cl. (13) of the Act, in defining the word "road," says:

In this Act, unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context, "road" means any road, street, square, court, alley or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not, over which the public have a right of way.

Paragraph 1, S. 30 of the Act, prior to its amendment by Act 4 of 1894, ran thus:

1. Chairman, Howrah Municipality v. Hari Das Dutt, 1917 Cal 629=33 I C 271=43 Cal 130=20 C W N 613.
2. Kumud Bandhu Das Gupta v. Kishori Lal Goswami, (1911) 9 I C 562.
3. Beer Bikram Kishore Manikya v. Chairman, Comilla Municipality, (1935) 62 Cal 692 = 163 I C 109.
4. Chairman, Howrah Municipality v. Kshetra, Krishna Mitter, (1906) 33 Cal 1290=10 C W N 1044=4 C L J 349.

All roads, bridges, tanks, ghats, wells, channels and drains in any Municipality (not being private property and not being maintained by Government or at the public expense), now existing or which shall hereafter be made, and the pavements, stones and other materials thereof, and all the erections, materials, implements and other things provided therefor, shall vest in, and belong to, the Commissioners.

And S. 31 of the Act was in these words :

The Commissioners at a meeting may agree with the person in whom the property in any road, bridge, tank, ghat, well, channel or drain is vested to take over the property therein or the control thereof, and after such agreement may declare by notice in writing put up thereon or near thereto that such road, bridge, tank, ghat, well, channel or drain has been transferred to the Commissioners. Thereupon the property therein or the control thereof (as the case may be) shall vest in the Commissioners, and such road, bridge, tank, ghat, well, channel or drain shall thenceforth be repaired and maintained out of the Municipal fund.

On a plain reading of the three provisions just quoted it seems to me clear that 'roads' as defined in the Act, that is to say, roads over which the public have a right of way [S. 6, Cl. (13)], prior to Act 4 of 1894, could be either not private property (S. 30) or property vested in some person (S. 31). The words not being private property and not being maintained by Government or at the public expense have been explained by this Court, and in my opinion rightly, in 33 Cal 1290 (4) thus:

The phrases connected by the conjunction 'and' must be taken distributively.

Giving this meaning to the words, there can be no question that S. 30, as it stood before Act 4 of 1894, meant that all roads over which the public have a right of way shall vest in the Commissioners, but roads being private property shall not so vest and roads maintained by Government or at the public expense shall also not vest. It is also clear that under S. 31 roads over which the public have a right of way but the property in which is vested in some person, or, in other words, which are private property, may be dealt with by agreement between such person and the Commissioners with the result that the property therein or the control thereof, as the case may be, may be taken over by the Commissioners. It is quite true that the Legislature was not particularly careful in drafting some of the sections of the Act, e. g. S. 217 in Cl. (1) of which the expression 'public road' issued, as the word 'public' therein would be redundant if the definition of 'road' as given in the Act is remembered, while in Cl. (5) thereof the word 'road' only is used. But it seems fairly clear that the legislature, while enacting Ss. 30 and 31, was dealing with two classes of roads in the Act, in both of which the public had a right of way, and one of which was private property and the other not private property. If that was so, the only meaning that can reasonably be attributed to the word 'public' in the definition of 'road' in section 6 (13) is that the word must have been used by the legislature not in its strict sense as meaning the public in general, but only in a loose sense, including in its category sections of the general public or strangers or outsiders, that is to say, persons other than the owner of the land on which the road runs. The Act, in my opinion, purported to deal with roads over which any of such bodies had a right of way, and left untouched such roads which were private pathways over which the owners thereof and none else had any right of way.

In such roads as the Act brought within its purview, the owner of the land itself might have his rights of ownership subject to the right of the land itself, might have lost his rights of ownership therein to the extent that it was a road, in which case it was not a private property. In the latter case the road vested in the Commissioners under S. 30 of the Act; and in the former case the Commissioners could, by way of agreement, take over the property in the road qua road or its control under S. 31 of the Act. That the Act does deal with roads over which the public have a right of way but to which S. 30 does not apply and which accordingly do not vest in the Commissioners cannot be disputed, 17 Cal 680 (5) at p. 684. The general law relating to the rights of the owner of the land vis a vis the persons who use the land as road, apart from the provisions of the Act, is the same in India as in England. There may be acquisition of a right of way by prescription by individuals as well as groups of individuals. Or it may be that there has been a dedication to the public, express or implied. As observed in 33 Cal 1290 (4):

Where the owner sets apart land for the use of the public and formally declares that such is his intention or he conveys lands to a Municipality or to trustees to hold for the use of the public, an implied dedication arises by operation of law from the acts of the owner and is really founded upon the principle of estoppel; it proceeds not upon the principle that a grant has actually been made, but rather on the principle that the owner having allowed the public to enjoy the user for any particular purpose is estopped from denying the right of the public to this enjoyment of such user In cases, however, where the dedication is not express but merely implied, and consequently there is no deed defining the extent of the rights created by the dedication, a question may arise as to whether the dedication is of the entire ownership in the land or merely of the right of user, because a dedication is a devotion to public uses, either of the land itself or of an easement in it by any unequivocal act of the owner of the fee manifesting such clear intention. An owner may appropriate land to public use and yet retain in himself all such rights in the soil as are compatible with the full exercise and enjoyment of the public use to which the property has been devoted. It is not essential to constitute a valid dedication that the legal title should pass from the owner; nor is it inconsistent with an effectual dedication that the owner should continue to make any and all uses of the land which do not interfere with the uses for which it is dedicated.

5. Ram Chandra Ghose v. Bally Municipality, (1890) 17 Cal 680.

To constitute a dedication of a way to the public by an owner of the soil there must be an intention so to dedicate, and user by the public is evidence of such intention; there may be dedication of a way to the public for a limited purpose, as for a footway, but there cannot be a dedication to a limited part of the public: (1843) 11 M & W 827 (6). And in order to establish that a road is a public road it is sufficient, if acts of user by the public are shown to have been acquiesced in by the owner of the land over which the road passes and these acts are of such a character as to warrant the inference that the owner intended to make over to the public the right to use the land as a public highway: 6 C L R 282 (7), referring to 2 Sm L C 10th Edn 157 (8). Such being the law, there may be roads over which the public have a right of way and yet the road qua road may still be private property. But upon the finding at which the Court of appeal below has arrived and to which I have already referred, namely that the public in general and not the residents of the neighbourhood only have a right of way over the strip of land in question and that there has been no instance of any member of the public having been ever disallowed the use of the strip of land as road, there can be no room for the contention that the road qua road is still the private property of the plaintiffs. If the case had to be dealt with under Act 3 of 1884 prior to the amendment introduced by Act 4 of 1894, there could be no question whatever that S. 30 of the Act would have applied to the road in question. The question, however, is whether the latter Act introduced any change in the law. In the District Municipal Improvement Act (3 of 1864), there was in S. 2 the following definition of "Highway":

The word "Highway" shall mean any road, street, square court, alley or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not, over which the public have a right of way; and also the road way over any public bridge or causeway.

And in S. 10 of the Act it was said that all public highways 'not being private property' shall vest in and belong to the Municipal Commissioners, while under S. 11 the Commissioners could by agreement with the person in whom the property in any highway was vested, take it over so as to vest it in themselves. In the next Act, the Bengal Municipal Consolidation Act (5 of 1876), 'road' was defined in precisely the same words in which it was defined in the later Act, the Bengal Municipal Act (3 of 1884), the word 'Highway' being abolished. The reason for such abolition probably was that the technical meaning attributed to the word by the English Highway Act of 1835 was not considered suitable to this country. Ss. 32 and 33 of the Act made similar provisions, except for the inclusion of other things, namely, bridges, embankments, tanks, ghats, wharves, jetties, wells, channels and drains, as there were in Ss. 10 and 11 of the previous Act. These provisions were produced in Ss. 30 and 31 of Act 3 of 1884. It seems noteworthy that in all the three Acts of 1864, 1876 and 1884, the same distinctive feature has all along remained present, namely that notwithstanding that each of these Acts brought within its purview all roads, over which the 'public' had a right of way, a distinction was made and kept up all through as between roads which were not private property and roads the property in which remained vested in the owners of the land itself.

6. Poole v. Huskinson, (1843) 11 M & W 827=152 E R 1039=63 R R 782.

7. Anderson v. Jagadamba Debi, (1880) 6 C L R 282.

8. Dovaston v. Payne, (1795) 2 Sm L C 10th Edn. p. 157=2 H Bl 527=3 R R 497.

Two cases came up before the High Court, one under the Act of 1876 and the other under the Act of 1864. In the former of these cases, 13 Cal 171 (9), the Municipality claimed compensation money awarded under the Land Acquisition Act for the whole of the soil of what was found to be a public road, on the ground that they had a title to the property under S. 32 of the Act of 1876, while the Zemindar claimed it on the ground that notwithstanding that the road was a public road the soil was his. Following the decision in 7 Q B 47 (10), it was held that "road" in S. 32 of the Act did not mean everything above and below the road and that the sub-soil, therefore, did not belong to the Municipality. In the second case it was held similarly that S. 10, Act 3 of 1864 did not deprive a person of any right of private property that he may have in land used as a public road, nor did that section vest the sub-soil of such land in a Municipality, and that when such land was no longer required as a public road the owner was entitled to recover possession. In this last mentioned decision reliance was placed on the earlier decision in 13 Cal 171 (9) and reference also was made to the decision in 7 All 362 (11), in which it was held that the word 'road' used in the N. W. P. and Oudh Municipal Act (15 of 1873) did not include the sub-soil. It was at this stage that Act 4 of 1894 was passed, S. 22 of which introduced the words 'including the soil and all' between the words 'roads and bridges' in the opening sentence of S. 30, Act 3 of 1884.

The question is whether by inserting these words the Legislature intended to disjoin the clause "not being private property", etc., by which the words "all roads" had been governed all along since 1864. It should be noted that the effect of such disjunction would be to obliterate the distinction which I have pointed out above as between the two classes of roads of which the Acts had all along taken cognizance, over both of which the 'public' had a right of way, giving the word

'public' not the strict but the loose meaning in which I understand the word as used in the Acts. I am not prepared to hold that such was the intention of the Legislature. I am inclined to the view that all that the Legislature intended to do by the enactment aforesaid was to include the vesting of the soil along with the surface of the road under S. 30 of the Act. In England although the surface only of a highway vests in a Local Authority, Courts have enlarged the meaning of such vesting so as to give Local Authorities a limited right to the stratum of the subsoil immediately below the surface: See (1878) 4 Q B D 104 (12), (1880) 14 Ch D 785 (13) and (1896) A C 434 (14). These decisions laid it down that not merely the street surface but something more passes; so much of the depth below the surface, as was essential for the making, maintenance, occupation and exclusive possession of the street for the use of the public being included in the vesting.

The law in England as it stands today, as the result of judicial decisions and statutory vesting, is that the freehold is not transferred to the Authorities, but the effect is to vest in the Authorities the property in the surface of the street or road and in so much of the actual soil below and the air above as may reasonably be required for its control, protection and maintenance as a highway for the use of the public, and to this extent the former owner is divested of the property (Halsbury's Laws of England, Hailsham Edition, Vol. 16, p. 300, where some of the above-mentioned cases, as also a number of other cases, are cited). Amongst these, reference may be made to (1903) 1 Ch 437 (15), in which Collins, M. R., said: "That which is vested is the area of the user." To what extent, if any, the Indian Legislature has gone beyond these decisions, by using such words as "and belong to" in S. 30 or "to take over the property

9. Chairman, Naihati Municipality v. Kishori Lal Goswami, (1886) 13 Cal 171.
10. The Vestry of St. Mary, Newington v. Jacobs, (1870) 7 Q B 47.
11. Nihal Chand v. Azmat Ali Khan, (1885) 7 All 362=1885 A W N 56.

12. Coverdale v. Charlton, (1878) 4 Q B D 104=48 L J Q B 178=40 L T 88=27 W R 257.
13. Rolls v. Vestry of St. George Southwark, (1880) 14 Ch D 785=49 L J Ch 691=43 L T 140=28 W R 867.
14. Mayor of Tunbridgewells v. Baird, (1896) A C 434=65 L J Q B 451=74 L T 385=60 J P 788.
15. Finchley Electric Light Co. v. Finchley Urban Council, (1903) 1 Ch 437=72 L J Ch 297=88 L T 215=51 W R 375=67 J P 97=1 L J R 244=19 T L R 238.

therein" in S. 31 of Act III of 1884 or similar expressions respectively, in Ss. 95 and 96 of Act 15 of 1932, is a matter into which I do not desire to enter here. But the point that I am now on is that the Legislature by (sic) the amending the Act of 1894 included the soil along with the road in the vesting that takes place under S. 30.

In 33 Cal 1290 (4), in which a ghat was concerned, Mookerjee, J., (Rampini, J., agreeing) in construing S. 30 as it ran after the amendment aforesaid took it that the expression "not being private property", etc., still governed the words "all roads." This, it is true, was obiter. In 43 Cal 130 (1), the facts were the following: the plaintiffs alleged that a pathway was private and not a public pathway and asked for a perpetual injunction restraining the Municipality from interfering with its exclusive user by the plaintiffs. Their case was that the Municipality had been trying to make the pathway a public pathway by causing false reports to be submitted by the Municipal Officers and getting entries made to the effect in the existing maps and records. The Municipality pleaded inter alia that the pathway was not a private pathway but was a 'road' within the definition of the Act and was vested in the Municipality, and that, in the alternative, it was a road under the control of the Municipality. The Munsif granted the injunction, holding that the pathway was a private one. The Judge, on appeal by the Municipality, held that though the pathway was a 'road' over which the public might have a right of way, it did not necessarily vest in the Municipality under S. 30 of the Act, and made a declaration to that effect, withdrawing the injunction which the Munsif had granted. He thought that it was not necessary for him to decide the question whether the pathway was one over which the public had, as a matter of fact, a right of way and whether, in that event, the pathway was under the control of the Municipality. The case was taken on appeal to this Court by the Municipality and in that appeal it was held that the construction of S. 30, which the Judge had adopted, was correct, but it was necessary to determine the second question which the Judge had left undetermined; and in that view of the matter the case was remanded for further hearing and fresh decision. Fletcher, J. (Richardson, J., agreeing) observed thus in his judgment:

"The first question is—Is the pathway vested in the Municipality under S. 30, Bengal Municipal Act? That depends upon the construction of the section. The section has been amended by recent legislation and it is argued that by reason of that amendment the statute operates to vest all roads whether private or not within the limits of the Municipality. That view is supported by two unreported decisions of this Court, both by a single Judge of this Court. On the other hand in a considered judgment of Mookerjee, J. in 33 Cal 1290 (4), the learned Judge has put what to my mind is the only possible construction of S. 30. I agree with the learned Judge in the view he has expressed there as to the meaning of the section. Any other view, I think, is outside the range of argument.

Of the two unreported decisions referred to in the above passage one was the decision in 9 I C 562 (2). In that case Coxe, J. held that upon the findings of fact arrived at by both the Courts below the pathway in question which the plaintiff in that suit claimed as his private property was not a 'road' within the meaning of S. 6 (13) of the Act, a finding which was enough to support the decree which was being challenged before him. But the learned Judge went on to construe S. 30 of the Act and observed thus:

It appears to me that if the words in parenthesis apply to 'roads' as well as to 'bridges, tanks' etc., the words 'and all' in the first line of the section are superfluous. Moreover, as is pointed out by Mr. Collier, a commentator on this Act, whose view on this point appears to me to be correct, before the amendment of the Act in 1894 the words in parenthesis could hardly have applied to 'roads', because before the amendment the word 'road' did not include the soil, but related merely to the surface, and having regard to the definition of road in the Act it was not possible that the surface of any road, as defined in the Act could be private property. In 1894 the words 'including the soil' were added and it then became necessary to decide whether the subsoil of roads, which had not up till then been included in the scope of the Act, should in the case of private property vest in the Commissioners or not. The express insertion of the words 'and all' is an indication that the legislature intended that the subsoil should follow the surface, and should cease to be private property as the surface had already ceased under the original Act before the amendment. In any case, as the words at present run, they must grammatically be construed in the sense contended for by the appellant. It is true that it is difficult, if not impossible, to reconcile this construction with S. 31. But this difficulty may be due to a slip in drafting and need not compel me to construe S. 30 otherwise than in the ordinary grammatical way. If, therefore, the lands in suit are a road as defined in the Act they must, I think, vest in the Municipality under S. 30.

The observations quoted above are obiter. Nextly they have for their foundation an erroneous assumption that before the amendment of 1894 the words in parenthesis did not govern the word 'roads'—an assumption which is clearly untenable and has not been sought to be justified before us. Thirdly, they proceed on the basis of another assumption that having regard to the definition of the word 'road' in the Act it was not possible that the surface of any 'road' could be private property. And this assumption entirely overlooks the distinction to which I have referred and which, as I have already stated, has been consistently maintained in the Acts of 1864, 1876 and 1884. Lastly as has been noticed by the learned Judge himself, the construction which found favour with him would not fit in with the very next section; and the difficulty can only be removed by making another assumption, equally unwarranted, that there was a slip in drafting that section. If there was a slip, it is clear that that slip was not corrected ever since 1864. A grammatical construction, which is open to so many objections and produces results which are so unsatisfactory, can hardly be preferred to a construction, which, though not strictly grammatical, applies more consistently to the act in all its parts: see 9 H L C 32 (16). The other unreported decision referred to in the judgment of Fletcher, J. gives no reasons, and need not be discussed. There is a recent decision of this case, 62 Cal 692 (3), in which my learned brother Nasim Ali, J. has adopted the aforesaid grammatical construction.

The learned Judge has not gone so far as Coxe, J. did, and has not suggested that prior to the amendment of 1894 the words in parenthesis did not govern the word 'roads'.

I am firmly of opinion that to give a reasonable and consistent meaning to the provisions of the Act the grammatical construction based on the principle of proximity should not be adopted, and that S. 30 of the Act should be construed in the manner in which it was construed by Mookerjee, J. (Rampini, J. agreeing) in 33 Cal 1290 (4), and by Fletcher, J.

(Richardson, J. agreeing) in 43 Cal 130 (1). In that view of the matter, there can be no question that upon the findings of the Court of appeal below as regards the character of the road in the present case, the road, qua road, including the subsoil, was vested in and does belong to the Commissioners under S. 30 of Act 3 of 1884 as amended by S. 22 of Act 3 of 1894. I am also of opinion that S. 95, Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), has not, beyond doing away with the definition of 'road' as contained in the Act of 1884 which led to some confusion and difference of opinion and introducing two definitions of 'private street' and 'public street' [S. 3, Cl. (43) and S. 3 Cl. (44)], which more precisely define the rights of the owner of the land concerned, has not made any substantial change in the rights of the Municipality in such pathways as the Act purports to deal with.

In any case, the words of S. 95 of the Act are, in my opinion, so plain that I can see no escape from the conclusion that the land in the present suit, coming as it admittedly does within the definition of a 'public street,' has on the Act coming into force, vested in and came to belong to the Commissioners even if it be assumed that the repealed Act had not already produced any such effect. The Court of appeal below appears to have been of the same opinion. We have been asked on behalf of the plaintiffs to determine to what extent their proprietary rights, as owners of the land, have been lost to them, by the operation of the Acts or any of them. We do not see any necessity to go into a question which has not yet arisen and will have to be decided when, if ever it will arise. Here the only cause of action upon which the suit was founded was one which arose in connection with the surface of the road and its soil meaning by that word so much of the depth below the surface as was essential for the making, maintenance, occupation and exclusive possession of the road qua road for the use of the public. It was on that cause of action that the reliefs were asked for in the suit. It is true that the Municipality denied the title of the plaintiffs to the land itself, but this they did only as a plea to repel the prayer for such reliefs as were asked for and as were pertinent to the cause of action. That plea has been overruled by the learned Judge and so no controversy on that question can ever arise again. But to avoid any difficulty arising in future I think we should make it clear in our order that the plaintiffs' prayer for declaration of their title to the plaint land qua road including its soil and for a declaration that the defendant Municipality has no right, title or interest in the same, and also their prayer for the injunction as made in the plaint are dismissed, and that no other question is now decided. The result, in my judgment, is that the questions formulated for our decision should be answered in the manner following : 1. Roads over which the public have a right of way, if they are not private property, vest in the Municipality under S. 30 of Act 3 of 1884 as amended by Act 4 of 1894. 2. Yes, in so far as it is a decision on the question of construction of the aforesaid section. And the appeal should be dismissed with costs, fee being allowed for the hearing before the Division Bench according to scale, and for the hearing before this Bench at five gold mohurs

16. Easter Counties & Companies v. Marriage, (1860) 9 H L C 32=31 L J Ex Ch 73=7 Jour N S 53=8 W R 748.

Jack, J.—This Reference has arisen out of an appeal in which the plaintiff appellants pray for a declaration of their title to a strip of road in Kamarhati Municipality connecting their private ghat with the Pithuri Ghat Municipal road. In the suit which was instituted on 3rd November 1930, they also prayed for an injunction on the municipal commissioners restraining the latter from interfering with their possession. The defendant Municipality deny the plaintiff's title and maintain that the disputed land is part of the Pithuri ghat road belonging to the Municipality which has all along been maintaining it. It has been found that the disputed piece of road way is on land belonging to the plaintiffs but that the public have a right of way over the land as shown by their free and uninterrupted use of it for a very long time. On these findings of fact the suit was dismissed. In second appeal the plaintiffs maintain that their title should have been declared (even if they were given no other relief) on the ground that under the provisions of the Bengal Municipal Act 6 of 1884 (which was the Act in force when that suit was instituted), the land being private property has not vested in the Municipality and that Bengal Municipal Act 15 of 1932 has no retrospective effect.

The appeal has been referred to this Bench on account of the decision of the 43 Cal 130 (1), by which the learned referring Judges state that they are pressed. In connection with the reference two questions are framed for our decision, viz. (1) Do roads over which the public have (sic) a right of way in a Municipality vest in Municipal Commissioners? (2) Was the case, 43 Cal 130 (1), correctly decided? Under S. 95, Bengal Municipal Act 15 of 1932, all public streets including the soil, the pavements, stones and other materials within the Municipality shall vest in and belong to the Commissioners. Public street (as defined in S. 3, Cl. 30) means any street, road, lane, gully, alley, passage, pathway, square or court, whether a thoroughfare or not over which the public have a right of way.

The first question for decision must therefore be answered in the affirmative. But obviously the learned Judges really want our decision whether under S. 30 of Act 3 of 1884 as amended in 1894 a road including the sub-soil vests in the Municipal Commissioners if the roadway is one over which the public have a right to pass. This is their view and they are of opinion that the case, 43 Cal 130 (1), in which the contrary view has been expressed, was wrongly decided. In that suit the plaintiffs sued the Howrah Municipality for a perpetual injunction restraining them from interfering with the exclusive use of a certain pathway by the plaintiffs, and claiming that it was private pathway. It was held that the pathway was a private pathway and therefore did not vest in the Municipal Commissioners under S. 30 of the Act of 1884 as amended by the Act of 1894 as that section did not operate to vest all roads, whether private or not, within the Municipality in the Municipal Commissioners. That decision I think was right. The learned Judges in that case however also held that if the public had a right of way over the pathway then the Municipality would have a right of control under later sections of the Act, inferring that in that case the path would not vest in the Municipal Commissioners. In this, with all due respect, I think they were wrong for, if the public had a right of way, the owner would have ceased to have any separate right if the path was a pathway for, as a pathway, it would have ceased to be private property, and under S. 30 of the Act would have vested in the Municipality. The learned Judges who have referred these questions reached the same conclusion as to the application of S. 30 of the Act of 1884, but by a different route. "Road" is defined in the Act of 1884, as a road, street, square, court, alley or passage, whether a thoroughfare or not, over which the public have a right of way, and S. 30 of the Act runs as follows:

All roads (including the soil and all) bridges, ghats, wells, channels and drains in any Municipality (not being private property and not being maintained by Government or at the public expense) now existing, or which shall hereafter be made and the pavements, stones and other materials thereof and all the erections, materials, implements and other things provided therefor shall vest in and belong to the Commissioners.

The learned Judges say that the words in parenthesis "not being private property and not being maintained by Government or at public expense" do not apply to the roads but only to the bridges, tanks, etc., because of the words "and all" inserted after roads and before bridges etc.; the context however shows that the words "not being private property" must have been intended to apply to roads notwithstanding the separating words "and all" for otherwise the words "in any Municipality" would also be divorced from the words "all roads", and further the words "not being maintained by the Government or at the public expense" would be disconnected from the words "all roads", though in each case it is evident that they were used in connection with the roads as well as bridges, etc. I am not impressed with the interpretation favoured by the learned referring Judges based on the grammatic construction of the sentence following the decision of two single sitting Judges in 9 I C 562 (2) and 62 Cal 692 (3), but rejected by their Lordships Rampini and Mookerjee, JJ. in 33 Cal 1290 (4). My impression is that the words "and all" were possibly introduced merely to make the sentence more euphonious. If it had read "all roads (including the soil) bridges, tanks, etc.," it would not have been so euphonious as the sentence "all roads (including the soil) and all bridges, tanks, etc." and the additional words were added when the clause "including the soil" was introduced by the amending Act of 1894. The use of the word "private" as applying to roads is explained I think because roads in this section as in S. 31 and in S. 217, Cl. (1) (where public roads are referred to) meant roads in the ordinary sense including private roads and not exclusively roads over which the public had a right of way the definition of roads in the Act not applying as repugnant to the context. Long continuous user by the public with the owner's knowledge and acquiescence raises a presumption of dedication to the public for use as a road including such portions of the sub-soil as were necessary for the maintenance of the road and it is these non-private rights in the land that vest in the Municipality. This was the view taken in 33 Cal 1290 (4). Accordingly such roads as roads cannot be regarded as private property and vest in the Municipality. Since therefore the plaintiffs' claim was really for declaration to their title to the land in suit as a road-way the suit was rightly dismissed though both the Courts have found that the plaintiffs have a good title to the land over which the road was made.

The discussion raised in this appeal is somewhat academic for S. 30 of the Act of 1894 is no longer of any practical importance whatever since there can be no question that under S. 95, Municipal Act of 1932, all roads in a Municipality over which the public have a right of way now vest in the Commissioners; and, if S. 30 of the amended Act of 1894 had been construed against the Municipality, the Municipality could immediately bring a suit under the existing law and get a declaration that the land had vested in the Municipality. There is ample authority for the view that in such cases the law as it now is can be applied to lessen litigation. For example, the cases 20 C L J 107 (17) and 47 C L J 530 (18) may be referred to. I agree therefore with my learned brother Mukerji, J. that the appeal should be dismissed, the first question answered in the affirmative and the second question partly in the affirmative and partly in the negative as I have indicated.

D. N. Mitter, J.—I have had the pleasure and the advantage of reading beforehand the judgment just delivered by my learned brother Mukerji, J. I agree entirely that the question referred to the Full Bench should be answered in the way he has answered them. I so entirely agree with the conclusions reached by him and generally with the reasons on which the said conclusions are based that I have nothing further to add.

17. Rai Charan Mandal v. Biswa Nath Mondal, 1915 Cal 103=26 I C 410=20 C L J 107.

18. Suresh Chandra v. Kanti Chandra, 1928 Cal 436=110 I C 715=47 C L J 530.

S. K. Ghose, J.—The questions of law referred to the Full Bench are :

(1) Do roads over which the public have a right of way in a Municipality vest in the Municipal Commissioners?

(2) Was the case, 43 Cal 130 (1), correctly decided?

The matter arises out of a second appeal preferred by the plaintiffs whose case is that the land in suit is their private property and that the Kamarhaty Municipality has no title to it. This land is a continuation of a public street which is on the east side; on the west there is a private ghat of the plaintiffs. The suit was instituted on 3rd November 1930 when the Bengal Municipal Act 3 of 1884 was in force, but during its pendency that Act was replaced by the Bengal Municipal Act 15 of 1932. The Courts below have concurred in finding that the land in question is included in the rent-free property of the plaintiffs and that the public have a right of way over it so that it is a "road" as defined in S. 5 (13) of the Act of 1884. The contention of the plaintiffs-appellants is that in accordance with S. 30 of the Act of 1884 the property in the road remains with them and does not vest in the Municipality. The lower appellate Court pointed out that under S. 95 of the Act of 1932 all public streets, without reservation of private property in such streets, have become vested in the Municipality, and it held that the declaration which is sought for under the old Act would be infructuous because the Municipality could by another suit obtain a declaration in its favour under S. 95 of the new Act. Thereupon a question arose as to whether the new Act would have retrospective effect, and the contention for the Municipality was that S. 95 of the new Act has made no change in the law but is of a declaratory nature. This contention has found favour with the learned referring Judges. The question is whether under S. 30, Act 3 of 1884, as amended in 1894 a road, including its soil, vests in the Municipal Commissioners if the public have a right of way over that road. The learned referring Judges take the view that the phrase "not being private property" in S. 30 does not refer to "all roads, including the soil, that it only refers to the succeeding words "and all bridges, tanks, etc." This they consider to be the grammatical meaning of the section as amended. In this they have the support of two decisions of this Court. In 9 I C 562 (2) Coxe, J. thought that if the words in parenthesis apply to roads as well as to bridges, tanks, etc., the words "and all" in the first line of the section would be superfluous and that the express insertion of the words "and all" was an indication that the legislature intended that the subsoil should follow the surface and should cease to be private property, as the surface had already ceased under the original Act before the amendment of 1894. In taking this view Coxe, J. was following the commentary of Mr. Collier. The difficulty in the way of this view, as Coxe, J. himself says, is that it is difficult, if not impossible, to reconcile this construction with S. 31. But this difficulty may be due to a slip in drafting and need not compel me to construe S. 30 otherwise than in the ordinary grammatical way.

It does not appear that Coxe, J. had before him the earlier case in 33 Cal 1290 (4) which was decided by Rampini and Mookerjee, JJ. in 1906. There the question was with regard to a ghat and S. 30 of the Act of 1884 was construed from that point of view. Mookerjee, J. mentioned that under S. 30, as it stood before the amendment by Act 4 of 1894, the term "road" comprised only the surface of the road and not the subsoil underneath it as was held in 13 Cal 171 (9) and 20 Cal 732 (19). In 1894 the legislature amended the section so as to make all roads, including the soil, vest in the commissioners. A question was raised before us as to the true effect of the words not being private property and not being maintained by Government at . . . public expense which find place in S. 30. In my opinion the phrases connected by the conjunction "and" must be taken distributively and not collectively. The section clearly means that all roads, etc., shall vest in the commissioners, but roads, etc., being private property shall not so vest, and roads, etc., maintained by Government or at public expense shall also not vest. The intention of the legislature appears to have been not to vest in the commissioners such roads, etc., as are either private property or are maintained by Government or at the public expense. But here also a little difficulty was felt.

19. Modhu Sudan Kundu v. Promoda Nath Roy, (1893) 20 Cal 732.

So far as ghats are concerned however it may be observed that Ss. 30 and 32 overlap and there is an apparent inconsistency.

It was held in that case that the word ghat in S. 30 was not intended to include the burning ground that the title to the burning ground did not vest in the Municipality, but that the ghat itself belonged to the Municipality. The next case, 43 Cal 130 (1), was decided in 1915 by Fletcher and Richardson, JJ. There the subject-matter was a pathway which was held to be private, and the question was whether it vested in the municipality under S. 30. Fletcher, J. discarded the view of Coxe, J. in 9 I C 562 (2) which was quoted in argument and followed that of Mookerjee, J. in 33 Cal 1290 (4) declaring "any other view I think is altogether outside the range of argument." Then he proceeded to say:

Then comes the other question. The learned Judge has not found whether the public have or have not a right to go over the pathway in question. If the public have a right to go over the private pathway then the Municipality, under certain later sections of the Act, have been given the power of control, the difference being that, in the case of roads vested in the Municipality, they are the body responsible for the lighting, watering, sewerage and clearing the roads and, in the other case, where the road is not so vested in the Municipality, they have only the power of control to prevent the road from becoming a nuisance or the rights of the public from being interfered with. The learned Judge has failed to consider that case altogether and he has made a declaration that this is a private pathway.

Ultimately the case was remanded for the determination of this question. Therefore the view taken was that private pathways do not vest in the municipality under S. 30, but that if the public have a right of way over such a pathway the municipality have "a right of control as conferred by the later sections of the Act". These and other cases were before Nasim Ali, J. in 62 Cal 692 (3) which was decided in 1935. He favoured the view that "private property" would not refer to "roads". But he proceeded to remark:

If however the words "private property" be taken to refer to roads as well, only private roads or pathways would be exempted . . . S. 31 evidently contemplates private roads, the surface of which did not vest in the Municipality under S. 30 of the Act before the amendment of 1894.

Mr. Panchanan Ghose for the appellants before us has strenuously contended that the parenthetical clause "not being private property etc." must refer back to "all roads", finding support from Coxe, J., and Nasim Ali, J., and further that "private property" includes land belonging to a private individual but over which the public have a right of way, such as the land in dispute in this case. His contention is that the public right is a right of passage only and the owner retains his property in the soil and that therefore such a "road" would be "private property" and would not "vest in and belong to the commissioners." Dr. Mukherji for the other side has contended that the parenthetical clause does not apply to "all roads" and that even if it does the word "roads" has been loosely used and not strictly in accordance with its definition in the Act. According to the latter argument, only such roads are excepted as are private roads qua roads i. e., over which the public have no right of way. In this connexion Dr. Mukherji has contended that it is a well established canon that a grammatical construction should not be followed if it leads to inconsistency if not absurdity. As to this it is just as well as to recognize that opinion is by no means uniform as to what the grammatical construction of the particular passage in S. 30 is. What Coxe, J. took to be the grammatical construction did not find favour with Fletcher, J. who took it to be "altogether outside the range of argument. A reference to the older Acts will now be useful. In the District Municipal Improvement Act, Act 3 of 1864 the relevant S. 10 runs as follows :

All public highways in any place to which this Act shall be extended (not being the property of and repaired by and kept under the control of the Government, and not being private property) existing at the time this Act comes into operation, or which shall afterwards be made, and the pavements, stones and other materials thereof, and also all erections, materials, implements, and other things provided for such highways, shall vest in, and belong to the Municipal Commissioners.

Here there is no question that the parenthetical clause, which is practically the same as in S. 30 of the Act of 1884, refers to "all public highways." "Highway" is defined thus :

Highway shall mean any Road, Street, Square, Court, Alley, or Passage, whether a thoroughfare or not, over which the public have a right of way; and also the roadway over any public bridge or causeway.

With the exception of the last clause the definition is the same as that of a "road," in the subsequent Acts. But in

S. 10 the words "all public" before "highways" is noteworthy. The next S. 11 runs thus:

It shall be lawful for the Municipal Commissioners to agree with the person or persons in whom the property in any highway is vested, to take over the property therein, and after such agreement to declare by notice in writing put up in any part of such highway that the same has become a public highway. Thereupon such highway shall vest in the Municipal Commissioners, and shall thenceforth be repaired and kept out of the Municipal Fund.

The next Act was the Bengal Municipal Act, 1876, (Act 5 of 1876), in which the corresponding sections are Ss. 32 and 33. The first paragraph of S. 32 runs thus:

All roads, bridges, embankments, tanks, ghats, wharves, jetties, wells, channels and drains in any Municipality (not being private property) and not being maintained by Government or at the public expense, now existing or which shall hereafter be made, and the pavements, stones and other materials thereof, and all erections, materials, implements and other things provided therefor, shall vest in and belong to the Commissioners.

It will be noted that the term "roads" is substituted for "public highways," an expression which has a technical meaning in English law, and between "roads" and the parenthetical clause some new items "bridges, etc.," are introduced. It is a reasonable inference that the parenthetical clause does not cease to govern "roads" and that it governs all the items "roads, bridges etc." S. 6 (16) gives a definition of "road" which is practically the same as that of "highways" in the previous Act and is identical with the definition in the subsequent Act. S. 33 also mentions "road." In the succeeding Act 3 of 1884, Ss. 30 and 31 maintain the identical language and provisions. Thereafter occurred decisions to the effect that the word "roads" comprised only the surface of the roads, but did not include the subsoil which belonged to the Zemindar within whose estate the road was situated: 13 Cal 171 (9) and 20 Cal 732 (19). Hence the amendment by Act 4 of 1894 by which the words "including the soil and all" were introduced between the words "roads" and "bridges." Obviously this amendment was not intended to disturb the force of the parenthetical clause which remained where it was and must govern "roads" as also the other items "bridges," etc. This is consistent with the interpretation put upon the section by Mookerjee, J. in 33 Cal 1290 (4). But Fletcher, J. in 43 Cal 130 (1) sought to go further and exclude from the scope of

S. 30 roads over which the public have a right of way by referring them to a later section, meaning possibly S. 31. The contention of Mr. Ghose for the appellants that roads over which the public have a right of way are still private property is based upon authorities which were not concerned with the amendment of 1894.

The decision in 13 Cal 171 (9) follows the English case (1872) 7 Q B 47 (20). In 25 Mad 635 (21) the matter in issue was the meaning of the phrase "vesting streets in a Municipal Council" with particular reference to the Madras District Municipalities Act. The current of authorities in England and India, including 13 Cal 171 (9) and 20 Cal 732 (19), was considered and it was held that such vesting does not transfer to the municipal authority the rights of the owner in the site or soil over which the street exists, that it does not own the soil from the centre of the earth usque ad coelum, but that it has only the right to manage and control the surface of the soil and so much of the soil below and of the space above the surface as is necessary to enable it to maintain the street as a street. This view was adopted by Mookerjee and Cuming, JJ. in 44 Cal 689 (22). That was a case in which the vesting of a street was considered with reference to the Calcutta Municipal Act, and 13 Cal 171 (9) was also cited. The amendment of 1894 was not under discussion. It has been said that the effect of the amendment is that by the addition of the words "including the soil" in 1894, the Commissioners have been constituted the owners of the roads and all the soil beneath and therefore the amendment overrules the law as formerly laid down. It is however another question whether the ownership of the soil will continue in the Municipality where the road has been definitely abandoned or has ceased to exist. For our present purpose it may be said that the effect of the addition of the words "including the soil" is only this: that where the road vests in the Municipality the soil vests also, but this does not touch the provision that a road which is private property does not vest.

20. Vestry of St. Mary, Navington v. Jacobs, (1872) 7 Q B 47.

21. Sundaram Aiyar v. Municipal Council Madura, (1902) 25 Mad 635=12 M L J 37.

22. Khetra Mohan Ghose v. Corporation of Calcutta, 1917 Cal 95=37 I O 96=44 Cal 689=21 O W N 234=24 O L J 358.

In the present Bengal Municipal Act 15 of 1932 the corresponding sections are Ss. 95 and 96. The language is completely changed though the purport of the enactment appears to be the same. The Act defines public street, S. 3 (44), the relevant words being the same as in the case of "highways" in the Act of 1864 and of "roads" in the succeeding Acts; but goes further and defines "private street" in a negative way (Cl. 43), but subject to a minimum requirement as to dimensions or size, to that extent introducing a new provision in the law. "Street" is defined as meaning a public or private street (Cl. 51). In S. 95 (1) (a) the term used is "all public streets." The parenthetical clause of the previous Acts finds place in sub-s. (1) but the clause referring to private property is omitted. S. 96 on the other hand refers to "any street," etc. Thus all through the various enactments we find two sections which embrace, among other things, all roads with which a Municipality has to deal: (1) roads, not being private property, which vest in the Municipal Commissioners, and (2) roads, property in which vests with private parties who may arrange with the Commissioners as regards control. This gives support to Dr. Mukherji's contention that the word "roads" (or highways or streets) has been loosely used in the two sections and that S. 30 in particular excludes only such roads which are private property qua "roads" and not roads over which the public have a right of way. Private property qua roads are referred to in the succeeding section. It is further pointed out that public roads comprise two classes: (1) where the site has been acquired from the Municipality, (2) where the site is private but the public have the right of way. If the second class were excluded S. 30 would be confined to the first class only, which is absurd, because roads of that class already vest in the Municipality apart from S. 30.

Therefore the second class of roads must be included in the scope of S. 30 and only private roads over which the public have right of way are excluded, there being a matter of arrangement under S. 31. Technically, it may be said, this is not inconsistent with the Act because the definition of "roads" is subject to the usual condition "unless there be something repugnant in the subject or context." Moreover a glance at some other sections will show that the term "roads"; has been loosely used: S. 217 (1), for instance mentions "public road," etc.; sub-s. (5) mentions "any road." It has been held that the latter term is not limited to roads vested in the Municipal Commissioners: 17 Cal 684 (5). S. 245 refers to "roads" to be constructed by bustee owners, failing which the Municipality may construct them and recover the cost under S. 247. In the present case it seems to me the inconsistency disappears if we accept the contention, as we must, that the word "roads" has been used in Ss. 30 and 31 of Act 3 of 1894 loosely and not in accordance with the definition in S. 6 (13); Cl. (a) of S. 95 of Act 15 of 1932 has made no change in the law. In my judgment, the answers to the questions of law referred must be as follows:

(1) Roads over which the public have a right of way in a Municipality vest in the Municipal Commissioners; (2) the case, 43 Cal 130 (1), was rightly decided in so far as it held that under S. 30, Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, as amended by Act 4 of 1894 private pathways do not vest in the Municipality. But it was wrongly decided in so far as it held (p. 135) that "a road within the meaning of S. 6, Cl. (13) of the Act, that is, a road over which the public have a right to go," does not vest in the Municipality under S. 30 of that Act.

Patterson, J.—My learned brother Mukerji, J. has dealt with the matter before the Court exhaustively and in all its aspects. I find myself in entire agreement both with the conclusions and with the reasons he has given for arriving at those conclusions. I concur in his judgment and have nothing to add.

V.B./R.K.

Reference answered.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 518

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Kurani Debya — Decree-holder — Appellant.

v.

Jogamaya Debya—Judgment-debtor—Respondent

Appeal No. 531 of 1935, Decided on 5th May 1936, from appellate order of Dist Judge, Nadia, D/- 16th August 1935.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 2—Arrangement by judgment-debtor with decree-holder providing for satisfaction differing from one mentioned in decree, is adjustment within O. 21, R. 2.

An act of the parties agreeing to vary the decree is not an adjustment of the decree; but an agreement made by a judgment-debtor with a decree-holder providing for the satisfaction of a decree which differs from the one mentioned in the decree itself is not a variation of the decree directing payment of money, but is merely an adjustment to the satisfaction of the decree-holder as contemplated by O. 21, R. 2 (1): 1928 Cal 527, Disting. [P 519 C 2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 21, R. 2 (1) — Instalment decree—Execution—Compromise providing for payment by instalments—Compromise recorded by Court and execution case dismissed as partly satisfied—Payments according to compromise—Default—Execution of application for entire debt—Compromise held amounted to adjustment within R. 2.

On an application for execution of a decree which provided for payment of the decretal debt by instalments, and in the course of the proceedings in execution, a compromise was arrived at between the parties, providing for satisfaction of the original decree by instalments. The terms of the compromise were set out in a petition and filed in Court. The Court recorded the compromise, and ordered dismissal of the execution case on part satisfaction crediting Rs. 100 in the decree. Some instalments were subsequently paid in accordance with the compromise but default was made and entire decretal amount fell due as per compromise. Decree-holder applied for execution. Judgment-debtor thereupon raised an objection under S. 47, that application was barred by limitation :

Held : that the application was not barred by limitation. The compromise petition and the order of the executing Court thereon amounted to an adjustment of the decree in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder within O. 21, R. 2 (1), and the payments made in accordance with the compromise were by way of adjustment of the decree as contemplated by law and the compromise did not create a decree at variance with the original decree : 1928 Cal 527, Disting. [P 520 C 1]

Hiralal Chakrabarty and Durga Charan Chatterjee—for Appellant.

Chandra Shekhor Sen and Shyamapada Majumdar—for Respondent.

Judgment.—This appeal has arisen out of a proceeding in execution of a decree. The decree-holder, appellant in this Court, applied for execution of the decree passed in the year 1924, which provided for satisfaction of the decretal debt by instalments; the execution was applied for in the year 1928, on default in the payment of two instalments as provided in the decree. In the course of the proceeding in execution, started in the year 1928, there was a compromise arrived at between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, providing for satisfaction of the decree passed in the year

1924. The order recorded in the order sheet on 8th April 1929 was to this effect :

Both parties filed a joint petition of compromise, let the terms of compromise be recorded in the register of suits and the execution case be dismissed on part satisfaction crediting Rs. 100 in the decree.

Subsequent to that, there were two payments made by the judgment-debtor on 12th February 1930, and on 12th February 1931, according to the instalments provided by the compromise mentioned above. Thereafter the entire decretal amount fell due on 14th February 1932, as provided by the compromise; and application for execution was made by the decree-holder on 4th February 1933. The judgment-debtor resisted the proceeding in execution on the ground of limitation, by means of an application under S. 47, Civil P. C. The Court of execution overruled the objection to the execution as raised by the judgment-debtor; the decision of that Court was, however, reversed on appeal by the learned District Judge of Nadia. Hence this appeal by the decree-holder.

The decision of the question raised in the case before us rests on the determination of the real scope and operation of the compromise effected between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor filed in Court on 8th April 1929, by which the manner and method of the satisfaction of the decree passed in the year 1924, was provided for afresh by consent of parties. If the compromise amounted to an adjustment of the decree passed in the year 1924, as contemplated by O. 21, R. 2, Code of Civil Procedure, there was, and could be, no question of limitation involved in the case; and the execution started on 4th February 1933 could not be held to be barred by limitation. An act of the parties agreeing to vary the decree is not an adjustment of the decree; but an arrangement made by a judgment-debtor with a decree-holder providing for the satisfaction of a decree which differs from the one mentioned in the decree itself is not a variation of the decree directing payment of money, but was merely an adjustment to the satisfaction of the decree-holder as contemplated by O. 21, R. 2 (1), Civil P. C. In the case before us, the effect of the arrangement of 8th April 1929 was that the decree-holder agreed to the arrangement for adjustment and satisfaction of the decree, proposed by the judgment-debtor; and the decree-holder was thus debarred from proceeding with her decree otherwise than in the manner provided by the compromise.

We have come to the conclusion that on the terms of the compromise petition filed in Court in the case, at a stage when proceeding in execution in the manner provided in the decree passed in the year 1924 was pending, amounted to an adjustment of the decree in part to the satisfaction of the decree-holder within the meaning of O. 21, R. 2, Civil P. C., and we are unable to agree with the District Judge in the Court of appeal below, that the order passed by the executing Court on the compromise petition was illegal and could not be given effect to, as, in our opinion, the order gave effect to an adjustment of the decree passed in the year 1924, by consent of parties, as evidenced by joint petition of compromise filed in Court. The payments made in accordance with the terms of the compromise petition were, in our judgment, by way of adjustment of a decree as contemplated by law, and the compromise did not create a decree at variance with the original decree passed in 1924. As indicated above the question for consideration in the case before us is solely one of construction, depending on the scope and effect of the compromise between the decree-holder and the judgment-debtor, regard being had to the intention of the parties, expressed in the same.

The compromise provided for satisfaction of the decree passed in the year 1924, and evidenced an adjustment of the same to the satisfaction of the decree-holder, and we are unable, therefore, to express agreement with the view taken by the Court of appeal below that the decision of this Court in 32 C W N 434 (1) was applicable to the facts of this case admits the conclusion that the application for execution made by the decree-holder, appellant, on 4th February 1933, was barred by limitation. In the result, the appeal is allowed, the order of the Court of appeal below, against which it directed, is set aside. The order of the Court of execution passed on 12th December 1934, is restored. The judgmentdebtor, respondent, is to pay the costs of the decree-holder appellant through out, including the costs of this appeal. The hearing fee in this appeal is assessed at two gold mohurs.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 520

R. C. MITTER, J.

Abdul Majid Mian—Accused—Petitioner.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 1220 of 1935, Decided on 14th January 1936.

Penal Code (1860), S. 408—Employee, when leaving service, submitted accounts but withdrawing certain amount as due to him on account of security furnished by him—Withdrawal, though not legal, was not with dishonest intention—Employee held not guilty under S. 408.

An employee of a zamindar furnished certain amount as security. At the time of leaving his service he handed over the account papers to his master. One item of expenditure shown in the account papers was the item withdrawn by him being the money that he had put in as security for his service.

Held: that in such case dishonest intention could not be made out on the part of the employee. It might be that he took a wrong view of his civil rights in taking away the amount due as his security; but he believed that he had the right on giving up his service. Hence he could not be convicted under S. 408. [P 521 C 1]

Order.—The petitioner before me has been convicted under S. 408, Penal Code, and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 50 by the lower appellate Court, in default to suffer simple imprisonment for six weeks. The petitioner was an employee of the Narail Babus. He got his employment in July 1933 and served the said zamindar for about a year till about July 1934 when he left the service. At the time when he entered the service, he furnished security in cash to the extent of Rs. 500. After he left service, a complaint was made against him by the said zamindars for criminal breach of trust in respect of four items, viz., an item of Rs. 500 and three small items making a total of Rs. 92-10-0. The lower Court has held that the charge in respect of the last three items had not been substantiated, but has convicted the petitioner of criminal breach of trust of the first item.

At the time of leaving his service the petitioner handed over the account papers to his masters. One item of expenditure shown in the account papers was this item of Rs. 500, which the petitioner showed as being withdrawn by him being the money that he had put in as security for his service. In fact, that is the finding of the learned Sessions Judge. On these facts, I do not see how dishonest intention could be made out, on the part of the accused. It may be that at that point of time, he had not the right to take away the said sum of Rs. 500, as the final accounting had not been made, but he had submitted the account papers to his masters and left the service. It may be that he took a wrong view of his civil rights in taking away Rs. 500, but he believed that he had the right on giving up his service. In this view of the matter I do not see how he can be convicted.

The result is that this rule is made absolute, the conviction and sentence be set aside and the petitioner acquitted. The fine, if paid, must be refunded.

D.S./R.K. Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 521

PANCKRIDGE, J.

Chhatrapat Singh Dugar—Applicant.
v.

Kharaj Singh Lachmiram — Non-Applicant.

O. O. C. J. Suit No. 79 of 1926, Decided on 10th March 1936.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 39—Ground for transfer one under sub-s. 1 (b)—Execution will be limited to execution against judgment-debtor who satisfies that condition.

Where the condition justifying transfer is that set out in S. 39, sub-s. 1 (b), the intention of S. 39 is that execution should be limited to execution against the judgment-debtor who satisfies that condition. To hold that a judgment-creditor may obtain an order for transfer on the ground that one judgment debtor has no property within the local limits of the Court which passed the decree, and has property within the local jurisdiction of another Court, and may then execute the decree through such other Court not against that judgment-debtor but against another judgment-debtor who does not fulfil that condition, is absurd. [P 523 C 1]

(b) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Ss 58 and 59 (e)—Order for costs in favour of insolvent and against creditor—Death of Receiver and insolvent—Right of heirs to execute order for costs—Mere leave to execute order is not sufficient.

Where an order for costs is made against creditors and in favour of the insolvent, and at the time there is a Receiver appointed of the insolvent's property, on the death of the Receiver, if no other Receiver is appointed, insolvent's estate vests in the insolvency Court, and the order for costs cannot be executed by the insolvent or on his death pending insolvency by his heirs as agent under S. 59 (e) without the leave of the Court on an application in that behalf. Mere leave to execute the order is not sufficient to entitle the heirs of deceased insolvent to clothe them with title to execute the decree.

[P 523 C 2]

Benimadhab Banerjee—for Applicant.
P. C. Basu & S. C. Bose—for Non-Applicant.

Order.—This application is in the form of an appeal against the order of the learned Master dismissing the application of one Surpat Singh Dugar, for leave to execute an order for costs made by His Majesty in Council against certain minors as representatives of a deceased respondent in the Privy Council proceedings. The learned Master has set out the facts in detail, and has dealt very fully with the questions raised. The salient facts are as follows: one Chhatrapat Singh Dugar, the father of the present applicant, made an unsuccessful attempt to have himself adjudicated an insolvent under the provisions of the Provincial Insolvency Act. Being aggrieved by the refusal of the Courts in India to adjudicate him, he appealed to His Majesty in Council, and on 23rd November 1916, the appeal was allowed, Chhatrapat was adjudicated an insolvent, and an order for costs was made against the respondents generally. Among them was a creditor of Chhatrapat Singh, by name Raja Bijoy Singh Dudhoria. A receiver was appointed of the insolvent's assets on 2nd August 1917, by the District Judge of Murshidabad, exercising insolvency jurisdiction.

The insolvent died on 25th April 1918. On 17th February 1921, the order of His Majesty in Council was sent to the Murshidabad Court. On 6th November 1922 the receiver in the insolvency proceedings resigned, and no other receiver was appointed to take his place. Meanwhile, there was a partition suit pending on the Original Side of the Court, to which the parties were the heirs of the deceased Chhatrapat. In that partition suit there was a reference to arbitration, and by an award of 23rd November 1922, the present applicant was allotted the benefit of the Privy Council order for costs. I am told that with regard to the insolvency the position was that most of the creditors had been paid in full, but that the claim of one alleged creditor was still outstanding. The heirs of Chhatrapat were contesting this claim, and had furnished security for its payment in case the claim was established. In April 1923 there was an application to which the present applicant was a party for execution of the order for costs against Raja Bijoy Singh Dudhoria, but it was abandoned and dismissed for default on 26th May 1923.

On 20th January 1926 the present applicant made an application under S. 39, Civil P. C., for transmission of the decree to this Court for execution. In accordance with the rules he presented a tabular statement, and in the column provided for stating the name of the person against whom execution of the decree was sought, he entered the name of Bhagabati Prosad, described as proprietor of Ramsarup Suryaprosad of No. 7 Kalakar Street, Calcutta. In the column provided for setting out the mode of execution, the applicant stated that, as the moveable and immovable properties of Bhagabati Prosad consisted of the premises No. 7 Kalakar Street, Calcutta, he asked that a certificate might be sent to the High Court, Calcutta. He also set out that Chhatrapat was dead, and stated that on the basis of the award he had become entitled to the benefit of the order for costs. The order sheet of the Murshidabad Court states that the applicant has asked for issue of a certificate to the High Court for execution of the order for costs against creditor No. 33, Ramsarup Suryaprosad, who was one of the principal respondents in the Privy Council appeal. It also states that the application alleges that the said creditor Ramsarup Suryaprosad has property within the jurisdiction of the High Court.

The order sheet shows that the Court made an order for the issue of the certificate for which the applicant prayed. On 26th November 1928 a tabular statement was filed in this Court against Raja Bijoy Singh Dudhoria, and directions were given for a notice to issue under O. 21, R. 22. The proceedings have hung fire for a considerable time, in the course of which Raja Bijoy Singh Dudhoria has died, and an order has been obtained for substitution of the present respondents as his representatives and for the appointment of a guardian ad litem. The Master finally disposed of the matter on 18th February 1936. A large number of objections were taken on behalf of the respondents, but I do not think it is necessary to deal with all of them. For the first time before the Master a contention was raised that the proceedings were vitiated by the fact that in the order of the Privy Council Raja Bijoy Singh Dudhoria's name appeared as Raja Benoy Singh Dudhoria. The learned Master has accepted the contention of the respondents on this part of the case, and this clerical error in the Privy Council order is one of the reasons why he has dismissed the application. He points out that no Court has the power to correct clerical or other errors in a Privy Council order, and he suggests that the only way of putting matters right is to make an application to the Privy Council. I do not think it necessary to decide this point, but certainly my sympathies are with the applicant.

There is no doubt as to the identity of the person, and I think there is considerable force in the contention that as Raja Bijoy Singh Dudhoria himself took part in the insolvency proceedings and resisted the application for execution of the order without taking any exception to the form in which his name appeared in the order, he must be taken to have waived any objections that he might have put forward, and also that his representatives, after his death, are bound by such waiver. I see no injustice in this, and to decide otherwise and hold the proceedings against Raja Bijoy Singh Dudhoria and his representatives are bad throughout, because of this clerical error, recalls the days when the harshness of the criminal law was mitigated by the tendency of the Courts to direct the jury to acquit, because of the omission of one of the Christian names of the prisoner from the indictment. I have not heard counsel for the respondents on this point, so I am not in a position to decide it.

To my mind the most important question raised is that regarding the application and construction of S. 39, it will be noticed that in the application for transfer the name of the respondent Raja Bijoy Singh Dudhoria was not mentioned, and it is not suggested that if he had been the sole respondent in the Privy Council proceedings, there was any ground which would justify an order for transfer of the decree for execution to this Court. Learned counsel for the applicant points out that under S. 39 the only power a Court has got is to send the decree for execution to another Court, and that there is nothing in the language of the section which would lead one to suppose that the Court has the power to qualify the mode of execution by which the decree is to be enforced by the Court to which it is transferred, or to limit the number of the judgment-debtors against whom execution proceedings may be taken in that Court. He quite rightly says that if the legislature had thought it right to impose any limitations of the nature suggested, it could have made its intention clear. From the language of the order for transfer as also from the materials on which the order was based it is clear that the grounds for the order were those set out in sub-s. 1 (b). It cannot be suggested that sub-s. 1 (d) has any application to the facts of this case, for the Court was not asked to record, nor did it record, any reasons in writing why the decree should be executed by another Court. Various authorities have been referred to in support of the proposition that the Court has no power to make a limited order for transfer. In my opinion however the question depends not upon the language of this particular order, but upon the language of the section. Having regard to the scheme of the section, I have come to the conclusion that where the condition justifying transfer is that set out in sub-s. 1 (b), the intention of the section is that execution should be limited to execution against the judgment-debtor who satisfies that condition. To hold that a judgment-debtor may obtain an order for transfer on the ground that one judgment-debtor has no property within the local limits of the Court which passed the decree, and has property within the local jurisdiction of another Court, and may then execute the decree through such other Court not against that judgment-debtor but against another judgment-debtor who does not fulfil that condition, seems to me so absurd that the section must be given the limited construction which I indicated.

I decide therefore that the learned master was right in holding that this Court has no jurisdiction to execute the order against any judgment-debtor except Bhagabati Prosad. This is enough to dispose of the appeal. There are other interesting points raised; among them is the question of the title of the applicant to execute the decree at all. Admittedly, as long as the insolvent was alive, the benefit of the order for costs was vested in the receiver. I think upon a true construction of S. 58, Provincial Insolvency Act, that on the receiver's death, the insolvent's estate was vested in the insolvency Court. The right of the present applicant to execute the order for costs is justified by his counsel on the ground that the Court having given him leave to execute the order, he must be regarded as an agent to take proceedings which have been sanctioned by the Court within the meaning of S. 59 (e). In none of his applications does he ask to be appointed an agent, nor does the Court anywhere purport so to appoint him. It is a little difficult to see on what his title to the decree exactly rests, or when the decree ceased to vest in the insolvency Court. There has been, as far as I can see, no formal order terminating the insolvency proceedings or releasing any part of the insolvent's assets in favour of his heirs. It appears to me very doubtful if the benefit of the order could be allocated by the award of the arbitrators and there is the further difficulty that although the arbitrators directed assignments to be made by the co-sharers inter se, no assignment of the order has ever been executed; nor has any decree been passed in terms of the award.

In my judgment the decree cannot be rightly said to have been transferred to the applicant by operation of the law within the meaning of O. 21, R. 16. Nor do I think that it has been transferred by assignment, and if it has been transferred by assignment, it is conceded that the proviso to R. 16, requiring notice of the application for execution to be given to the judgment-debtor, has not been observed. I am therefore disposed to hold that the applicant is not in a position to execute the order as against the heirs of Bijoy Singh Dudhoria. I do not propose to deal with the issue of limitation, which has been raised, and I hold that upon a true construction of S. 39, Civil P. C., and in the circumstances in which the order for transfer was made, this Court has no jurisdiction to give leave to execute the order for costs against any respondent except Bhagabati Prosad, and possibly against any other respondent who satisfies the condition of S. 39 (1) (b). This application is therefore dismissed with costs. Costs as of a motion

V.B./R.K. Application dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 524

GUHA AND LODGE, JJ.

Sachin Das—Appellant.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 336 of 1935, Decided on 20th August 1935.

(a) Sedition—Intention—Determination of—Test is reasonable and natural effect of speech.

To determine whether the intention of the accused was to call into being hostile feeling, the rule that a man must intend the natural and reasonable consequences of his act must be applied; so that if on reading through the speech, the reasonable, natural and probable effect of the same on the minds of those to whom the speech was addressed, appears to be that feeling of hatred contempt and disaffection would be excited towards the Government, then it is justifiable to say that speech was delivered with that intent, and that there was an attempt to create the feeling against which law seeks to provide. [P 524 C 2; P 525 C 1]

(b) Sedition—Speech showing spirit of revolt against Government—Exciting disaffection against Government by bringing it into hatred and contempt—Speech taken as whole held seditious.

The entire speech delivered by the accused taken as a whole showed a spirit of revolt against the established Government in this country, as also an intention to excite disaffection towards the Government by bringing it into hatred or contempt. The predominating idea of the speech in question was not only to support the idea of communism and to suggest some other form of Government but to bring the present Government and the supporters of the same into hatred and contempt and raise hostile feelings against them:

Held: that speech was clearly one which attracted the provisions of S. 124-A, Penal Code. 22 Bom 152 (F B), Rel. on.

[P 524 C 2; P 525 C 1, 2]

Kshitish Chandra Chakravarti and Manmatha Nath Das—for Appellant.

A. K. Bose and D. N. Bhattacharji—for the Crown.

Judgment.—The appellant Sachin Das was charged with having committed an offence under S. 124-A, I. P. C., and on being tried for the same, by the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, was sentenced to rigorous imprisonment for one year. The charge against the appellant was that he by delivering a speech under the auspices of the Unemployed Council, Calcutta, brought or attempted to bring into hatred or contempt or excited or attempted to excite disaffection towards Government established by law in British India. The defence of the accused placed on his trial before the Magistrate was that he had no intention whatsoever of preaching sedition, and that his only object was to express his views regarding the unemployment problem and to explain the various efforts made in different countries to tackle it. The question to be decided in the case was whether upon the speech taken as a whole, it could be held that it attracted the provisions contained in S. 124-A, I. P. C. As has been stated before us by the learned advocate for the appellant, that the speech in question is full of jargon of communism, which may ordinarily be meaningless to an ordinary audience, but there is no question that the speech contained passages of which the following may be said to be typical:

Hence I find today the situation is that how all the communist leaders, all the workers leaders are being subjected to oppression; for a single speech three months, six months and eleven months; provoking them unjustifiably and framing a charge of rioting against them. . . . For imperialist power is most afraid of workers movement. . . . Hence it is not that Government put down the workers merely by means of a paper propaganda. In order to preserve simultaneously a balance of power they set up a counter revolutionary organisation.

I want only to say that if you really feel any interest you should come forward under the Red Flag, you should come forward under Leninism.

The passages quoted above have to be considered with the entire speech which shows a spirit of revolt against the established Government in this country, and an intention to excite disaffection towards the Government by bringing it into hatred and contempt. The predominating idea in the speech in question was not only to support the idea of communism, and to suggest some other form of Government, but to bring the present Government and the supporters of the same into hatred and contempt, and raise hostile feelings against them. It is well settled that to determine whether the intention of the accused was to call into being hostile feelings, the rule that a man must intend the natural and reasonable consequences of his act must be applied; so that if on reading through the speech, the reasonable, natural and probable effect of the same on the minds of those to whom the speech was addressed, appears to be that feelings of hatred, contempt and disaffection would be excited towards the Government, then it is justifiable to say that the speech was delivered with that intent, and that there was an attempt to create the feelings against which the law seeks to provide. This is inspite of what was stated by the accused in his written statement before the Magistrate that he had no intention of preaching sedition, and was only expressing his views on the unemployment problem. In this connection it may be stated, that we are in entire agreement with the observations of Beaumont, C. J., that if a person chooses to speak in the same speech with two different voices, and one of those voices brings him within the reach of the criminal law, it is no excuse of him to say that the other voice expresses his real views, so as to do away with the inference deducible from the speech taken as a whole: see Ratanlal's Law of Crime, Edn. 13, p. 294, quoting the observations of the Chief Justice of the Bombay High Court, in the case of Chimanlala Rava Shankar Joshi.

The question to be considered in a case of the present description was whether the accused by his speech brought or attempted to bring into hatred or excited or attempted to excite disaffection towards the Government. The case of bringing in to hatred or contempt and that of exciting or attempting to excite disaffection have, in view of the scheme of S. 124-A, I. P. C., to be considered together, the one resulting from the other. There was a very clear exposition of the law on the subject, by Ranade, J. in 22 Bom 152 (1), in which the learned Judge explained the word 'disaffection' as used in S. 124-A, I. P. C.:

It is a positive political distemper and not a mere absence of negation of love or goodwill. It is a positive feeling of aversion which is akin to disloyalty, a defiant insubordination of authority, or when it is not defiant, it secretly seeks to alienate the people, and weaken the bond of allegiance, and prepossesses the minds of the people with avowed or secret animosity to Government, a feeling which tends to bring the Government into hatred or contempt by imputing base or corrupt motive to it, makes men indisposed to obey or support the laws of the realm and promote discontent and public disorder.

Keeping the above view of the law in mind, with which we are in entire agreement, the speech which was the subject of the charge under S. 124-A against the appellant, taking the speech as a whole, was clearly one which attracted the provisions of the law contained in that section. In our judgment, the Magistrate in the Court below was right in his decision that the speech delivered by the appellant on 18th January 1935, mentioned in the charge framed against the appellant, was calculated to bring the entire administration of the country, executive and judicial, into contempt and hatred, and the appellant was rightly convicted under S. 124-A, I. P. C. The sentence passed on the appellant is not severe. The appeal is dismissed.

S.R./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 525

R. C. MITTER, J.

Secy. of State—Petitioner.

v.

Joy Narain Chunder and others—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 1586 of 1935, Decided on 7th May 1936, from order of President, Calcutta Improvement Tribunal, D/- 9th September 1935.

Land Acquisition Act (1 of 1894), Ss. 31 (2) and 34—'Deposit' means deposit in place indicated by S. 31 (2).

The word 'deposit,' as used in S. 34, means and refers to the actual fact of deposit in the place indicated by S. 31 (2). Whether the deposit actually made in such a place by the Collector was by reason of any error of judgment on his part on a matter which has to be judicially determined does not matter, and the Collector would not be incurring any liability to pay interest by sending money to the Court referred to in S. 31 (2) in such circumstances: (1904) A (Judicial) P R No. 44, p. 133 Disting. [P 527 C 1, 2]

B. K. Mukerjee—for Petitioner.

Kushi Prasun Chatterjee—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—The case so far as this Court is concerned raises a question of first impression and involves a principle which would not only affect this particular case but may affect many other cases of the same description, and it is for this reason that I have heard learned advocates appearing for the respective parties at great length and have bestowed considerable attention to their arguments. The position is this: Premises No. 16 Bartala Street was acquired under the Land Acquisition Act. It belonged to Babu Subal Chand Chunder, but at the time of the acquisition that gentleman was dead. He left a will, two executors being appointed, and probate has been taken by them out. The award was made on 27th March 1935 and a large sum of money, namely about a lac and twelve thousand of rupees, was awarded as compensation money. Before the Collector it seems that the executors produced the will and they wanted the money from the Collector, but the Collector being doubtful of their powers to alienate land remitted the compensation money to the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal in accordance with the provisions of S. 31 (2), Land Acquisition Act. He took the view that the will contained restrictions on the powers of the executors to alienate land and he accordingly, as I have said before, deposited the money with the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal. The material portion of that section applicable to this case is as follows:

1. Queen-Empress v. Ram Chandra Narayan, (1898) 22 Bom 152 (F B).

If there be no person competent to alienate the land the Collector shall deposit the amount of the compensation in the Court to which a reference under S. 18, would be submitted.

The Court here, in this particular case, is the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal and to that Court the money was forwarded. On the said deposit being made the executors of the late Subal Chand Chunder made an application to the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal stating that the money cannot be invested under the provisions of S. 32 (1), but has to be made over to them, inasmuch as according to the terms of the will, there was no restriction on their powers to alienate the land. The President of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal construed the will, and he came to the conclusion that there was, in fact, such restriction. He accordingly refused the application of the executors by an order dated 17th June 1935. The possession of the property had not been taken by the Collector up to this date. He took possession 10 days later, namely, on 27th June 1935. The executors of the said gentleman moved this Court on 24th June 1935 against the order of the President Calcutta Improvement Tribunal, dated 17th June 1935. A rule was issued and that rule was made absolute on 12th July 1935 by a Division Bench of this Court but without costs. This Court held on a construction of the will that there were no restriction on the executors' power of alienation. In pursuance of this order the executors applied for withdrawal of the compensation money, and on 28th July 1935 the money was actually paid to them. Subsequently two applications were made by them in the Court of the Calcutta Improvement Tribunal. In one they stated that they ought to be awarded costs incidental to the withdrawal of the money. According to them the costs incidental to the withdrawal of the money included the money they had to spend before the Improvement Tribunal and the High Court for getting a construction of the will. This application was dismissed. The learned President has given certain reasons, but it is not necessary for me to consider those reasons because the executors have not moved this Court against that order.

The other application filed by the executors is this: they stated that they were entitled to claim interest on the amount of the compensation from 27th June 1935, the date when the Collector took possession to the 28th July 1935 when they actually received payment of the compensation money. This amount comes up to about Rs. 600. This application was successful before the President of the Tribunal on the basis of S. 34, Land Acquisition Act. The Secretary of State for India in Council has moved against that order and his learned advocate says that this case does not come within the terms of S. 34 at all. S. 34 is in these terms:

When the amount of such compensation is not paid or deposited on or before taking possession of the land, the Collector shall pay the amount awarded with interest thereon at the rate of six per cent per annum from the time of so taking possession until it shall have been so paid or deposited.

The liability to pay interest is a statutory one and that liability is defined by the aforesaid section. The Collector is bound to pay interest at the rate of 6 per cent from the date of his taking possession till the compensation money is actually paid in certain defined circumstances. The word "deposit" in that section has reference to the provisions of S. 31 (2) and, in my judgment, the liability to pay interest does not arise when there has in fact been a deposit in the place where the statute required it to be deposited. That is to say, if the deposit is made in the Court in which a reference would lie under S. 18, the liability to pay interest under S. 34 does not arise. If the deposit is not made at the place indicated in S. 31 (2) different consideration may arise: It would not be a deposit in accordance with S. 31 and the liability to pay interest in such a case would arise in spite of the fact that the Collector had parted with the money by sending it elsewhere, e. g. when he has deposited in the Government treasury. In fact that was a case which occurred in (1904) A (Judicial) P R No. 44, P. 133 (1), a case on which the learned President relied in making the order in favour of the executors. I do not consider that that case has any bearing upon this case at all. The other reason which the learned President has given in support of his order is that if the Collector commits an error of judgment on the point of construction of a will, and comes to a conclusion that the executors' powers of alienation are restricted and makes a deposit in Court under S. 31 (2) that is no deposit in the eye of the law within the meaning of S. 34 and the liability to pay interest arises.

I do not agree with this reasoning. The Collector has to pay the compensation money to a person who is entitled to it, and is entitled to form his own judgment and to satisfy himself as to whether that person is entitled to take the money from his hands. When he feels a bona fide doubt in the matter, it is his duty not to take upon himself the task of determining that question himself, for his adjudication would not be binding on anybody, not being the adjudication of a civil Court, but he must act in the way provided for under S. 31 (2) and send the money to the Court that would have jurisdiction to hear the reference under S. 18. Any other view of the provisions of statute would, in my judgment, lead to serious consequences. Suppose a Collector in a matter of this kind which I have before me comes to the conclusion that the executors' powers are not limited by the Will and he makes over the money to the executors, and if in a later adjudication in a civil Court between the parties interested in the estate of the testator it be found that their powers are restricted, I do not know what would be the position of the Secretary of State with regard to the moneys paid by the Collector on his own responsibility to a man, when he ought to have, if the correct position had been appreciated by him, deposited the money in Court under the provisions of S. 31 (2). This consideration alone leads me to construe the word "deposit" as used in S. 34 to mean the actual fact of deposit in the place indicated in S. 31 (2). Whether the deposit actually made in such a place by the Collector was by reason of any error of judgment on his part on a matter which has to be judicially determined does not matter and I do not consider that the Collector would be incurring a liability to pay interest by sending the money to that Court in such circumstances. For these reasons I make this Rule absolute and discharge the order complained of, but in the circumstances of the case I do not make any order for costs.

V.B./R.K.

Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 527

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Jogneswar Ghosh and others—Appellants.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 118 of 1936, Decided on 17th June 1936.

(a) Criminal Trial—Trial by jury—Accused charged with offences under Ss 395 and 399, Penal Code, and with conspiracy to commit those offences—Jury's verdict of "not guilty"—Sessions Judge convicting accused of offence under S. 395 read with S. 120-B, Penal Code, and acquitting on main offence—Accused contending that Sessions Judge had no jurisdiction to convict accused in face of verdict of acquittal by jurymen—No notification of local Government that such trial was to be by jury—Judge held empowered to pass such order.

The accused were charged with offences punishable under Ss. 395 and 399, Penal Code. They were further charged with a conspiracy to commit both those offences. The jury brought in a unanimous verdict of "not guilty." The Sessions Judge acquitted all the accused of the main charges, but convicted them under S. 395 read with S. 120-B, Penal Code, holding that the jury were assessors and that he was entitled to take a contrary view. It was contended on behalf of the accused that the trial was with jurymen and not with assessors, and that the Judge had no jurisdiction to convict them in the face of the verdict of acquittal:

Held: that since there was no notification of the local Government directing that such an offence was triable by jury, the trial should be construed to have been carried on with the aid of assessors and the Sessions Judge had jurisdiction to pass that order. [P 528 C 1]

(b) Criminal Trial—Conviction—Accused declared 'not guilty' by jury sitting as assessors—Judge cannot convict accused without assigning reasons.

Where the accused are declared 'not guilty' by the unanimous opinion of the jury sitting as assessors and the evidence does not support the guilt of the accused, the Judge cannot convict them further without giving any reasons for so doing. [P 528 C 1, 2]

1. Parmanand v. Secy. of State, (1904) A (Judicial) P R No. 44, p. 133.

Jitendra Chandra Banerjee — for Appellant.

Khundkar, Anil Chandra Rai Chaudhuri and Nirmal Chandra Chakravarty — for the Crown.

Henderson, J.—This appeal raises a point which had not come to us before, although it might be expected to be raised every week, if not every day. The appellants with certain other persons were put on their trial, charged with offences punishable under Ss. 395 and 399, I P. C. They were further charged with a conspiracy to commit both those offences. The jury brought in a unanimous verdict of 'not guilty.' The learned Judge acquitted all the accused persons of the main charges and then proceeded to convict them of an offence punishable under S. 395 read with S. 120-B, holding that the Jury were assessors and that he was entitled to take a contrary view. The first point taken on behalf of the appellants was that these gentlemen were not assessors but Jurymen and that the learned Judge had no jurisdiction to convict them in the face of the verdict of acquittal. In view of the provisions of S. 269, Criminal P. C., there can be no doubt that the normal procedure under the Code is trial by assessors, and it is only when the local Government publish an order in the Gazette that the trial of an offence becomes triable by Jury. Such orders may be made or revoked at any time. The offence of which the appellants have been convicted is one triable under Ch. 5-A, I. P. C. The learned advocate who has appeared on behalf of the appellants has not been able to show to us any notification of the Local Government directing that such an offence is triable by jury. We must therefore overrule this preliminary objection.

The only remaining question is whether we can uphold the convictions. It would certainly be a most extraordinary thing that, if the main part of the case were disbelieved and an order of acquittal passed, the accused persons should be convicted on the substratum, if any, which remains. The learned Judge in this case has taken the remarkable course of convicting the appellants on his own view of the facts without giving any reason whatsoever. The learned Deputy Legal Re-membrancer, with his usual fairness, stated that he could not support this and that the evidence in the case is not such that we ought to say that a finding of guilty is the only reasonable or proper finding. We are certainly not prepared to accept the opinion of the learned Judge as opposed to the unanimous opinion of the Jury sitting as assessors, when no reasons for that opinion are assigned at all. We, accordingly, allow this appeal, and set aside the convictions and sentences. The appellants, who are on bail, are discharged from their bail bonds. The fines, if already paid, will be refunded to them.

Cunliffe, J.—I agree.

R.W./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 528

EDGLEY, J.

Kalikumar Deb and others — Appellants.

v.

Secy. of State—Plaintiff—Respondent.

Appeal No. 38 of 1935, Decided on 28th May 1936, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, Fourth Court, 24-Parganas, D/- 2nd June 1934.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 182 — Holding acquired subsequent to homestead—Raiyat is entitled to benefit of S. 182.

When a raiyat holds his homestead otherwise than a part of his holding, he is entitled to the benefit of S. 182, although he may have become a raiyat subsequently to the taking of his residential tenancy: 163 I C 406, Foll

[P 529 C 1]

(b) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1882), S. 182 (as amended in 1928) — S. 182 applies to tenancies in existence at passing of amending Act.

Section 182 of the Amending Act of 1928 became applicable to tenancies which were in existence at the time of the passing of the Amending Act. Both raiyats and under-raiyats on that date would get the benefit of the new section and would therefore be entitled to hold their homestead subject to the provisions of the Act as amended, and the incidents of their homestead will be governed by provisions of new Act applicable to raiyats and under-raiyats. [P 529 C 1]

Gopendra Nath Das—for Appellants.

Bijan Kumar Mukherjee—for Respondent.

Judgment. — In the suit out of which this appeal arises the plaintiff sued the defendant for ejectment from his homestead. The defendant contended that he should not be ejected, inasmuch as he had acquired occupancy rights in certain other lands in the village and this being the case he was entitled to the benefit of S. 182, Ben. Ten. Act. He also contended that the ejectment notice, which had been served upon him, was defective. It has not been urged before me that the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act apply in this case. The Courts below have both held that S. 182, Ben. Ten. Act, has no application in a case of this sort, because the agricultural land, in respect of which the defendant claims to have occupancy right in the village, was acquired after the acquisition of the homestead by the defendant. It has however been decided by this Court in 40 C W N 599 (1) that, when a raiyat holds his homestead otherwise than a part of his holding, he is entitled to the benefit of S. 182, Ben. Ten. Act, although he may have become a raiyat subsequently to the taking of his residential tenancy. With regard to this point it is however contended by the learned Advocate for the respondent that, in the particular circumstances of the case out of which this appeal arises, the defendant cannot in any event obtain the benefit of S. 182 of the Act, because the other land in the village in respect of which he has occupancy rights was acquired by him before the passing of the amending Act of 1928 and, in these circumstances, it is contended that the provisions of the old Act should apply.

There is evidence on the record to show that the defendant holds a certain plot of land in the village as an under-raiyat with occupancy rights (Ex. C). Admittedly this land was acquired by him before the year 1928. If the provisions of the old Act applied, it is clear that he would not get the benefit of S. 182 of the Act as it now stands. It would appear however that, when the amending Act of 1928 was passed, the new S. 182 became applicable to tenancies which were in existence at the time of the passing of the Act. This being the case both raiyats and under-raiyats would get the benefit of the new section and they would therefore be entitled to hold their homestead subject to the provisions of the Act as amended and the incidents of their homestead tenancies will be governed by the provisions of the new Act applicable to rai-yats and under-raiyats as the case may be. In this view of the case I think that the decision of the lower appellate Court is wrong. The judgments and decrees of the lower Court, are therefore set aside and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed. The defendant will get his costs throughout.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

 A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 529

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Netai Chandra Jana and others—Appellants.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeals Nos. 488, 489 and 490 of 1935, Decided on 14th May 1936.

(a) Interpretation of Statutes—Statute curtailing personal liberty should be construed most strictly, and, in favour of subject.

A statute curtailing personal liberty should be construed most strictly, and, if anything, in favour of the subject. The principle should all the more, be rigidly enforced in this country in view of the fact that there is no major Act such as Habeas Corpus upon the statute book.

[P 531 C 1]

* (b) Bengal Suppression of Terrorists Outrages Act (12 of 1932), S. 25—Scope of—Prima facie case of murder disclosed by prosecution evidence—Local Government cannot direct trial before Special Magistrate—Such trial is without jurisdiction.

Section 25 does not empower the local Government to order a trial before a Special Magistrate where a case of murder is prima facie disclosed by prosecution evidence and trial by the special Magistrate under such circumstances is without jurisdiction.

[P 531 C 2]

Per Henderson, J.—An opinion of the Local Government merely that an accused person has committed an offence not punishable with death would not give it jurisdiction to appoint a special Magistrate to try him. The Local Government have not in their power to decide finally that a particular accused person has not committed an offence punishable with death and to ignore the most serious part of the crime altogether simply to give jurisdiction to a special Magistrate.

[P 532 C 2; P 533 C 1, 2]

(c) Criminal Trial—Murder—Person committing crime successfully making attack on their victims—Attack directly resulting in death—It is prima facie case of murder.

If for purpose of committing a crime the persons who wish to commit that crime, successfully make an attack upon their victims which results in death directly caused by that attack, it is a prima facie case of murder.

[P 531 C 2]

* (d) Bengal Suppression of Terrorists Outrages (Supplementary) Act (24 of 1932), S. 3 (1) and (2)—Appeals from convictions of offences alleged to have been committed under Bengal Suppression of Terrorists Outrages Act—High Court retains its ordinary powers as provided for in Chap. 31, Criminal P. C., in dealing with appeals.

1. Pulin Chandra Daw v. Abu Bakhar Naskar, (1936) 168 I O 406=40 C W N 599.
1936 C/67 & 68

The Judges of the High Court hearing appeals from convictions for offences alleged to have been committed under the Bengal Suppression of Terrorists Outrages Act, retain their full rights of procedure and their full rights of alteration or acquittal as provided for in Chap. 31, Criminal P. C. unless there is some specific language in any part of the Acts which qualifies these rights, and they are entitled to act as they would act in similar circumstances in an ordinary appeal. [P 532 C 1]

(e) Criminal Trial—Forum—Advantages or disadvantages of trial before different types of tribunals—It is only opinion of accused which is entitled to serious consideration.

Per Henderson, J.—The only persons capable of weighing the respective advantages or disadvantages of trial before different types of tribunals are the accused persons themselves and it is their opinion which is entitled to serious consideration. [P 533 C 1]

Manmathanath Das Gupta (in 488), J. C. Gupta, Purnendu Chaudhuri (in 489) and Sailendra Mohan Das (in 490)—for Appellants.

S. M. Bose, Jitendra Mohan Banerji and Birendra Chandra Nag—for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—These are 9 appeals from convictions and sentences passed by a Special Magistrate sitting at Hooghly. The accused persons were put upon their trial on a number of different charges. They included, conspiracy to engineer a rising against the Government, conspiracy to commit offences under the Arms Act and, as to five of them, charges of committing dacoity in furtherance of the aims attributed to the terrorist movement. On the appeal being opened, a preliminary point was put forward by Mr. Gupta, Senior Counsel for the appellants, with which the other advocates for the appellants associated themselves. This point was directed to an attack upon the jurisdiction of the learned Special Magistrate, having regard to the case advanced by the Crown against the five appellants implicated directly in the dacoity. It was contended that these five persons with regard to the dacoity were originally charged, not under S. 395 of the Code, but under S. 396, the difference between the two sections being that the latter section, namely S. 396 is the provision in the Code which deals with the class of dacoity in which a murder has taken place. It was further argued that although at the trial the charge under S. 396 was dropped and the lower charge substituted, nevertheless, the substantive case for the Crown advanced against these five people was of such a character that if it were true, (which was of course denied by the appellants) they ought to have been placed upon their trial for dacoity with murder.

The gravamen of this argument is based upon the wording of S. 25, Bengal Suppression of Terrorists Outrages Act, 1932 the section under which the Special Magistrate was empowered to try the case. I think it will be convenient if I set out that section. It runs as follows:

Where in the opinion of the Local Government or of the District Magistrate, if empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, there are reasonable grounds for believing that any person has committed a scheduled offence not punishable with death (these are the important words "not punishable with death") in furtherance of or in connection with the terrorist movement, or an offence punishable under this Act, or under S. 6, Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1930, the Local Government or District Magistrate as the case may be, may, by order in writing, direct that such person shall be tried by a Special Magistrate.

Our attention was called to parts of the evidence produced before the learned Special Magistrate. This evidence showed that by reason of the dacoity two lives were lost owing to the action of the five appellants to whom I have referred. The prosecution maintained that as participants in the dacoity the five appellants had provided themselves with cotton wool, and also with a bottle of chloroform. It was said that by means of the chloroform applied to this cotton wool, these five accused asphyxiated the two persons who lost their lives, for the purpose of enabling the robbery to be committed. If that were correct, say the appellants, the crime which they committed was one which was certainly punishable by death under S. 396. It is further suggested that for the sake of convenience or for some other purpose, the Local Government directed that this trial should take place before a Special Magistrate rather than before a Court consisting of three Judges sitting together which it is said is the proper tribunal to try cases of this character. The answer made by the Crown to this argument is, firstly, that the language of the section shows that it is the opinion of the Local Government, erroneous or not, which is to govern trials under the special procedure and, secondly, that even if this is not so, the facts disclosed in the prosecution case do not reveal a true case of murder at all. I may say at once that it has always been a canon of the construction of the type of statute which curtails personal liberty that it should be construed most strictly and, if anything, inclining in favour towards the subject. A wholesome canon I think, and a principle which ought to be rigidly enforced in this Court, more especially when we consider that in this country we have no major Act such as Habeas Corpus upon our statute book.

Now, if we examine S. 25 closely, we find that the opinion of the Local Government before cases may be allotted to a Special Magistrate has to be taken upon several points. The first point is that there must be reasonable grounds for believing that a scheduled offence has been committed. A scheduled offence is that type of offence which, as far as this Act is concerned, is enumerated in the schedule to the Act. S. 2 of the Act lays this down; and the offences charged in the Court below are clearly within the ambit of the schedule in question. The next point upon which the Local Government is required to give a preliminary opinion is whether the offence alleged to have been committed is one which is punishable with death. And the third and the last view which the Local Government has to express is, that the offences put forward by the prosecution must have been committed in furtherance of or in connexion with the terrorist movement.

Now, as I read the section, it empowers the Local Government to appoint a special Magistrate to try only those offences of a terrorist nature contained in the schedule which are not punishable by death. But it does not give power to the Local Government to send for trial before a Special Magistrate an offence which is punishable by death. It is interesting to note that in another Act contained in the Manual of Legislation which has been handed to me, in which are included a number of these special statutes demonstrating the scheme adopted by the authorities to deal with the terrorist movement, (I refer to the Bengal Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1925) that there is provision for the trial of persons who are said to have committed offences under a schedule which resembles very closely Sch. 2 to the Suppression of Terrorist Outrages Act schedule, but without the qualification introduced into the subsequent Act that they are offences not punishable by death. Under the provisions of the 1925 Act a person who has committed an offence punishable by death has the right to be tried by a tribunal of three Judges with senior qualifications. This is laid down in S. 4 thereof. We were invited therefore to say that the appellants could legally insist in the circumstances on being tried before such a tribunal rather than by a Special Magistrate who, according to S. 24, Bengal Suppression of Terrorist Outrages Act of 1932, need only be a Magistrate of the First Class or a Presidency Magistrate who has exercised his powers as such for a period of not less than 4 years.

As to the argument advanced by the Crown that, on a reasonable consideration, the facts disclosed in the prosecution case here do not disclose an offence on the part of the five persons which amounts to dacoity with murder, I cannot accept it. It would be improper for me to go with any particularity into the evidence; but I shall merely say this: that, prima facie, if for the purpose of committing a crime the persons who wish to commit that crime successfully make an attack upon their victims which results in death directly caused by that attack, prima facie it seems to me that a case of murder has been set up. I have no intention of giving illustrations of this principle; but if it were necessary I could do so. I therefore answer the contention put forward by the Crown at the risk of reiteration in this way, that S. 25 does not empower the Local Government to order a trial before a Special Magistrate where a case of murder is prima facie disclosed by the prosecution evidence; and secondly, that I do not agree that this offence, according to the prosecution case, is anything less than prima facie murder, as far as the five persons implicated are concerned. Holding this view of the law, the question remains: What have we power to do? I notice that the Bengal Suppression of Terrorist Outrages Act, which is a local Act, has a supplement, in the form of an All India Statute which deals inter alia with the right of appeal from the decisions of the special Courts which function under the local special legislation. S. 3, Supplementary Act, sub-s. (2), runs as follows:

An appeal under sub-s. (1) which provides for an appeal to this High Court shall be presented within thirty days from the date of the sentence and shall be disposed of by the High Court in the manner provided in Ch. 31 of the Code of the hearing of appeals.

(The reference to the word Code there, or rather I should say its definition, is that the Code means the Code of Criminal Procedure.) Now, I believe that the intention of the persons who framed that section which relates solely to procedure and is therefore one in which I can safely consider the intention of the framers was that this Court when hearing appeals in such cases should hear them in the ordinary way and with the ordinary powers which the appellate side of this Court has been given by Ch. 31, Criminal P. C. It seems to me that if we were not, by the language of the section, endowed with the full powers of an appellate Court under the Code, our powers, if they had been cut down, would necessarily have to be defined and defined strictly. But in my view the ordinary meaning of the language used in the section is that in hearing this class of appeals we retain our full rights of procedure and our full rights of alteration or acquittal, unless there is some specific language in some part of these Acts to which my attention has not been called which qualifies those rights.

We propose therefore to act as we should act in similar circumstances in an ordinary appeal. We think that the right course to adopt will be to set aside the convictions and sentences passed by the learned Special Power Magistrate. We are not forgetful that the argument based upon the construction to be put upon S. 25 was only advanced on behalf of five of the appellants and could only have been advanced on the facts of the case in favour of these five persons. Nevertheless we think that it would not be in the public interest, if we did not include in our order setting aside the convictions and sentences those four other appellants who, according to the case for the Crown, were closely associated with the five persons said to have been involved actively in the murder which the dacoity involved. It would be creating an invidious position were we merely to confine our order to the first five appellants, and one can imagine that it would be still more embarrassing if we dealt with the appeal with regard only to the remaining four. We shall therefore include all the appellants in the order which I have just passed. There will be no order for bail; but we give learned counsel for the appellants leave to re-apply to us within 10 days with notice to the Crown. Meanwhile the appellants will be treated as under-trial prisoners. We propose to extend the time for the bail application to 10 days from the date of the above final signature.

Henderson, J.—A preliminary objection has been taken on behalf of the appellants before us which raises the question whether in a case where the prosecution evidence, if true discloses an offence punishable with death, the local Government has jurisdiction to appoint a Special Magistrate under the provisions of S. 25, Bengal Act 12 of 1932. The question is not only a very difficult one but is also of the utmost importance not only to the public in general but to all those who are connected in any way, either directly or indirectly, with the trial of persons charged with committing offences in furtherance of the terrorist movement. On behalf of the Crown the learned standing counsel met this objection by arguing that the opinion of the local Government in the matter is decisive and cannot be called in question. Now, it would be very difficult to say that the opinion of the local Government that the accused person has committed a certain offence cannot be called in question; because if that suggestion is rigidly followed out, a conviction must automatically follow and a Magistrate, as soon as he acquits an accused, is calling that opinion in question in the most emphatic manner possible. In my opinion the important words are "in furtherance of or in connexion with the terrorist movement." I certainly agree that it is not open to the appellants to suggest before us that this particular crime was not committed in furtherance of or in connexion with the terrorist movement. But I should certainly not be prepared to go so far as to say that the opinion of the local Government that they have committed a certain offence cannot be called in question. It is also clear that an opinion of the local Government merely that an accused person had committed an offence not punishable with death would not give jurisdiction to appoint a special Magistrate to try him. But in any view of this particular matter this is not the real point. The objection really goes much deeper than that and is to the effect that the section itself by its terms does not empower the local Government to appoint a Special Magistrate to try a case of this kind.

Now, the objection, if sound, is a perfectly reasonable objection. If the appellants are said to have committed an offence punishable with death they would ordinarily be entitled to a trial by a jury or, at any rate, in view of certain special legislation, by three Commissioners. They are at liberty to attach any value they please to such a privilege, if it be a privilege. It is of course very easy to say or to suggest that the procedure adopted in this case is really to the advantage of the appellants; because the greatest risk they run is that of a sentence of 7 years' imprisonment. But it seems to me that the only persons capable of weighing the respective advantages or disadvantages of trial before different types of tribunals are the accused persons themselves and it is only their opinion in the matter which is entitled to any serious consideration. The objection is not one that would be taken in a light-hearted manner. Indeed in the course of the present argument, we pointed out to Mr. Gupta the risks that his clients would run in the event of our giving effect to this objection; but after consulting the learned Advocates instructing him he informed us that in his opinion the objection ought to be pressed. In such circumstances, in my judgment, if the appellants can show that the order was made without jurisdiction they are then entitled to demand any appropriate relief which we have it in our power to give them.

Now, I entirely agree with my learned brother that, if the appellants are to be deprived of the right of trial before a jury or before Commissioners to which they attach a certain value, the words depriving them of that right must be absolutely clear and specific. I can find no such words in this section. In considering the intention of the legislature we cannot close our eyes to the fact that special legislation was passed to provide for the trial of serious offences including offences punishable with death. There can also be no doubt that the Special Magistrate has no power to try such an offence. I should, therefore, find it very difficult to believe that the intention of the legislature was to give the local Government power to ignore the most serious part of the crime altogether simply to give jurisdiction to a Special Magistrate. Another difficulty is that it would imply that the Local Government have it in their power to decide finally that a particular accused person has not committed an offence punishable with death. There is no such power clearly conferred upon them and I find it impossible to say that they have the right to send a case of this kind to be tried by a Special Magistrate. For these reasons, particularly because there is no specific provision for empowering a Special Magistrate to deal with this type of case, I agree that the order made was without jurisdiction.

The next question which we have to determine is what orders we can and what order we ought to pass. We are then confronted with another very difficult question, that is to say, what powers we have, sitting to hear appeals from the decision of a Special Magistrate. That matter was determined by sub-s. (2), S. 3 of Act 24 of 1932 and the decision rests upon the meaning to be given to the words "in the manner." Those words might apply merely to procedure or go further and apply to the method in which the appeal is to be disposed of. I think it might be argued with some show of reason that the natural interpretation of those words would be that the Court in the exercise of certain limited powers in appeal was to follow the procedure laid down in Ch. 31, Criminal P. C. But the difficulty in accepting such an interpretation is that this Act of the Indian Legislature confers no powers on us whatever, and if sub-s. (2) merely deals with procedure, we can do nothing more than issue notices and listen to arguments. For example, it cannot be denied that this Supplementary Act does not confer upon us any power to reduce a sentence. From time to time this Court in hearing appeals from the decisions of Special Magistrates has reduced sentences and, so far as I know, it has never been suggested that in so doing the Court was acting without jurisdiction. In my view, therefore, the only possible interpretation of this subsection is that the intention was to confer upon us the powers of an appellate Court hearing appeals under the provisions of Ch. 31 of the Code. If that be so, the irresistible conclusion is that we have all the powers referred to in S. 423.

Now, if we have the powers conferred by that section, we have the right in suitable cases to order a re-trial by a Court of competent jurisdiction subordinate to us or to commit the accused persons to trial by the Court of Session. The moment that position is reached the appellants are not limited to showing that the appointment of the Special Magistrate is without jurisdiction; they are also entitled to go further and show that the order made by the Magistrate, though not without jurisdiction, was improper and liable to be set aside. In fact their position is exactly parallel to that of an accused person who has been improperly tried by a First Class Magistrate for a minor offence when he ought really to have been committed to the Sessions. In such cases, so far as I know, it has always been held that, even though the order of the Magistrate is not strictly without jurisdiction, it is an improper order and this Court has never had any hesitation in setting such an order aside in a proper case and directing the accused person to be committed to the Sessions. So far as the present case is concerned, I agree with my learned brother that the trial was without jurisdiction and that, therefore, the proper order to pass is merely one setting aside the convictions and sentences, leaving it to the Local Government to take such further steps, if any, as they may be advised. But had I not reached the conclusion that the appointment of the Special Magistrate was without jurisdiction, I should still have been prepared in view of the facts to which my learned brother and I have referred, to say that the order was an improper one and that the appellants ought to be tried either by the Court of Session or by a Special Tribunal.

R.M./R.K.

Order accordingly.

 A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 534

EDGLEY, J.

Rakhal Das Mukherji and others—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Kalipada Bhattacharji and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1925 of 1934, Decided on 26th May 1936, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, Khulna, D/- 30th June 1934.

* Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 9—Declaration in respect of right of easement of pathway—Every owner of servient tenement denying plaintiff's right and every person obstructing are necessary parties.

Where the plaintiff claims a decree for a declaration that he is entitled to a right of easement in respect of a certain pathway, every owner of the servient tenement who denies the plaintiff's right, or is concerned in the obstruction of the pathway, is a necessary party; and any decree obtained in the absence of any such person is infructuous: 1921 Cal 622, Foll.; 1924 Cal 369, Ref.; 1925 Cal 1138, Disting.; 1915 Cal 403 and 1924 Cal 1050, Not approved.

[P 535 C 2]

*Gunada Charan Sen and Tarapada Mukherjee—*for Appellants.

*Prokash Chandra Majumdar—*for Respondents.

Judgment.—In the suit out of which this appeal arises the plaintiffs sued the defendants for a declaration of their right of easement in respect of a certain pathway leading from their house in the direction of Maheswarpassa Main Road to the south. This pathway passed to the west of a certain tank belonging to the defendants and that path is said to have been obstructed by defendant 11 acting on behalf of the other defendants. The suit was dismissed by the Court of first instance and the plaintiffs thereupon appealed to the lower appellate Court where their appeal was contested by defendant 11. One of the points taken by the contesting defendant was that the appeal to the lower appellate Court was incompetent, because the appeal had abated as against the heirs of defendant 8. This being the case it was urged that, even if the plaintiffs succeeded in their appeal, any decree which they might obtain would be infructuous. This point however was decided in favour of the plaintiff-appellants and it was held by the learned Subordinate Judge that the appeal was not incompetent. The defendants have now come before this Court on second appeal.

The learned Advocate for the appellants in this case contends that the lower appellate Court was wrong in holding that the heirs of defendant 8 were not necessary parties to the appeal before the lower appellate Court. The learned Advocate for the respondents, on the other hand, contends that the heirs of defendant 8 were not necessary parties, because defendant 8 had not actually obstructed the plaintiff's right of way and that being the case his heirs were not interested in the subject-matter of the suit. With regard to this argument it appears from the pleadings filed in the first Court that the plaintiffs' allegation was that their right of way had been obstructed by defendant 11 acting on his own behalf and also on behalf of the other defendants. It appears to have been admitted that the pathway in question actually belonged to the defendants and was recorded in their names in the record of rights. It further appears that separate written statements were filed in the first Court: one on behalf of defendant 11 and the other on behalf of defendants 1, 2, 5, 8, 9, 10 and 13. In the later written statement the contesting defendants, including defendant 8, strenuously denied the plaintiff's allegations which appeared in the plaint and contested his right to the declaration which he sought. It therefore appears from the pleadings in this case that defendant 8 was not only one of the owners of the alleged servient tenement, but he had also contested the plaintiff's claim. It is also significant that the judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge contains the following finding:

Though there is no specific act of obstruction attributed to defendant 8, who appeared in the lower Court and filed a written statement, still the facts stated in the plaint and disclosed in evidence are that defendant 8, along with other defendants, had some hand in the obstruction and was therefore a necessary party and was made a party.

The general principle which governs the question of joinder of parties in a case of this nature has been stated by Sir Ashutosh Mookerjee in 25 C W N 249 (1) in which his Lordship made the following observations:

The Court will not entertain a suit in which no effective decree can be made in the absence of an interested party In a case like the present where the decree is to be made for declaration of a right of way as a village road over the disputed land and for removal of an obstruction thereon, if it is discovered that a person interested in the servient tenement has not been made a party to the suit, the Court will not proceed to make a decree. The decree so made must be infructuous.

This general principle was reiterated by Ghose, J. in 1924 Cal 369 (2). In the later case it was however pointed out that, regard being had to the facts of that particular case, it was not necessary to implead certain persons who were alleged to be the cosharers of some principal defendants. In this connection the learned Advocate for the respondents relies upon certain observations made by N. R. Chatterjee, J. in 19 C W N 1211 (3) at p. 1213. In that particular case his Lordship held that it was not necessary to implead certain persons who were alleged to be necessary parties, because "the owners of the land bhadrar kola alone have caused the obstruction, and all the owners of that land have been made parties to the suit." He further held that a dominant owner has not necessarily any cause of action against servient owners who have not caused obstruction or raised any objection to the exercise of his right of easement. This case was cited with approval by Suhrawardy, J., in 40 C L J 74 (4). But in the later case, the learned Judge pointed out that in order to determine whether certain parties are necessary parties or not, reference should be made to the plaintiff's case as set out in the plaint. Further in referring to 25 C W N 249 (1) his Lordship stated:

There the plaintiff wanted to establish rights in respect of certain properties; and it may be argued that he could not do so in the absence of any person who had any interest in the property since such person would be materially affected by the establishment of such a right.

Finally the learned Advocate for the respondents relied on another decision of Suhrawardy, J., in 1925 Cal 1138 (5), in which it was held that certain persons who had not actually obstructed the alleged plaintiff's right were not necessary parties. It is however clear that this case can be distinguished on the facts from the case out of which the present appeal arises. As I have already pointed out, in the case now before this Court, defendant 8 was not merely one of the owners of the servient tenement and had denied the plaintiff's right, but he was also, on the findings of the lower appellate Court, directly concerned in the obstruction. It therefore follows that any decree obtained by the plaintiffs in the absence of the heirs of defendant 8 will be infructuous and the suit cannot therefore be maintained in the absence of those persons.

3. Madan Mohan Chakravarty v. Sashi Bhusan Mukherjee, 1915 Cal 403=31 I O 549=19 C W N 1211.

4. Surja Narain Bera v. Chandra Bera, 1924 Cal 1050=84 I O 467=40 C L J 74.

5. Bhola Nath Mandal v. Mohesh Chandra Bera, 1925 Cal 1138=88 I O 664.

1. Haran Shelkh v. Ramesh Chandra, 1921 Cal 622=62 I O 425=25 C W N 249.

2. Amritanath Biswas v. Jogendra Chandra Bhattacharjee, 1924 Cal 369=69 I O 183.

I am therefore of opinion that the appeal to the lower appellate Court was incompetent. The result is that this appeal is allowed, the judgment and decree of the lower appellate Court are set aside and those of the Court of first instance are restored. The defendants will be entitled to their costs in the lower appellate Court as well as in this Court. The cross-objection is not pressed and is therefore dismissed without costs.

V.B./R.K.

*Appeal allowed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 536

R. C. MITTER, J.

Sarojini Roy—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Romesh Chandra Biswas and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 542 of 1932, Decided on 29th March 1935, against decree of Addl. Sub-Judge, 2nd Court, Sylhet, D/- 8th August 1931.

Landlord and Tenant — Abandonment—Sale in invitum stands on same footing as transfer by act of occupancy raiyat—Entire holding need not be sold at once—Different parts sold at different times—Abandonment takes place when last transfer is made—Transfer of entire holding completed by landlord himself purchasing portion of holding in execution of decree against raiyat—He cannot put forward his purchase for sustaining case of abandonment.

For the purpose of abandonment a sale in invitum stands on the same footing as a transfer by the act of the occupancy raiyat. So also, for the purpose of constituting abandonment, the transfer of holding need not be effected all at once. If the entire holding is sold, but in parts at different times, it will amount to abandonment as soon as the last transfer is made. [P 536 C 2; P 537 C 1]

Where however the landlord purchases a portion of the holding, at a Court sale in execution of a decree against the raiyat, and the effect of the purchase is to complete the transfer of the entire holding, the landlord cannot put forward his own purchase for sustaining a case of abandonment: 1932 Cal 405, Rel. on; 12 C W N 721, Disting. [P 537 C 1, 2]

Hemendra Kumar Das—for Appellant.Paresh Lal Shome—for Respondents.Bireswar Chatterjee—for Deputy Registrar.

Judgment.—This appeal is on behalf of the plaintiff in a suit for declaration of her title to seven plots of land, described in the plaint, for confirmation of her possession over an area of 4 keors of land, being the northern portion of plot 1, and for recovery of possession of the remaining lands. All the plots of land constituted a non-transferable occupancy holding held by one Ejaraddin under the plaintiff and her predecessor-in-interest.

Her suit was decreed by the learned Munsif in its entirety, but on appeal the learned Subordinate Judge has maintained the decree of the learned Munsif in respect of 4 keors of land, being the northern part of plot 1, and has dismissed her claim for khas possession in respect of the remaining lands. It has been found that on 15th Falgun 1323 Ejaraddin sold all the lands of his holding, save and except the aforesaid 4 keors of land, which was his homestead, to defendants 1 and 2. Thereafter he remained in possession of his homestead which he retained, and on his death his heirs remained in possession thereof. The plaintiff sued his heirs for rent, and obtained a decree, which was not a rent decree, but had the force of a money decree. In execution of the said decree the plaintiff has purchased on 10th May 1924 the said 4 keors of land and thereafter took possession of the same on 20th May 1924. By reason of the transfer by Ejaraddin to defendants 1 and 2, and by reason of the aforesaid Court sale all the lands of the holding have passed out of the hands of the heirs of Ejaraddin. The plaintiff sues on the basis that by reason of the said transfers the holding has been abandoned and she sues for possession in her character as landlord. The learned Munsif held that the aforesaid two transfers constitute abandonment. The learned Subordinate Judge has held that:

Partial transfers done by sale in Court, and another by a private conveyance at two different times, cannot be tacked together to make a complete transfer of the holding for the purpose of building the theory of abandonment.

He accordingly held that the plaintiff was entitled to get a decree for confirmation of possession to the said 4 Keors of lands on the basis of her having purchased the right, title and interest of the heirs of Ejaruddin in the same at the Court sale but was not entitled to get khas possession in the rest of the lands. The reasons given by the learned Subordinate Judge are clearly wrong, but the decree which he has made, in my judgment, is a correct decree, for the reasons which I will state hereafter. It is now well settled that for the purpose of abandonment a sale in invitum stands on the same footing as a transfer by the act of the occupancy raiyat, and for the purpose of constituting abandonment, the transfer of the entire holding need not be effected all at once. If the entire holding is sold but in parts at different times it will amount to abandonment as soon as the last transfer is made. In the case before me the sale by Ejaraddin to defendants 1 and 2, on 15th Falgoon 1323, did not amount to abandonment, as all the lands had not been sold, a substantial part of the holding being retained by the tenant. The transfer of the entire holding was only completed by reason of the purchase by the plaintiff at the Court sale of the said 4 keors of land. The question is whether the plaintiff can put forward her own purchase for sustaining a case of abandonment. In my judgment she cannot. I do not rest my judgment on the ground of estoppel. It has been held that a cosharer landlord purchasing an occupancy holding cannot raise the question of transferability of the holding as against another purchaser of the same: 11 C W N 76 (1), 14 C W N 71 (2) and 19 C W N 1307 (3); but where the purchase is by the sole landlord or by the entire body of landlords it has been held that the said principle has no application: 12 C W N 721=8 C L J 29 (4) and 40 C L J 90=28 C W N 865 (5).

In the case before me the plaintiff by her act has put the tenants out of possession on the remaining portion of the holding. She purchased the right, title and interest of the tenants in the 4 koers of land and by taking proceedings through the execution Court has taken possession by removing her judgment-debtors, the tenants, from the said lands. If she had taken a conveyance from the tenants of the said piece of land she would not have been allowed to urge the transfer to her as constituting abandonment, and in her capacity as landlord come in and take possession of all the lands of the tenancy. She would have stepped into the shoes of the tenant, and on the principle adopted by the Full Bench in 48 Cal 605=

25 C W N 29 (6), would not have been allowed to put forward the rights of a landlord. The same principles would apply, in my judgment, when she has purchased at the Court sale. The claim on the basis of abandonment can be sustained only by her retaining her character as purchaser of the portion of the tenancy. If she casts aside her character as such purchaser there would be no abandonment as then there would be no transfer of the entire holding. The retention of her character as assignee of the tenant, i. e. of her character as representative of the tenant, is inconsistent with her insisting on her claim to recover possession on the ground of abandonment in her character as landlord. I accordingly hold that her claim on this basis cannot be allowed on the principle that a party cannot be allowed to blow hot and cold at the same time in the same suit. The view that I am taking of the rights of the plaintiff accords with the decision of Subhawardy and Jack, JJ., in 35 C W N 648 (7). The case in 12 C W N 721 (4) is distinguishable as that was not a case where the landlord relied upon a purchase by himself of the tenants interested in the non-transferable occupancy holding for the purpose of raising a case of abandonment of the holding. I accordingly hold that the decree made by the Court of appeal below is a correct decree and the appeal must be dismissed but without costs.

R.M./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

6. Syed Mohsenuddin v. Baikuntha Chandra Sutradhar, 1921 Cal 444=61 I C 443=25 C W N 29=48 Cal 605 (F B).

7. Ruhini Kumar Dass v. Amiruddin, 1932 Cal 405=137 I C 668=35 C W N 648.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 537

R. C. MITTER, J.

Aymamud Sarcar — Objector—Appellant.

v.

Ebaruddin Sarcar and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 398 of 1935, Decided on 26th May 1936, from appellate order of Sub-Judge, Dinajpur, D/- 18th April 1935.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 47 — Purchase of equity of redemption of one of several properties mortgaged by mortgagee after decree on his mortgage—Purchase does not amount to pro tanto satisfaction of decree.

Purchase of the equity of redemption of one of the several mortgaged properties or of a share

1. Ayenuddin Nasya v. Srish Chandra Banerjee, (1907) 11 C W N 76.

2. Harro Chandra Poddar v. Umesh Chandra, (1910) 14 C W N 71=5 I C 39=11 C L J 20.

3. Ohandi Prosannao v. Gour Chandra, 1916 Cal 452=33 I C 434=19 C W N 1307.

4. Bibi Asmatennessa v. Harendralal, (1908) 35 Cal 904=12 C W N 721=8 C L J 29.

5. Jnanendra v. Dukhlram, 1924 Cal 850=82 I C 386=28 C W N 865=40 C L J 90.

of the properties included in the mortgage decree, by the mortgagee decree-holder before his execution does not amount to protanto satisfaction of the decree and the mortgagee decree-holder is not bound to apportion the decretal amount proportionately on the properties purchased by him and the other properties not so purchased included in the mortgage decree for sale: 4 C L R 156 and 34 Cal 13, Foll.; 22 All 284 (FB); 10 All 570; 1920 All 129; 4 C L J 15 (n) and 195, Dissent.; 1934 Mad 250, Ref.

[P 539 C 1, 2]

Gunendra Krishna Ghose—for Appellant.

G. P. Sanyal and Sourindra Narayan Ghose—for Respondents.

Judgment. — The question raised in this appeal is whether respondent 1 can execute a mortgage decree for the full amount mentioned in the said decree, against all or any of the mortgage properties, or is he entitled to levy execution only for a proportionate amount and confine his execution to properties Nos. 2 to 4 of the mortgage decree.

The question is one on which the High Courts of India have taken divergent views.

Respondent 2, Hiralal Shaha, advanced money to the predecessor-in-interest of respondents 3 to 9 on the security of some properties, which may be called properties Nos. 1 to 4. He obtained a mortgage decree in the year 1928 on this mortgage, which decree has been assigned to respondent 1 who has applied to execute the same, limiting his execution in the first instance to property No. 1 in pursuance of the order of the Court made on 18th January 1929 at an earlier execution. Hiralal had taken another mortgage from the same person for another loan, but that mortgage included only property No. 1. This mortgage was assigned to respondent 1 who sued upon it, obtained a decree and in execution thereof purchased the mortgaged property himself in the year 1930, that is at a date subsequent to 18th January 1929.

The appellant before me is a puisne mortgagee in respect of properties Nos. 2 to 4 only. He sued upon his mortgage, obtained a decree in the year 1929 and in execution thereof purchased the said properties on 14th November 1930. He was a party to Hiralal's suit, which terminated in the decree passed in the year 1928, the decree which is now under execution.

In 1928 respondent 1 as assignee of the said decree started execution (O. C. Execution Case 221 of 1928). The appellant filed an objection under S. 47 of the Code and on his objection the execution Court passed an order on 18th January 1929 that property No. 1 was to be put up for sale first, and if the sale proceeds be not sufficient to satisfy the decree then and then only properties Nos. 2 to 4 were to be sold, and directed a note to that effect to be inserted in the sale proclamation. That execution did not proceed further and was ultimately dismissed for default on 2nd April 1929. It is after this that respondent 1 purchased property No. 1 at a Court sale as I have stated above.

There was an intermediate execution in the year 1932 (Execution Case No. 39 of 1932) and the said execution was dismissed on 29th November 1932. The last order passed in that execution case has only been exhibited in this case. It runs thus:

"29th November 1932. Objection under S. 47, Civil P. C., allowed with costs. The execution be dismissed."

What those objections under S. 47 were, I do not know, and it is not possible in the state of the record to find out the reasons for this order.

The present execution was started on 25th January 1933. Respondent 1 prayed for sale of property No. 1 in the first instance in pursuance of the order of the Court dated 18th January 1929 passed in execution Case No. 221 of 1928, and prayed for sale of properties Nos. 2 to 4 thereafter if the sale proceeds of property No. 1 did not satisfy his decree.

To this execution the appellant raised objections. He said that the whole decretal debt cannot be thrown on properties Nos. 2 to 4, but that the respondent 1, having himself purchased in another execution property No. 1, was bound to apportion the decretal amount and could only take out execution against properties Nos. 2 to 4 for an amount which would bear the same proportion to the whole decretal debt as the value of properties Nos. 2 to 4 bear to the total value of properties Nos. 1 to 4. This objection was given effect to by the trial Court but has been negated by the lower appellate Court, which has allowed execution to proceed for the whole of the decretal amount but has directed property No. 1 to be sold first. The appellant contends before me that the view taken by the trial Court is the correct view and that its order ought to be restored.

The point raised is a difficult one. Not only do the Allahabad and Madras High Courts support the contention of the appellant, but in this Court divergent views have been expressed. The cases of the Allahabad and Madras High Courts expressly in point are respectively 42 All 544 (1), and 141 I C 366 (2). In this Court the cases in 4 C L J 15 (n) (3) and 4 C L J 195 (4), support the contention of the appellant, while the cases in 4 C L R 156 (5) and 34 Cal 13 (6) are against the appellant, the decision in the last mentioned two cases proceeding on the view that the question cannot be raised in execution proceedings but whatever equity there is must be enforced by a suit for contribution. In 34 Cal 13 (6) the Division Bench refused to refer the case to the Full Bench on the ground that the judgment in 4 C L J 195 (4) proceeded upon earlier cases of this Court which did not support the proposition laid down therein. The objection of the appellant can only be given effect to, if it comes within S. 47 of the Code, that is to say only if it can be held that the purchase of the equity of redemption of one of the properties or of a share of the properties included in the mortgage-decree by the mortgage decree-holder before his execution amounts to pro tanto satisfaction of the decree. This is the view which was formulated by Mahmud, J. in 10 All 570 (7), and accepted by the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court in 22 All 284 (8). The last mentioned case was a case of purchase by the mortgagee who had not at the date of his purchase sued upon his mortgage and the question arose not in execution but in the suit which the mortgagee brought to enforce his mortgage. This view proceeds upon the view of coalescence, the creditor becoming one of several judgment-debtors. The principle so formulated is one of the main reasons on which the decision in 42 All 544 (1) was rested.

In that case the mortgagee had already obtained his decree before he purchased shares in the equity of redemption in two of the mortgaged properties in execution of a simple money decree levied by a third party, and the question arose in execution of the mortgage-decree, as in the case before me. Tudball and Sulaiman, JJ. also gave another reason namely avoidance of multiplicity of proceedings, in support of their view that the mortgagee decree-holder was bound to apportion the decretal amount proportionately on the properties purchased by him and the other properties not so purchased, included in the mortgage-decree for sale. They said that where a mortgagee purchases the equity of redemption in one of such properties, he is bound to contribute to the mortgage-debt in proportion to the value of the property purchased by him, and the equities must be worked out in the execution itself for the purpose of avoiding multiplicity of suits and proceedings. If this last mentioned principle is the correct principle, in my judgment the question cannot be raised in an objection to execution having regard to the terms of S. 47 of the Code, which contemplate only three questions, the question of satisfaction and discharge either wholly or in part, of the decree being two of them which are relevant for this case before me. In my view the principle of avoidance of multiplicity of suits and proceedings is the real principle and so the objection cannot be entertained in the course of execution proceedings, where the executing Court must execute the decree as it stands.

As between co-mortgagors or persons who have acquired interests in the equity of redemption in the several properties included in the mortgage security, there is the right of contribution. If one of them pays the whole of the mortgage debt or decree, or if it is realised from his property, he has the right to claim contribution rateably. If the mortgagee himself purchase the equity of redemption in one of such properties, he is also liable to contribute in his capacity as the purchaser of the equity of redemption. The mortgage

1. Sarju Kumar Mnkherjee v. Thakur Prasad, 1920 All 129=58 I C 743=18 A L J 690=42 All 544.
2. Chinniah Rowther v. A. B. Muthuraman Chettiar, 1934 Mad 250=141 I C 366.
3. Muhamed Taki Reza v. Thomas, (1906) 4 C L J 317=4 O L J 15 (n).
4. Harendra Kumar Guha v. Dindayal Shaha, (1906) 4 C L J 195.
5. Naffer Chandra Mandal v. Balkanto Nath Roy, (1879) 4 C L R 156.
6. Amir Chand v. Sheo Prasad Singh, (1907) 34 Cal 13=4 O L J 573.
7. Kudhai v. Sheo Dayal, (1898) 10 All 570=1888 A W N 231.
8. Bisheshur Dial v. Ram Swarup, (1900) 22 All 284=1900 A W N 69 (F B).

security is then split up and the right accrues to those who have equity of redemption in the other properties of redeeming piecemeal (S. 60, T. P. Act). A suit to enforce piecemeal redemption in such a case is really the combination of a suit for redemption and a suit for contribution against the mortgagee. When a suit for enforcement of his mortgage by sale by such a mortgagee, who has purchased the equity of redemption in one out of many properties included in his security is brought, there cannot be any valid objection to the defendants to such a suit setting up the plea of contribution for the purpose of maintaining and preserving their right of piecemeal redemption which they have acquired so that that decree for sale to be passed may by apportioning the mortgage-debt on the different properties give effect to their aforesaid right of piecemeal redemption. The phrase "protanto satisfaction" used in the judgment of the Full Bench of the Allahabad High Court, 22 All 284 (8), should in my judgment, be taken to be a convenient expression only, but is really the expression in a terse form of the principle which I have formulated above. I accordingly follow the decision of White and Morris, JJ. in 4 C L R 156 (5) and of Rampini and Mookherjee, JJ., in 34 Cal 13 (6), and hold that the objection of the appellant cannot be given effect to and his remedy lies in a suit for contribution if the decree be realised wholly or partly, but in excess, from properties Nos. 2 to 4. The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs. Leave to appeal under S. 15 of the Letters Patent prayed for is granted.

V.B./R.K.

*Appeal dismissed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 540

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Priyabala Dassi and another—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Sarajubala Choudhurani and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 237 of 1932, Decided on 27th April 1936, from original decree of Sub-Judge, Second Court, Dacca, D/- 24th May 1932.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 22, R. 3—Death of some plaintiffs after preliminary decree for ascertainment of mesne profits—Suit does not abate by reason of non-substitution of deceased plaintiffs' legal representatives within time.

Where a preliminary decree has been passed directing ascertainment of mesne profits and some of the plaintiffs die after it, the suit does not abate by reason of the non-substitution of the legal representatives of the deceased plaintiffs within the time limited by law : 1929 Cal 430 ; 1928 Mad 914 (F B) ; 1925 P C 117 and 1931 Pat 57, Rel. on ; 1930 All 779, Dissent.

[P 541 C 1]

Gopal Chandra Das and Navadwip Chandra Saha—for Appellants.

Sarat Chandra Basak, Priya Nath Datta, Bhuban Mohan Saha, Nikunja Behari Roy, Kanai Lal Saha, Satish Chandra Choudhury, Amarendra Mohan Mitter, Rajendra Chandra Guha and Bhupendra Chandra Roy Choudhury—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the legal representatives of two of the plaintiffs in the suit in which the decree passed on 10th February 1913, in Suit No. 65 of 1910, in the Second Court of the Subordinate Judge, Dacca, directed that the amount of mesne profits which the plaintiffs were entitled to get from defendants in the suit was to be ascertained afterwards, according to the petition of the plaintiffs, at the time of the execution of the decree. It appears that the appellants as the legal representatives of the original plaintiffs 2 (ka) and 8 applied for ascertainment of mesne profits before the Court below, and it must be taken to be established in the case before us that all the necessary representatives of those plaintiffs had not applied for substitution of their names within the time limited by law, as mentioned in O. 22, R. 3, Civil P. C. On that state of facts the learned Subordinate Judge in the Court below held that the proceeding for ascertainment of mesne profits had abated so far as the shares of the two plaintiffs mentioned above were concerned, regard being had to the position that no cogent grounds had been made out or even attempted to be made out for setting aside the abatement, on any proper application made in that behalf. The result of the decision arrived at by the Court below was that the suit in which a decree for ascertainment of mesne profits was passed in favour of the original plaintiffs 2 (ka) and 8, was considered to have abated, so far as it related to the right of those plaintiffs to get mesne profits from the defendants in the suit.

The material question for consideration in the case before us is whether the provisions contained in O. 22, R. 3, Civil P. C., were applicable to a case in which a preliminary decree has been passed directing ascertainment of mesne profits. In the case of suit for enforcement of mortgage, it has been held by this Court, in consonance with the rule laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 51 I A 321 (1), that no abatement of a suit takes place, when the plaintiff dies after a preliminary decree has been passed, for the reason of non-substitution of the legal representatives within the time limited by law: see 57 Cal 285 (2). The same view was taken by a Full Bench of the Madras High Court in 51 Mad 701 (3), and we are unable to agree with the reason for the decision of the Allahabad High Court in 52 All 910 (4), taking a view, contrary to that expressed by this Court in 57 Cal 285 (2), mentioned above, with which we are in entire agreement. In the case of a proceeding for ascertainment of mesne profits, it was held by the Patna High Court in 1931 Pat 57 (5), that O. 22, R. 3, Civil P. C., did not apply to an application made after a decree in a preliminary form had been passed for ascertainment of mesne profits, inasmuch as after the decree has been passed, the suit could not be dismissed, unless the decree has been reversed, and no question of abatement could arise in such case even though one of the parties dies after the preliminary decree is passed and no legal representative is brought on the record within the time allowed by law. In our judgment, there can be no question that the above decision of the Patna High Court is in accordance with the law laid down by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 51 I A 321 (1), mentioned above, that :

The parties have on the making of the decree acquired rights or incurred liability which are fixed, unless or until the decree is varied or set aside.

On the conclusion arrived at by us, as indicated above, the decision of the Court below holding that the claim for mesne profits so far as the original plaintiffs 2 (ka) and 8 were concerned, had abated, must be set aside. The legal representatives of those plaintiffs, the appellants in this Court, are entitled to have their share of the mesne profits ascertained on the application made before the Court below in that behalf. A question of the amount of court-fees payable in the memorandum of appeal filed in this Court was raised before us on behalf of the respondents. It appears that the court-fees on the amount of Rs. 500 were paid on the memorandum of appeal, that being the amount at which the claim for mesne profits was tentatively valued in the suit. In our opinion no further amount was payable by the appellants as court-fees at this stage, seeing that their application for ascertainment of mesne profits was held to have abated. There can be no question that the appellants will be required to pay, according to the directions of the Court below, adequate court-fees, in proper time, on the amount which is ascertained to be their share of the mesne profits, and for which the defendants-respondents are held liable.

In the result, the appeal is allowed, the decision of the Court below and the decree passed by it disentitling the appellants as the legal representatives of the original plaintiffs 2 (ka) and (8), are set aside, and we direct that mesne profits to which the appellants are held entitled under the decree in Suit No. 65 of 1910 in the second Court of the Subordinate Judge of Dacca, be ascertained in accordance with law. The appellants are entitled to get their costs in the lower Court as also their costs in this Court from the defendants-respondents in this appeal. The hearing fee in this appeal is assessed at three gold mohurs.

D.S./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 541

M. C. GHOSE, J.

Sachindra Kumar Roy and others—Appellants.

v.

Purna Chandra Pal — Respondent.
Appeal No. 177 of 1935, Decided on 28th May 1936.

1. Lachmi Narain Marwari v. Bal Mukund Marwari, 1924 P O 198=81 I O 747=51 I A 321=4 Pat 61 (P O).

2. Nazir Ahammad v. Tamijaddi Ahammad, 1929 Cal 430=122 I O 303=57 Cal 285.

3. Perumal Pillay v. Perumal Chetty, 1928 Mad 914=112 I O 116=55 M L J 253=51 Mad 701 (F B).

4. Anmol Singh v. Hari Sankar, 1930 All 779=126 I O 20=1930 A L J 825=52 All 910.

5. Mt. Bhattia v. Abdus Shakur, 1931 Pat 57=129 I O 84=11 P L T 796.

Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 74—Old kistibandi patta—Small sum of moltana put down to be paid with instalment—In Record of Rights rent shown inclusive of moltana — Small sum of moltana is not abwab.

Where in a kistibandi patta the instalments put down include a small expense of moltana to be paid along with every instalment, and the document is of old times and Record of Rights shows the amount of instalment inclusive of moltana as the rent, the small sum cannot be deemed to be an abwab. [P 542 C 1]

Bankim Chandra Banerji—for Appellants.

Nagendra Chandra Choudhury — for Respondent.

Judgment—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs in a suit for rent. The question in controversy between the parties is as to the rate of rent. The plaintiffs claim rent as Rs. 8-5-6. The defendant stated the rent was Rs. 8-2-10. The difference between the parties is a sum of annas 2 and pies 8. It appears that the howla of the defendant was created by a patta dated 29th December 1869. The relevant portions of the patta are in these terms:

In respect of the total 2 kanis 3 karas 2 kags 15 tils of land I appoint you howladar by settling the total jama at Rs. 8-5-6 altogether made up of Rs. 8-2-10 per year calculated at the rate of Rs. 4 per kani and 2 annas 8 pies as moltana costs at the rate of 4 pies per rupee.

The question is whether the 2 annas 8 pies as moltana costs is to be considered part of the rent or as an abwab which is offensive under S. 74, Ben. Ten. Act. In the kistibandi of the patta the instalments are put down thus:

	Rs. A. P.	P.
Kist Ashar ... Mokrari 2-0 0 Moltana 8
Kist Aswin ... Mokrari 2-0 0 Moltana 8
Kist Agrahayan ... Mokrari 2-0-0 Moltana 8
Kist Magh ... Mokrari 2-2-10 Moltana 8

Total Rs. ... 8-2-10 As. 2-8 p.

Grand total Rs. 8-5-6

It is apparent therefore that this small expense of moltana was to be paid along with every instalment. Considering that the document is of old times and the Record of Rights supports the plaintiffs' case that the rent is Rs. 8-5-6, in the circumstances of this case the Court of appeal below committed an error in holding that the small sum was an abwab. The appeal is allowed. The decree of the lower appellate Court is reversed and the plaintiffs' suit is decreed in full with costs in all the Courts. Leave to appeal is refused.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 542

M. N. MUKERJI AND JACK, JJ.

Bhabani Prosanna Lahiri and another —Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Chairman, Municipal Commissioners, Rangpur Municipality—Defendant 1 and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 19 of 1933, Decided on 16th March 1936, from original decree of Second Addl. Dist. Judge, Rangpur, D/- 14th September 1932.

(a) Bengal Municipal Act (3 of 1884), Ss. 112, 118, 120 and 121 — Assessment reduced on review—If distress can issue without fresh notice—Procedure stated.

The provisions as to time in the matter of process for distress cannot be construed as indicating that the protection of the tax-payer was the sole concern of the legislature; and consequently remedy by way of distress in a case where, on review, the tax is reduced, is permissible. The procedure, in short, is as follows: (a) Presentation of a bill at the rate entered in the list, notice whereof is published under S. 112 or at the altered rate, if there has been subsequent alteration, to be made within six months after the tax has become due (S. 120, para. 1), and the tax will be deemed to be due on the first day of the quarter for which it is payable. (b) Non-payment of the bill: the Municipality may wait for any reasonable time, subject to the general law of limitation. (c) Service of notice of demand with copy bill at any time subsequent to presentation of bill (S. 120, para. 2). (d) Application for review: either before or after service of notice of demand; in the latter case, the application must be made within 15 days of service of the notice of demand (Form A Note). (e) If the review fails: if a notice of demand has been already served no fresh notice is necessary, because in the notice itself it is stated that the amount due will have to be paid within 15 days of the order on the review. If a notice of demand has not been served then it will have to be served and within 15 days of the service the amount due will have to be paid. (f) If the review succeeds: if there has been no previous service of a notice of demand such notice will have to be served with "copy of bills" (S. 120, para. 2). But now the tax due will be tax as altered. If there has been a previous service of a notice of demand a fresh notice at the altered rate would not be necessary because of the statement in the note in Form A to which reference has already been made. But a better practice is to wait for the result of the review. (g) Non-compliance with the notice of demand taken along with the order on review, if any, within 15 days (S. 121, para. 1). (h) Distress and sale: within three months of the service of demand or order on review, as the case may be (S. 121, para. 2).

[P 545 C 2; P 546 C 1]

(b) Bengal Municipal Act (3 of 1884), Ss. 118, 120 and 121 — Quarterly instalment is distinct instalment—Unpaid arrears—One entire demand—Tender of one instalment refused—Distress for entire amount in arrears — Distress is illegal and distrainer is liable in damages without deduction of tax due.

Act treats each quarterly instalment of tax as distinct amount recoverable, and when several such instalments remain unpaid, it is wrong to consider that the total amount remaining unpaid constitutes an entire demand, and tender of one such instalment without others is not bad and cannot be refused by the Municipal Committee: if on refusal of such tender a distress is issued for the entire amount including the tendered instalment, the distress is illegal, the distrainer becomes trespasser ab initio and the full value of goods distrained without any deduction on account of tax due is recoverable as damages. [P 546 C 2; P 547 C 1]

Charu Chandra Biswas, Satis Chandra Sinha, Debendra Nath Bagchi and Rabindra Nath Chowdhury—for Appellants.

Atul Chandra Gupta, Hiralal Ganguli, Priyanath Bhattacharjee, Sourindra Narain Ghose, Shambhunath Banerjee, Madan Mohan Malhotra and Sudhansu Bhushan Sen—for Respondents.

Judgment. — The plaintiffs are the owners and occupiers of certain premises situated within the Municipality of Rangpur. They instituted the suit against 5 defendants: No. 1 the Chairman of the Municipality; No. 2, Jogendranath Chatterjee, in his individual capacity and also as the Chairman; No. 3, Phanibhusan Majumdar, in his individual capacity and also as the Vice-Chairman; No. 4, Narendra Mohan Chatterjee in his individual capacity and also as the warrant-officer; and No. 5, Rishikesh Dutta Gupta, in his individual capacity and also as the tax-collector. The suit was commenced as one for recovery of damages on the ground that certain goods of the plaintiffs had been wrongfully and maliciously seized and detained by the defendants, causing them annoyance, disturbance, mental worry and loss of prestige and reputation. It transpired after the plaint was lodged that the goods had already been sold and so the claim for damages was also pressed on the ground that the sale was wrongful and unauthorized. The Subordinate Judge having dismissed the suit, the plaintiffs have preferred this appeal. Mr. Biswas, appearing on behalf of the appellants, has expressly given up the allegations as regards malice and has restricted his claim to one based upon wrongful distress not authorized by law.

For this, the magnitude of the suit has been considerably reduced and the controversy has been brought within a very narrow compass. All the questions that now arise for our consideration are more or less questions of law, the facts being entirely undisputed. In 1927 there was a general assessment in this Municipality the tax for the holding in suit being raised from Rs. 109-9-0 per quarter to Rs. 163-14-0 per quarter. The first bill and notice of demand at this rate were served on the plaintiffs on 9th June 1927, the amount representing the tax for the first quarter of 1927-28. On 20th June 1927 the plaintiffs applied for a review. The application remained pending and in the meantime bills at the enhanced rate continued to be served: Bill for the second quarter of 1927-28 was served on 26th July 1927; for the third quarter of 1927-28 on 17th November 1927; for the fourth quarter of 1927-28 on 29th February 1928; for the first quarter of 1928-29 on 18th July 1928; for the second quarter of 1928-29 on 20th August 1928. On 17th October 1928 order was passed on the review reducing the enhanced tax to Rs. 136-8-0 per quarter.

On 29th November 1928 a bill at the rate of Rs. 163-14-0 for the third quarter of 1928-29 was served apparently having been drawn up at that old rate before the order was passed on the review. On 7th February 1929 a bill for the fourth quarter of 1928-29 at the reduced rate was served. No payment was made on any of these bills. It is important to note that no notice of demand was served in connexion with any of the aforesaid bills with the exception, of course, as already stated, of the bill for the first quarter of 1927-28. On 16th March 1929 a second notice of demand was served on the plaintiffs, as for a sum of Rs. 1,092 accompanied by eight bills in printed forms with the heading "copy bills" with the blanks filled in, and purporting to be bills at the rate of Rs. 136-8-0, for eight quarters of the two years 1927-28 and 1928-29. On 28th March 1929 plaintiff 2 tendered a sum of Rs. 136-8-0 to the Chairman of the Municipality with a letter which ran as follows:

Sir—I have the honour to remit herewith Rs. 136-8-0 on protest—municipal-tax for the fourth quarter of 1928-29 * * *. The tax in my opinion is excessive and assessed illegally. I understand that you would issue distress warrant for the realization of the tax. To avoid trouble I do hereby pay on protest the sum demanded although we do not admit the same to be legally assessed.

This tender was refused by a letter to the plaintiff dated 28th March 1929 over the signature of the Vice-Chairman which said :

Sir,—with reference to your letter No. Nil of 28th March 1929 sending under protest Rupees 136-8-0 for the municipal tax for the 4th quarter, 1928-29 I have the honour to state that the whole amount of taxes may be paid under protest, if you like. Part payment of the demand cannot be received now at this stage.

On 29th March 1929, plaintiff 2 wrote to the Chairman putting forward certain arguments as to why distress should not be levied for non-payment of the taxes. On 20th April 1929 a distress warrant was issued, the particulars of which are the following :

For the 2nd, 3rd and 4th quarters of 1927-28, and 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 4th quarters of 1928-29.

House tax	Rs. 477-12-0
Latrine tax	Rs. 477-12-0
Warrant fee	Rs. 10-0-0

Total, Rs. 965-8-0

The distress was levied and the goods were seized on 27th April 1929. The plaintiffs gave the notice under S. 363 of the Act on 13th June 1929 and instituted this suit on 16th July 1929. On 15th July 1929 however the goods were sold, the price fetched at the sale being Rs. 1,010-8-0. In the Court below, as well as in this Court, various considerations were put forward for the purpose of establishing that the distress was unwarranted by law; and some of the points urged in that Court have been given up here as untenable, while others, not previously adverted to, have been urged. The substantial contentions directed against the legality of the distress as urged before us will now be dealt with.

The first contention is that the demand made on 16th March 1929 was not a valid demand in that the notice of demand was accompanied by 8 bills, aggregating the total amount of demand, which were all issued for realization at the reduced rate of Rs. 136-8-0 per quarter and were headed "copy bills;" but of these, with the exception of one bill, namely the one for the last quarter of 1928-29, of which the original was issued for the said rate, the remaining seven purported to be copies of original bills which had been issued not at the reduced rate of Rupees 136-8-0 but at the enhanced rate of Rs. 163-4-0. It has been contended that under para. 2, S. 118 of the Act every instalment of tax shall be deemed to be due on the first day of the quarter in respect of which such instalment is payable and that under S. 120 of the Act a bill for an unpaid instalment which is due can only be presented within six months after it has become due; that each of the original bills for the said seven quarters had been issued within the said prescribed period, but on 16th March 1929 when the eight "copy bills" were presented along with the notice of demand, only two of them, namely those for the 3rd and 4th quarters of 1928-29 were within time, while the six others were all out of time; and as the original bills for the said six quarters had become ineffective by reason of the rate of tax stated in them having been reduced on review, these "copy bills" should be regarded as not copies but originals presented beyond time and so it should be held that S. 120 has been contravened.

It has been argued that the foundation of a process for distress is the service of "such bill and notice" (vide S. 121); that is to say, a bill and notice issued under S. 120 which provides for the presentation of a bill at the rate at which the realization is to be made; and that inasmuch as the six so-called "copy bills," which are the only bills in which such rate was mentioned, were each presented beyond six months of the respective dates when the tax became due, the process was issued without jurisdiction. Another branch of this contention which has been put forward in the alternative is that if S. 121 of the Act is construed in such a way as to mean that no fresh presentation of bills at the altered rate is necessary, even though the rate may have been reduced on review, and that the section contemplates that the party has to make the payment within 15 days of the order on the review, and that failing such payment the arrears due may be realised by distress within three months after the order, then also the distress and sale were beyond time, having been made on 27th April 1929 which was beyond three months from 17th October 1928 on which date the order was passed on the review. It has been argued that the provisions of these sections which have been laid down for regulating a special procedure for a speedy and summary remedy by way of distraint must be strictly complied with, and that there is no injustice or hardship in construing the sections as meaning that it is only in normal cases, that is to say cases in which the application for review fails to result in a reduction of the tax, that the sections taken in conjunction with the note contained in Form A prescribed for a notice of demand, which says :

If you present such petition no amount will be levied from you until the Commissioners shall have passed an order on your petition, but after 15 days from such order, etc., make out a consistent procedure perfectly in accord with the several periods of time prescribed for the different steps. And it is argued that unless the provisions as regards time are entirely disregarded a case in which the review results in an alteration in the assessment cannot be brought within the purview of the sections so as to enable the Municipality to levy the arrears by distress.

It has been pressed on us that the legislature must have intended such normal cases only as deserving of the summary procedure and to leave the Municipality to seek its remedy in other cases by way of suit, as provided for in S. 129 of the Act. There is, it has been said, considerable sense in this interpretation, for it is only fair to assume that if the assessment was excessive and is subsequently reduced, the party should not be harassed by distress for arrears which may have remained unpaid because of the pendency of the review. There is no doubt much to be said in favour of these arguments. But the arguments assume that there was an anxiety on the part of the legislature to protect the tax-payer from distress rather than to enable the Municipality to levy distress for realization of its statutory dues provided it has been sufficiently diligent. Is this assumption correct? Let us examine the several essentials that are laid down and the several periods of time prescribed therefor. They stand thus :

A. Presentation of a bill.	Within six months from when the tax becomes due.
B. Service of notice of demand with copy bill.	At any subsequent time.
C. Failure to comply with the demand.	Within 15 days of the service of notice or of the order on review.
D. Distress and sale.	Within three months of the service of notice or of the order on review.

It is obvious that while steps A, B and D are to be taken within given time, there is no time limit as regards step C. This omission allows the Municipality to wait for any indefinite period, subject of course to the general law of limitation. The provisions as to time therefore cannot be construed as indicating that the protection of the tax-payer was the sole concern of the Legislature. A more sensible interpretation is that the legislature intended that if process for distress is to be allowed, the Municipality will have to begin with presentation of the bill within six months, but may wait for such reasonable time at their option, subject to the general law of limitation, as the circumstances of the case may demand, and then issue a notice of demand; and that once such notice is served it must give the party fifteen days' time for payment; but if no payment is made it must levy distress within three months of the service or of the order on review, as the case may be. An interpretation of the sections based on a supposition that it is the interest of the tax-payer alone that was being safeguarded by the legislature or that a remedy by way of distress in a case where on review the tax is reduced was not favoured by the legislature, does not, in our opinion, seem permissible.

On a careful consideration of the sections it seems to us that they construct a perfectly workable and reasonable procedure in all conceivable cases without necessitating any violence to their language. The procedure may be described thus: (a) presentation of a bill at the rate entered in the list, notice whereof is published under Section 112, or at the altered rate, if there has been subsequent alteration: We need not consider the question whether a further application for review will lie in a case where there has already been an alteration. Such presentation has to be made within six months after the tax has become due (S. 120, para. 1), and the tax will be deemed to be due on the first day of the quarter for which it is payable. (b) Non-payment of the bill: The Municipality may wait for any reasonable time, subject to the general law of limitation. (c) Service of notice of demand with copy bill at any time subsequent to presentation of bill (S. 120, para 2). (d) Application for review: Either before or after service of notice of demand: In the latter case, the application must be made within 15 days of service of the notice of demand (Form

A, Note). (e) If the review fails : If a notice of demand has been already served no fresh notice is necessary, because in the notice itself it is stated that the amount due will have to be paid within fifteen days of the order on the review. If a notice of demand has not been served then it will have to be served and within fifteen days of the service the amount due will have to be paid. (f) If the review succeeds : If there has been no previous service of a notice of demand such notice will have to be served with 'copy of the bills' (S. 120, para 2). But now the tax due will be the tax as altered. S. 118 says :

The amount due shall be deemed to be amount entered in the lists unless the amount entered in the lists is subsequently altered in which case the amount to which the assessment or rating is so altered shall be deemed to be the amount due.

The law itself thus corrects the amount due as stated in the original bill and the original notice if any, and says that the amount so altered shall be deemed to be the amount due. The fresh notice must therefore show the altered amount and the 'copy of the bill' in order to be correct must also show the altered amount. If there has been a previous service of a notice of demand it would seem that a fresh notice at the altered rate would not be necessary because of the statement in the note in Form A to which reference has already been made. But a better practice is to wait for the result of the review, as has been done in the present case. (g) Non-compliance with the notice of demand taken along with the order on review, if any, within fifteen days (S. 121, para 1). (h) Distress and sale : Within three months of the service of notice of demand or order on review, as the case may be (S. 121, para 2). In the present case all the different steps were correctly taken; the notice of demand was served after the order on review and the distress and sale have taken place within the time prescribed. We therefore see no reason to hold that the proceedings referred to so far were not in order.

The second contention urged on behalf of the appellants is that the distress and sale were illegal because they were for a sum which included an amount in respect of which a valid tender was unlawfully refused. The tender was, as already stated, in respect of the tax for the last quarter of 1928-29. The learned Judge has held that the tender was bad because it was not an unconditional tender; with this conclusion we entirely disagree. It does not appear to us that there was any condition attached to the tender or any ambiguity in the letter (Ex. 10) by which it was made. Indeed from the reply (Ex. 11), by which the tender was refused it is more than clear that the Municipality understood the tender as one in respect of the tax for the said quarter only and not coupled with any condition. The refusal was based on the ground that it was in respect of a part only of the whole amount of the taxes for which demand had been made.

The question therefore is whether the amount tendered could be regarded as a distinct or separate demand. Now the law of tender as between contracting parties and so forming a part of the law of contract does not apply to the present case; for the relations between the Municipality and the tax-payer are not contractual. If the said law did apply there is authority for holding that it was a good tender. For instance, if two quarters' rent are in arrears and the tenant tenders the amount for one of the quarters the tender is a good tender as to that quarter (see Chitty on Contracts, Edn. 18, p. 892). The relations being statutory we have to look to the provisions of the Act itself. It is true that under the Act the tax is assessed at a yearly rate; but the whole process for its recovery as formulated in the Act treats each quarterly instalment of the tax as a distinct amount recoverable by the procedure laid down in it. For each instalment, a bill is to be made out and presented, a notice of demand is to be served with copy of the bill, and in case of non-payment a remedy by distress and sale is available. In such circumstances it is difficult to imagine that when several such instalments remain unpaid, the total amount remaining unpaid constitutes one entire demand and that the several sums as per each instalment do not each constitute a distinct demand. It is true that there may be a convenience in serving one notice of demand embracing all the instalments remaining unpaid, but it is highly debatable whether in view of the form of such notice prescribed in the Act (Form A) it is open to the Municipality to use one form embracing all the instalments. The form speaks of an amount as due on a bill accompanying.

It will appear from Ss. 118 to 121 that the scheme of the sections is to treat each instalment as a distinct item and in the second paragraph of the section last mentioned it is provided that each such instalment, treated as the amount of the arrear due, together with costs on the scale shown in the table of fees marked B in the fourth schedule, is to be realised by sale and distress. If one distraint is held for several instalments unpaid the costs in respect of the aggregate amount as prescribed in the table are to be levied. But even then the demands, in our opinion, are distinct. The notice of demand in respect of the 4th quarter for 1928-29 with "copy of bill" was served on 16th March 1929 and within fifteen days of the service the entire amount of the demand was tendered on 28th March 1929. The amount had not yet become "an arrear due" within the meaning of the second paragraph of S. 121. At such a stage it was wholly illegal to refuse the tender.

It necessarily follows that the warrant that was issued, including the amount of tax due for the 4th quarter of 1928-29 was illegal, and the distress and sale held thereunder must be held ultra-vires. In such circumstances the fact that the warrant was a good warrant, so far as the taxes for the other six quarters are concerned does not alter the position. In the case of an illegal distress the distrainer is a trespasser ab initio, and the full value of the goods which have been lost to the plaintiff without any deduction for the tax due is recoverable as damages: (see Hailsham's Laws of England, Vol. 10, Art. 759). The value of the goods as found by the Court below is Rs. 1,010-8-0; and this is not disputed.

The result is that this appeal succeeds in part. The decree of the Court below is modified in the manner following: A decree should be made in plaintiffs' favour declaring that the distress and sale were illegal and ordering that the plaintiffs do recover from defendant 1 the sum of Rs. 1,010-8-0 with interest at the rate of 6 p. c. p. a., from 27th April 1929, the date of seizure, until this day, the date of the decree of this Court, the total amount carrying interest thenceforward at the rate of 6 p. c. p. a. till realisation. As between the plaintiff and defendant 1, the latter will be entitled to recover 2/3rds of the costs which the Court below has decreed in his favour; and the order for costs made in the decree of the Court below in favour of defendants 2, 3, 4 and 5 will stand. So far as the costs of this Court are concerned the plaintiffs and defendant 1 will each bear their or his own costs, but defendants 2, 3, 4 and 5 will each recover his costs from the plaintiffs, hearing-fee in favour of each of them being assessed at two gold mohurs.

V.B./R.K. Appeal partly allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 547

R. C. MITTER, J.

Bulanda Bashini Dasi — Auction-purchaser—Petitioner.

v.

Pran Govinda Dhar and others—Judgment-debtors—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 1653 of 1935, Decided on 22nd May 1936, from order of Dist. Judge, Murshidabad, D/- 16th September 1935.

Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 174 (1) —Attaching creditor can apply to set aside sale.

A person who has obtained a decree for money and has attached the holding in question is a person "whose interests are affected by sale" within the meaning of those words in S. 174 (1), and such person has a right to apply to have the sale set aside: 30 Mad 413; 1933 Mad 455; 1924 Cal 786; 1930 Pat 451 and 17 C W N 80, Rel. on; 1925 Sind 101; 1928 P C 139; 1920 Mad 804 (F B) and 1933 Cal 212, Disting. [P 549 C 2]

Jatindra Nath Sanyal and Bijali Bhusan Sanyal—for Petitioner.

Bijan Kr. Mukerji and Sanat K. Chatterjee—for Opposite Parties.

Order. — The Secretary of State for India in Council, who is opposite party 2 in this rule, obtained a decree for rent against opposite parties 3 and 4, Hatu Dutta and Sudhangsu Bhusan Dutt. In execution of his decree the defaulting holding was sold and purchased by the petitioner, Bulanda Bashini Dasi, on 27th May 1935. It is this sale that the opposite party 1, Pran Gobinda Dhar, wanted to set aside by making a deposit under the provisions of sub-s. 1, S. 174, Tenancy Act. His application for setting aside the said sale was refused by the 1st Court but has been allowed by the lower appellate Court, and the said sale has been set aside. The question raised in this rule is whether the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the said application of opposite party 1. This question depend upon the question as to whether he is a person whose interest has been affected by the rent sale.

The answer to this question depends upon the following facts which are not disputed by any of the parties to this rule: Opposite party 1 had obtained a money decree against opposite parties 3 and 4. He applied for execution of his decree. An order for attachment of the holding in question was passed in the proceedings for execution of his decree on 23rd May 1935, that is four days before the rent sale, but the property was actually attached after it, that is on 21st June 1935. He made the application under S. 174 (1) and made the deposit as required by that section on 22nd June 1935. It is now settled law, so far as this Court is concerned, that an attaching creditor, who has attached in execution of his decree, has the right to apply to set aside a sale under O. 21, R. 90, of the Code, which contains the same words namely "whose interests are affected by the sale" as occur in S. 174 (1), Tenancy Act. But it is said by the learned advocate appearing for the petitioner that the fact of attachment alone in execution of a decree gives him the locus standi to apply for setting aside the sale under the provisions of O. 21, R. 90, of the Code, or S. 174, Tenancy Act, according as the sale is under the Code or the Tenancy Act. It is necessary to examine in this case the said contention and the precise principle.

In my judgment a person who has a proprietary or possessory interest existing at the date of the challenged sale, which would be affected by it, has the right to apply to set aside the sale under O. 21, R. 90 of the Code, or S. 174, Tenancy Act. That is the simplest case. But a creditor who has attached the property in execution of his decree for money is a person who has got no proprietary or possessory interest therein. But he has a pecuniary interest therein, because it is the property to which he looked for the satisfaction of his decree. He has the right to its preservation in the same state and can sue if a third party by wrongful acts destroys it or diminishes its value, 30 Mad 413 (1); for such wrongful acts would ultimately affect the price that the property would fetch at the Court sale, the price which would have been the means of satisfaction of his decree. If it is sold in execution of another's decree, he, having the right of rateable distribution is entitled to see that it has been sold not at an inadequate price by an irregular or fraudulent sale, for, more the price fetched the more would be his share in the rateable distribution. If he has not the right to claim rateable distribution, the surplus sale proceeds, after satisfying the claim of the decree-holder at whose instance the property was sold, would be available to him, and the more the price fetched the more would be the surplus. He has therefore a pecuniary interest affected by an irregular or fraudulent sale which had fetched an inadequate price by reason of the irregularity or fraud. It is on this principle and this principle only, namely, that his pecuniary interests are affected, that his right to apply for setting aside the sale, is in my judgment, based on 1933 Mad 455 (2), and I consider that this is the only principle on which his right so to apply has been supported in 51 Cal 495 (3). Page, J. expressly puts the case on the said principle alone. Suhrawardy, J. also states the principle in that way at p. 498 of the report. When he says that an attaching creditor has an interest in the sale of the property or in the property itself, he means that he has a pecuniary interest therein, because he looked to the property for the satisfaction of his money decree, which was sold at the instance of another creditor of the same judgment-debtor. That is also the basic principle underlying the decision in 30 Mad 413 (1) as I have indicated above, on which Suhrawardy, J. relies for his support.

Most of the cases where the question has come up are cases where the person who had applied for setting aside the sale had actually attached in execution the property before the sale and consequently in these cases the observations are to the effect that the attachment gave a pecuniary interest in the property to the person seeking to set aside the sale. The question in this case is whether the fact of attachment in execution of a decree only, gives him a pecuniary interest. In my judgment the fact of attachment is one of the modes by which pecuniary interest is acquired in the property, but only one of many modes in which such an interest can be acquired. A mortgagee of a non-transferable occupancy holding who has recovered a decree, or even one who has not recovered a decree, can apply to set aside a rent sale held under Ch. 14, Tenancy Act. It may be said that the holding being non-transferable, he had not acquired any proprietary interest in the same against the landlord who has obtained the rent decree, but surely his pecuniary interest is affected by the rent sale. It is on this principle that the Patna High Court has supported his right to apply for setting aside a rent sale: 1930 Pat 451 (4). In such cases there is no attachment at all. In my judgment the correct principle for determining whether the applicant for setting aside the sale had acquired before the challenged sale, a pecuniary interest in the property is to be gathered from the following underlined passage in the judgment of Mookherjee, J. in 17 C W N 80 (5) where he was considering the difference between an attachment before judgment and attachment in execution of a decree:

2. Venkatesha Kamathi v. Villa Bhakta, 1933 Mad 455=143 I C 492=64 M L J 605=37 M L W 581.

3. Dharendra Nath Roy v. Kamini Kumar Pal, 1924 Cal 786=84 I C 119=28 O W N 899=51 Cal 495.

1. Sankaralinga v. Kandaswami, (1907) 30 Mad 413=17 M L J 334.

An attachment after decree on the other hand is an attachment made for the immediate purpose of carrying the decree in execution, and it presupposes an application on the part of the decree-holder to have his decree executed.

In that case the question was whether a person who had attached the property before judgment, but had not got a decree, could apply to set aside a sale, and it was answered in the negative. For drawing a contrast the case of an attachment in execution of a decree was spoken of, but in my judgment a decree-holder acquires a pecuniary interest in the property, the sale of which at the instance of another decree-holder he challenges, as soon as he has done a formal act, an act in Court, which indicates unequivocally that he wants that property for the satisfaction of his decree. The act must be specific, in relation to that particular property and must not remotely but proximately or immediately connect his intention to realize his dues out of that particular property. On this principle a person who has attached before judgment, but who has at the date of the challenged sale, got no decree, would not be entitled to apply for setting aside the sale. A person who has obtained a decree for money, but has not applied for execution, would also have not the right to apply on this principle, as he has not taken any action in Court to indicate that he looked to that particular property sold for satisfaction. The cases cited by the petitioner, namely, 39 I C 932 (6) and 1925 Sind 101 (7), fall within this type. A person who has obtained a decree for money and has only applied for execution but has not applied for and obtained an order for attachment of the particular property may possibly be excluded, but when a person has gone further and has taken effective and definite steps for proceeding against the particular property, which steps in normal course would lead to the sale of the property in question for satisfaction of his decree, I think he would have the right to apply for setting aside the sale. Here such definite steps had been taken by opposite party 1; he asked for and obtained an order for attachment of the holding sold at the rent sale brought about at the instance of the landlord, the Secretary of State for India in Council, before the rent sale. He had unequivocally manifested his intention to look to the said holding as a means of satisfying his decree and had done an act which cannot be said to connect remotely his intention to realize his decretal dues with the said holding. He had obtained an order from the Court which in its normal course, in the course of ministerial acts and proceedings only and without a further judicial order, would, have placed the suit property in custodia legis as a preliminary, necessary and immediate step for enabling the satisfaction of his decree out of the same.

If on this principle I hold that opposite party 1 had locus standi to apply under S. 174 (1), Tenancy Act, though the actual attachment was effected after the rent sale, I do not consider that the case in 55 I A 256 (8) or the cases in 42 Mad

4. Lakhan Choudhury v. Bacha Lal Singh, 1930 Pat 451=126 I C 295=11 P L T 500.

5. Jogendra Nath Chatterjee v. Monmatha Nath Ghosh, (1913) 17 C W N 80=15 I C 668=16 C L J 566.

6. Sulemanji v. Pragji Kala, 1917 Sind 33=39 I C 932=10 S L R 189.

7. Rustomji v. Perozshaw, 1925 Sind 101.

8. Muttiah Chetti v. Palaniappa Chetti, 1928 P O 139=109 I C 626=55 I A 256=51 Mad 349 (P C).

844 (9) and 59 Cal 1176 (10) have any bearing upon the point that I have to decide. Those cases lay down that there is a distinction between an order for attachment and the actual attachment, and where the legislature has used the word attachment, as for instance in Art. 11, Sch. 1, Lim. Act, and Sec. 64 of the Code, it means attachment and not the order in consequence of which the attachment is afterwards made, with the necessary corollary that the result of attachment indicated by the legislature would follow only when there is the attachment and not before. I accordingly hold that the right order has been passed by the Court of appeal below, and this rule must be discharged with costs to opposite party 1, hearing-fee 1 gold mohur.

V.B./R.K.

Rule discharged.

9. Sinnappan v. Arunachalam Pillai, 1920 Mad 804=53 I C 207=37 M L J 281=42 Mad 844 (F B).
 10. Nabadwip Chandra Das v. Lake Nath Roy, 1933 Cal 212=142 I C 452=36 C W N 733=59 Cal 1176.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 550

DERBYSHIRE, C. J. AND COSTELLO, J.

Bejoy Lal Mukherjee — Plaintiff — Appellant.

v.

New India Assurance Co., Ltd. — Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No. 17-A of 1935, Decided on 10th January 1936.

Insurance—Fire insurance — Limitation—Jute of assured insured against fire—Jute burnt—Claim of assured for loss sustained rejected as being fraudulent — Company's own man declaring petty sum as compensation for loss—"Difference" referred to arbitrator—Arbitrator declaring his award—Suit filed by assured on basis of award — Contention by company that suit was time-barred having been brought after more than three months of rejection of claim—Suit held within limitation since filed within three months of the making of award.

A person insured his jute against fire. The insurance policy contained certain conditions. Condition 13 read that "if the claim be in any respect fraudulent or if the claim be made and rejected and an action or suit be not commenced within three months after such rejection, all benefit under the policy shall be forfeited." Condition 18 contained that "if any difference arises as to the amount of any loss or damage, such difference shall independently of all other questions be referred to the decision of an arbitrator to be appointed in writing by the parties in difference. In case either party shall refuse or fail to appoint an arbitrator within two calendar months after receipt of notice in writing requiring an appointment, the other party shall be at liberty to appoint a sole arbitrator." As a result of fire, jute was burnt and the assured informed the company likewise and submitted his claim for Rs. 20,000 for loss sustained. The company contended that the loss sustained was about Rs. 800 and rejected his claim for Rs. 20,000. So great arose the difference between the two that the company founded a charge of fraud on the assured. He requested the company to send their representative to arbitration and on the company refusing to do so, an arbitrator was appointed on his behalf. An award was made for Rs. 19,000 and for costs. After the making of the award, a suit for recovery of amount was commenced by the assured within three months. The suit was claimed to be time-barred:

Held: that a difference arose between the parties as to the amount of loss or damage within condition 18 and hence proceedings by way of arbitration were a condition precedent to any proceeding in law and the right to bring a suit did not arise until the arbitration proceedings had been completed and an award had been made. It was competent for the assured to bring his suit at any time within three months of the arbitrator's award. The suit was hence not time-barred: Case law reviewed. [P 552 C 2]

S. B. Sinha and A. C. Ganguli—for Appellant.

S. M. Bose, Issacs and Z. A. Rahim—for Respondents.

Costello, J.—The learned Judge in the Court below summarised the main issue which he had to determine in these words:

The company invokes the special period of limitation provided by Cl. 13 of the policies in case of the claim having been rejected. The plaintiff on the other hand claims that an arbitration under Cl. 18 having taken place and the suit having been instituted within three months of the date of the award the suit is within time. The substantial question is whether the plaintiff is entitled to invoke the arbitration clause at all in the circumstances. If he is not, then the fact that he did so and obtained an award in his favour will not help him.

The real and indeed the only question, which we have to determine, in my opinion, is this, namely, whether in the circumstances of this case the plaintiff was entitled to say that it was right and proper that an arbitration should take place between him and the defendant company. If the plaintiff was entitled to call upon the defendant company to go to arbitration then the matter falls within the latter part of Condition 13 in such manner as to extend the period of limitation within which the plaintiff must bring his action to a date which represents the end of the period of three months from the time when the arbitrator made his award. The respondents to this appeal, that is to say, the defendants in the suit, are faced, as I view the matter, with a dilemma. If it can be successfully contended that this case is governed by the principles laid down in 1915 A C 499 (1) then it is quite clear that it was not open to the respondents-defendants to rely upon or take advantage of any of the provisions with regard to the special limitation for bringing the suit as provided in Condition 13, the case would fall within the view apparently adopted by Lord Haldane and Lord Dunedin in 1915 A C 499 (1). On the other hand if it is to be said that this case is one of that class of cases which is covered by the principles enunciated in (1917) 2 K B 433 (2) then the only question which could possibly arise for determination is whether or not a difference had arisen as to the amount of loss or damage alleged to have been sustained by the insured person, that is to say, the plaintiff in the suit, I am clearly of opinion that this matter was of the kind referred to by Lord Reading in (1917) 2 K B 433 (2) where at p. 437 of the report he said:

If the company were seeking to avoid the contract in the true sense they would have to rely upon some matter outside the contract, such as a misrepresentation of some material fact inducing the contract of which the force and effect are not declared by the contract itself. In that case the materiality of the fact and its effect in inducing the contract would have to be tried. In the present case the company are claiming the benefit of a clause in the contract when they say that the parties have agreed that the statements in question are material and that they induced the contract. If they succeed in escaping liability that is by reason of one of the clauses in the policy. In resisting the claim they are not avoiding the policy but relying on its terms.

In the present instance the defendant company, by their letters of 5th June and 12th June, were resisting the plaintiff's claim not by saying that the policies themselves had been avoided, but by placing reliance on the provisions contained in the earlier part of Condition 13. A similar situation is described by Lord Sumner in the course of his speech in 1925 A C 619 (3), at p. 631. In that case, referring to 1915 A C 499 (1), the noble and learned Lord said :

There, persons, who had repudiated the whole contract of insurance, afterwards relied on a limited arbitration clause contained in it, which required the amount payable to be determined by arbitration, and said that, until he had obtained such an award, the plaintiff could not complete his case. It was held that the defendants could not both repudiate the contract in toto and require the performance of a part of it, which only became performable when liability was admitted or established. The present case is the converse. Here an arbitration and award are conditions precedent to any action to enforce the policy. The defendants do not repudiate the policy or dispute its validity as a contract; on the contrary, they rely on it and say that, according to its terms, express and implied, they are relieved from liability.

That, in my opinion, has application to the circumstances of the case with which we are now concerned. The sole question is whether any difference had arisen as to the amount of loss or damage. An examination of the letters written by the defendant company shows that what was in controversy was the value of the jute which had been stored in the godown which was covered by the two policies of insurance. The policy-holder, that is, the plaintiff in the present suit, was claiming that the value of the jute which he had lost amounted to no less a sum than Rs. 20,000; on the other hand the insurance company, after they had obtained a report from an assessor, were saying that the total value of the jute was no more than a sum of Rs. 800. Then they proceeded to say that the discrepancy between the two valuations was so great as to raise an inference of fraud on the part of the claimant of such a character as would entitle the defendant company to resist and indeed to reject the claim because it was fraudulent within the terms of Condition 13. Mr. Bose has argued that once the claim has been rejected by the company there is a definite period of limitation prescribed, namely, three months from the date of the rejection and, in effect, the rejection of the claim, no matter on what ground, operates as a bar to any proceedings in law, unless such proceedings are instituted within a period of three months. If that proposition is correct it quite obviously ignores altogether what I will describe as the fifth provision of Condition 13 and entirely obliterates that part of Condition 13 which contemplates that the period of limitation may be extended and will be extended in a case where it is proper that an arbitration should take place. In my opinion, there not only was a "difference" between the parties as to the amount of loss or damage, but there was such a serious "difference" as entitled the defendant company in their own opinion to put upon the claimant the stigma of having made a fraudulent claim. In my view there never could be a more serious "difference" than there was in the present instance. That being so, I can come to no other conclusion than that the last part of provision 5, as I have called it, of Condition 13 came into operation.

1. Juredini v. National British & Irish Millers Insurance Co., 1915 A C 499=84 L J K B 640=112 L T 531=31 T L R 132=59 S J 205.

2. Stebbing v. Liverpool and London and Globe Insurance Co., Ltd., (1917) 2 K B 433=86 L J K B 1155=117 L T 337=33 T L R 395.

3. Macaura v. Northern Assurance Co., Ltd., 1925 A C 619=94 L J P C 154=133 L T 152=41 T L R 447=31 Com Cas 10.

It is manifestly impossible for the defendant company to argue that where arbitration proceedings are competent those proceedings must be had within the initial period of three months. One has only to observe that both sides are given a period of two months within which to nominate an arbitrator. That at once takes the matter beyond the initial period of three months or may do so. On this point we have the authority furnished by the case in 1927 A C 610 (4). From that case it may be said that where proceedings by way of arbitration are a condition precedent to any proceeding in law the right to bring a suit does not arise until the arbitration proceedings have been completed and an award has been made. As I read the matter, upon the language of Condition 13 and Condition 18, as they stand, there is no sort of limitation prescribed for the institution of arbitration proceedings and, therefore, the institution of any suit consequent upon the result of the arbitration proceedings. It is not without significance, as Mr. Sinha has pointed out, that although all these conditions are in the form of conditions adopted by the English Insurance Companies—they are contained in what is called "the foreign form"—this particular Insurance Company, though they have adopted practically all the relevant provisions from that form, they have omitted the condition which in the "foreign form" is Condition 19. That condition reads as follows:

In no case whatever shall the company be liable for any loss or damage after the expiration of 12 months from the happening of the loss or damage unless the claim is the subject of pending action or arbitration.

We do not know—and it is not necessary that we should know—why that provision was not adopted by this particular company, the defendants in this suit, but its absence indicates that there is no limitation within which arbitration proceedings, if they are required, shall be commenced. Therefore once we come to the conclusion that there was a difference between the parties as to the amount of loss or damage sustained, arbitration proceedings become a condition precedent to bringing a suit and the cause of action does not arise until the arbitration proceedings have been terminated. Therefore, it was competent to the present plaintiff to bring his suit at any time within three months of the making of the award by the arbitrator. This suit was brought within that period and therefore it ought not to be dismissed on any ground of special limitation contained in Condition 13 of the policy. I agree, therefore, that this appeal must be allowed, and, having regard to the finding of the learned Judge on the question whether the claim was fraudulent or not taken in conjunction with the award made by the learned arbitrator, I also am of opinion that judgment should be entered in favour of the plaintiff for a sum of Rs. 19,500.

Derbyshire, C. J.—This is an appeal against a judgment of Buckland, J.—then the Acting Chief Justice of this Court—delivered on 8th May 1934. By that judgment he decided that the plaintiff in this suit, Bejoy Lal Mukherjee, was not entitled to succeed against the defendants, the New India Assurance Co., Ltd. The suit arises out of a claim made by the plaintiff against the defendant Insurance Company under two policies of fire insurance dated 26th March and 7th April 1931 respectively. By those two policies of insurance the defendants insured jute belonging to the plaintiff who traded as Messrs. S. Devi & Co. at 15 B. Biswakosh Lane, Bagh-bazaar, Calcutta. The jute in question was situate at Ghosebilla, Jamjami Railway Station in the district of Nadia, Bengal. The first of the two policies was for Rs. 12,000 and was taken out on 26th March 1931. The second policy was for Rs. 8,000 and was taken out on 7th April 1931. The policies remained subject to the conditions and stipulations which are set out on the back of them. The conditions of the two policies are identical.

4. Board of Trade v. Cayzer Irvine & Co., 1927 A C 610=96 L J K B 872=137 L T 419=71 S J 560=43 T L R 625.

On 17th April 1931 there was a fire, and jute belonging to the plaintiff situated at Ghosebilla, Jamjami Railway Station, was burnt. On 18th April the plaintiff by a letter informed the defendants of the fire. On 23rd April the plaintiff filled in a claim form under the two fire policies and declared that the actual realizable value of the property insured under each item of the above policies under which the claim was made was at the time of the fire Rs. 24,000. He also stated that the loss sustained by him on the jute which had been burnt amounted to the sum of Rs. 20,000 and he claimed the sum of Rs. 20,000 under the two policies. On 5th June the defendants wrote to the plaintiff a letter:

*Re: Claim under Policies Nos. 254322 & 254408
Fire in Jute Godown at Ghosebilla, Jamjami Railway Station Alamdanga (Nadia).*

Dear Sir,

Our Assessors, Messrs. Sinclair Murray & Co., Ltd., have to-day forwarded us their assessment report in connection with the above fire estimating the loss at Rs. 800 only against your claim for Rs. 20,000 which appears to them to be fraudulently excessive. In the circumstances we have to refer you to Condition 13 of our policy reading:

"If the claim be in any respect fraudulent; or if any false declaration be made or used in support thereof; or if any fraudulent means or devices used by the assured, or any one acting on his behalf to obtain any benefit under this policy, all benefit under this policy shall be forfeited."

On 9th June the plaintiff wrote back to the defendants:

I have received your letter of the 5th instant to-day and I am surprised to note that assessment report of Messrs. Sinclair Murray & Co., says only Rs. 800. I told your Indian assessors on the day of inspection that I doubt my manager has cheated me and they agreed with me and stated that the stock in godown and outside before fire was not more than Rs. 6,000. I also told the fact in your office immediately after returning from the place. However it is for Rs. 6,000 or Rs. 800, it comes under condition of the policy, and most probably I am a ruined man for the breach of trust of my manager unless the company be kind to consider my case favourably. I solely depend upon the mercy of the company now.

On 12th June the defendants wrote back to the plaintiff:

In reply to our letter of the 5th instant we have for acknowledgment yours of the 9th idem. In view of the circumstances we regret to advise you that we repudiate our liability under the above policies as per Condition 13, already referred to in our letter of the 5th instant.

On 26th June the plaintiff wrote another letter to the defendants—a very lengthy letter—in which he asked them to investigate the matter further and to pass his claim in full, otherwise he would be reluctantly compelled to seek remedy in Court. On 12th November of the same year the appellant through, his Solicitors Messrs. G. C. Chunder & Co., threatened the defendants with proceedings unless they met the claim. On 27th November the company by a letter of that date drew the plaintiff's Solicitors' attention to the full wording of Condition 13 of the policies under which they contended that any proceedings were too late. On 30th November the plaintiff's Solicitors wrote to the defendants a letter in which they said:

We are surprised that inspite of our client's best endeavours to prove to your satisfaction from independent enquiries that there was no fraud or arson you should have thought fit to take shelter under a technical defence. Assuming that Cl. 13 bars a suit, which in the circumstances we contend it does not, we do not see how proceedings under Cl. 18 will be barred. If, therefore, you do not admit our client's claim, our client appoints Mr. N. C. Chatterjee, Bar-at-law, the arbitrator, and calls upon you either to accept him as the single arbitrator, or within two months in writing to appoint another arbitrator.

On 11th January 1932, some six weeks afterwards, the defendants replied to the plaintiff's solicitors in which they contended that it was too late for arbitration proceedings to begin and they said: "Under the circumstances we do not see the utility of joining in any arbitration at this stage." There is a letter in reply of 12th January in which the plaintiff's solicitors argued the matter. The reply in return from the defendants was on 30th January in which the defendants said that they were not satisfied with the honesty of the claim and believed that the claim set up by the plaintiff was dishonest and that the case was a fit case for enforcement of the provisions of Condition 13. By a letter of 28th November 1932 the plaintiff appointed Mr. N. C. Chatterjee, Barrister, sole arbitrator in the reference that he had begun under the arbitration proceedings in the matter of the claim under the two fire insurance policies. The defendants took no part in the arbitration proceedings with the result that Mr. Chatterjee proceeded to hold the reference and on 28th March 1933 he made an award in which he awarded that the plaintiff was entitled to recover from the defendants under the two policies in respect of his jute which had been burnt a sum of Rs. 19,000 and also Rs. 500 as costs. On 19th May 1933 this suit was brought. The suit purports to be on the award. It would be convenient at this stage to read the two conditions of the policies with which we are concerned in this matter. They are Conditions 13 and 18. Condition 13 reads :

If the claim be in any respect fraudulent, or if any false declaration be made or used in support thereof, or if any fraudulent means or devices are used by the assured or anyone acting on his behalf to obtain any benefit under this Policy ; or, if the loss or damage be occasioned by the wilful act, or with the connivance of the assured ; or, if the claim be made and rejected and an action or suit be not commenced within three months after such rejection, or, (in case of an arbitration taking place in pursuance of the 18th Condition of this Policy) within three months after the arbitrator or arbitrators or umpire shall have made their award, all benefit under the Policy shall be forfeited.

Condition 18 reads :

If any difference arises as to the amount of any loss or damage, such difference shall independently of all other questions be referred to the decision of an arbitrator, to be appointed in writing by the parties in difference, or, if they cannot agree upon a single arbitrator, to the decision of two disinterested persons as arbitrators, of whom one shall be appointed in writing by each of the parties within two calendar months after having been required so to do in writing by the other party. In case either party shall refuse or fail to appoint an arbitrator within two calendar months after receipt of notice in writing requiring an appointment, the other party shall be at liberty to appoint a sole arbitrator ; and in case of disagreement between the arbitrators, the difference shall be referred to the decision of an umpire who shall have been appointed by them in writing before entering on the reference, and who shall sit with the arbitrators and preside at their meetings. The death of any party shall not revoke or affect the authority or power of the arbitrator, arbitrators or umpire respectively ; and in the event of the death of an arbitrator or umpire another shall in each case be appointed in his stead by the party or arbitrators (as the case may be), by whom the arbitrator or umpire so dying was appointed. The costs of the reference and of the award shall be at the discretion of the arbitrator, arbitrators or umpire, making the award. And it is hereby expressly stipulated and declared that it shall be a condition precedent to any right of action or suit upon this policy that the award by such arbitrator, arbitrators or umpire of the amount of the loss or damage if disputed shall be first obtained.

Those conditions appear to be some of the standard conditions adopted by the British Insurance Companies on their foreign policies.* In these policies not all the standard conditions have been adopted. There is nothing in Condition 18 which provides that arbitration proceedings must be begun within any fixed time. The standard condition adopted by the British Insurance Companies in respect of foreign policies, Condition 19, provides that in no case whatever shall the company be liable for any loss or damage after the expiration of 12 months from the happening of the loss or damage unless the claim is the subject of a pending action or arbitration. As I said above, most of the standard foreign conditions have been incorporated into these policies, but Condition 19 is not, so that there is in these policies no limit put to the time during which arbitration proceedings can be started. A number of cases have been cited to us during the argument in this matter. Some of those cases deal with the clauses in question, namely Nos. 13 and 18, and what their effect is in certain circumstances. No case has been brought to our notice which is similar in facts to this case.

After considering those cases and the facts to which they related it seems to me in the main that the only way to deal with this case is to apply the conditions that have been relied upon, namely Conditions 13 and 18, to the particular facts of this case. It is contended by the defendants that under Condition 13 any action or suit brought in this matter must be brought within three months of 12th June 1931, which is stated by the defendants to be the date when the plaintiff's claim was rejected. As this suit was brought on 19th May 1933 it is contended by the defendants that it is entirely out of time and out of time notwithstanding that it was brought consequent upon arbitration proceedings. The crucial date is 12th June 1931, when the defendants wrote the letter in which they referred to the letter of 5th June and said that they repudiated their liability under the above policies as per Condition 13. It seems to me upon reading the defendants' letter of 5th June which was written in answer to the plaintiff's claim that on 5th June the defendants were disputing the amount of the plaintiff's loss in respect of the jute burnt. They contended that his loss was about Rs. 800, whereas the plaintiff contended that it was Rupees 20,000. On 12th June they still contended that, and the plaintiff still contended that he had lost more than Rupees 800. On 12th June they repudiated their liability under the policies. It seems to me that, both on 5th June and on 12th June there was a difference between the parties as to the amount of loss or damage. That difference was a very serious one, so serious that the defendants founded a charge of fraud upon it, but nevertheless there was that difference. In my opinion, there was both on 5th June and 12th June a difference as to the amount of loss or damage under those policies. As I have said, as a result of that difference the defendants repudiated liability under the policies.

*See Wilfred & Ottar Barry's Law of Insurance.

It has been contended by Mr. Sinha for the plaintiff that repudiation of liability amounted to a repudiation of the contracts of insurance such as would disentitle the defendants to rely upon the conditions of the policies. See the case in 1915 A C 499 (1). I think however that the true view of the defendants' repudiation of liability is that they did not repudiate the policy of insurance in toto, but that they repudiated their liability to pay moneys by reason of the operation of Condition 13. See the case in (1917) 2 K B 433 (2) at p. 437 and the case in (1933) 1 K B 515 (5) at p. 527. I am of opinion therefore that the defendants are entitled to rely upon such protection as the conditions of the two policies give them. The only two conditions in question are those set out above, 13 and 18. I have said previously that in my view both on 5th June and 12th June there was between the parties a difference as to the amount of loss or damage under these policies. That being so, it seems to me that the opening clause of Condition 18 applies, namely:

If any difference arises as to the amount of any loss or damage, such difference shall, independently of all other questions, be referred to the decision of an arbitrator.

Then follow the other parts of the condition which are not material at the moment. It follows therefore that each of the parties was entitled on 12th June to an arbitration to settle the question that had arisen as to the amount of loss or damage. I think that that was so even though the defendants alleged that the difference was so great that they could raise a charge of fraud in respect of it. I think further that the last part of Condition 18 applies :

And it is hereby expressly stipulated and declared that it shall be a condition precedent to any right of action or suit upon this policy that the award by such arbitrator, arbitrators or umpire of the amount of the loss or damage if disputed shall be first obtained.

Therefore it seems to me that not only had each of the parties a right to have an arbitration, but that in accordance with the scheme for settling disputes which appears in Condition 18 it was the proper thing that an arbitration should take place and that it must take place before any action or suit was brought upon the policies. The plaintiff did not proceed to arbitration under Clause 18 until 30th November 1931, that is to say, some five and half months after the defendants' liability of 12th June wherein they repudiated liability under the contract. The defendants contend that one of the clauses in Condition 13 of the policy makes this move to arbitration too late. The defendants say that the words:

If the claim be made and rejected and an action or suit be not commenced within three months after such rejection all benefit under this policy shall be forfeited make the plaintiff's proceeding to arbitration and his starting this suit altogether too late. I am of opinion that in thus contending the defendants have overlooked the fact that the clause which they cite and contend has this effect is joined up with another clause following it, which must be read with it, and when read with it causes a different interpretation to be put upon the words

If the claim be made and rejected and an action or suit be not commenced within three months after such rejection to have a different meaning. The full wording of the clause is :

If the claim be made and rejected and an action or suit be not commenced within three months after such rejection, or, (in case of an arbitration taking place in pursuance of the 18th Condition of this policy) within three months after the arbitrator or arbitrators or umpire shall have made their award, all benefit under this policy shall be forfeited.

In my view, if an arbitration properly takes place under this policy, then the assured is not bound to start his action or suit within three months of the rejection of his claim, but he must start his action within three months after the arbitrator has made his award. The second period may be long after the three months beginning with the rejection of the claim. In my view a difference arose between the parties as to the amount of loss or damage under these policies as was contemplated by Condition 18. Furthermore, it was according to the scheme of arbitration set out in Condition 18 proper, that there should be arbitration proceedings in respect of this dispute. It being proper that arbitration proceedings should be taken in respect of this dispute my view is that the second half of the clause of limitation in Condition 13 applies, namely,

5. Freshwater v. Western Australian Assurance Co., Ltd., (1933) 1 K B 515=102 L J K B 75=1932 W C & I Rep 379=148 L T 275=76 S J 888.

If the claim be made and rejected and an action or suit be not commenced within three months after the arbitrator or arbitrators or umpire shall have made their award, all benefit under this policy shall be forfeited.

This suit was commenced within three months of the making of the award by the arbitrator. Therefore, in my view this suit was in time and was properly brought. In the Court below an attempt was made to show that this claim was fraudulent. The learned Judge who tried the case said that he did not think that fraud had been proved beyond all reasonable doubt. Before us in this appeal no attempt was made to support the charge of fraud. Mr. S. M. Bose for the defendants said that he did not propose to do it. The position therefore is that an award has been made by an arbitrator who was appointed pursuant to the provisions of Condition 19. His award stands. It is for Rs. 19,000 and for costs. In my judgment this appeal must be allowed and a judgment be entered for the plaintiff for the sum of Rs. 19,500. This is an appeal by a pauper. The plaintiff must get his costs in the Court below, and as regards the costs in this Court the respondents must pay the successful appellant's attorney's costs in so far as they consist of proper charges for preparation of the paper book and attendance at Court, but no further. The respondents will also pay such court-fees as would have been payable by the appellant had he not been allowed to appeal as a pauper.

R.W./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 556

D. N. MITTER AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Bhupati Nath Chakravarty—Plaintiff —Appellant.

v.

Basanta Kumari Devi—Defendant and another—Respondents.

Appeal No. 257 of 1933, Decided on 21st February 1936, from original decree of Sub-Judge, Nadia, D/- 31st July 1933.

(a) Hindu Law — Adoption — After adoption adoptive father cannot by subsequent instrument alter status of adopted son.

Once a person is given in adoption he becomes transferred to the adoptive family and gets the status of an adopted son and the adoptive father cannot by any subsequent instrument alter the status that has been conferred on him as an adopted son. [P 557 C 2; P 558 C 1]

(b) Stamp Act (1899), S. 36—Section is mandatory and once document is admitted, whether rightly or wrongly, it cannot be rejected from evidence for want of proper stamp subsequently.

Section 36 is mandatory; and once a document is admitted in evidence rightly or wrongly it is not permissible to the Court whether it is a Court of appeal, revision or trial Court, to reject it from evidence on the ground that it has not been duly stamped or that deficiency has not been made up and penalty not paid although subsequently the party producing the document was ordered to do so. The stamp matters are no concern of the parties and if notwithstanding an objection the trial Court admits the document, the matter stops there and the Court cannot subsequently order deficiency to be made up and penalty paid, or failing that reject the document: 1930 Cal 577; 1919 Cal 235 and 1921 Cal 613, Foll. [P 559 C 1]

(c) Deed—Construction — Complete rights of executants in property vesting in idol—Idol is owner, not trustee.

Where the rights of executants of a deed become extinguished and get completely vested into an idol, the idol cannot be regarded as a trustee in respect of the property in which by the terms of the instrument complete right has vested in the said idol. The property becomes the idol's property although idol holds the property in an ideal sense: 32 Cal 1129 (P C) and 2 I A 125 (P C), Ref. [P 560 C 1]

(d) Deed—Construction — Legal effect of document not to be construed by reference to description at head but substance.

In order to construe the legal effect of any particular instrument it is not the description at the head of the document which ought to be the controlling factor; it is the substance of the document and not the form which is to be looked into. [P 560 C 2]

(e) Stamp Act (1899), S. 2 (24)—"Settlement" refers to disposition of successive interests couched in form of trust.

The word "settlement" as it is generally understood really refers to a disposition of successive interests in immoveable property and is generally couched in the form of a trust and it is such a settlement which is in the nature of disposition of property moveable and immovable either in consideration of marriage or for one or more of the objects specified, namely, religion, charity, or provision for family, dependants or others, that is contemplated by Cl. (24) of S. 2. It is these objects which attract the benefit of a duty half that of a gift or of a conveyance. [P 560 C 2]

(f) Hindu Law—Gift—Idol—There can be gift to idol.

There can be a gift to an idol; and gift to an idol or deity is not hedged in by same limitations and is not subject to same restrictions as a gift to human being or living person: 37 Cal 128 (F B), Foll.; 1927 Mad 636 (F B), not Approved. [P 561 C 1]

(g) Stamp Act (1899), S. 61—Court has to declare proper duty and penalty.

Under S. 61, the Court has not only to declare what the proper duty is, but can also determine the amount of penalty. [P 561 C 2]

(h) Hindu Law—Maintenance — Adult son—No right to maintenance.

An adult son is not entitled to maintenance. There is no such obligation in law nor can any obligation arise by reason of a temporary illness or disorder: 12 W R 494, Ref. [P 563 C 1, 2]

Bansori Lal Sarkar, Kali Pada Chakravarty and Bijan Kumar Mukherji for Collector, Nadia—for Appellant.

D. N. Bagchi, Nilmoni Goswami and Jitendra Nath Bagchi—for Respondents.

D. N. Mitter, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed by the Subordinate Judge of Nadia by his decision dated 31st July 1933. The case made in the plaint is that after the death of the plaintiff's father he was given in adoption by his mother Bagala Sundari Debi to the husband of the defendant Basanta Kumari, a gentleman of the name of Kshetra Nath Chakravarti, in July 1926. Kshetra Nath died on 16th November 1928. At the time when plaintiff was given in adoption his age, it is stated, was nine years. It is alleged that he was ill-treated by his adoptive mother, the defendant Basanta Kumari and his mother took him back and thereafter Kshetra Nath executed a deed cancelling the adoption. This deed is dated 23rd April 1927. Shortly after, both Kshetra and Basanta Kumari executed a deed which is termed as a deed of settlement, giving all the properties to certain ancestral deities and for the performance of Durga and Lakshmi pujas.

The case which the plaintiff makes is that the deed of cancellation of the adoption cannot be sustained in law, and it does not affect his rights which is based on the status of an adopted son. It is alleged that the deed of settlement in favour of the deities is inoperative, because undue influence was exercised on Kshetra and further because the deed was not acted upon. It is also said that Kshetra could not by the deed of settlement, lay down a line of succession of shebaitship contrary to the Hindu law after Jitendra Nath Chakravarty who was one of his agnatic relations and would be the shebait after the death of both Kshetra Nath and Basanta Kumari. It was further stated that the document which created the Debutter was insufficiently stamped and that the said document could not be admitted in evidence so as to affect the rights of the plaintiff without payment of the proper stamp duty and the penalty. We will have to revert to this question about the admissibility of this document later. The defences to the suit were that the document of cancellation was a valid document, and that the deed of settlement in favour of the deities was valid. On these pleadings several issues were framed. The issues are printed at p. 13, part 1 of the paper-book. With regard to issue 2 as to whether the plaintiff was the validly adopted son of the deceased Kshetra Nath Chakravarty the finding of the Subordinate Judge is in favour of the plaintiff. Issue 4 is to the following effect :

Are the deed of cancelment dated 10th Baisak 1334 B. S. (23rd April 1927) and the deed of gift and settlement dated 21st Baisak 1334 B. S. (4th May 1927) valid and operative documents? Were they or any of them executed under undue influence and coercion? Has any valid right by the deeds vested in the deity Sridhar Thakur and others by right of the said deed of 21st Baisak 1334 B. S. (4th May 1927).

Issue 5 runs thus :

Can the plaintiff claim any maintenance from the estate of the deceased Kshetra Nath Chakravarti?

Issue 6 was to the effect :

Were the immovable properties mentioned in items Nos. 1, 13, 24, 30 to 38, 82 to 98 and 200 and the debt mentioned in item 12 of the plaint schedule the Stridhan property of defendant 1.

These issues arose for decision: with regard to issue 4 although there is no distinct finding on it, yet the Subordinate Judge evidently proceeds on the view that the deed of cancelment of the adoption cannot take effect. So far as this point is concerned, there is no question that the plaintiff having once been given in adoption, has been transferred to the adoptive family and has got the status of an adopted son. The question was not a question of contract so that it could be rescinded by a subsequent deed. The adoptive father could not, by any subsequent instrument, alter the status that had been conferred on the plaintiff as an adopted son. This position has not been challenged on behalf of the respondents in this case and nothing more need be said about it. With regard to the deed of gift or settlement dated 4th May 1927, the finding of the Subordinate Judge is that this was not executed under undue influence or coercion and that a valid right had been created by the deed in favour of the deity Sridhar Jiew Thakur and others by the said deed. With regard to the issue relating to maintenance the Subordinate Judge has come to the conclusion that as the plaintiff has attained majority and no authority has been shown to him that under the Hindu law an adult is entitled to maintenance or that his rights with regard to maintenance cannot be affected by any provision either in a will or a deed, the plaintiff's claim for maintenance must fail. There has been no controversy before us with regard to the finding on issue 6 and the decision which we will give will proceed on the assumption that the deed of settlement to which we will refer in detail hereafter covers all the properties that are the subject matter of the present suit. It may be stated here that one of the prayers in the plaint which seems to us to be in the alternative was that if the properties left by Kshetra Nath Chakravarty be held to have been affected by the settlement deed, it may be declared that the plaintiff is the succeeding Shebait after the death of Kshetra Nath and is entitled to the management of the debutter properties. The Subordinate Judge has, after taking evidence and after arriving at his decision on the various issues which were just indicated, dismissed this claim of the plaintiff with costs. In the first prayer in the plaint the plaintiff asked for the following relief (Ka) :

That it may be declared that the plaintiff is the validly adopted son of the late Kshetra Nath Chakravarti and his sole heir according to law.

As has already been stated, the Subordinate Judge has found in favour of the plaintiff on the question of the validity of the adoption. It is against the decree of dismissal of the plaintiff's suit that the present appeal has been brought and it seems to us at the outset that the plaintiff's entire suit should not have been dismissed seeing that the Subordinate Judge has come to the conclusion that the plaintiff is a validly adopted son and, consequently, the heir of Kshetra Nath Chakravarty according to the Hindu law. This finding has not been questioned before us on behalf of the respondent and we think that the plaintiff's prayer Ka should have been granted and the declaration sought for made. The principal ground on which this appeal has been rested is that the Subordinate Judge should not have admitted the deed of settlement dated 4th May 1927, as it was not properly stamped and as the stamp duty and penalty ordered by the Subordinate Judge had not been paid and it is said that if this document is excluded from evidence plaintiff's suit with reference to the prayer about awarding khas possession of the properties claimed should have been granted. The controversy has therefore turned mainly on the question as to whether this document was properly admitted in evidence. In connexion with this it is to be noticed that as appears from a portion of the record, which portion does not seem to have been printed, that this document which has been marked as Ex. A (see p. 6, part 2 of the paper book) was admitted without objection; and after the said document had been admitted, it appears, that the attention of the Subordinate Judge was drawn to the insufficiency of the stamp leviable on this document, and the Subordinate Judge passed an order on 27th July 1933 to the following effect :

Heard pleaders for both sides. Defendants' Ex. A is impounded, and defendant 1 is directed to deposit Rs. 551-12-0 as stamp duty and Rs. 5,517-8-0 as penalty by tomorrow.

On the next day, namely 28th July, defendant 1 put in a petition stating the impossibility on her part to deposit the stamp duty and penalty within so short a time and that petition was directed to be kept on the record (see p. 3, part 1 of the paper book, Order No. 115). But it seems that this deficit stamp duty and the penalty were never realised from the defendant 1, Basanta Kumari. It is argued for the appellant that in those circumstances this document should have been excluded from evidence, and if the document was so excluded, the defence of defendant 1 which is based on this should not have been given effect to. We will have to deal with the question as to what the proper stamp duty on this document should be and for that purpose we have heard the learned Junior Government Pleader, Dr. Mukherji. But on the question as to whether by reason of deficit stamp and the penalty not having been put in the document should not have been admitted in evidence, we are of opinion that S. 36, Stamp Act, prevents us from acceding to the contention of the appellant. The document was, rightly or wrongly, admitted by the Subordinate Judge in evidence and, once the document has gone in under the provisions of S. 36, it is not permissible to the Court at any subsequent stage of the suit or proceeding to reject this document from evidence; S. 36 runs as follows:

When an instrument has been admitted in evidence, such admission shall not, except as provided in S. 61, be called in question at any stage of the same suit or proceeding on the ground that the instrument has not been duly stamped.

Section 36 is, in its nature, mandatory and applies also to the Court of appeal. The question has been considered in a number of cases in this Court and it has been held that it does not matter whether the document was rightly or wrongly admitted, but if once it is admitted it is not permissible to the Court whether it is a Court of appeal or revision or the trial Court to reject it from evidence. In a recent decision of this Court Sir George Rankin, C. J., as he then was, and Mr. C. C. Ghose, J., said this:

On the merits of the appeal, it appears to me that S. 36, Stamp Act, makes it reasonably clear that the instrument having once been admitted in evidence is not to be called in question at any stage of the same suit. The Special Judge has seen this section but has thought to avoid the consequence of it by taking notice of an affidavit in which it is said that the tenure-holders did object when the document was tendered and that there was a discussion as to its admissibility. The learned Judge has entirely failed to see that under S. 36, it matters nothing whether it was wrongly admitted or rightly admitted or admitted without objection or after hearing or without hearing such objection. These stamp matters are really no concern of the parties and if the objection was taken at the time when the record was made up by the trial Court, there it might be rejected; if not, the matter stopped there.

See the case in 51 C L J 569 (1). This is in accordance with a long line of decisions. The same view was taken in an earlier decision of this Court in 29 C L J 305 (2). In that case Chitty and Panton, JJ. said this:

But, as he (the Subordinate Judge) admitted the document in evidence that admission, except as is provided for by S. 61 which does not affect the liability of the defendant, cannot be called in question in this suit.

See p. 311 of the said report. The suit before him was based upon a bill of exchange which was insufficiently stamped. In a matter which came in appeal from the Original Side of this Court Sir Lancelot Sanderson, C. J., as he then was, after citing the provisions of S. 36 observed as follows:

The provisions of S. 61 are not material to the question which arises in this case. The submission was, in my judgment, admitted in evidence by the arbitrators, and having been admitted in evidence by the arbitrators, it was not open to either of the parties to call in question such admission in the arbitration proceedings on the ground that the submission had not been duly stamped. The award, therefore, which was made upon the submission was in my judgment a valid award.

See 27 C W N 513 (3) at p. 518. In the same case Richardson, J., who delivered a separate judgment uses the following language, after quoting the provisions of Ss. 35 and 36:

Under that provision if any penalty is to be exacted, it can only be exacted under S. 61. The revenue is then protected, so far as it is protected, by that section. In my opinion once an instrument is admitted in evidence in any proceeding, either under S. 35 or under S. 36, it is available in that proceeding for all purposes as if it had been properly stamped from the outset. The proceeding will go through to a valid termination and cannot afterwards be challenged for want of jurisdiction merely by reason of non-compliance with the Stamp Act.

Section 36 would be entirely nullified if on the conclusion of the proceeding in which the instrument is admitted, the proceeding could be set aside by a separate proceeding initiated by one of the parties on the sole ground that the person having authority to receive evidence had admitted or acted upon an unstamped or insufficiently stamped instrument. (See p. 520 of the said report).

It seems to us therefore on a plain reading of the language of the statute as

1. Nirode Basini v. Sital Chandra, 1930 Cal 577=128 I O 187=51 C L J 569.
2. Biswa Nath Bhattacharjee v. Govinda Chandra Das, 1919 Cal 235=51 I O 88=29 C W N 534=29 C L J 305.
3. Rung Lal Kaloo Ram v. Kedar Nath Kesriwal, 1921 Cal 613=77 I O 845=27 C W N 513.

contained in S. 36 as also on the authorities to which we have just referred, that the contention of the appellant that this document can now be excluded from evidence must fail, and we will proceed to determine this case on the footing that this document in question is properly before the Court.

It now remains to consider the question relating to the stamp objection: the question is as to what the proper stamp is which should have been put on this document for the purpose of S. 61. The learned Junior Government Pleader was heard on this question as well as Mr. D. N. Bagchi who appears for the respondent, who has filed this instrument. It is contended on behalf of the respondent that this is really in the nature of a trust deed. We have no hesitation in rejecting this contention, for on a plain reading of the deed it appears to us that it is a deed of gift in favour of certain idols some of whom are in existence at any rate. It is conceded that Sridhar Jieu was a family idol which had been established long before the date of this instrument. The material passage of the document is to be found at p. 8, line about 16, part 2 of the paper-book. It is in these terms:

We after much consideration in sound health, in good faith, of our own free will, and without being requested by others, dedicate all the properties mentioned in the schedule below to Sri Sri Iswar Durgamata Thakurani, Sri Sri Iswar Jagadhatrimata, Sri Sri Iswar Sridhar Jieu, Sri Sri Iswar Lakshmimata and Sri Sri Iswar Saraswatimata, etc., and execute this Arpannama (deed of endowment) and agree that whatever right, title, interest and possession we had in the properties of the under-mentioned Schedule become totally extinguished from this day and the aforesaid deities completely become the Maliks of the Schedule properties from to-day.

There can be no doubt that the rights of the executants Kshetra and Basanta Kumari, his wife, to the properties mentioned in the schedule to this instrument became extinguished and that right vested in the idol. The idol cannot be regarded as a trustee in respect of the property in which by the terms of the instrument the complete right had vested in the said idol. It is difficult to spell out of this document any idea of trust in favour of the idols. The property is the idol's property although we are not unmindful of the fact that the idol holds property in the ideal sense. This was pointed out by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee both in 2 I A 145 (4) and 32 Cal 129 (5). The question of trust, therefore, is out of the way.

Then we are asked by the respondent to construe this deed as a deed of settlement within the meaning of S. 2, Cl. 24, Stamp Act. This, no doubt, is a somewhat difficult question. Settlement as defined in the said clause of S. 2 means any non-testamentary disposition, in writing, of moveable or immoveable property made [we will omit Cls. (a) and (b) which are not material] (c) for any religious or charitable purpose; and it is said that the document is headed as a deed of settlement. But in order to construe the legal effect of any particular instrument it is not the description at the head of the document which ought to be the controlling factor, but it is the substance of the document and not the form which is to be looked into. It is argued for the respondent that "settlement" as defined attracts the provisions of the particular instrument, Ex. A, as it is a non-testamentary disposition of moveable and immoveable property for religious or charitable purpose. The word "settlement" as it is generally understood really refers to a disposition of successive interests in immoveable property and is generally couched in the form of a trust and it is such a settlement which is in the nature of disposition of property moveable or immoveable either in consideration of marriage or for one or more of the objects specified, namely, religion, charity, or provision for family, dependents or others, that in our opinion is contemplated by Cl. 24. It is these objects which attract the benefit of a duty half that of a gift or of a conveyance. We are pressed by the respondents to take the view that this was really not a case of a gift to an idol, but that it was a trust in favour of an idol and that even if it was not a trust it serves as a document which certainly comes within the definition of "settlement" as given in S. 24. The word "settlement" has been defined in the Specific Relief Act as follows:

'Settlement' means any instrument (other than a will or codicil as defined by the Succession Act) whereby the destination or devolu-

4. Prosanno Kumari Debya v. Golab Chand Baboo, (1875) 2 I A 145=4 Beng L R 450=3 Sar 449=23 W R 253=3 Suther 102 (P C).
5. Jagadindra Nath Roy v. Hemanta Kumari Debi, (1905) 32 Cal 129=31 I A 203=8 Sar 698 (P C).

tion of successive interests in moveable or immoveable property is disposed of or is agreed to be disposed of : (See S. 3 of that Act.)

It seems to us that underlying the idea of settlement there is the notion or conception of trust. It is difficult to say that when a gift is made to an idol, the idol is to be regarded as a trustee although the deed says that the particular idol or idols are to be the Malik of the property dealt with by the said instrument. On this part of the case it has further been pointed out that there can be no gift to an idol, for according to the definition of gift under Ss. 122 and 123, T. P. Act, a gift must be in favour of a living person and, an idol not being a living person it cannot be regarded as a gift. The question as to whether there can be gift to an idol was considered by a Full Bench of this Court in 37 Cal 128 (6), and Asutosh Mookerjee, J., who delivered one of the judgments in that case summarizes his conclusions at p. 161 of the report. The first conclusion is :

The view that no valid dedication of property can be made by a will to a deity, the image of which is not in existence at the time of death of the testator, is based upon a double fiction, namely, first, that a Hindu deity is for all purposes a juridical person, and secondly, that a dedication to the deity has the same characteristics and is subject to the same restrictions as a gift to a human being. The first of these propositions is too broadly stated, and the second is inconsistent with the first principles of Hindu jurisprudence.

The learned Judge seems to be of opinion that a gift to a deity is not hedged in by the same limitations and is not subject to the same restriction as a gift to a human being or living person. The learned Judge then observes thus :

The Hindu Law recognises dedications for the establishment of the image of a deity and for the maintenance and worship thereof.

We do not ignore the fact that it is possible to make a gift for a religious and charitable purpose by appointing trustees and by not making a gift as to an idol or idols as in the present case. It appears that in the Madras High Court the question was raised by a Full Bench of that Court as to how far there can be a gift to an existing idol within the meaning of the Transfer of Property Act : see the case in 50 Mad 687 (7), and there is an interesting discussion with regard to the provisions of S. 123 about gifts to an idol in the judgment of Kumarswami Sastri, J. at p. 695. It seems that this question was mooted, but was not finally decided. The learned Judge used the following language :

It has been argued for the respondent that an idol is in law recognized to be a juristic person capable of holding property and it must be held that a gift to an idol is a gift to a living person. A juristic person is not necessarily a living person and the fact that for some purpose the law by a fiction invests non-animate bodies with the rights of persons would not make juristic persons living persons for all purposes. It is unnecessary to pursue this point further as the document is not a gift to an idol, but to Sri Kothandarama Moorthy, the Almighty, and by no stretch of imagination, legal or otherwise, can it be said that the Almighty is a living person within the meaning of the Transfer of Property Act.

There the disposition was in favour of the Almighty. Besides, it seems to us that the view taken by the Madras High Court was in conflict with the view taken in this Court in the Full Bench case in 37 Cal 128 (6). We have, therefore, no doubt, having given our anxious consideration to the matter that there was a gift of properties comprised in Ex. A in favour of the idols mentioned there and if so, the proper duty payable under Art. 33, Stamp Act, would be the same duty as on a conveyance for a consideration equal to the value of the property as set forth in such instrument. It seems to us that the Subordinate Judge is right when he holds that the deficit duty is Rs. 551-12-0.

It now remains to consider the penalty which is to be paid on this instrument. Under S. 61, Stamp Act, the Court has to make a declaration as to the amount of the duty payable as also the penalty. It has been strenuously contended before us by the learned advocate for the respondent that having regard to the provisions of S. 61 (2) the Court can only declare what the proper duty is. It has no right to determine the penalty. It becomes necessary therefore to consider the express provisions of the statute. S. 61 (1) runs as follows :

When any Court in the exercise of its civil or revenue jurisdiction or any Criminal Court in any proceeding under Ch. 12 or Ch. 36, Criminal P. C., 1898, makes any order admitting any instrument in evidence as duly stamped or as not requiring a stamp, or upon payment of duty and a penalty under S. 35, the Court to which appeals lie from, or references are made by, such first mentioned Court may, of its own motion, or on the application of the Collector, take such order into consideration.

6. Bhupati Nath Smrititirtha v. Ram Lal Maitra, (1910) 37 Cal 128=10 C L J 355=3 I C 642=14 C W N 18 (F B).

7. Narasimha Swami v. Venkatalingum, 1927 Mad 686=103 I C 302=50 Mad 687=53 M L J 203 (F B).

Section 61 (2) is in these terms :

If such Court after such consideration, is of opinion that such instrument should not have been admitted in evidence without the payment of duty and penalty under S. 35, or without the payment of a higher duty and penalty than those paid, it may record a declaration to that effect, and determine the amount of duty with which such instrument is chargeable, and may require any person in whose possession or power such instrument then is, to produce the same, and may impound the same when produced.

Then there is the proviso to Cl. (4) to the following effect : Provided that (a) no such prosecution shall be instituted where the amount (including duty and penalty) which, according to the determination of such Court, was payable in respect of the instrument under S. 35, is paid to the Collector, unless he thinks that the offence was committed with an intention of evading payment of the proper duty. The word "amount" is qualified by the bracketed words "including duty and penalty," that is to be determined by the Court which is dealing with the matter for the purpose of S. 61. It is argued that in Cl. (2) nothing is said with regard to the declaration about the higher duty and penalty. Cl. (2) has to be read along with the proviso to Cl. (4) which says in clear language that the determination by the Court must be of both the duty and the penalty. It is said that the question of penalty is a matter within the discretion of the Collector under S. 40. It is to be noticed that the Collector's decision as to penalty is not final and is liable to be called in question or challenged by the Court of appeal or revision. So it is necessary that this Court should declare not only what the duty is, but also the penalty and we think that the penalty having regard to the provisions of S. 35(a) should be ten times the amount of proper duty or a portion thereof. S. 35(a) runs as follows :

... in the case of an instrument insufficiently stamped, of the amount required to make up such duty, together with a penalty of five rupees, or, when ten times the amount of the proper duty or deficient portion thereof exceeds five rupees, of a sum equal to ten times such duty or portion.

We have no option having regard to the proviso but to hold that the penalty is ten times Rs. 551-12-0, namely, Rupees 5,517-8-0. It must be distinctly understood that we are simply making this declaration as is required by S. 61, Stamp Act, and the intimation of this declaration should be sent to the Collector of Nadia along with a copy of this judgment. It has been conceded before us that after having admitted the document in evidence, the Subordinate Judge was wrong in impounding the document and directing the defendant to deposit Rs. 551-12-0 as stamp duty and Rs. 5,517-8-0, as penalty by 28th July. It has been conceded by Dr. Mukherji, who appears for the Government that this was an irregular order and, as we have already stated, once having admitted the document, it was not open to the Subordinate Judge to make that order. It is however open to us now to say that this document is to be impounded and it must be sent to the Collector of Nadia for that purpose.

We now proceed to consider the merits of the appeal. For the appellant, as already indicated, it has been argued that this deed, Ex. A, was never acted upon, and this document was, after all, an illusory document created with the object of depriving the adopted son of his just rights. The appellant, however, is in a difficulty. It appears that the lady Basanta Kumari has been examined in this case, and in her examination, as appears from the record (unfortunately this document has not been printed), she states clearly that debsheba was being carried on in the manner mentioned in Ex. A, and that realisations and collections were being made and are applied for purposes of the Puja. We do not see any reason why we should discredit her statement. She also stated that there are books which would corroborate her statement. It is argued for the appellant that these books have not been produced. The answer to that is that the appellants did not pursue their cross-examination with reference to these books after the lady stated that though she had the books in her possession she was never asked to produce them before the Court.

It has next been argued that as no mutation was effected during the lifetime of Kshetra recording the name of the deity as proprietor the document must be taken to be unreal. The answer to that contention is that Kshetra did not live very long after the execution of this document. A number of supervisors were appointed to check the work of the shebais and the whole object was that these properties should be given to the idol and collections made for debsheba and other purposes. The mere fact that there has been no mutation does not show the unreality of the transaction. It is not said that either of the executants was involved in debt. It seems to be an absolute dedication of the strictest kind in favour of the idols, and more cogent evidence should have been forthcoming if the appellant wanted to establish that this was an illusory document and the income of the property was not being strictly applied to debsheba purposes. On the statement of defendant 1 the Subordinate Judge was right in coming to the conclusion that the deed was being acted upon. It is important to notice in this connexion that the real ground on which this deed was attacked was undue influence and coercion, of which there is no vestige of evidence. This ground must therefore fail.

The next ground taken is that in any event the Court should have granted a decree for maintenance to the plaintiff, namely, the adopted son, and that it was not open to Kshetra or his wife to deprive the plaintiff of the maintenance which he was entitled to under the Hindu Law. It has been contended that under the Hindu law, an adult son is not entitled to maintenance, and our attention has been drawn to a passage referred to in the well-known treatise on Hindu law by the distinguished Hindu lawyer, Mr. Gopal Chandra Sarkar Sastri which has been revised by his son Mr. Rishindra Nath Sarkar, an advocate of this Court. At p. 684, the learned author says this:

In the Bengal school, however, a doubt may be raised as to the right of an adult son and consequently of his wife or widow and daughter. But it should be remembered that the Hindu law makes provisions for the maintenance of even an illegitimate son.

The right of maintenance under the Hindu law is founded on certain texts one of which is that of Manu:

वृद्धौ च मातापितरौ साध्वीभार्या सुतः शिशुः ।

अप्यकार्यशतं कृत्वा भर्तव्या मनुरब्रवीत् ॥

which translated means :

It is declared by Manu that the aged mother and father, the chaste wife, and an infant child, must be maintained even by doing a hundred misdeeds.

Manu cited in the Mitakshara while dealing with gifts. The qualifying words in regard to the issues of a man are "infant child." In view of this text of Manu it is difficult to say that an adult son is entitled to any maintenance. As a matter of fact so far back as 1869, the eminent Judge, the late Dwarka Nath Mitter, J., laid down the following proposition :

We find no authority either in the Hindu law or in the Jain Shastras to support the position that a father is obliged to support a grown up son. It is alleged that the plaintiff was labouring under illness, and he is, therefore, entitled in justice and in equity to receive maintenance from his father, notwithstanding that he has arrived at majority. But illness was never made the ground of the plaintiff's action, and even if it had been, we do not see any reason why a temporary disorder of the stomach should render it obligatory on the defendant to support the plaintiff, when no such obligation exists in law : See 12 W R 494 (8).

That also seems to be the trend of the view taken in the other schools of Hindu law. So this ground regarding the right of the plaintiff to maintenance must fail. It is next contended that the lower Court should have determined in this suit the right of the plaintiff to the shebaitship as prayed for in relief Gha (p. 8, part 1, of the paper book) of the plaint. Before us the argument has taken this shape. It is said that in the recent Full Bench decision of this Court in 60 Cal 452 (9), this Court has held that even with regard to shebaitship, the course of succession must not be one opposed to Hindu law ; and the principle in 9 Beng L R 377 (10), which applies to secular property must also apply to the shebait; and it is said that the line of devolution after defendant 1 and Jatindra Nath Chakravarti, who has also been appointed shebait, is contrary to Hindu law. Therefore, the adopted son as heir would come in as shebait after them. With regard to this prayer it seems to us that the prayer is altogether premature. Cause of action has not arisen, for both Basanta Kumari and Jatindra Nath Chakravarty who are the legally appointed shebait are still alive. The question might arise at a future time after the death of these two persons when it would be open to the plaintiff, if so advised, to agitate the question with regard to his rights about shebaitship. The result, therefore, is that the plaintiff is entitled to a declaration that he is the validly adopted son of

8. Prem Chand Pepara v. Hoolas Chand Pepara, (1869) 12 W R 494 = 4 Beng L R App 28.

9. Manohar Mukerji v. Bhupendra Nath Mukherji, 1932 Cal 791 = 141 I C 544 = 37 O W N 29 = 56 O L J 468 = 60 Cal 452 (F B).

10. Jatindra Mohan Tagore v. Ganendra Mohan, (1872) 9 Beng L R 377 = 18 W R 359 = I A Sup Vol 47 = 2 Suther 692 = 3 Sar 82 (P O).

Kshetra and is his sole heir according to law; and the rest of the claim is dismissed, except with regard to the prayer for shebaitship which question is not determined in the present case and which is left open for future litigation if the plaintiff chooses to bring one when the occasion arises. The Subordinate Judge's decree is varied in this way. The appeal is allowed partially. There will be no order as to costs.

Patterson, J.—I agree.

V.B./R.K. Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 564

R. C. MITTER, J.

Bengal Provincial Ry. Co., Ltd.—Defendant 1—Appellant.

v.

Rajani Kanta De and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1978 of 1933, Decided on 16th July 1935, from appellate decree of Addl. Sub-Judge, Burdwan, D/- 29th June 1933.

(a) Tort — Liability — Adjacent lands — Owner of land lawfully using his land—No negligence on his part—Neighbour is not entitled to relief if such act results in damage to him.

An owner is entitled to use his land in any way he pleases if he does not act in a negligent manner. If there is no negligence on his part, when a lawful act is done on his own property causing damage to his neighbour, the law would give the neighbour no relief.

[P 564 C 2, P 565 C 1]

(b) Tort—Liability — Lateral support—Adjacent land—Right of support from neighbour's land is available only in respect of land in unburdened and natural state — Building constructed on land—Owner has no right of support to building unless it has been acquired as easement.

The natural right of support from neighbour's land is available only in respect of land in unburdened and natural state. An owner has got no right for the support of his building or of his land burdened with the additional weight of his building unless such a right has been acquired as an easement. If there is no easement to have the lateral support of his building on his neighbour's land, the neighbour is within his rights to make excavations on his own land and provided that he does not act negligently he is not liable at all for damages caused to the building of his neighbour: Wyatt v. Harrison, 89 E R 320, Rel. on. [P 565 C 1]

Sitaram Banerjee—for Appellant.

Prokash Chandra Bhose — for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal is on behalf of the Bengal Provincial Railway Company Limited, defendant 1, against the judgment and decree of the Additional Subordinate Judge of Burdwan dated 29th June 1933 in a suit brought by the plaintiffs for damages and for permanent injunction restraining the defendant company from digging burrow pits or deepening them. The plaintiffs have got a decree for damages amounting to Rs. 10 and their prayer for injunction has also been granted; hence this appeal by the company. The facts are these: the defendant company have burrow pits on their own land. The pit in question has been in existence from a very long time. The plaintiffs had their hut near the burrow pit on their land, but in the year 1927 or 1928 they replaced their hut by a masonry building. The building was raised close to the pit. In February 1930, the men of the defendant company deepened the pit, but at the time of the digging operations, admittedly no damage was caused to the plaintiffs' building. It is only after the rains had set in, in July 1930, that cracks appeared on the building. They claimed damages from the railway company on account of damage done to the building; and as they apprehend that further excavations would cause further damage to the building they have asked for permanent injunction restraining the defendant company from deepening the burrow pit or digging further burrow pits near about the plaintiffs' land in such a way as would endanger the stability of their building.

In the plaint the ground on which the claim was based was negligence, but there is no finding by either of the Courts below that the digging was in a negligent manner. The fact that there was no negligence is also supported by the fact that no cracks appeared on the building shortly or immediately after the excavation. They appeared after the rains had set in and the soil being of a sandy nature had been washed away to some extent. The case of negligence being out of the way, I do not see how the decrees made by the Courts below can be supported. Apart from cases coming within the principle in 3 H L 330 (1) an owner is entitled to use his land in any way he pleases if he does not act in a negligent manner. If there is no negligence on his part, when a lawful act of his done on his own property causes damage to his neighbour, the law would give the neighbour no relief. The act of negligence therefore being out of the way, the plaintiffs' claim can only be supported if they had the right of lateral support from the defendants' land. There is a natural right of support from his neighbour's land, but that right is only in respect of land in unburdened and natural state. An owner has got no right for the support of his building or of his land burdened with the additional weight of his building unless such a right has been acquired as an easement. If there is no easement, to have lateral support of his building, on his neighbour's land, the neighbour is within his rights to make excavations on his own land, and provided that he does not act negligently, he is not liable at all for damages caused to the building of his neighbour. This proposition is well settled on the authorities. In 3 B & Ad 871, same as 39 E R 320 (2), Lord Tenterden, C. J. states the law in these terms :

1. Rylands v. Fletcher, (1869) 3 H L 330=37 L J Ex 161=19 L T 220.

The question reduces itself to this whether, if a person builds to the utmost extremity of his own land, and the owner of the adjoining land digs the ground there, so as to remove some part of the soil which formed the support of the building so erected, an action lies for the injury thereby occasioned. Whatever the law might be, if the damage complained of, were in respect of an ancient messuage possessed by the plaintiff at the extremity of his own land, which circumstance of antiquity might imply the consent of the adjoining proprietor, at a former time, to the erection of a building in that situation, it is enough to say in this case that the building is not alleged to be ancient, but may, as far as appears from the declaration have been recently erected : and if so, then, according to the authorities, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover. It may be true that if my land adjoins that of another, and I have not by building increased the weight upon my soil, and my neighbour digs in his land so as to occasion mine to fall in, he may be liable to an action. But if I have laid an additional weight upon my land, it does not follow that he is to be deprived of the right of digging his own ground because mine will then become incapable of supporting the artificial weight which I have laid upon it. And this is consistent with 2 Rall. Ab. Trespass (1), pl. 1. The judgment will therefore be for the defendant.

In Clerk and Lindsell on Torts, Edn. 8, p. 349, it is said as follows :

Again, the right of support, apart from any easement to have a greater degree thereof, is limited to support afforded to land in its natural state, that is to say, to land on the one hand unburdened with the weight of buildings, reservoirs of water or other artificial erections which would tend to increase the natural downward or lateral thrust. But if, in an action against the adjoining owner for removing the support afforded to the soil under the plaintiff's house and thereby causing the plaintiff's house to fall, it be proved that the land on which the house stood would have subsided appreciably even if it had been unburdened with the weight of the house, the plaintiff is entitled to recover in respect of the damage to the house, although it may be modern and no right of support for it has been acquired. An owner of a modern house which de facto enjoys the support of the adjoining soil, though not entitled as against the adjoining owner not to have that support withdrawn, is so entitled as against a wrongdoer.

The plaintiffs' case is that the building is quite a recent one erected in 1927 or 1928. On the principles mentioned above, I am clearly of opinion that the plaintiffs have no right to claim support from the defendants' land, of his land burdened by their building, and inasmuch as there is no evidence to show that their land would have subsided if in a natural state and unburdened with their building by reasons of the excavations made by the defendant, I do not see on what principle the plaintiffs are entitled to get damages from the defendant company for a lawful act done on their own land, an act which as owner they are entitled under the law to do. If the defendant company had been guilty of negligence in doing the particular act, the plaintiffs' case would have stood on a different footing. I hold, accordingly, that the Courts below have gone wrong in passing a decree in favour of the plaintiffs. On the principles noticed above, the plaintiffs' suit ought to be dismissed. The result is that this appeal is allowed, the decrees of the lower Courts are set aside, and the plaintiffs' suit dismissed with costs throughout. The cross-objection of the plaintiffs is dismissed but without costs.

R.M./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 565

NASIM ALI AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Pulin Chandra Daw and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Abu Bakkar Naskar—Defendant—Respondent.

Appeal No. 1247 of 1933, Decided on 13th January 1936, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, 2nd Court, Hooghly, D/- 23rd February 1933.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885), S. 178(3)(a) — Landlord and tenant—Kabuliyat providing for ejectment cannot prevent tenant from acquiring occupancy rights.

2. Wyatt v. Harrison, (1882) 3 B & Ad 871=39 E R 320=1 L J K B 237.

The right of the landlord to eject the tenant from his homestead arising out of the kabulyat cannot prevent the tenant from acquiring occupancy right in the homestead in accordance with the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act. [P 566 C 2]

(b) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885), S. 182—Homestead and agricultural holding—Homestead not forming part of agricultural holding—Rights in homestead are governed by Bengal Tenancy Act and not by Transfer of Property Act—Where provisions of S. 182 are fulfilled tenant cannot be ejected.

If a raiyat's homestead is a part of his agricultural holding there is only one tenancy and his rights in the homestead are the same as his rights in the holding itself. Where however the homestead is not a part of his agricultural holding the incidents of his tenancy or the homestead are regulated by Bengal Tenancy Act and not by the Transfer of Property Act in the absence of any local custom or usage. The requirements of S. 182 are firstly that the tenant of the homestead is a raiyat and secondly that he holds the homestead otherwise than as a part of his holding. Where both the elements are present a tenant cannot be ejected.

[P 566 C 2]

Basak and Phanibhusan Chakravarti for Appellants.

Gopendra Nath Das and Sambhunath Banerjee—for Respondent.

Nasim Ali, J.—This appeal arises out of a suit for ejectment. Plaintiff's case is that the defendant held the disputed land as a tenant under them on the basis of a registered kabuliyat executed by him in favour of their predecessor on 27th July 1915, that a notice to quit was served on him in accordance with the term of the kabulyat calling upon him to vacate the land on the 1st of Baisakh 1336, B. S. but he has failed to comply with the notice. The defence of the defendant is that he is a settled raiyat of the village in which the disputed land lies and that he has acquired an occupancy right in the disputed land under the provision of Section 182, Bengal Tenancy Act, as it is his homestead. The Courts below have held that the defendant has acquired occupancy right in the disputed land. They have accordingly dismissed the suit. Hence the second appeal by the plaintiffs.

Now it appears that the defendant took settlement of the disputed homestead from the plaintiff's predecessor for residential purposes by a kabuliyat in 1915. By this kabuliyat a tenancy at will liable to be determined by a notice to quit was created. It appears that the defendant was a cultivator at the time of the kabuliyat. It is not clear, however, whether he was a raiyat at that time. It has been found by the lower appellate Court that he acquired a raiyati in 1326 B. S. and became occupancy raiyat in respect of some agricultural lands of the village before the service of notice. Dr. Basak appearing on behalf of the plaintiffs contends that subsequent acquisition of the status of an occupancy raiyat by the tenant cannot take away the contractual right of the landlord to eject the tenant. Now, by sub-s. (3) (a) of S. 178, Bengal Tenancy Act, nothing in any contract made between a landlord and a tenant after the passing of the Act shall prevent a raiyat from acquiring, in accordance with this Act, an occupancy right in land. The right of the plaintiffs to eject the defendant from his homestead arising out of the kabuliyat of 1915 cannot therefore prevent the defendant from acquiring occupancy right in the homestead if he is entitled to acquire occupancy right in it in accordance with the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act of 1885. S. 182 of the Act is in these terms:

When a raiyat holds his homestead otherwise than as part of his holding as a raiyat the incidents of the tenancy of his homestead shall be regulated by local custom or usage and subject to local custom or usage by the provisions of this Act applicable to land held by a raiyat.

If a raiyat's homestead is a part of his agricultural holding there is no difficulty as there is only one tenancy and his rights in the homestead are the same as his rights in the holding itself. Where however, as in the present case, the homestead is not a part of his agricultural holding the incidents of his tenancy or the homestead are regulated by the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act and not by the provisions of the Transfer of Property Act in the absence of any local custom or usage. The requirements of S. 182, Bengal Tenancy Act, are: (1) that the tenant of the homestead is a raiyat; (2) that he holds the homestead otherwise than as a part of his holding.

Both the elements are present in this case. Dr. Basak however contends that in order to determine the incidents of the defendant's tenancy of the homestead the Court has to look to the contract which created that tenancy and it is not permissible to take into consideration any subsequent events which the landlords did not contemplate at the time when the tenancy was created and over which they had no control. It is difficult to accept this contention in view of the general terms of the provisions of S. 182. The word "holds" in the section seems to point to the time when the dispute about the incidents of the tenancy of the homestead arises.

The rights derived from a contract have been abrogated with regard to the homestead land of a raiyat without any exception as to pre-existing contracts under the provisions of the Bengal Tenancy Act: See 44 C L J 302 (1).

As a protection to cultivating tenants the section is enacted, so that he may not be turned out of his homestead. I am not therefore prepared to hold that the decision of the Courts below is wrong. The appeal is accordingly dismissed with costs.

Henderson, J.—I agree.

D.S./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

1. Sukh Lal v. Prosanna Kumar, 1926 Cal 1199 = 96 I C 541 = 44 C L J 302.

* A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 567

EDGLEY, J.

Manmatha Kumar Saha—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Exchange Loan Co., Ltd.—Plaintiff—Respondent.

Appeal No. 87 of 1935, Decided on 5th June 1936, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, 3rd Court, Dacca, D/- 19th June 1934.

* Contract — Minor — Fraudulent representation of full age—Person induced to contract with minor—Minor can avoid contract—Setting up of defence of minority is allowed—No estoppel under S. 115, Evidence Act—Minor not allowed to retain benefit of contract—Relief for restitution arises under equity—Interest on loan advanced to minor cannot be claimed—Relief for interest is relief ex contractu and is void.

Where an infant has induced a person to contract with him by means of a false representation that he was of full age, he is not estopped from pleading his infancy in avoidance of the contract; and, though S. 115, Evidence Act, is general in its terms, it must be read subject to the provisions of Contract Act, declaring a transaction entered into by a minor to be void. But the minor defendant should not be allowed to retain the benefit which he has received as a result of his fraudulent misrepresentation and that on equitable principles in a suit properly framed he might be called upon to refund the consideration money which has been received by him. It is however clear that his liability in this respect arises not ex contractu but on equitable considerations and the plaintiff cannot therefore in any event claim interest on the loan, because the liability to pay interest arises on one of the stipulations of the contract: 1928 Lah 609 (F B), Foll.; 9 I C 110, Disting.; Leslie v. Sheill, (1914) 3 K B 607 and 1916 P C 242, Not foll.; 25 Cal 371; 26 Cal 381 and 30 Cal 539 (P C), Expl.

[P 569 C 1, P 570 C 2]

S. C. Basak and Nabadwip Chandra Saha—for Appellant.

Bama Prasanna Sen Gupta—for Respondent.

Judgment.—In the suit out of which this appeal arises the plaintiff Company sued the defendants on a promissory note alleged to have been executed by defendant 1 who alone contested the suit. It was said that defendant 1 had borrowed the sum of Rs. 300 from the plaintiff company and had agreed to pay interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per mensem. The total amount claimed was Rs. 624. The execution of the promissory note was admitted, but the main defence was to the effect that, at the time of the execution of this document, defendant 1 was a minor. The suit was decreed by both Courts. The findings of the lower appellate Court are to the effect that the appellant was a minor at the time when he executed the promissory note, that he knew that the period of his minority had been extended, that the plaintiff company did not know that defendant 1 was a minor and that this defendant obtained the loan from the plaintiff company by falsely and fraudulently representing that he was not a minor. Defendant 1 has now appealed to this Court and the main contention urged on his behalf is that he was incompetent under the law to contract at the time when he executed the promissory note and that even if it be admitted that he obtained the loan upon a fraudulent misrepresentation of facts, he is nevertheless under no liability to the plaintiff company in respect of this transaction. The first point which arises for consideration in connexion with this appeal is whether, under S. 115, Evidence Act, the minor is estopped, by reason of his representation to the effect that he was a major, from pleading his minority in order to avoid the contract.

The question of the applicability of S. 115, Evidence Act, in the case of minors was considered in 26 Cal 381 (1). In that case Maclean, C. J. held that this section had no application to the case of a minor on the ground that the term "person" in S. 115 meant a person who is of full age and competent to enter into a contract and that, as a minor cannot be estopped by a deed or by the recitals in a deed, it would be incongruous to hold that he could be estopped by a parole declaration. In agreeing with the Chief Justice, Ameer Ali, J. stated :

1. Brohmo Dutt v. Dharmo Das Ghose, (1899) 26 Cal 381 = 3 O W N 468.

It follows therefore that when the present law declares that an infant shall not be liable upon a contract, or in respect of a fraud in connection with a contract, he cannot be made liable upon the same contract by means of an estoppel under S. 115. I therefore agree that there is no estoppel whatsoever in this case founded upon any representation or alleged representation on the part of the plaintiff.

Brohmo Dutt's case (1) came before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council on appeal in 1903: 30 I A 114 (2). In deciding that appeal their Lordships of the Judicial Committee held that a person who by reason of infancy is incompetent to contract cannot make a contract within the meaning of the Contract Act, and where he purports to do so, his alleged contract is void. The question of estoppel under S. 115, Evidence Act, was raised before the Judicial Committee, but Sir Ford North in his judgment left the question open as is indicated in the following passage :

The Courts below seem to have decided that this section does not apply to infants; but their Lordships do not think it necessary to deal with that question now. They consider it clear that the section does not apply to a case like the present, where the statement relied upon is made to a person who knows the real facts and is not misled by the untrue statement. There can be no estoppel where the truth of the matter is known to both parties.

The learned advocate for the respondent company places some reliance upon the decision of Caspersz and Chatterjea, JJ. in 15 C W N 239 (3). In that case the decision of the appeal apparently turned upon the question whether Bijoy Gobinda Saha Choudhury, one of the plaintiffs' vendors, was a minor at the time when he conveyed certain property to the plaintiffs. With regard to this point the learned Judges remarked that the conduct of Bijoy in connexion with this transaction might amount to misrepresentation and legal fraud on his part. They go on to say:

If there was misrepresentation by Bijoy operating to deceive, and if the plaintiffs were deceived by it, we think that Bijoy would be bound by the transaction. There should be clear finding on the point.

It appears from the judgment in Surendra Nath Roy's case (3) that the learned Judges relied mainly in support of their decision upon some observations of the Court of appeal in 25 Cal 371 (4). It appears however from the report in 25 Cal 371 (4) that no question relating to the applicability of S. 115, Evidence Act, arose for decision in that case. Jenkins, J. who tried the case in the Court of first instance held that a certain money-lender named Luckhi Narayan had been deceived into making a loan by the defendant's fraudulent misrepresentation. He refused to make a personal decree against the defendant for the repayment of the money advanced, but gave the plaintiff an ordinary mortgage decree and he held that the plaintiff's right to succeed notwithstanding the defendant's infancy, arose from the applicability of a principle of equity which treats fraud as a bar to the plea of disability. Jenkins, J.'s line of reasoning was approved by the Court of appeal consisting of Maclean, C. J. and Macpherson and Trevelyan, JJ. and in upholding Jenkins, J.'s judgment Maclean, C. J. made the following observations:

There is not, so far as I can discover, any distinction between the law in India and the law in England upon this subject. In my judgment, there is a current of cases decided in the Courts of Equity in England, dating back for 150 years or more, which show that, in equity, an infant cannot take advantage of his own fraud. I think it is established that in cases of fraud by an infant the protection which the law throws around him is taken away: in other words, that the defence of infancy cannot be successfully pleaded in defence of a fraud perpetrated by the infant.

His Lordship then went on to say:

I think the cases establish that, in a case like the present, the defendant, though at the time when he entered into the contract he was an infant, is not entitled to take advantage resulting from his own fraud.

It must be remembered that the case in 15 C W N 239 (3) was clearly distinguishable on the facts, from the case out of which the present appeal arises and, having regard to the line of reasoning which seems to have been adopted by the learned Judges in that case, it can hardly

2. Mohori Bibi v. Dharmodas Ghose (1903) 30 Cal 539=30 I A 114=8 Sar 374 (P C).

3. Surendra Nath Roy v. Krishna Sakhi Dassi, (1911) 9 I O 110=13 C L J 228=15 C W N 239.

4. Saral Chand Mitter v. Mohun Bibi, (1898) 25 Cal 371=2 C W N 201.

be taken to go further than to reiterate the general principle laid down in Saral Chand Mitter's case (4) to the effect that an infant is not entitled on equitable principle to take any advantage from his own fraud. In 1928 the leading cases decided by the Courts in India were reviewed by a Full Bench of the Lahore High Court in 9 Lah 701 (5). One of the questions referred to the Full Bench in that case was whether a minor, who, by falsely representing himself to be a major, had induced a person to enter into a contract was estopped from pleading his minority to avoid the contract. After an exhaustive review of the leading cases on this point, including the decisions of this Court, the learned Chief Justice observed:

It will be seen from the foregoing discussion that not only the English law, but also the balance of the judicial authority in India, is decidedly in favour of the rule that, where an infant has induced a person to contract with him by means of a false representation that he was of full age, he is not estopped from pleading his infancy in avoidance of the contract; and though S. 115, Evidence Act, is general in its terms, I consider for the reasons which I have already given that it must be read subject to the provisions of the Contract Act, declaring a transaction entered into by a minor to be void. My answer to the first question referred to us is, therefore, in the negative.

This decision of the Lahore High Court was cited with approval by Buckland, J. in 58 Cal 224 (6). I am entirely in agreement with the views expressed on this point by the learned Chief Justice of the Lahore High Court and it follows that, in my opinion, the minor defendant is not estopped by S. 115, Evidence Act, from pleading his minority to avoid the contract in respect of which he was sued. The further question arises, however, for consideration as to whether the minor defendant is entitled to retain any benefit which he has received under the contract or, in other words, whether he should not be compelled to refund the consideration money obtained by him through his fraudulent misrepresentation. Clearly his liability, if any, would not be ex-contractu, but could only arise with reference to principles of equity. On behalf of the appellant some reliance was placed upon the decision of this Court in 24 Cal 265 (7), in which it was held that in a case where an infant had obtained a loan upon a false representation that he was of age, no suit to recover the money could be maintained against him. The correctness of that decision was, however, doubted by the Court of Appeal in 25 Cal 371 (4) in which the principle was definitely adopted that an infant is not entitled to take any advantage resulting from his own fraud. The question as to a minor's liability in respect of compensation was raised in 26 Cal 381 (1), but it was found in that particular case that the defendant had not been actually misled. In this connection Maclean, C. J. stated:

Then, we are asked to exercise the discretionary powers vested in us under Ss. 28 and 41, Specific Relief Act. That is a matter for the discretion of the Court; the learned Judge in the Court below has exercised his discretion adversely to the appellant, and I see no reason which would justify us in differing from that conclusion. On the contrary I do not think that in a case of this class where a man, who has been told that the person with whom he is dealing is a minor, still chooses to lend him money, "Justice requires" that it should be returned to him.

When this case was considered on appeal by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, the question as to the liability of the minor to return the money advanced to him was further considered and on this point Sir Ford North's observations were as follows:

Another enactment relied upon as a reason why the mortgage money should be returned is S. 41, Specific Relief Act (1 of 1877), which is as follows: "S. 41. On adjudging the cancellation of an instrument the Court may require the party to whom such relief is granted to make any compensation to the other which justice may require." S. 38 provides in similar terms for a case of rescission of a contract. These sections, no doubt, do give a discretion to the Court; but the Court of first instance, and subsequently the appellate Court in the exercise of such discretion, came to the conclusion that, under the circumstances of this case, justice did not require them to order the return by the respondent of money advanced to him with full knowledge of his infancy, and their Lordships see no reason for interfering with the discretion so exercised.

It would appear, therefore, that the Judicial Committee have in effect recognised the principle that the Courts in India have an equitable discretion to direct the refund of money which an infant may have obtained by his own fraud provided the lender is actually deceived by the fraud perpetrated by the minor. It may of course be argued that jurisdiction to order restitution only exists in cases in which the minor invokes the order of the Court as a plaintiff, but as Sir Shadi Lal, C. J., has pointed out in 9 Lah 701 (5), cited above :

5. Khan Gul v. Lakha Singh, 1928 Lah 609 = 111 I C 175 = 80 P L R 60 = 9 Lah 701 (F B).
6. Sarada Prosad Das v. Binay Krishna Dutta, 1931 Cal 893 = 132 I C 84 = 58 Cal 224.
7. Dhanmull v. Ram Chunder Ghose, (1897) 24 Cal 265 = 1 C W N 270.

It is difficult to understand why the granting of an equitable remedy should depend upon a mere accident; namely whether it is the minor or his adversary who has taken the initiative in bringing the transaction before the Court. The material circumstances in both cases are exactly the same. A contract has been entered into with an infant and as it is an invalid transaction it must be cancelled.

His Lordship goes on to say :

All that can reasonably be said is that the Court, in deciding whether relief against fraud practised by an infant should or should not be granted, will consider along with other circumstances of the case the fact that the infant is a defendant and not a plaintiff. But there is no warrant either in principle or in equity for the general rule that the relief shall never be granted where the infant happens to be a defendant.

It is of course true that the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council decided 30 I A 114 (2) before the decision of the Court of appeal in England in (1914) 3 K B 607 (8). In that case the Court of appeal adopted the view that to direct an infant who had obtained a loan on a false representation as to his age to refund the amount of the advances would be an indirect way of enforcing a void contract. This however is not the view which appears to have been generally adopted by the Courts in India and as pointed out by Sir Shadi Lal, C. J. in 9 Lah 701 (5) cited above :

It must be remembered that, while in India all contracts made by an infant are void, there is no such general rule in England. For instance, a contract for necessities is not affected by the Infants' Relief Act, 1874, and can be validly entered into by an infant. There should therefore be greater scope in India than in England for the application of the equitable doctrine of restitution.

It is however argued by the learned advocate for the appellant that the decision of the English Court of appeal in (1914) 3 K B 607 (8) should be adopted as the law of India having regard to certain observations made by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 21 C W N 257 (9). The appeal in question was from the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlement and the observation upon which reliance is placed is as follows :

8. R. Leslie v. Sheill, (1914) 3 K B 607=83 L J K B 1145=111 L T 106=30 T L R 460=58 S J 453.

9. Mahomed Syedol Ariffin v. Yeoh Ooi Gark, 1916 P C 242=39 I C 401=43 I A 256=21 C W N 257 (PC).

A case of fraud by the appellant on the subject of his age was set up, but it cannot be doubted that the principle recently given effect to in (1914) 3 K B 607 (8), would apply, and such a case would fail.

It appears however from the report that in 21 C W N 257 (9) the sole question for consideration in the appeal was whether or not a certain statement should be treated as admissible in evidence. This being the case, as pointed out by Sir Shadi Lal, C. J. in 9 Lah 701 (5) the observations of the Privy Council 21 C W N 257 (9), must be regarded as obiter dicta and though entitled to great respect, are not absolutely binding on the Courts in India. Further, these observations certainly cannot be taken to override what appears to have been an express recognition by the Judicial Committee in 30 I A 114 (2) of the principle that in appropriate cases the Courts in this country are empowered to order restitution by minors on equitable grounds. In my opinion therefore the minor defendant should not be allowed to retain the benefit which he has received as a result of his fraudulent misrepresentation and I consider that on equitable principles in a suit properly framed he might be called upon to refund the consideration money which has been received by him. It is however clear as stated above that his liability in this respect arises not ex contractu but on equitable considerations and the plaintiff could not therefore in any event claim interest on the loan, because the liability to pay interest would arise on one of the stipulations of the contract.

It appears however from the pleadings in the case out of which this appeal arises that the plaintiff has based his claim on the contract and that he has not put forward an alternative claim for restitution of the consideration money. O. 7, R. 7, Civil P. C., requires that every plaint shall state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims either simply or in the alternative. The circumstances of the case out of which this appeal arises indicate that the defect in the plaint such as it is, arose from a bona fide misunderstanding of the law in this subject and, this being the case, I think the plaintiff should now be allowed to amend his plaint, if so advised. It is urged that an amendment of the plaint by allowing the plaintiff to set up alternative case for restitution would, in effect, alter the nature of the suit. I find however that a similar question arose in 25 Cal 371 (4), cited above. In the Court of first instance Jenkins, J. had allowed the plaintiff by amendment to set up an alternative case and, with regard to this matter, the Court of appeal held that it was the intention of the legislature to afford ground for a final decision upon the subject in dispute so as to prevent further litigation and that Jenkins, J. was perfectly right in allowing, in the manner he did, the amendment of the plaint.

Having regard to the considerations mentioned above, this case will be remanded to the lower appellate Court for re-hearing after allowing the plaintiff to amend his plaint if he so desires. It will then be for the lower appellate Court, if necessary, after allowing the appellant also to amend his pleadings and taking such further evidence as may be necessary, to re-hear the appeal and also to look carefully into the conduct of the plaintiff Company and ascertain whether a case for restitution of the consideration money on equitable grounds has been made out. The judgment and decree of the learned Subordinate Judge are therefore set aside and this appeal is remanded to the lower appellate Court for re-hearing in accordance with the directions contained in this judgment. Costs will abide the final result.

B.D./R.K. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 571

R. C. MITTER, J.

Kshirode Chandra Pal Choudhury and others—Judgment-debtors—Appellants.

v.

Brahmanath Pal Choudhury and another—Decree-holders—Respondents.

Appeal No. 572 of 1935, Decided on 9th June 1936, from appellate order of Addl. Sub-Judge, Nadia, D/- 25th September 1935.

(a) Execution — Death of one of two decree-holders — Surviving decree-holder can continue execution for benefit of himself and representatives of co-decree-holder.

In a case where the application for execution is by two persons and one of them dies, the execution proceedings cannot be said to have terminated automatically. The surviving decree-holder can continue the same for the benefit of himself and the legal representatives of his co-decree-holder and all that he is required to do is to state to the Court the fact of death of his co-decree-holder and the names of the legal representatives : 1926 Cal 957, Disting.

[P 572 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 38, O. 21, R. 5 — Execution — Munsif transferring decree for execution to Sub-Judge in same district, though no express prayer by decree-holders — Irregularity in manner of transfer — Decree-holders acquiescing in it — Sub-Judge is not prevented from having seisin over execution.

A Munsif transferred a decree for execution to the Subordinate Judge in the same district, though there was no express prayer for the transfer by the decree-holders. There was some irregularity in the manner of transfer but the decree-holders acquiesced in it :

Held : that the Munsif could transfer the decree as both the Courts were situate in the same district, and the irregularity in the manner of transfer did not prevent the Subordinate District Judge from having seisin over the execution.
[P 572 C 2]

*Panchanan Ghose and Sourindra Narain Ghose—*for Appellants.

Hara Krishna Pramanik — for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal has been preferred by the judgment-debtors against whom the respondents had recovered a decree for money in the Court of the Munsif at Ranaghat in the year 1930. The question involved in this appeal is a question of limitation, namely, whether the application for execution made on 5th February 1935 is barred by time. In 1931, the decree-holders, two in number, namely Brahma Nath Pal Choudhury and Pratap Chandra Pal Choudhury, applied for execution of the decree in the Court of the Munsif at Ranaghat in the District of Nadia and some immoveable properties of the judgment-debtors were attached. Two claims were preferred by two persons and were registered by the said Munsif on 6th May and 23rd May 1931 respectively. Another set of persons had obtained a decree against the same judgment-debtors and they applied for execution in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Nadia. Some of the immoveable properties attached were common in these two execution cases, which were proceeding simultaneously. One of the claimants who filed his claim in the Court of the Munsif at Ranaghat also filed a claim in the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Nadia. On 30th June 1931 the Munsif of Ranaghat being apprised of these facts transferred the execution case as also the claim cases pending before him to the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Nadia, but not at the instance of the decree-holders.

The Subordinate Judge registered the claim cases so transferred to him on 26th August 1931 and the execution case on 6th February 1932. In the meantime Protap Chandra Pal Choudhury, one of the decree-holders, had died on 16th July 1931. The said fact being brought to the notice of the Subordinate Judge on 6th February 1932 he on the same date dismissed the execution case. The present application is within three years of this date and would be in time if Cl. 5, Article 182, Lim. Act, is applicable. The learned advocate for the appellants raised two points. He says firstly that the execution was at an end when one of the decree-holders Pratap Chandra, died on 16th July 1931. Hence he says that the order dated 6th February 1932 has no value in the eye of the law. His second contention is that the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Nadia was not the proper Court within the meaning of Cl. 5 of Art. 182. He says that the Munsiff of Ranaghat had no power to transfer the execution case to that Court. In support of his first contention he relies upon the case in 30 C W N 735 (1). I think that case is distinguishable. There a sole decree-holder had died and in the interval between his death and the application of his legal representatives to continue the execution certain funds were received by the executing Court in another man's execution. A claim for rateable distribution by the said legal representatives was negatived on the ground that at the date of the receipt of assets by the executing Court there was no execution at their instance pending, there being no provision for substitution of legal representatives in execution proceedings. In the case before me the application for execution was by two persons and on the death of one of them the execution proceedings cannot be said to have terminated automatically. The surviving decree-holder could continue the same for the benefit of himself and the legal representatives of his co-decree-holder and all that he was required to do was to state to the Court the fact of death of his co-decree-holder and the names of the legal representatives. I accordingly overrule the first point.

The second point has been formulated by the learned advocate for the appellant in the following way: He says that a Court which has passed a decree can transfer a decree for execution to another Court, but cannot transfer an execution case pending before it to another Court. Such a transfer, the transfer of an execution case, says he, can only be made by the District Judge or the High Court, as the case may be, under S. 24 of the Code. He further contends that even in the case of transfer of a decree for execution by another Court that Court which passed the decree can do so only on the application of the decree-holder. He accordingly urges that the Subordinate Judge had no jurisdiction to entertain and proceed on with the execution case transferred to him by the Munsif at Ranaghat. He was not, says he, the proper Court, and the order passed by him on 6th February 1932 cannot be taken to be a fresh starting point for limitation. There cannot be any doubt that the Munsif of Ranaghat could have transferred this decree or execution to the Court of the Subordinate Judge at Nadia directly as the two Courts are situate in the same district (O. 21, R. 5). In this case before me the Munsif of Ranaghat had in substance transmitted the decree for execution to the Subordinate Judge of Nadia. The decree-holders had acquiesced in the transfer, though the transfer was not made on an express prayer made by them. There may be some irregularity in the manner of transfer, but in my judgment that did not prevent the Subordinate Judge of Nadia from having the seisin over the execution. In accordance with the provisions of S. 38 of the Code he could execute it. I accordingly hold the application for execution on transfer was pending in a proper Court and the decree-holders before me have the right to call in their aid Cl. 5 of Art. 182, Lim. Act. I hold accordingly that the present application for execution is in time and dismiss this appeal with costs, hearing fee two gold mohurs.

V.B.B./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 573

R. C. MITTER, J.

Abdul Latif—Appellant.

v.

J. R. Percival, Receiver and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 555 of 1935, Decided on 29th May 1936, from appellate order of Dist. Judge, Chittagong, D/- 8th July 1935.

(a) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), Ss. 37 and 43—Order appointing receiver under S. 37, need not be passed simultaneously with order annulling adjudication under S. 43.

Where adjudication is annulled under S. 43, it is not necessary that order vesting the property in a person appointed by the Court should be made simultaneously or at the time of making the order annulling adjudication. The insolvency proceedings do not terminate with the annulment, nor can it be said that the insolvency Court loses seisin of the matter and cannot make any other order thereafter in the proceedings. The order under S. 37 is for the protection of the creditors and can be made at any time after the annulment order: 1933 Pat 84, Foll.; 1934 Lah 468, Ref. [P 574 O 2]

(b) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920), S. 37—Order vesting property in receiver under S. 37—Receiver becomes legal owner and trustee of property—Creditors must come in administration of assets by receiver and cannot pursue their remedy of original civil law.

A person in whom property is vested under S. 37 is not the representative of the judgment-debtor insolvent but is a trustee for the creditors and in such a character he has the power and is under the duty to administer the assets vested in him fairly and equitably amongst all creditors and in this matter he has to guide himself by the rules of administration contained in the Insolvency Act. A creditor, therefore, has no right to pursue his remedy by ordinary civil law but must come in the administration of assets held by the receiver under S. 37: 1931 All 71, Dissent. [P 576 C 1]

(c) Provincial Insolvency Act (1920) S. 37—Receiver appointed under S. 37—Execution by creditor against insolvent—Objection by Receiver to execution—Objection does not fall under S. 47 but under O. 21, R. 58, Civil P. C. (Obiter).

Obiter.—A receiver under S. 37 is not the representative of the judgment-debtor within the meaning of S. 47, Civil P. C., and an objection to an execution by attachment by a creditor, at the instance of such a receiver, does not lie under S. 47, Civil P. C., but under O. 21, R. 58, Civil P. C.: 1934 Lah 468, Ref. [P 574 O 1]

Narendra K. Das and Durgesh Prosad Das—for Appellant.

Anil Kumar Das Gupta—for Respondents.

Judgment.—The appellant before me got a decree for money against one Abdul Hamid on 4th November 1933. Later on, on 22nd December 1933, the said Abdul Hamid was adjudicated an insolvent on the application of another creditor and the respondent, Mr. Percival, was appointed Receiver. He however failed to apply for his discharge with the result that on 15th August 1934 his adjudication was annulled. On that date, however, the Court did not vest his properties in any person, but later on a creditor moved the learned District Judge for making an order under S. 37, Provincial Insolvency Act, for vesting his properties in a person to be appointed by him. The learned District Judge on 18th September 1934, made such an order appointing Mr. Percival, as the person in whom the properties are to vest. The appellant before me filed an application for execution of his decree against Abdul Hamid on 28th January 1935, in the 4th Court of the Munsif at Chittagong. In the said application he prayed for sale of some immoveable properties which according to the purport of the aforesaid order of the learned District Judge dated 18th September 1934, had vested in Mr. Percival. Mr. Percival filed an objection under S. 47, Civil P. C., contending that the execution could not proceed, but the appellant was bound to come and take dividends from him in the usual course of administration of Abdul Hamid's affairs. This objection has been upheld by both the Courts below and the execution dismissed. The appellant challenges the correctness of these orders on two grounds:

His first ground is that the order passed by the learned District Judge on 18th September 1934, vesting Abdul Hamid's properties in Mr. Percival is without jurisdiction as the order annulling adjudication had already been made before. The contention is that a vesting order under S. 37 (1) can only be made at the time of the order of annulment and not later on. The second point is that, even assuming the vesting order so made was a good order, the appellant is not bound in law to recover his decretal dues through dividends to be paid by Mr. Percival in the course of his administration. He says that the insolvency proceedings ended with the order of annulment and that he can now pursue his ordinary remedies for realizing his decree, that is by execution, which had only been suspended by reason of the adjudication, with the only difference that he has to make Mr. Percival as an additional party (which he has not done) as the properties against which he wants to proceed are vested in him. He says that he is not bound to come in the administration of the assets held by the person in whom the insolvent's properties had vested by virtue of an order under S. 37. The contention has been carried further by the advocate for the appellant who urges that such a person has not right to administer, he cannot admit proofs and distribute the assets by declaring dividends. I have some doubts as to whether an appeal lay to the lower appellate Court or a second appeal lies here, but I need not pursue the point in detail as no preliminary objection has been taken. I consider Mr. Percival's position to be like that of a claimant who prefers his claim under O. 21, R. 58 of the Code and not that of a representative of the judgment-debtor Abdul Hamid and his objection to the execution was not really an objection under S. 47 of the Code. But I need not pursue the point further as no preliminary objection has been taken either to the competency of the appeal in the lower appellate Court or in this Court. Some support is lent to my view by the course of proceedings in 15 Lah 698=1934 Lah 468 (1), a case to which I will refer later on in connection with the first point raised before me by the appellant.

I shall now deal with the two points raised by the appellant. Regarding the first point I do not find anything in the language of either S. 43 or 37, Provincial Insolvency Act, which would suggest that the order of vesting property in a person appointed by the Court must be made at the time of making an order annulling the adjudication. S. 43 is one of the sections defining the circumstances under which the adjudication is to be annulled. A failure on the part of the insolvent to apply for discharge in time or to appear in support of his application for discharge does not automatically annul the adjudication. It requires an order of the Court. The annulment of the adjudication under the conditions defined in S. 43 is intended as a punishment to the insolvent. This is indicated by sub-s. 2 of S. 43. The protection conferred on him by reason of his adjudication is withdrawn, but it does not necessarily follow that he is to get back from the control of the Court his assets. An order annulling adjudication may be made in a variety of circumstances, e. g. (a) when a composition is approved by the Court, (b) when the Court is convinced that the man ought not to have been adjudicated at all, (c) when the debts are paid in full, (d) when the insolvent fails to apply for discharge in time or to prosecute his application for discharge. In the second and third of these cases it is but just that the assets still left in the hands of the Receiver should be returned to him. In the first case the bankruptcy proceedings continue only in another form, and in the fourth case unless these are special circumstances the Court ought to release from its hold the assets of the insolvent, but should act in such a way as would protect his creditors. The vesting of the property in a person appointed by the Court as provided in S. 37 of the Act is designed to carry this object into effect. S. 37 merely states the effect of an annulment and an adjudication can be annulled under a variety of circumstances which I have indicated above. The insolvency proceedings do not automatically terminate with the annulment, and it cannot be said that by an order passed under S. 43 of the Act the Judge loses seisin of the matter and cannot thereafter make any order in those proceedings. I fail to see why a vesting order under S. 37 cannot be made after the date of the annulment order.

If there be any doubt on this matter or if the law be that such vesting order has to be made at the time of the order annulling adjudication, I do not see what would prevent the Court from exercising its inherent powers in supplying an omission later on for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of process of the Court. That power has been inherent in Courts all along and S. 151, Civil P. C., has simply recognized it. It has not created it. In any view of the matter as in the view of the Patna and Lahore High Courts the powers defined in S. 151 of the Code have been conferred on insolvency Courts by the provisions of S. 5 (1), Provincial Insolvency Act: 12 Pat 163 (2); 15 Lah 698 (1). The learned District Judge while following 12 Pat 163 (2) remarked that the decision in that case was in conflict with the earlier decision of the same Court which arose out of the same insolvency: 9 Pat 945 (3). I do not find any conflict. The facts were that a creditor presented on 24th February 1926 an application for adjudicating Gurudat insolvent. That application was dismissed by the first Court on 12th February 1927, but on appeal the High Court on 8th November 1927 passed the adjudication order. In the meantime two creditors of Gurudat, Creditors Nos. 2 and 3, who had already obtained money decrees, levied execution against him in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Chaibassa. Those applications were made on 16th June 1927, and a debt, the amount of which had not been ascertained then due to Gurudat from the B. N. Railway Co., was attached. The said debt was sold in execution and purchased by Jokhiram for Rs. 5,750 on 1st April 1927. This sum of Rs. 5,750 was paid to the executing Creditors Nos. 2 and 3. The debt due from the B. N. Railway to Gurudat was later on found to be for Rs. 6,095-15-0. On 17th July 1928 the Subordinate Judge of Chaibasa (the executing Court) wrote to the said Railway Company to pay the said sum to Jokhiram, the purchaser.

1. Ishar Das v. Fatema Bibi, 1934 Lah 468=153 I C 993=36 P L R 499=15 Lah 698.

2. Chouthamall v. Jokhi Ram, 1933 Pat 84=141 I C 836=13 P L T 775=12 Pat 163.

About a month before, that is, on 14th June 1928, the adjudication was annulled under S. 43, Insolvency Act. On that no vesting order under S. 37 was made, but it was made later on on 1st August 1928, by which the insolvent's properties were vested in a Receiver. Thereafter a question arose whether Jokhiram, the purchaser at the execution sale, could get the said sum of Rs. 6,095 odd, the money that the B. N. Ry. Co., owed to Gurudat. The District Judge found that Jokhiram was a benamidar of Creditors Nos. 2 and 3 and by an order dated 17th January 1929 directed the Receiver to take the said sum and distribute it among all the creditors of Gurudat. This order was the subject-matter of the appeal by Jokhiram in the first case reported in 9 Pat 945 (3). Although the question of jurisdiction of the Insolvency Court to make the vesting order after the order annulling adjudication was raised, the said question was not decided by the Patna High Court in that appeal. The said Court only decided that the title to the said sum of Rs. 6,095 odd had passed to Jokhiram by reason of the execution sale by reason of the provision of S. 51 of the Act, and they held that this sum of Rs. 6,095, as due from the Railway Company did not vest in the Receiver under S. 37 as it was not at the date of the vesting order the property of Gurudat but had validly passed to Jokhiram. The question whether the sum of Rs. 5,700 paid by Jokhiram, as the price for purchasing at the execution sale, the said debt due from the Railway Company to Gurudat had vested in the Receiver appointed under S. 37 was not decided in 9 Pat 945 (3), but was the subject-matter of appeal No. 217 filed by another creditor of Gurudat, namely Tejmal Marwari, and was the subject-matter of the decision of the Patna High Court in the second case reported in 12 Pat 163 (2). After the disposal of the appeal of Jokhiram in the High Court [9 Pat 945 (3)] Tejmal made an application to the District Judge asking him to realise the said sum of Rs. 5,700 from creditors Nos. 2 and 3. This application was rejected, the District Judge holding that no proceeding was pending and that the Receiver in insolvency, that is the Receiver in whom the property had vested under S. 28 of the Act, and who is the person mentioned in S. 51 had become functus officio, as the annulment of the order of adjudication had terminated the insolvency proceedings. Tejmal filed the appeal before the High Court and contended that the insolvency proceedings were still continuing as a vesting order had been made under S. 37. To meet that contention the respondents' Advocate, Sir Sultan Ahmed, contended that the said vesting order was ultra vires as it had not been passed simultaneously with the order of annulment of adjudication. This contention was overruled. The question which is involved in the case before me was therefore decided in 12 Pat 163 (2) and not in 9 Pat 945 (3) and I accordingly do not see any conflict between the two. I am in complete agreement with the reasons given by Mohammad Noor, J. in 12 Pat 163 (2) and I follow the said decision. I accordingly overrule the first point.

I cannot also accept the second contention of the appellant, although it has for its support the case in 53 All 313 (4). In that case it was held that the proceedings in insolvency terminates on annulment of adjudication and the person in whom the property is vested under an order passed under S. 37 has no power to admit proof of debts, distribute dividends and do any act of administration of a nature which a Receiver in insolvency can do in the normal course in a pending insolvency. It was accordingly held that a creditor after annulment has the right to pursue his remedy for realising his money under ordinary Civil Law. In my view the object of annulment under S. 43 is punishment of the insolvent; the protection offered to him by reason of his insolvency is withdrawn. It is not to put him in a position of advantage. The object of the vesting order under S. 37 is to protect all the creditors, who would have been treated fairly and equally by the Court if the insolvency proceedings went on in normal course. The vesting order clothes the appointed person with legal ownership. He can sell the properties vested in him and turn them into cash assets. If one creditor were free to execute his decree he would be in a position to take all the assets from his hands if his decree exceeded or equalled them. That would deprive the other creditors. Such a course, if open, would afford no protection to all the creditors and would defeat the end that the legislature had in view in enacting S. 37. An annulment order does not terminate the insolvency proceedings absolutely and completely. I hold accordingly that the person in whom the property is vested under S. 37 is in the position of a trustee for the creditors and in such a character he has the power and is under the duty of administering the assets vested in him fairly and equally amongst all the creditors and in this matter he has to guide himself by the rules of administration contained in the Insolvency Act. I accordingly overrule the second point also and dismiss this appeal, but without costs.

3. Jokhiram Surjamal v. Chouthmal Bhagirth, 1931 Pat 70=130 I C 38=9 Pat 945.

4. Panna Lal v. Official Receiver, 1931 All 71=134 I C 848=1931 A L J 18=53 All 313.

V.B./R.K.

*Order accordingly.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 576

R. C. MITTER, J.

Sachindra Nath Chakravarty — Petitioner.

v.

Trailakya Nath Chakravarty and another—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 1392 of 1935, Decided on 27th April 1936.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 26-F (1) — Application accompanied by deposit within period of limitation—There is sufficient compliance with S. 26-F.

When a landlord or the whole body of landlords or some of the co-sharer landlords apply for pre-emption under sub-s. (1), S. 26-F, he or they, as the case may be, must deposit in Court with the application the price of the property as stated in the notice of transfer and ten per cent compensation. When such an application is made some days before the last date unaccompanied by such a deposit, but the deposit is made later on, but within the period of limitation, there is sufficient compliance with the statute: 61 C L J 27 and 1935 Cal 889, Dissent. [P 578 C 1]

(b) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), Ss. 26-F (1), 148-A (2) and 188—Co-sharer landlord applying for pre-emption need not invite other co-sharer landlords to join — It is for Court to call upon them to do.

Where some of the co-sharer landlords apply for pre-emption under sub-s. (1), S. 26-F, the remaining co-sharers must be made opposite parties either in the application as originally filed or by an application for amendment made within one of the two periods of time mentioned in sub-s. 4 (a) of S. 26-F. It is not necessary that the co-sharer landlord applicant must invite the remaining co-sharer landlords made opposite parties by him to come forward and join in his application for pre-emption, nor is he required to give his consent to their so joining. All that he is required to do is to place his co-sharer landlords, so far as the proceedings are concerned, in a position to join in the pre-emption if they like. It would be for the Court to call upon the said co-sharer landlords opposite parties to join in the application for pre-emption by inserting such a direction in the summons. The absence of an express statement in his application for pre-emption, to the effect that he has no objection to his co-sharers joining in his application for pre-emption or that he would be willing to treat them as co-applicants, is not required, and its absence would not make his application for pre-emption, if it is otherwise good, a bad one: 1936 Cal 231 and 388, Ref. [P 578 C 2]

(c) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 26-F (1) and (4) (a)—Time within which service of application to be effected and effect of non-service considered.

Co-sharer landlords opposite parties must apply to be joined as co-applicants within two periods, whichever gives them the longest time, i. e., within two months of the service of notice of the transfer on them or within one month of the application made by their co-sharer under S. 26-F (1) where the notice of transfer has been served on them. The period of one month must be counted from the date of the filing of the application under S. 26-F (1) and not from the date of the service thereof. If the service of the summons be delayed beyond a month by reason of the acts or defaults of the applicant for pre-emption, his application for pre-emption would be thrown away on the ground of non-compliance with S. 188. The co-sharer landlords opposite parties cannot complain of such a course or of losing their right of pre-emption in such a case, for it must be taken from their not making an independent application under S. 26-F (1) that they had no objection to the transferees possessing the holding but had objection only to their co-sharer possessing it alone by the exercise of the right of pre-emption. If the summons be not served within the period of one month of the filing of the application under S. 26-F (1) by an act of omission or mistake of the Court or of its officers the application of the co-sharer applicant under S. 26-F (1) would be a good one, but the Court would be under a duty to relieve the co-sharer landlords opposite parties from the injury done to them by its acts or defaults or those of its officers: 1936 Cal 343, Ref.

[P 578 C 2; P 579 C 1]

(d) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), Ss. 26-F(1), (4)(a) and 188—Time for payment of deposit cannot be extended beyond that fixed for application, but deposit may not accompany application.

Where a co-sharer landlord opposite party's application to become a co-applicant is in time, the deposit should ordinarily accompany such an application, but if it is not put in along with the application it is not fatal, but it must be deposited within the period of limitation prescribed in S. 26-F, sub-s. (4), Cl. (a), for such an application. In the case where there is no dispute as to the respective shares of the landlords who are the original applicants for pre-emption, and who later on wish to become a co-applicant, the amount to be deposited by such a co-applicant can be easily ascertained by him. It must be according to the proportion that his share bears to the share of the other co-sharer landlords who want to pre-empt, for it is on that proportion that the final order for pre-emption must define their respective shares in the pre-empted holding. If there is a dispute as to the shares or right of any of such co-applicants, or if he feels uncertainty or doubt about the amount he has to deposit, the Court has to determine the amount to be paid by him. The Court must be moved in such a case in time, and when so moved a duty would be cast on the Court to determine the amount in time. After determining it, it can extend the time for deposit but not beyond the period of time indicated in Cl. (a), sub-s. (4). The whole scheme in the matter of deposits, whether the application is under S. 26-F (1) or S. 26-F (4), is that the deposit to be made by applicant or the co-applicants for pre-emption must be made within the time limit imposed by statute for making such applications. In both these classes of applications there must be the same exceptions when prejudice is caused by the mistakes, acts and defaults of the Court itself or of its officers.

[P 579 C 1, 2; P 580 C 2]

Bhupendra Nath Roy Choudhury—for Petitioner.

Prokash Chandra Pakrasi — for Opposite Parties.

Order.—The two petitioners before me and sixteen other persons are the immediate landlords of an occupancy holding. The tenants transferred their holding to certain persons for a price of

Rs. 90 by a registered conveyance. The notices of transfer required to be filed with the registration officer under S. 26-C, Tenancy Act, were served on all the landlords on 5th March 1935. Two of these landlords, namely, the two petitioners before me, made, on 2nd May 1935 an application for pre-emption under S. 26-F (1). They made the transferees and the remaining landlords opposite parties to their application for pre-emption. In the said application they stated that they had one anna nine gundas and two krants share in the landlords' interest and the landlords opposite parties had the remaining shares therein. Notice of this application was served on the co-sharer landlords on 22nd May 1935. On 1st June 1935, two of them, namely the opposite parties before me, appeared and made an application. They have 5 as 6 gundas 2 karas and 2 krants share, that is one-third share, in the landlords' interest. In the said application they stated that the petitioners before me have a small share and if they are allowed to pre-empt the whole, they would suffer great loss. They, the said opposite parties, then went on to state that they have not been able to collect the money which they are required by law to deposit for enabling them to join in their co-sharer's application for pre-emption. They then state as follows: "Accordingly these opposite parties after depositing the money according to their share will join in the application for pre-emption." The prayer is for some time to make the said deposit. On this application the Court made the following order on 1st June 1935:

Notice duly served. Opposite parties Nos. 8 and 9 co-sharer land-lords (the opposite parties before me) want time to join the petitioners in their claim for pre-emption by depositing the requisite money. Case adjourned to 21st June 1935 for hearing. Opposite parties Nos. 8 and 9 may deposit the requisite amount and join as co-petitioners by the next date.

The opposite parties deposited on 21st June Rs. 33 by a challan. The challan shows that Rs. 30 was deposited on account of the price (being one-third thereof) and Rs. 3 as compensation. No formal application was made at a later stage by them praying for becoming co-applicants for pre-emption. The transferees did not contest the application for pre-emption. The contest is between two sets of landlords, namely the petitioners and opposite parties before me, and if the opposite parties succeed they would be entitled to have two-third shares in the holding and the petitioners one-third share, because the proportion of their shares in the landlords' interest is 2 to 1. In fact the said parties have been allowed by the learned Munsiff to pre-empt according to the said proportion. The petitioners contended before the lower Court and also before me that the opposite parties cannot be allowed to pre-empt for two reasons, namely : (a) that they never made any application for becoming co-applicants for pre-emption, and (b) that the deposit made by them was out of time, the learned Munsiff having no power to extend the time for deposit beyond 2nd June 1935, i. e., beyond one month of the filing of the petitioner's application for pre-emption. Before I deal with these points and the reason given by the learned Munsiff for overruling them it is necessary to examine in some detail the provisions of the statute on the subject. When a landlord or the whole body of landlords or some of the co-sharer landlords apply for pre-emption under sub-s. 1 of S. 26-F, he or they, as the case may be, must deposit in Court with the application the price of the property as stated in the notice of transfer and ten per cent compensation. When such an application is made some days before the last date unaccompanied by such a deposit, but the deposit is made later on but within the period of limitation, a question may be and has been raised in some of the reported cases, as to whether there is sufficient compliance with the statute. On this point there is a divergence of judicial opinion [see 39 C W N 232 (1); 61 C L J 27 (2)]. I am not called upon in this case to decide this point, and if I had been, I would be inclined to the view expressed by Mitter, J. in the case in 61 C L J 27 (2).

In the case where some of the co-sharer landlords apply for pre-emption under sub-s. 1 of S. 26-F, the remaining co-sharers must be made opposite parties, either in the application as originally filed or by an application for amendment made within one of the two periods of time mentioned in sub-s. 4 (a) of S. 26-F. This is my view of the effect of S. 188. The words "giving opportunity of joining in the proceedings" occurring in that section mean this: It is not necessary that the co-sharer landlord applicant must invite the remaining co-sharer landlords made opposite parties by him to come forward and join in his application for pre-emption, nor is he required to give his consent to their so joining. All that he is required to do is to place his co-sharer landlords so far as the proceedings are concerned in a position to join in the pre-emption if they like. It would be for the Court to call upon the said co-sharer landlords opposite parties to join in the application for pre-emption by inserting such a direction in the summons. This is in my judgment the effect of the cases in 39 C W N 1178 (3), 40 C W N 506 (4) and of S. 148-A (2). The absence of an express statement in his application for pre-emption to the effect that he has no objection to his co-sharers joining in his application for pre-emption or that he would be willing to treat them as co-applicants is not required and its absence would not make his application for pre-emption, if it is otherwise good, a bad one. It is not necessary in this case to consider the provisions of sub-s. (3) of S. 26-F.

Whether the landlord applying for pre-emption can be required to deposit under this sub-section as a condition precedent to pre-emption sums of money on heads other than those expressly mentioned therein need not be considered in this case. The said question has been considered in 38 C W N 849 (5). The matters that have to be next considered are the rule and procedure to be followed by a co-sharer landlord opposite party wishing to join in his co-sharer's application for pre-emption. Co-sharer landlords opposite parties must apply to be joined as co-applicants within two periods whichever gives them the longest time i. e., within two months of the service of notice of the transfer on them or within one month of the application made by their co-sharer under S. 26-F (1). I am here considering only the case where the notice of transfer has been served on

3. Muhammad Garib Hossain Mia v. Sm. Halimannessa Bibi, 1936 Cal 231=62 I C 355=68 Cal 102=39 C W N 1178

4. Gajendra Nath Mandal v. Kunja Behary Mistry, 1936 Cal 388=40 C W N 506.

5. Secy. of State v. Sukh Chand Saw, 1934 Cal 749=152 I C 557=38 C W N 849=59 C L J 471.

1. Girish Chandra Ghose v. The Jadapur Estate Ltd., 1935 Cal 989=156 I C 413=60 C L J 576=39 C W N 232.

2. Sidheswara Prosad Choudhury v. Gendu Mia, (1935) 61 C L J 27.

them. The period of one month must be counted from the date of the filing of the application under S. 26-F (1) and not from the date of the service thereof. The latter interpretation of sub-s. 4 (a) of S. 26-F cannot in my judgment be adopted for that would be introducing into the statute words which are not there. I fail to see how hardship would result by adopting the former construction. If the service of the summons be delayed beyond a month by reason of the acts or defaults of the applicant for pre-emption, his application for pre-emption would be thrown away on the ground of non-compliance with S. 188. The co-sharer landlords opposite parties cannot complain of such a course or of losing their right of pre-emption in such a case, for it must be taken from their not making an independent application under S. 26-F (1) that they had no objection to the transferees possessing the holding but had objection only to their co-sharer possessing it alone by the exercise of the rights of pre-emption.

If the summons be not served within the period of one month of the filing of the application under S. 26-F (1) by an act of omission or mistake of the Court or of its officers the application of the co-sharer applicant under S. 26-F (1) would be a good one, but the Court would be under a duty to relieve the co-sharer landlords opposite parties from the injury done to them by its acts or defaults or those of its officers: [40 C W N 680 (6).] If according to the principle discussed above a co-sharer landlord opposite party's application to become a co-applicant is in time, the further question of deposit in Court of his share of the price of the holding as stated in the notice of transfer and ten per cent compensation has to be considered. This deposit should ordinarily accompany such an application but if it is not put in along with the application it is not fatal, but it must be deposited within the period of limitation prescribed in S. 26-F, sub-s. 4, Cl. (a) for such an application. In the case where there is no dispute as to the respective shares of the landlords who are the original applicants for pre-emption and who later on wish to become a co-applicant, the amount to be deposited by such a co-applicant can be easily ascertained by him. It must be according to the proportion that his share bears to the share of the other co-sharer landlords who want to pre-empt, for it is on that proportion that the final order for pre-emption must define their respective shares in the pre-empted holding. If there is a dispute as to the shares or right of any of such co-applicant, or if he feels uncertainty or doubt about the amount he has to deposit, the Court has to determine the amount to be paid by him. The Court must be moved in such a case in time and when so moved a duty would be cast on the Court to determine the amount in time. After determining it it can extend the time for deposit but not beyond the period of time indicated in Cl. (a) of sub-s. 4. The whole scheme in the matter of deposits whether the application is under S. 26-F (1) or 26-F (4) seems to me to be that the deposit to be made by applicants or the co-applicants for pre-emption must be made within the time limit imposed by statute for making such applications. In both these classes of applications there must be the same exceptions when prejudice is caused by the mistakes, acts and defaults of the Court itself or of its officers. It is now necessary to examine the reasons given by the learned Munsif in support of his order. His reasons are as follows:

(i) The application of the opposite parties dated 1st June 1935 must be considered to be an application for joining as co-applicants; (ii) that the deposit made by the opposite parties was in time as it was made within one month of the date of the service of the notice of the application for pre-emption made by the petitioners, which is the time up to which the Court can extend time for such deposit; (iii) that even if the law does not empower the Court to extend time up to the aforesaid period, but only up to a month from the date of the filing of the application for pre-emption under S. 26-F (1), the petitioners' application under that sub-section was not a proper one, as S. 188 had not been complied with, as they did not embody in their application an invitation to the opposite parties and their other co-sharers to come and join in their application. The last mentioned reason is not obviously sound. If the petitioners' application for pre-emption has not complied with the provisions of S. 188, their application will then have to be dismissed on that ground, but the so-called defect cannot nullify the provisions of S. 26-F (4) (b) by authorising the Court to receive as a good deposit an amount of money put in beyond the periods of time mentioned in S. 26-F (4) (a), mistake and omission of the Court itself or of its officer being out of the question. I have also indicated in the earlier part of my judgment the scope of S. 188, and I hold that the petitioners' application for pre-emption was a defective one.

The first reason given by the Court below may or may not be sound. It depends upon the construction of the application made by the opposite parties on 1st June 1935. The words of the application imply that it is merely an application for time. Even if it be considered to be an application by the opposite parties becoming co-applicants for pre-emption, it does not help them; for in my judgment their deposit of a part of the amount of the price of the property sold and compensation was made too late. This leads me to consider the second ground given by the learned Munsiff. In the case before me the opposite parties did not ask the Court to determine the amount they will have to put in and that amount was never determined by the Court. They had no doubt in the matter, for without the Court naming any amount they deposited Rs. 33 on 21st June 1935. The learned Munsiff held that limitation for an application to become co-applicant runs from the date of the service on them of the petitioners' application for pre-emption; the other case, namely the application of the co-applicant must be within two months of the service of the notice of transfer on them need not be considered in this case. The reason given is that a deposit can only be made by co-applicants after the Court determines the amount and makes an order requiring the amount so determined to be deposited. The learned Munsiff says that the Court would not be in a position in many cases to determine the amount within one month of the filing of the application for pre-emption under S. 26-F (1) by a co-sharer. Says the learned Munsiff, that the notices of the said application may be served on the co-sharer either on the 30th day from the date of filing of the application under S. 26-F (1) or even beyond a month thereof. In the last mentioned case, as I have indicated above, there is no difficulty. If the service was delayed by the applicant under S. 26-F (1), his application will have to be dismissed; if the mistakes or omissions of the Court or its officers were responsible, the Court would relieve against the prejudice caused. If the notice is served within one month of the date of the filing of the application for pre-emption the intending co-applicant can himself in most cases calculate the amount and put it in time. If he feels any doubt or uncertainty, or if shares in the landlord's interest are in dispute, he can at once apply to the Court to fix the amount, which the Court can do immediately without making any final adjudication about the shares, and subject to that adjudication later on. On this part of the case the learned Munsiff says that a determination of the amount cannot be made till the Court has made up its mind as to whether the several landlords wishing to pre-empt should be given on pre-emption equal shares in the pre-empted holding or shares in proportion to their respective shares in the landlord's interest. If that be the criterion, the Court would not be in a position to determine the amount till the case is fully heard and the stage of sub-s. 5 of S. 26-F has been reached. That would in most cases extend the time much beyond a month of the service of the notice of the application made under S. 26-F (1). I do therefore hold that a Court cannot extend the period for making a deposit by a co-applicant beyond the period of time mentioned in Cl. (a), sub-s. 4 of S. 26-F.

I accordingly make this Rule absolute and dismiss the opposite parties' claim for pre-emption. The result is that the lower Court is directed to pass an order for pre-emption only in favour of the petitioners before me, after requiring them to deposit such further sums of money that they may be liable to put in under the provisions of sub-s. 3 of S. 26-F.

The contesting parties to bear their respective costs throughout.

V.B./R.K.

Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 581

EDGLEY, J.

Shambhu Chandra Haldar — Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Kanai Lal Goswami and others—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Appeal No. 395 of 1935, Decided on 2nd June 1936, against decree of Dist. Judge, 24-Parganas, D/- 12th January 1935.

Ejectment—Notice—Notice is to be strictly construed—Notice of ejectment undertaking to compensate tenant for his constructions—Lease deed not containing clause of compensation—Notice held waived right of landlord to eject without payment of compensation—Compensation clause in notice is not surplusage.

Notice of ejectment of a tenant under S. 106, T. P. Act, must be construed very strictly.

Upon a strict construction of a notice of ejectment it appeared that the landlords plaintiffs undertook either to give or tender to the tenant defendant the reasonable price of the materials of the tenant defendant's structures before compelling the latter to give up possession of the demised land, although according to the terms of the lease the landlords plaintiffs were not in any way bound to do this :

Held : that the clause in the notice with regard to the payment of compensation money was not a mere surplusage. The landlords plaintiffs must be deemed to have waived any express rights which they may have had under the terms of the lease and that, it not having been suggested that the landlords plaintiffs either paid the tenant defendant the price of the materials of the structures or even tendered to him any reasonable amount as representing such price, the landlords plaintiffs were not entitled to evict the tenant defendant by reason of the notice. [P 581 C 2 ; P 582 C 1]

Prafulla Kamal Das and Radhika Ch. Chatterjee—for Appellant.

Bijan Kumar Mukherjee and Manilal Bhattacharjee—for Respondents.

Judgment.—In the suit out of which the present appeal arises the plaintiffs sued the defendant for ejectment from a certain plot of land. It was decided by both the Courts below that the defendant had been properly and legally ejected and it was decided that the plaintiffs should get khas possession of the land in suit subject to the payment to the defendant of the sum of Rs. 700 as compensation for the cost of the materials of the structures which had been erected by the defendant on the suit land.

The first point urged by the learned advocate for the appellant in this case is that the defendant has not been validly ejected owing to the fact that, according to the terms of the notice, whatever the plaintiffs' rights may have been under the terms of the kabuliyat they had nevertheless undertaken not to eject the defendant until they had compensated the latter for the cost of the materials of the structures in the suit land. It was therefore contended that they had waived their right to eject the defendant until such compensation had been paid or at any rate tendered to the defendant. The kabuliyat appears to have created a monthly tenancy in favour of the defendant and, according to its terms the defendant was entitled to hold the demised land from month to month on payment of rent at the rate of Rs. 7-8-0 per mensem, but it was agreed that the defendant would, upon the receipt of a proper notice, vacate the demised land and thereupon the plaintiffs would be required to pay him compensation in respect of the materials of the structures which he had erected on the land according to the condition at the time of ejectment. The notice Ex. 4, which was served upon the defendant required him to vacate the demised land in accordance with the terms of the kabuliyat on or before the last day of the month of Aswin 1337. The notice then goes on to say :

You are also further informed that if, according to the terms of the kabuliyat, you will take from us the present day price of the materials bricks, wood of the structures etc., erected by you then, after receipt of such price, from us you will give up possession of the land with the structures, etc.

It is argued by the learned advocate for the appellant that inasmuch as the price of the materials had not even been tendered to the defendant, the notice, Ex. 4, became ineffective. It is urged on the other hand by the learned advocate for the respondent that the clause in the notice with regard to the payment of compensation money should be regarded as a surplusage and should not be deemed to be a waiver on the part of the plaintiffs of their right to eject the defendant at the end of Aswin 1337.

There can be no doubt that inasmuch as the notice might have the effect of depriving the defendant of his right to occupy the land in suit according to the terms of the lease it must be very strictly construed. It is not contended that the defendant was not willing to receive compensation. It, therefore, follows that under a strict construction of the notice the plaintiffs undertook either to give or tender to the defendant the reasonable price of the materials of the defendant's structures before compelling the latter to give up possession of the demised land. Undoubtedly according to the terms of the lease the plaintiffs were not in any way bound to do this, but it cannot be contended that they were not at liberty to waive any express rights which they may have had under the terms of the lease and in this particular case they appear to have done so. It has not been suggested that the plaintiffs either paid the defendant the price of the materials of the structures or even tendered to him any reasonable amount as representing such price. This being the case I am of opinion that the plaintiffs are not entitled to evict the defendant by reason of the notice Ex. 4.

With regard to the question as to the adequacy of the price of the materials, there is a clear finding of fact in the Courts below that the value of these materials would be Rs. 700. The first Court arrived at this valuation after considering the evidence of certain competent valuers and I am of opinion that this finding is based on adequate material. If, therefore, in this case an adequate notice had been given it would have been competent for the plaintiffs to evict the defendant by paying him the sum of Rs. 700 as compensation.

Having regard to the fact that the notice Ex. 4 is inadequate for the purpose of ejecting the defendant, this appeal must be allowed. The judgments and decrees of the Courts below are set aside and the plaintiffs' suit will stand dismissed, subject to their right to eject the defendant at any time hereafter on serving him with a proper notice and paying him the sum of Rs. 700 as compensation for the materials of the structures. I make no order as to the costs of this appeal. The parties will bear their own costs in the Courts below.

B.D./R.K.

*Appeal allowed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 582

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Dr. Ferdinand Perier, S. J. Archbishop, Calcutta—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Kumar Krishna Nandy Choudhury—Defendant—Respondent.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 4 of 1936,
Decided on 8th April 1936, against judgment of M. C. Ghose, J., D/- 7th January 1936.

(a) Estoppel—Proceedings under S. 26-F, Ben. Ten. Act—Landlord exercising his right to pre-emption—Question whether tenancy at fixed rate of rent expressly left open—Suit by tenant for declaration that tenancy was one at fixed rate of rent—Kobala not reciting fixity of rent—Payment of landlord's fee at time of registration of kobala—No question of estoppel arises.

Where in a proceeding under S. 26-F, Ben. Ten. Act, when the landlord wanted to exercise his right to pre-emption, he is met with an objection that the tenancy was at a fixed rate of rent, and the application is allowed, leaving the question of the status of the tenant whether he was tenant at fixed rate of rent is expressly left open, the fact that in the kobala by which the purchaser purchased the holding, there was no mention of the fixity of rent, and that the purchaser paid the landlord's fees at the time of the registration of the kobala, does not give rise to any estoppel against the purchaser in a suit by the latter for a declaration that he was a tenant at fixed rate of rent in respect of the holding and Ss. 26-D and 26-F, Ben. Ten. Act, have no application. [P 583 C 2]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 100—Question whether presumption that tenancy was fixed rate one can or cannot arise from tenant having held at uniform rate of rent and other circumstances is question of fact.

The question whether a tenant has held at a uniform rate for a number of years, and the further question whether a presumption could or could not arise, from a tenant having held at uniform rate for a very long period and from other circumstances, that the tenancy was one of which the rent was fixed, are questions of fact and the decision of the final Court of fact must be taken to be conclusive between the parties concerned: 1927 P C 102, Disting.; 1925 Cal 632, Ref. [P 584 C 1, 2]

*D. N. Bagchi and Jitendra Nath Bagchi—*for Appellant.

*Amarendra Nath Bose and Hira Lal Chakravarty—*for Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal under the Letters Patent in a suit instituted by the plaintiff appellant for declaration that he was a tenant at fixed rate of rent in respect of the lands in suit. In view of an order passed in accordance with the provisions contained in Ss. 26-D and 26-F, Ben. Ten. Act, the plaintiff in the suit prayed for the further declaration that those provisions of the law had no application to the lands in suit, and for recovery of possession of the lands, inasmuch as there was an order for pre-emption in favour of the defendant landlord. It would appear that the plaintiff purchased the lands in suit from a tenant under the defendant; the landlord defendant having applied under Ss. 26-D and 26-F, Ben. Ten. Act, for exercise of the right of pre-emption, in the matter of the purchase made by the plaintiff, the application was allowed; in the order passed on the application for pre-emption made by the landlord the question of status and nature of the tenancy purchased by the plaintiff was not determined and was expressly left open. As has been mentioned already, the case of the plaintiff before the Court, so far as the suit giving rise to this appeal was concerned, was that he had purchased the lands in suit, appertaining to a tenancy at a fixed rate of rent, and that the landlord had no right to exercise any right of pre-emption in regard to the same. The plaintiff's claim in suit was resisted by the defendant landlord, who asserted that the tenancy in question was an ordinary occupancy holding, and not a holding at a fixed rate of rent.

The questions for determination in the suit, so far as they are relevant for the purpose of this appeal, were those indicated by Issue 6 raised on the pleadings of the parties concerned: What is the status of the plaintiff? Is the plaintiff an occupancy raiyat or a raiyat at fixed rate in respect of the lands in suit? The plaintiff's suit was dismissed by the trial Court. On appeal by the plaintiff, the learned Subordinate Judge in the lower appellate Court, on a consideration of the evidence in the case came to the conclusion that the rent of the holding to which the lands in suit appertained, was fixed in perpetuity. It was held on evidence that the defendant in the suit had failed to rebut the presumption of fixity of rent arising from payment of rent for a long period at an unvarying rate. A decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff declaring that the plaintiff's interest in the land in suit was that of a raiyat at fixed rate and that the provisions of Ss. 26-D and 26-F were not applicable to the lands in suit; the defendant was permanently restrained from taking possession of the lands in suit. The decree passed by the lower appellate Court was set aside on appeal to this Court; and the learned Judge of this Court against whose decision this appeal is directed, dismissed the plaintiff's suit.

The first ground on which the decree of the Subordinate Judge in the Court of appeal below, passed in favour of the plaintiff appellant before us, was set aside was that the plaintiff's action in depositing the landlord's fees under S. 26-D, Ben. Ten. Act, estopped him from claiming against the defendant that the holding in suit was not an occupancy holding. In view of the position indicated already, that the question of status of the plaintiff, whether he was a tenant at a fixed rate of rent, having been expressly left open, as mentioned in the order recorded in the proceeding in which the defendant wanted to exercise his right of pre-emption as a landlord, the question of estoppel as discussed by the learned Judge of this Court in his judgment, did not, and could not, arise. On the findings arrived at by the Court of appeal below, there was no case of estoppel operating against the plaintiff in the matter of his claim in the suit in which the appeal has arisen. As has been noticed by the learned Subordinate Judge in his judgment, the fact that in the kobala by which the plaintiff purchased the lands in suit, there was no mention of fixity of rent, that the plaintiff paid the landlord's fees at the time of registration of the kobala, did not give rise to any estoppel against the plaintiff. The rights of the parties concerned had to be determined in respect of the lands in suit, and the question of fixity of rent as raised in the suit which was left open in the previous proceeding under Ss. 26-D and 26-F, Ben. Ten. Act, had to be determined on materials on record, apart from the position that there was payment of landlord's fees at the time of the registration of the kobala by which the plaintiff had purchased the lands in suit.

The nature of the tenancy and the incidents of the same could not be changed by an act or declaration of the plaintiff; and there was, in our opinion, no admission by the plaintiff which induced the defendant to alter his condition, as mentioned by the learned Judge of this Court in his judgment. It may be mentioned that the learned advocate for the defendant-respondent did not rest his case before us on estoppel operating against the plaintiff-appellant, and did not make any serious attempt to support the decision appealed against, on the ground of estoppel.

The question for consideration next is whether the learned Judge of this Court was right in holding against the decision of the final Court of fact, that the holding in the case before us, was not held at a fixed rate of rent. It is well settled, that even in cases where presumption under S. 50, Ben. Ten. Act, as to fixity of rent, does not arise directly, as in the case before us the Court would be justified to act on presumption similar to the one arising under that section, if the facts justify the same. A presumption that a tenant holds at a fixed rate may arise on facts, as in the case of uniform payment of rent for a number of years; and in cases not coming within the purview of S. 50, the Court is entitled to consider the facts in view of all the circumstances, and determine whether it was a just inference that a particular holding bears a fixed rental. According to the Court of appeal below on the evidence in the case the presumption arose that the status of the plaintiff was that of a tenant holding at rent fixed in perpetuity; and it was for the defendant landlord to rebut that presumption. The question whether a tenant has held at a uniform rate for a number of years is a question of fact, and not of law, and not an inference of law drawn from facts; on such a question the finding of the Court of first appeal is conclusive. The Court of appeal below came to the definite conclusion on evidence in the case, that the origin of the tenancy in question, to which the lands in suit appertained, was unknown; that there was no enhancement of rent for a very long period; that there were other circumstances from which it could reasonably be presumed that the rent of the holding was fixed in perpetuity; and that the defendant had failed to rebut the presumption of fixity of rent arising from payment of rent for a long period at an unvarying rate.

The findings arrived at by the Subordinate Judge in the Court of appeal below were binding on this Court in second appeal. It may be noticed in this connexion that the observations of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 54 I A 178 (1) the question whether the tenancy was permanent or precarious, in the case before the Judicial Committee, seemed to their Lordships to be a legal inference from facts, and was not a question of fact, has no application to the case before us, seeing that the question before the Court was simply whether a presumption could or could not arise from a tenant having held at uniform rate for a very long period and from other circumstances that the tenancy was one of which the rent was fixed. Such a question must be a question of fact; and the decision of the final Court of fact must be taken to be conclusive between parties concerned. See in this connexion 29 C W N 500 (2). The presumption of fact as to fixity of rent was drawn in the case before us, from evidence on record by the Court of appeal below, and that presumption had not been rebutted. In the above view of the main question arising for consideration in this appeal, the decision of the Subordinate Judge in the Court of appeal below, could not be interfered with. The above conclusions arrived at by us dispose of this appeal. It was however raised before us on behalf of the defendant-respondent that two other questions arose for consideration in the case before us, namely :

I. That in view of the provisions contained in S. 26-F (5), Ben. Ten. Act, the plaintiff had no subsisting interest in him, on which the claim in suit in the present case, could be based. The suit was, therefore, not maintainable.

II. That regard being had to the final decision in a proceeding under S. 106, Ben. Ten. Act, the suit was not maintainable, and that the said decision operated as a complete bar to any relief being granted to the plaintiff in the suit.

There is nothing contained in the issues raised for determination in the suit, and in the judgments of the Courts at the previous stages of the litigation, from which it could possibly be said that the points now sought to be raised before us, relating to the maintainability of the suit in which this appeal has arisen, was raised by the defendant at any previous stage of the litigation. We are unable to give effect to any of the contentions raised before us for the first time, and we are not at all satisfied that there is any substance involved in them. In the result, the appeal is allowed. The decision of the learned Judge of this Court, against which this appeal is directed, is set aside; and the decree of the Subordinate Judge in the Court of appeal below, passed on 30th November 1933, in favour of the plaintiff-appellant, is restored. The plaintiff-appellant is entitled to get his costs in the litigation throughout from the defendant-respondent.

1. Dhannammal v. Motisagar, 1927 P O 102=101 I C 355=54 I A 178=8 Lah 573 (P O).

2. Alimuddin Mollah v. K. S. Bannerji, 1925 Cal 632=86 I C 316=29 C W N 500=41 O L J 135.

V.B./R.K. Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 585

COSTELLO AND PANCKRIDGE, JJ.

Siva Mohan Kundu Choudhury and others—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Sm. Bechumoyee Dasi—Plaintiff and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Appeals Nos. 111 and 112 of 1934, Decided on 21st November 1935.

Res judicata—Bar of—Suit by daughter claiming certain property as sole daughter of her father, on ground that he died intestate and without male issues—Father found to have executed will—Decision in previous suit to which executors of will were not made parties does not operate as res judicata—Plaintiff praying for revocation of will on ground that it is forgery—She must take recourse to proceedings under testamentary jurisdiction.

Where a suit is instituted by a daughter, on the death of her mother, claiming certain property as the sole daughter of her father, on the ground that he died intestate and without any male issue, but it is found during the trial of the suit that the father had executed a will of which probate was taken, a decision in a previous suit to which the plaintiff's mother and the defendants were parties, but in which the executors of the will, as representative of the estate of the testator, were not impleaded, does not operate as res judicata, so as to estop the defendants from putting forward the will in defence to the suit. If the plaintiff alleges that the will is a forgery and prays that it should be revoked, she must take recourse to proceedings properly constituted and brought under the testamentary jurisdiction. [P 588 C 1, 2; P 589 C 1]

H. D. Bose, T. Chatterjee and G. P. Kar—for Appellants.

S. M. Bose and B. N. Ghosh—for Respondent (Bechumoyee).

S. N. Banerjee and S. R. Das—for Manabendra and Radhakanta.

B. C. Ghose and A. K. Roy (Jr.)—for Deity Defendants.

S. B. Dutt—for Bharat Chandra.

S. K. Basu—for Jadugopal.

Costello, J.—These appeals are from a judgment dated 17th August 1934, whereby the learned Judge in the Court below made a decree in favour of the plaintiff Srimati Bechumoyee Dasi declaring that she is entitled to a one-twelfth share in certain properties and in the business referred to in Schs. B and C annexed to her plaint and to a one-fourth share in properties and in the business mentioned in Schs. D and E. The decree made by the learned Judge also included an order for partition and all other necessary reliefs in that connexion. The suit was instituted by the plaintiff on 19th August 1931 and by the plaint it was averred that one Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury, who was during his life time and at the time of his death governed by the Bengali School of Hindu Law, died intestate on 12th March 1880 without any male issue but leaving his widow Srimati Manorama Dassi and the plaintiff who is the only daughter of Kissori Mohan and his wife Manorama.

The plaintiff Bechumoyee Dassi claimed that on the death of her mother on 23rd January 1931 she as the sole daughter of Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury became entitled to the whole of his estate. The plaintiff set forth the list of properties which are comprehended in the schedules to which I have already referred. It is to be observed that by the plaint in the suit the plaintiff founded her claim solely upon the basis that her father had died intestate and that after the death of her mother, who inherited a Hindu widow's right in the property of her husband, the plaintiff became entitled to the whole of her father's estate. The statements in the plaint were verified by Ratnamay Srimany who is described as the constituted attorney of the plaintiff. We are informed that he is in fact the son of the plaintiff. The facts as stated in the plaint did not represent the real state of affairs for it was not the fact that Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury had died intestate; on the contrary he had not only made a will but probate of that will had been granted by this Court as long ago as the month of April in the year 1880. By that will broadly speaking, Kissori Mohan gave the bulk of his property to two of his brothers, and made certain provisions for the maintenance of his widow and the maintenance of his daughter, the plaintiff. There were also certain provisions in the will requiring the principal beneficiaries to make provision for certain Debutter dispositions.

In the year 1912 the widow of the testator Manorama Dasi instituted a suit in which she averred that the maintenance provided for her by the terms of her husband's will are insufficient, and she claimed that she was entitled to receive at the hands of her brothers-in-law, as executors and beneficiaries under the will, a larger sum for her maintenance. As an outcome of the proceedings she received, at any rate she was declared to be entitled to a sum of Rs. 235 monthly for her maintenance. The importance of that suit is this: that so far from any question arising as to whether or not Kissori Mohan had left a will, in that suit the will was actually referred to if not in fact relied upon. What we are concerned with however is another suit, a suit which came before the Court at Hooghly. We are concerned with that suit for this reason: In reply to the plaint filed by the plaintiff in the present suit, the defendants put in a written statement in which they stated in para. 3 that:

With reference to para. 1 of the plaint they deny that Kishori Mohan Kundu Choudhury (hereinafter referred to as the testator) died intestate. Prior to his death and on 28th Falgoon 1286 B. S. corresponding with 10th March 1880 the testator made and published his last will in the Bengalee language and character whereby he gave and bequeathed his entire estate absolutely unto his uterine brothers Hiramohan Kundu Choudhury and Nagendra Mohan Kundu Choudhury subject to certain legacies and annuities therein mentioned. The widow of the testator is named in the said will as Ramani Dassi.

Paragraph 4 of the written statement is as follows:

The said will was duly proved and on 7th April 1880 probate thereof was granted to the said Hiramohan Kundu Choudhury and Nagendra Mohan Kundu Choudhury, both since deceased as the executors thereof, by this Hon'ble Court in its testamentary and intestate jurisdiction.

In para. 9 the defendants said:

Until the death of the said Sm. Manorama Dasi, as mentioned in the plaint, the plaintiff all along lived with her in the family dwelling house of the testator at Mohiary in the district of Howrah and she has all along been aware of the existence of the said will and of the provisions made thereunder for her and her heirs and also of the said suit No. 273 of 1912 as well as of the various proceedings had and decrees and orders made therein.

There is therefore a definite allegation that the plaintiff was aware—indeed she must have been aware—of the existence of the will made by her father and the fact that probate of that will had been granted by this Court. It would be superfluous for us to make much comment upon the conduct of the plaintiff and her advisers, in putting on the file of this Court a plaint which obviously must have been drafted with the definite design of suppressing from the knowledge of the Court the fact that Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury had made a will and that that will had been duly admitted to probate. On the facts, as they now appear and so far as the present case is concerned, one need only express astonishment that any one should have been found or procured to verify statements which are manifestly untrue. It is a little difficult to understand how the plaintiff or her advisers could have imagined that upon the plaint as it was originally drafted the plaintiff could possibly succeed in her suit, because the fact that there had been a will and that will had been duly proved was bound to be urged against her either before or at the trial of the suit.

Actually, as I have pointed out, the existence of the will and the fact of the probate was brought to the attention of the Court in the written statement put in by the defendants. Thereafter the plaintiff was permitted to file a pleading that was described as a "written statement on behalf of the plaintiff." That document was verified on 4th May 1934. It is the contents of that pleading which have given rise to such difficulty, as there is in the way of a proper determination of the suit and this appeal. In my opinion what was intended was that the plaintiff should merely have an opportunity of making answer to the defendants' contention in the matter of probate of the will, and though that pleading was called "written statement on behalf of the plaintiff" it was to all intents and purposes what under English procedure would be a "reply" to the defence put in by the defendants. In my view it was never intended by the plaintiff that this pleading should constitute something in the nature of a further statement of claim, or as an amendment of the original claim. In this "written statement" the plaintiff stated that Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury never executed a will. That might have been by way of traversing the defendants' pleading. Then the plaintiff states:

The will set up is a forgery. With full knowledge of the fact that the will was a forgery, probate was obtained from this Hon'ble Court by means of fraud. Probate was never granted to Nagendra Mohan Kundu Choudhury.

It appears that the whole of para. 1 of the written statement was intended to plead in effect that if there was a will it was not genuine and probate of it ought never to have been granted. In para. 2 the plaintiff said :

The plaintiff submits that if necessary the grant of probate may be revoked on the grounds: (a) The will was a forgery ; (b) the grant of probate was obtained by suppressing the fact that it was a forgery and by falsely representing to the Court that it was a genuine document ; (c) the grant has become useless and inoperative by reason of the decree made in suit No. 61 of 1884 as hereinafter mentioned ; (d) the proceedings to obtain probate were defective in substance.

If that paragraph was really intended to be a claim for the revocation of the grant of the probate of the will of Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury, then it seems quite obvious, that it was not a claim which could properly be made in a suit such as the present suit. It is a claim which could only be made in properly constituted testamentary proceedings. But the paragraph which has mainly given rise to the discussions that have taken place not only in the Court below but before this Court is para. 3. In that paragraph the plaintiff said this :

The plaintiff will contend that the proceedings and decree in suit No. 61 of 1884 (in the Court of the second Subordinate Judge at Hooghly, which was a suit for partition of the joint family properties between the co-sharers and in which among others the plaintiff's mother and the defendants or their predecessors-in-interest were parties) declared and/or created the right of Sm. Ramani Dasi alias Sm. Manorama Dasi, as widow of Kishori Mohan Kundu Choudhury as a co-sharer in the estate of Chaitanya Charan Kundu Choudhury and she will contend that by reason thereof the defendants are estopped from setting up the alleged dispositions in the alleged will or denying the title of the plaintiff as the heiress of Kishori Mohan Kundu Choudhury in the joint family properties. In particular she will rely on inter alia the following in support of her contention.

Then she sets out a number of documents which came into existence in connexion with the proceedings in the Court at Hooghly. The appellants say that that paragraph comes to no more than this : that the plaintiff was in effect alleging that the defendants ought not to have been allowed to set up the will of Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury as a defence to the plaintiff's case and that something had occurred in the Court at Hooghly which operated either as an estoppel in the way of the defendants or in the nature of res judicata. The learned Judge devoted the greater part of his somewhat lengthy judgment to a discussion of the effect of that para. 3 of the written statement on behalf of the plaintiff. Mr. S. M. Bose, on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent, has argued before us that the effect of the proceedings before the Court of the second Subordinate Judge, Hooghly, was that there was a declaration not only contained in the admission on the part of the defendant but declaration in the decree which was made by the Court at Hooghly, and to all intents and purposes affirmed on appeal by this Court, that the plaintiff was numbered amongst the co-sharers in the estate of Chaitanya Charan Kundu Choudhury or rather her mother was so numbered together with the brothers of Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury in such a way as to bring it about that in effect the brothers of Kissori Mohan were renouncing or abandoning their position as beneficiaries under the will, and were restoring the family properties to the position they would have taken had there been no will at all. Mr. Bose referred first of all to a written statement which was filed in the Hooghly suit on behalf of Gurudas Kundu Choudhury one of the defendants. In that written statement he said:

The plaintiff has actually no cause of action for this suit against this defendant, nor has he disclosed in the plaint any sufficient cause thereof. The plaintiff and the defendant cannot be reckoned as members of an undivided Hindu family. The 6 anna co-sharers, namely the plaintiff and his brother Kedar Nath and his deceased (step) brother Annada Prasad's sons are members of a Hindu family separate from that to which the 10 anna co-sharers, namely these defendants and defendants 4, 5, 6, 8 and 9 belong. The co-sharers of the 10 annas and 6 annas estate have some joint moveable and immoveable properties and Karbar but the plaintiff has not mentioned anything in his plaint which goes to show that these defendants have done anything affecting the plaintiff's interest therein, nor is there any reason for their so doing; and the plaintiff has not in his plaint stated anything against these defendants except an unfounded allegation of their collusion with his brother Kedar Nath.

It should be explained at this point that the suit in the Hooghly Court was brought by a representative of one of the branches of the family which descended from Ram Kanta Kundu Choudhury. He was the descendant of a man named Gour

Mohun Kundu Choudhury who was a brother of Chaitanya Charan Kundu Choudhury. He claimed that his branch was entitled to a six anna-share in the joint family property while the representatives of Chaitanya Charan were entitled to a ten anna share. The importance of the written statement which I have just read is (according to Mr. Bose) that it includes in the group of ten anna sharers "defendant 5" in the Hooghly suit and she was the mother of the present plaintiff. Mr. Bose, therefore, says that there was an admission by that written statement that the plaintiff's mother was entitled as a co-sharer to claim with the brothers of her husband Kessori Mohan Kundu, to the extent of such interest as she would get as a Hindu widow. Mr. Bose then referred us to the decree which was ultimately made in the Hooghly suit. That decree is dated 12th February 1889 and contained this statement:

The defendants 2 to 9 who are co-sharers to the extent of 10 annas obtained possession of the said (property) and of Kheraj and Lakharaj properties mentioned in Sch. Ga, below which on division have been allotted to them by the Commissioners.

The Hooghly suit as already stated, ultimately came on appeal to this Court and the decree of this Court was dated 25th April 1892. It must be borne in mind, however, that the widow Ramani Dasi herself also put in a written statement in the Hooghly proceedings and in that written statement she said:

I, Srimati Ramani Dasi, state that at the time of his death my husband made a will whereby he appointed his brother Hira Mohun Kundu Choudhury defendant 3 as the executor and the said defendant having as such taken probate of the will has been managing and looking after all the properties left by my husband. Under such circumstances it is unjust to make me a defendant in this suit. Whatever written statement is necessary to be filed in this suit has been filed by the said defendant 3 and I admit that written statement to be true and the said written statement may be treated as if filed on my behalf.

It seems clear, therefore, that so far as Ramani Dasi was concerned, she, in the Hooghly suit, was repudiating the suggestion (so far as any such suggestion had been made) that she was entitled to any part of the estate of Chaitanya Charan Kundu, other than such interest as she acquired by reason of her husband's will which had been duly proved by one of her co-defendants in the suit. In my opinion the admission (if it can properly be called an admission) which appears in the written statement, which I have read, of one of the defendants in the Hooghly suit, and the statement in the decree of the Hooghly Court regarding the ten anna co-sharers ought to be taken for our present purpose, as indicating nothing more than that on the one side of the family there was an aggregation of persons who constituted ten anna co-sharers and on the other side there was an aggregation of persons who constituted six anna co-sharers and defendant 5 the mother of the present plaintiff was numbered in the group which constituted the ten anna co-sharers. Therefore, in my opinion it is impossible successfully to contend that the effect of the decree in the Hooghly suit was to obliterate the will and the probate of the year 1880.

But there is another aspect of the case which puts the matter beyond all question in my judgment and it is this that in the proceedings in the Hooghly Court the executors under the will of Kishori Mohan Kundu Choudhury were not parties, and they were not brought into the suit at all. It is true that one individual who was in fact an executor under the will was there, but he was so far as the plaintiff in that suit was concerned, not there qua executor under the will but solely in his personal capacity as one of the group of ten anna co-sharers. The fact that when he put in his written statement he referred to himself as an executor, makes no difference whatever, in my opinion because he was not in fact sued as an executor. Therefore the question of the validity and the operative effect of the will of Kishori Mohan Kundu was never under discussion or at issue, in any sense whatever in the Hooghly Court. In the circumstances it is impossible for us to hold that the effect of the proceedings and the decree in suit No. 61 of 1884 in the Court of the 2nd Subordinate Judge at Hooghly was to confer upon the plaintiff any rights in respect of her father's property other than those she already possessed by virtue of her father's will. The learned Judge seems to have taken the view that because Ramani Dasi (otherwise called Manorama Dasi) the mother of the plaintiff, was a party to the Hooghly proceedings therefore what transpired as the outcome of those proceedings, has precluded the defendants from relying upon the will as a defence to the plaintiff's claim in the present suit. In my opinion it is by no means certain that it can rightfully be argued that anything which Ramani Dasi did or did not do in those proceedings could be effective in favour of the present plaintiff as against the present defendants and I doubt very much whether this case can really be said to be a case where these proceedings in the law can be taken to be proceedings as between the same parties as those in the present proceedings. In that view of the matter it would be of course impossible to hold that any case of res judicata can arise. It is, however, sufficient for the purpose of disposing of this appeal to say, as I have already said, that the executors of the will were not represented in those proceedings, and therefore nothing was done which could interfere with the full legal effect of the provisions contained in the will of Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury.

Once we have arrived at the position that the proceedings in the Hooghly Court have no effect upon the validity and operative force of the will of Kissori Mohan Kundu Choudhury it automatically follows that the plaintiff cannot possibly succeed in this suit. If by the written statement on behalf of the plaintiff the plaintiff intended to set up a substantive case, that the will of her father made and proved some fifty or more years ago, was a forgery, or that the probate which was granted ought to be revoked, the short answer is that she can only do this in proceedings properly constituted and brought under the testamentary jurisdiction of this Court. The learned Judge seems to have fully recognised that that is the position in law and he set it out in his judgment. At the bottom of p. 42 of the paper book we find that the learned Judge said :

Various issues were raised, but only two points were argued, namely whether in this suit the plaintiff could challenge the will as a forgery, and what was the effect of the decision in suit No. 61 of 1884.

Then he says:

On the first point the decision in 43 I A 91 (1) at p. 97 in my opinion concludes the matter. It may be argued for the plaintiff that the rule in England depended on the existence of separate Courts with separate jurisdiction, but the Judicial Committee in the case cited laid down the rule for the Courts in India, and where probate has been granted, it is only a Court with probate jurisdiction sitting as such that can recall that probate on the ground that the will was forged. However if necessary this suit could be adjourned until the decision of a Court of probate was obtained.

Then the learned Judge proceeded to deal with the effect of the suit of 1884. Holding, as I do, that the proceedings in suit No. 61 of 1884 were not so constituted that they can have any effect whatever on the will of 1880 it follows that this appeal must be allowed and the plaintiff's suit dismissed. We think that the unsuccessful plaintiff must pay the costs to the representatives of Hira Mohan and the representatives of Nagendra Mohan and the costs of the Thakur both of the trial Court and this Court. The Thakur is entitled to retain its costs out of the Debutter estate in any event. The cross-objections are dismissed without costs. The receiver will be discharged.

Panckridge, J.—I agree. In my opinion if we were constrained to dismiss this appeal the result would be a manifest injustice. The learned Judge properly held that it was not competent for the plaintiff in these proceedings to challenge the validity of the will or the grant of probate. It follows that the only arguments upon which the plaintiff was entitled to rely are those based on para. 3 of the additional written statement. Before the learned Judge it appears that the only aspect of the paragraph which was dealt with by the plaintiff was that which concerned with the question of res judicata. Before us, however, learned counsel for the plaintiff sought to base a contention upon the paragraph to the effect that the decree of the Hooghly Court had operated to transfer the estate of the testator from the executors to the ten anna co-sharers, or, in other words, to confer upon the testator's widow a Hindu widow's estate in the testator's undivided share.

It appears to me to be a sufficient answer to this submission to say that the testator's estate was not represented in the proceedings and therefore the decree could not affect it. The plaint in the Hooghly suit makes no mention of the testator or his will or of the fact that the defendant Hira Mohan Kundu was the executor named in the will and had obtained probate of it. The testator's widow, so far from claiming to be interested as on an intestacy, expressly disclaimed such interest, and relied upon the will. The only fact upon which the plaintiff relies as indicating that the testator's estate was before the Court is that in the written statement of defendants 3, 5 and 7, defendant 3 Hira Mohan purports to file it "for self and as executor to the estate of Kishori Mohan Kundu Choudhury, deceased." In my opinion this fact makes no difference to the position. It cannot be suggested that the plaintiff by his plaint had made the representatives of Kishori Mohan's estate parties to the suit in their representative capacity. I consider that to make them parties at a subsequent stage, a formal application was required and such formal application was never made. In these circumstances it appears to me unnecessary to deal with the application of the plaintiff's counsel for leave to amend the additional written statement or the plaint in such a way as to put forward a claim to the testator's estate based upon the suggested transfer effected by the decree of the Hooghly Court.

1. Sheoparson Singh v. Ramnandan Singh, 1916 P O 78=33 I C 914=43 I A 91=43 Cal 694 (P O).

In my opinion, it would be useless to allow such an amendment, because in any event the plaintiff's claim, if founded upon the suggestion of such a transfer, is bound to fail. The same considerations seem to me to be applicable to the question of res judicata. If the representatives of Kishori's estate were not, as such, parties to the proceedings in the Hooghly Court, no decree or decision of that Court can operate as res judicata against them. Accordingly, I am of opinion that the will of Kishori stands and that nothing took place in the Hooghly Court which had the effect of transferring his estate from the executors or from those claiming under the will to the 10 anna co-sharers as a body or to the testator's widow in her capacity of a Hindu widow. I therefore concur in the order that the appeal should be allowed and the suit dismissed. The defendants are entitled to their costs here and in the trial Court.

R.M./R.K.

*Appeal allowed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 590

R. C. MITTER, J.

(Dewan) Emdad Ali—Decree holder—Appellant.

v.

Haran Sheikh—Objector and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 88 of 1935, Decided on 15th June 1936, from appellate order of Sub-Judge, Pabna, D/- 27th August 1934.

(a) Practice—Inconsistent pleas not to be raised in course of same litigation.

A litigant shall not be allowed to take inconsistent and diametrically opposite positions in the course of same litigation. [P 592 C 1]

(b) Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 52—Doctrine of lis pendens includes sales in invitum.

Section 52 embodies the principle of lis pendens which is wide enough to include sales in invitum. [P 592 C 1]

(c) Practice — Remand — No appeal filed from order of remand—Party aggrieved cannot challenge it.

An order of remand, although an irregular one if not appealed against, is final and cannot be challenged later on by the aggrieved party: 1935 Cal 134, Rel. on. [P 592 C 1, 2]

(d) Execution sale—Mortgage of, or charge on, property to be sold—Mortgagee's objection under O. 21, R. 59, Civil P. C., in execution sale upheld—Fact of mortgage must be inserted in sale proclamation—Order under O. 21, R. 62, Civil P. C., not set aside by proper suit—Order remains final—In such case purchaser cannot challenge mortgage—Other ways of notifying mortgage or charge—Effect of notification in case of mortgage and charge.

A mortgage or charge can be brought to the notice of intending purchasers at Court sales in two ways: firstly if a claim preferred under O. 21, R. 59 by the mortgagee succeeds the fact of the mortgage must be inserted in the sale proclamation. In that case the order passed under O. 21, R. 62, if not set aside by a suit instituted under the provisions of O. 21, R. 63, would stand as a final order and would preclude the purchasers at the Court sale from challenging the mortgage. A mortgage or charge, however, can also be notified in the sale proclamation settled under the provisions of O. 21, R. 66 or otherwise at the time of the sale. Where a mortgage or charge is notified at the sale, but not as a result of an order made by the Court under O. 21, R. 62, the notification has no greater or less effect in law than that of notice. The purchaser at the Court sale in that case only takes with notice of the mortgage or charge. In the case of a mortgage such notification does not carry the matter further, for a mortgage is binding on the purchaser of the equity of redemption whether he has notice of it or not. But in the case of a charge its notification has a value: 28 All 418 and 1920 Cal 354, Rel. on.

[P 592 C 2; P 593 C 1]

(e) Mortgage—Decree on mortgage obtained collusively—Other person obtaining decree against mortgagor and attaching mortgaged property—Mortgage decree is nullity—Such other person is not affected by mortgage decree and cannot be regarded as representative of mortgagor.

Decree obtained by a person in collusion with defendant in a mortgage suit is not a decree of Court at all in the eye of the law, and a person who purchases a mortgaged property in execution of his decree against a mortgagor is not affected by the mortgage decree and cannot be held to be a representative of the mortgagor: 24 Cal 62 (FB) and Bandon v. Beecher (1835) 3 Cl & F 479, Rel. on. [P 592 C 2]

Sura Chandra Lahiri and Ganga Prasad—for Appellant.

Krishna Kamal Maitra—for Respondents

Judgment.—The facts of the case are as follows: One Najimuddin and two other persons owed a considerable amount of money to the respondent Haran Sheikh, who brought his suit to recover the same on 27th April 1931 and recovered a decree on 16th January 1932. In execution of his decree he purchased on 20th June 1932 half-share of the property which is the subject-matter of this appeal. Shortly after Najimuddin had incurred his liabilities to Haran Sheikh, he executed in favour of the appellant, Dewan Emdad Ali, a mortgage bond on 12th Assin 1336, corresponding to a date in September 1929. The mortgage is an unusual one because it not only included all his immoveable properties but also all his moveables including his cooking vessels and all his earthly possessions. This mortgage followed a hibabil-ewaz which he had executed in favour of his wife in lieu of alleged dower which included also all his immoveable properties and all his moveables. This hibabil-ewaz was undoubtedly a fictitious transaction and has been found to be so by the lower Court, but it has no direct bearing upon the question raised before me. Shortly after the aforesaid mortgage Dewan Emdad Ali brought a suit to enforce it.

He got a preliminary decree on 25th February 1932, and a final decree on 20th April 1932. Shortly after obtaining his decree Haran Sheikh applied for execution. In one execution (Money Execution 88 of 1932) he prayed for sale of moveables and in another execution (Money Execution 20 of 1932) he prayed for sale of immoveable properties. Dewan Emdad Ali made two applications to the Executing Court in the two execution cases, one relating to the moveables and another to the immoveables. I am only concerned with his application in respect of the immoveable properties against which Haran Sheikh wanted to proceed. It is not an application under O. 21, R. 59 of the Code. He simply asked his mortgage decree to be notified at the time when the immoveable properties attached by Haran Sheikh would be sold. On that application the Court passed the following order on 2nd May 1932:

One Dewan Emdad Ali puts in a petition that the property mentioned in lot No. 2 of the execution petition, which has been advertised for sale is mortgaged to him and the mortgage suit has been decreed in the local 2nd Munsif's Court. It is ordered that the mortgage to be noted upon (?) at the time of sale, as the sale proclamation has already been issued.

At the time of the sale Dewan Emdad Ali's mortgage was notified, and at the sale the decree-holder Haran Sheikh purchased the same, as I have stated above, on 20th June 1932. Dewan Emdad Ali put his mortgage decree in execution and purchased the mortgage properties (16 annas of the property now in dispute was one of them) on 25th February 1933. He applied for possession and was resisted by Haran Sheikh and the proceedings out of which this appeal arises were started by Dewan Emdad Ali, he applying to the executing Court to be put in possession of the entire property. Haran Sheikh resists his claim to a half-share therein, the share which he purchased in execution of his decree.

The learned Munsif by his order dated 19th June 1933 held that as Haran was not a party to the mortgage suit and was in possession, Dewan Emdad Ali could not go upon the property without calling upon Haran Sheikh to pay up the mortgage dues, and Haran Sheikh could not be turned out of the property without an opportunity being given to him to redeem. He accordingly dismissed the application of Dewan Emdad Ali to be put in possession. There was an appeal against this order by Dewan Emdad Ali. The learned Subordinate Judge heard the said appeal on 26th October 1933. Before him Dewan Emdad Ali contended that Haran's purchase was affected by the doctrine of lis pendens, as he purchased after the institution of the mortgage suit, in fact after the mortgage decree. He urged accordingly that the Munsif was wrong in holding that Haran Sheikh was not bound by his mortgage decree and had still in him the right of redemption. The learned Subordinate Judge held that the doctrine of lis pendens was applicable and remanded the case by his order dated 26th October 1933 for a finding as to whether the mortgage suit of Dewan Emdad Ali was a collusive suit or not. After remand the learned Munsif held that the said suit was not a collusive one, but the learned Subordinate Judge on further appeal has held otherwise.

It is surprising to hear now the learned advocate of Dewan Emdad Ali saying that the order of remand made by the learned Subordinate Judge on 20th October 1933 was a wrong one, as the learned Subordinate Judge ought to have held that S. 52, T. P. Act, was not applicable. At that stage the pleader of Dewan Emdad Ali had urged before the learned Subordinate Judge that the principle underlying S. 52 was applicable, convinced the Subordinate Judge that it was applicable and got a remand. I think that this is the case in which the salutary principle that a litigant shall not be allowed to take inconsistent and diametrically opposite positions in the course of the same litigation ought to be applied. It is on this principle that the appeal ought to be dismissed, the findings that the mortgage of Dewan Emdad Ali was a fictitious one and his suit to enforce it a collusive one being good findings based on evidence and binding on me in second appeal. Mr. Lahiri in support of his appeal formulated four points, namely : (i) S. 52, T. P. Act, does not apply to Court sales ; (ii) that the execution Court was precluded from entering into the question as to whether the mortgage decree was collusive or not ; (iii) Haran having expressly purchased subject to his client's mortgage cannot challenge the same or the mortgage-decree ; (iv) Haran being the representative of the judgment-debtor, Najimuddin, the Court was bound to deliver possession to his clients.

Regarding the first point, no doubt S. 52, T. P. Act, does not in terms apply, as Haran Sheikh purchased at a Court sale. But S. 52 embodies the principle of lis pendens which is wide enough to include sales in invitum. That is what the Subordinate Judge in substance held, and held at the instance of Dewan Emdad's pleader, when he said that S. 52, T. P. Act, was applicable. He used the expression that S. 52 T. P. Act, was applicable only as a convenient expression. I have already held that the learned advocate for the appellant cannot be allowed to raise now the questions involved in the first two points. I am further of opinion that the order of the learned Subordinate Judge, dated 26th October 1933, is not now open to challenge. It was an order of remand though an irregular one. The trend of authorities, with the exception of the decision of Page and Graham, JJ., is that such an order is an appealable one : 38 C W N 1202 (1) at p. 1203. S. 105 (2) of the Code accordingly now precludes the appellant from challenging the order of remand and from urging the first two points.

The fourth point urged before me falls to the ground with the first and second points. Haran Sheikh would be a representative of Najimuddin if he was affected by the mortgage decree obtained by Dewan Emdad Ali against the latter. This is the principle formulated by the Full Bench in 24 Cal 62 (2). But the mortgage decree affects him if the doctrine of lis pendens applies. I have already held that the mortgage decree does not affect him as it was obtained in a collusive suit. On the principle formulated by Lord Brougham in the well-known case in 3 Cl & F 479 (3) the decree obtained by Dewan Emdad Ali in the mortgage suit is not a decree of Court at all in the eye of the law. I accordingly overrule the fourth point also.

Regarding the third point : in my judgment a fundamental distinction must be kept in view. A mortgage or charge can be brought to the notice of intending purchasers at Court sales in two ways. Firstly if a claim preferred under O. 21, R. 59 by the mortgagee succeeds, the fact of the mortgage must be inserted in the sale proclamation. In that case the order passed under O. 21, R. 62, if not set aside by a suit instituted under the provisions of O. 21, R. 63, would stand as a final order and would preclude the purchaser at the Court sale from challenging the mortgage. A mortgage or charge however can also be notified in the sale proclamation settled under the provisions of O. 21, R. 66, or otherwise, as in this case at the time of the sale. In my judgment where a mortgage or charge is notified at the sale but not as a result of an order made by the Court under O. 21, R. 62, the notification has no greater or less effect in law than that of notice. The purchaser at the Court sale in that case only takes with notice of the mortgage or charge. In the case of a mortgage such notification does not carry the matter further, for a mortgage is binding on the purchaser of the equity of redemption whether he has notice of it or not.

1. Mahommed Ali v. Karam Ali, 1935 Cal 134=155 I O 506=38 C W N 1202.
2. Ishan Chandra v. Benimadhab, (1897) 24 Cal 62=1 C W N 36 (F B).
3. Bandon v. Beecher, (1835) 3 Cl & F 479=9 Blight (N S) 532=6 E R 1517.

But in the case of a charge its notification has a value. In the case before me there were no claim proceedings at the instance of Dewan Emdad Ali. After the proclamation had been published he made an application to the Court and the Court said that notice of his mortgage was to be given at the time of the sale. Haran purchased at the sale and is only affected by the consequences of notice. He has not been put to any further disadvantage and he is not precluded from challenging the mortgage or the mortgage decree, if he is not otherwise precluded on other grounds. The view I am taking is supported by the decisions in 28 All 418 (4) and 47 Cal 446 (5). I accordingly overrule all the points urged before me and dismiss the appeal with costs.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

4. Shib Kunwar v. Sheo Prosad, (1906) 28 All 418=1906 A W N 63=3 A L J 200.

5. Kalidas v. Prasanna, 1920 Cal 354=55 I C 189=47 Cal 446.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 593

MUKERJI AND S. K. GHOSE, JJ.

Debendra Narain Roy — Plaintiff — Appellant.

v.

Jogendra Narain Deb and others — Respondents.

Appeals Nos. 171 and 205 of 1933, Decided on 17th March 1936, from original decrees of Sub-Judge, First Court, 24-Parganas, D/- 24th April 1933.

(a) Assam Bijni Succession Act (2 of 1931), S. 4, sub-ss. (1) and (2) — Declarations contained in sub-ss. (1) and (2) are 'law'.

The declarations contained in sub-ss. (1) and (2) of S. 4 are 'law'. They are such declarations as a local legislature of a province, otherwise competent, is empowered to enact. The Bijni Succession Act is intra vires the Assam Legislature. [P 601 C 2; P 609 C 2]

(b) Government of India Act (1919) S. 65 (1) (e)—Laws may relate to particular individuals.

Section 65 (1) (e) cannot be construed to mean that the laws are to be general law for all purposes for all Courts and for all places and things. The laws may relate to particular individuals and need not be general legislation of provincial concern. [P 602 C 1]

(c) Government of India Act (1919), S. 80-A (1)—'Law' contemplated by S. 80-A (1) are laws of all kinds, general or particular.

'Laws' contemplated by S. 80-A (1) are laws of all kinds, not only laws in general or in the abstract, but rules of law in concrete cases as well : Ashbury v. Ellis, (1893) A C 239, Ref.

[P 602 C 1]

(d) Government of India Act (1919), S. 80 (3) — Interpretation of—Local legislature considering law relating to central subject, may do so with previous sanction of Governor-General.

Sub-s. (3) of S. 80-A should be interpreted as meaning that the local legislature of a province, if it makes or takes into consideration any law regulating a central subject, it may do so with the previous sanction of the Governor-General. The expression 'subject to the provisions of this Act' should be understood in this sense. [P 606 C 2]

(e) Government of India Act (1919), S. 80-A (1) (3) Cl. (e) — Word 'regulate' in Cl. (e) does not mean 'adjust' but means 'enact'.

The word 'regulate' in Cl. (e) of S. 80-A (1) (3) does not mean 'adjust' but means, to control by legislation, to subject to guidance by creating a law : 1916 Cal 136, Disting. [P 607 C 1,2]

(f) Interpretation of Statutes — History — Language should be examined to find out its natural meaning, uninfluenced by previous state of law—History of enactment should not be inquired into unless enactment is ambiguous.

In interpreting a statute the proper course in the first instance is to examine the language of the statute and to ask what is its natural meaning uninfluenced by the considerations derived from the previous state of the law and not to start by inquiring how the law previously stood, and then, assuming that it was probably intended to have it unaltered, to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view. It is useless to enter into an enquiry with regard to the history of an enactment and any supposed defect in the former legislation on the subject which it was intended to cure, in cases where the words of the enactment are clear. It is only material to enter into such an enquiry where the words of an enactment are ambiguous and capable of two meanings in order to determine which of the two meanings was intended. It is not necessary to go into the history of the words unless the words are doubtful and require historical investigation to explain them. If the words are really and fairly doubtful then according to well known legal principles and principles of common sense, historical investigation may be used for the purpose of clearing away the doubt which the phraseology of the statute creates : Bank of England v. Valiagno, (1891) A C 144 ; Reg. v. Bishop of London, (1889) 24 Q B D 213 and Reg. v. Most, (1881) 7 Q B D 244, Foll.

[P 608 C 1,2]

(g) Government of India Act (1919), S. 80-A — Sub-sections of S. 80-A are not to be read as mutually exclusive.

The several sub-sections of S. 80-A are not to be read as mutually exclusive, but the first is controlled by the other three, and, the second controls the first, and, is in its turn controlled by the third ; the third controls both the first and the second, and the fourth controls all the others.

[P 609 C 1]

(h) Government of India Act (1919), S. 80-A (3)—Schedule of classification, part 2, item 51 — Central subject may be legislated upon under S. 80-A (3) — Item 51 is not the only way in which provincial legislature can deal with central subject.

A declaration contemplated in Item 51 of Part 2 of the schedule of classification is not the only way in which a provincial legislature is enabled to deal with a central subject. A central subject may be legislated upon under S. 80-A (3), Government of India Act. These two again are not the only ways in which a central subject may be handled by a provincial legislature. [P 609 C 2]

(i) Assam Bijni Succession Act (2 of 1931), S. 1 — Act is public Act — It determines right of individuals not merely inter se but as governing their relations with others.

The Bijni Succession Act, even though it may be regarded as local and personal in some of its aspects is nonetheless a public Act. [P 611 C 1]

Merely because an Act is a local or personal Act, as being confined to certain local limits and as affecting the status of a particular description of persons only, it does not cease to be a public Act if it is the product of the legislature in its legislative capacity and is not the result of a procedure in which the legislature is called to enact a law embodying a conclusion arrived at by it judicially or upon the basis of a contract as between rival parties for whose benefit the law is intended. If from the general tenor of the Act it appears that it purports to determine the status of individuals not merely inter se but as governing their relations with others, the Act can hardly be regarded as private Act. The importance of the question whether the Act is a public Act or private Act consists only in this: that if it is the latter then, though there be no saving clause, the rights of third parties will not be regarded as affected by necessary implication: Dawson v. Paver, (1844) 67 E R 974, R. v. London County Council, (1893) 2 Q B 454, Ref.

[P 611 C 1; P 612 C 1, 2]

(j) Assam Bijni Succession Act (2 of 1931), S. 4 (1)—Words "with title dating back" etc. in S. 4 (1) cannot be treated as mere recital and not as part of enactment.

The words "with title dating back", etc., cannot be taken apart from the rest of the passage and treated as a mere recital and not as a part of the enactment. [P 615 C 2]

(k) Interpretation of Statutes—Declaratory statute—Declaratory statute is generally retrospective in effect—Language of Act plain as to which portion is retrospective and which prospective — It is not necessary to rely on any presumption.

Declaratory statutes are generally retrospective in their effect. Where, however, the language of the Act itself in that respect is plain and non-ambiguous, as to which of its provisions are retrospective and which prospective, it is not necessary to rely on any presumption as to the intent relating to its operation, to be inferred from the character of the Act being declaratory or otherwise: English case law referred. [P 615 C 2; P 616 C 2]

(l) Interpretation of Statutes — Retrospective effect — Retrospectivity is never presumed — It should be expressly or by necessary implication declared to be so.

Retrospectivity is never presumed in interpreting a statute, and a law is regarded as retrospective only when it is so by express enactment or it is a necessary implication by the language employed by the legislature, the presumption always being against the taking away of vested rights: English case law referred.

[P 616 C 2]

(m) Precedent—Authority of—Applicability of decision to different statute — Authority is of little value.

The authority of a decision, whether it is to apply or not to apply to a different statute, is of little value: In re New Callas, (1882) 22 Ch D 484, Ref.

[P 617 C 2]

(n) Interpretation of Statutes — Retrospective effect—Law altered during pendency of action — Rights of parties are to be governed by law as it existed when action was begun unless new statute expressly varies such rights — Absence of provision as to costs or compensation is not material—Court has wide discretion in the matter.

Where the law is altered during the pendency of an action, the rights of parties are to be decided according to the law as it existed when the action was begun unless the new statute shows a clear intention to vary such rights. The rule which is one of construction will only yield to a sufficiently expressed intention of the legislature that the enactment should have a retrospective operation.

[P 618 C 1]

If the provision of an enactment purporting to have retrospective action is in itself clear, unambiguous and compelling in its meaning, the absence of a power of a provision as to costs or compensation is not quite material. The Civil Procedure Code makes a provision which leaves the Court a wide discretion in the matter of costs: Case law referred. [P 618 C 2]

(o) Interpretation of Statutes—Objects and Reasons—Proceedings of Legislatures including Statements of Objects and Reasons should be excluded from consideration.

In interpreting a statute, proceedings of the legislature in passing an Act, including statements of objects and reasons, and the debates of the legislature, must be excluded from consideration. Nor are the Courts at liberty to construe an Act by any reference to the Bill in its original form: 22 Cal 788 (P C); 1920 P C 56; Herron v. Rathmines and Raghgar Improvement Commissioners, (1892) A C 498 and Q. v. Capel, 12 Ad. & E. 381, Rel. on.

[P 619 C 1, 2]

(p) Interpretation of Statutes—Section—Interpretation of—Court should take whole Act into consideration — Construction not fitting with rest of Act should be rejected—Court cannot, however, alter the meaning of what is clear.

Court interpreting a particular section of an Act must take the whole of the Act into consideration, and if any construction of the section does not fit in with the rest of the Act, it must reject it and look for some other construction which would apply to all parts of the Act equally well. But in doing so the Court is not free to alter the meaning of what is of itself clear and explicit : Bentley v. Rotherham and Kimbarworth Local Board of Health, (1876), 4 Ch D 588; Palmer's Case, (1784) 1 Leach C. C. (Ed. 4) 355 and Warburton v. Loveland, (1831) 2 D & Cl 480, Rel. on. [P 619 C 2]

(q) Interpretation of Statutes—Intention—Words of Act precise and unambiguous—Nothing more is necessary than to expound them in their natural and ordinary sense—Doubt arising from terms employed—Recourse can be had to cause of statute and to preamble in gathering intention and comparison of one part with other—Preamble can be referred to ascertain general scope of Act—Full title of Act can be used for ascertaining scope of Act—Short title should be disregarded.

An Act should be construed according to the intent of the legislature which passed it. If the words of the statute are in themselves precise and unambiguous, then nothing more is necessary than to expound the words in their natural and ordinary sense. The words themselves alone, in such cases, declare the intention of the legislature. But if any doubt arises from the terms employed by the legislature, it is a safe means of collecting intention, to call in aid the ground and cause of making the statute and to have recourse to the preamble and to compare one part of the Act with another. It is not safe to make out the intention of the statute from some other sources of information and then to construe the words of the statute in order to meet the assumed intention. [P 620 C 1, 2]

The preamble may always be referred to for the purpose of ascertaining generally the scope of the Act where the enacting words are ambiguous. The enacting words are not always to be limited by the words of the preamble and must in many instances go beyond it, and where they do so they cannot be cut down by reference to it. The preamble however does not extend the provisions of the Act beyond what the enacting part of the Act contains. While it is legitimate to use the full title of the Act to throw light upon its progress and scope, it is not legitimate to give any weight in this respect to the short title which is chosen merely for convenience, its object being identification and not description. The full title must not be neglected and it may be some guide to the meaning. [P 621 C 2 ; P 622 C 1, 2]

(r) Assam Bijni Succession Act (2 of 1931), S. 4 (1) and (2)—Act is confined to succession to the Raj—Any title otherwise than on basis of succession is outside scope of the Act—Claim solely based on alleged right of succession to Raj is barred but not claim based on alleged title acquired by adverse possession.

The Bijni Succession Act, 1931, is confined to the succession to the Raj and any title otherwise than on the basis of succession, which anybody may have to the properties of the Raj or any portion thereof, is clearly outside the scope and purview of the enactment. The only title that sub-ss. (1) and (2) of S. 4 purport to declare, and the only title which S. 8 speaks of, is title as holder of the Raj on the basis of succession either by nomination or by appointment and no title based on any other ground. [P 623 C 2]

A claim solely based on an alleged right of succession to the Raj is therefore hit by sub-ss. (1) and (2) of S. 4 and is barred, but a claim based upon an alleged title acquired by adverse possession, even though that claim is in respect of the properties which constitute the Bijni Raj, as defined in the Act, but does not concern any question of status as the holder of the Raj or any question of succession, is not barred by the Act. [P 623 C 2]

The title declared by the Act is the title to succession based upon the nomination as made on 28th September 1895, and has nothing to do with any title based on adverse possession and the declaration contained in S. 4 does not affect such title. [P 624 C 1]

(s) Assam Bijni Succession Act (2 of 1931), S. 9—S. 9 is prospective.

The enactment contained in S. 9 is expressly prospective in its language. [P 624 C 1]

(t) Assam Bijni Succession Act (2 of 1931), S. 4 (1) and (2)—Act operates even outside limits of province of Assam.

The Bijni Succession Act applies to the status of the holder of the Raj wherever the properties appertaining to the Raj may be situate. It was intended by the Assam Legislature that the Act should operate even outside the limits of the province of Assam and was within its authority in legislating on that footing. The scheme of an Act may be such as to affect the properties outside the territorial limits of jurisdiction of a particular legislature. This generally happens when the legislation is intended to act through a person who is within its jurisdiction. [P 624 C 2 ; P 625 C 1]

(u) Appeal—Parties—Person impleaded as defendant to suit and party to decree dismissing suit—He has right to show even as respondent in appeal, that decree was wrongly passed.

A person who is impleaded as a defendant to a suit and is a party to a decree dismissing the suit that has been passed in the suit, has the right to show even as a respondent in the appeal from the decree, that the decree was wrongly passed even though the effect of setting aside the decree would be to re-open the suit as against him. The Court has wide powers to add a party to a suit or an appeal. [P 626 C 1]

(v) Assam Bijni Succession Act (2 of 1931)—Scope—Act merely declares rule of succession and contains no provision forfeiting or confiscating property of any person.

The legislature in passing the Bijni Succession Act has passed no provision forfeiting or confiscating the property of any person. It has merely declared a rule of succession which according to it is the customary law and has only supplemented that law where in its view, it needed supplementing. [P 626 C 2]

P. R. Das, S. K. Gupta, Bijan Kumar Mukherjee, Rabindra Narayan Roy (in No. 171); Gunada Charan Sen, Jitendra Mohan Banerjee and Prandhan De (in No. 205)—for Appellant.

A. K. Roy, S. C. Bose, S. C. Basak, Prakash Chandra Pakrashi, Phani Bhushan Chakravarti, Rabindra Nath Chowdhury, Holiram Deka, Shyamapada Majumdar, Tarapada Mukherjee, J. N. Sen, Indu Prakash Chatterjee, Jitendra Mohan Banerjee, Biswanath Naskar, Rabinindra Narayan Roy and Prandhan De—for Respondents.

Judgment.—These two appeals have arisen out of two suits which were instituted by the respective plaintiffs for recovery of possession of properties which, even apart from the entity which they collectively form under a recent enactment, have for a long series of years been popularly known as constituting the Bijni Raj. The properties, with the exception of a few solitary items which are comparatively recent acquisitions, lie in the Province of Assam and are extensive and valuable, covering an area of 1200 sq. miles and yielding a gross annual income of over 5 lacs of rupees. The Rajas of Bijni belong to a very ancient house which may be traced as far back as the fifteenth or sixteenth century. The Maharaja of Cooch Bihar in Bengal still represents the main line of this dynasty, and the Rajas of Darrang, Sidli and Bijni also belong to the same stock. History traces the House to an aboriginal tribe of Kochos or Rajbansis who rose to power and who on the dismemberment of the ancient Hindu kingdom of Kamrup with its capital at Gauhati by repeated Mahomedan invasions, founded a kingdom which was at one time co-extensive with it. (See Hunter's Imperial Gazetteer of India, Vol. 1, p. 240.) With successive changes of status, the Bijni Raj, which possibly was a paramount power at its inception, became a feudatory State, at first under the Mahomedans, then under the Ahoms, again under the Mahomedans and later on under the Rajas of Bhutan; and after the Bhutan war of 1864 it came to be regarded as a hereditary zemindari. The members of the Raj family call themselves Shivabansis and although it has been a matter of controversy between the parties in the present cases as to whether or not they are governed by the Hindu Law, it is not disputed that in the matter of succession they are governed, as well, by a customary law and certain Kulachar or family customs and usages.

The history of the Raj, with which we are concerned for the purposes of these appeals, opens with the death of the last male holder of the Raj, Raja Kumud Narain. The Raja died intestate on 9th March 1883 without any male issue and leaving him surviving two widows, Rani Siddheswari and Rani Abhoyeswari, and a daughter, Sikhaheswari who died soon after. The two widows obtained possession of the estate, but disputes arose between them leading to a suit, No. 10 of 1887, commenced by Rani Abhoyeswari against Rani Siddheswari for possession of the Raj on declaration of her title. On 17th May 1891, while this suit was pending on appeal, Rani Siddheswari died. Rani Abhoyeswari thereafter continued in possession of the estate till her death on 17th October 1918. On her death the Deputy Commissioner of Goalpara stepped in and took possession of the Raj on the view that one Jogendra Narain, son of Raja Kumud Narain's brother Kirti Narayan, was entitled to the Raj, while one Heramba Prasad Barua, son of Rani Abhoyeswari's brother Bhabani Prasad Barua, was entitled to the personal estate of the said Rani. The said Jogendra Narain being a lunatic, the Court of Wards, Assam, assumed charge of the Raj on 5th December 1918 and has since then retained possession.

Before referring to the two suits which have given rise to the appeals, it is necessary to refer to two other suits which were previously instituted. In 1919 one Bhairabendra Narain and one Udai Narain, since deceased, who trace their descent from Maharaja Shib Narain, a common ancestor of theirs and of Raja Kumud Narain, instituted a suit at Alipur, District 24-Parganas, being Suit No. 225 of 1919, against Raja Jogendra Narain and others for recovery of possession of the Raj on declaration of their title thereto. In 1920 one Samarendra Narain instituted another suit against the Raja for similar relief at Dhubri, District Goalpara, and that suit was subsequently transferred to Alipore, District 24-Parganas, and numbered as T. Suit No. 51 of 1922. Samarendra Narain having died, his sister's son Sourendra Narain was substituted in his place as plaintiff. On 25th October 1930 Suit No. 51 of 1922 was dismissed. On the same day petitions of compromise were filed in Suit No. 51 of 1922 and Suit No. 225 of 1919 as between Raja Jogendra Narain and the plaintiffs in the two suits, namely Bhairabendra Narain and Sourendra Narain. Eventually, on 22nd December 1930, the two suits were disposed of in accordance with the compromise. To the terms of the compromise reference will be made hereafter. The two suits out of which the appeals have arisen are: T. Suit No. 84 of 1930 which has given rise to Appeal No. 171 of 1933 and T. Suit No. 164 of 1930 from which Appeal No. 205 of 1933 has emerged.

Suit No. 84 was instituted on 9th May 1930. The plaintiff in this suit is one Debendra Narain Roy who commenced it describing himself as the sole surviving executor to the estate of Rani Abhoyeswari. He alleged that since the death of Rani Siddheswari in 1891 Rani Abhoyeswari was in possession of the entire Raj and the properties appertaining thereto in assertion of her own title adversely to and to the exclusion of all members of the Bijni Raj family or of any rightful claimants under custom or Kulachar and was in such possession to the knowledge of them all since then and till her death on 17th October 1918, and that Rani Abhoyeswari had thus acquired an absolute and indefeasible title. He alleged that the Rani had executed a Will on 30th August 1918 whereby she had appointed him as one of the executors, and that on her death he and one of the other executors, namely one Bhawani Prasad Barua, had obtained probate of the will from the High Court on the Original Side on 14th March 1919. Filing the probate along with the plaint, he prayed for a declaration that he, as executor under the will, is entitled to the entirety of the Bijni Raj mentioned in Sch. B to the plaint and for possession of the said properties and also for other incidental and consequential reliefs. Sch. B to the plaint, in which as stated in the prayer aforesaid the Bijni Raj was described, consisted of nineteen items of immovable properties (of which 17 were situated in the Province of Assam, one in the Province of Bengal and one in the United Provinces), one item as to mesne profits and seven items of moveables. The aggregate value of the properties was stated to be Rs. 5 lacs 47 thousand odd. Raja Jogendra Narain (designated as Kumar) represented by the Court of Wards was impleaded as defendant 1; Bhairabendra Narain, one of the two plaintiffs in suit No. 225 of 1919, and Surendra Narain, son of Uday Narain, deceased, who was the other plaintiff in that suit as defendants 2 and 3 respectively; and Sourendra Narain the plaintiff in suit No. 51 of 1922 as defendant 4.

Suit No. 164 was instituted on 25th October 1930, on which date, as already stated, judgment was pronounced in suit No. 51 of 1922 dismissing it, and petitions of compromise were filed in the two suits, namely No. 255 of 1919 and No. 51 of 1922, as between Raja Jogendra Narain, Bhairabendra Narain and Sourendra Narain. The plaintiffs in this suit were No. 1, Punyendra Narain and No. 2, Surendra Narain, the former being grandson by a predeceased son and the latter, as already stated, son of Uday Narain, deceased, who was co-plaintiff with Bhairabendra in suit No. 255 of 1919. In the plaint the history of the litigation between Rani Siddheswari and Rani Abhoyeswari was given; it was asserted that on Raja Kumud Narain's death one Lalit Narain, grandfather of plaintiff 2, and great-grand-father of plaintiff 1, as the nearest male agnate, was entitled to succeed and did succeed to the Raj; it was alleged that Lalit Narain instituted a suit against Rani Abhoyeswari for recovery of possession of the Raj but the suit was withdrawn on a compromise under which the Rani was to remain in possession till her death; and that on the Rani's death Lalit Narain's son, Uday Narain, became entitled to succeed and did succeed to the Raj. And then in para. 14 the foundation of the claims of the two plaintiffs was set out in the following words:

That the said Kumar Uday Narain Deb died on 1st January 1924 leaving him surviving his second son, Kumar Surendra Narain Deb, plaintiff 2, and plaintiff 1 who is the only son of his predeceased eldest son, Kumar Tikendra Narain Deb. The plaintiffs state that in the selection of the eldest and nearest agnate preference has sometimes been given to the eldest branch of the family and sometimes to the eldest member and that it is difficult to ascertain the exact rule of succession in this respect; but plaintiff 1 believed that it is lineal primogeniture and the plaintiff 2 believes that it is ordinary primogeniture; and plaintiffs agree and state that if it is the former plaintiff 1 is entitled to succeed, and if it is the latter plaintiff 2 is entitled to succeed to the Bijni Raj estate, which on the death of the said Kumar Uday Narain Deb has vested either in plaintiff 1 or in plaintiff 2.

Jogendra Narain, his title as Raja being disputed and designated as Kumar and represented by the Court of Wards, was impleaded as defendant 1, Bhairabendra Narain and Surendra Narain as defendants 2 and 3; Debendra Narain Roy as defendant 4; and as defendant 5 the Trustee in Bankruptcy, in London, to the estate of one Maharaj Kumar Prince Victor Nityendra Narain of Cooch Bihar was made a party on the allegation that in 1922 Uday Narain had under undue influence and coercion and at a time when he was seriously ill and hard pressed for money executed a conveyance in favour of the Prince of his right, title and interest in the Bijni Raj estate and that the Prince had since then been adjudged a bankrupt in England and his estate had vested in the Trustee. To the plaint was appended a schedule of properties, the items being the same as those described in the schedule in suit No. 84 of 1930 with only this difference, that an item of 1 lac of rupees, said to be in the Bijni Treasury which is to be found in the schedule in the latter suit is not reproduced, and the values given as regards all the other items being less so that the aggregate claim was put down at Rs. 3 lacs 10 thousand odd. Suit No. 84 of 1930 and suit No. 164, instituted as aforesaid, remained pending in the First Court of the Subordinate Judge of the 24 Parganas at Alipore. In March 1931 Mr. Laine, Member, Board of Revenue, Assam, introduced a Bill in the Assam Legislative Council, called the Bijni Succession Bill. The Bill was passed as Assam Act 2 of 1931. It received the assent of the Governor on 27th March 1931 and of the Governor-General on 9th May 1931, and was published under S. 81 (3), Government of India Act, in the Assam Gazette of 20th May 1931.

On the Act coming into force, it was pleaded in defence in the two suits as a bar to the plaintiff's claims. Additional written statements were filed on behalf of the plaintiffs and certain issues were framed or added to those originally framed with the result that there came to be for trial 20 issues in suit No. 84, and 24 issues in suit No. 164. Of the 20 issues in suit No. 84 issues Nos. 14, 15 and 19 (b) related to the question of effectiveness of the probate of the will of Rani Abhoyeswari in respect of the properties situate in the Province of Assam; and issues Nos. 16, 17, 18, 19 (a) and 20 related to the question whether the Act operated as a bar. And in suit No. 164 the issue which raised the last-mentioned question was issue No. 24. Under an order of the Subordinate Judge, dated 30th January 1932, which was slightly varied by this Court on 12th July 1932, the issues in the two suits just referred to have been first tried out. The result has been that suit No. 164 has been wholly dismissed and suit No. 84 has been dismissed in part, that is to say, in respect of the properties which are situated in the Province of Assam, and has remained pending in respect of the two items of immoveable properties, one situated in Bengal and the other in the United Provinces. The plaintiffs in the two suits have preferred these appeals. At the hearing of the appeals several sets of arguments have been addressed to us: Mr. P. R. Das has addressed us on behalf of Debendra Narain Roy (Appellant in Appeal No. 171); the Advocate-General and Dr. Basak, on behalf of the Court of Wards representing Raja Jogendra Narain (respondent in both the appeals); Mr. S. C. Bose, on behalf of Bhairabendra Narain (respondent in both the appeals); Mr. Gunada Charan Sen, on behalf of Punyandra Narain and Surendra Narain (appellants in Appeal No. 205); and Mr. J. N. Sen, for Maharaj Kumar Prince Victor Nityendra Narain (respondent in Appeal No. 205). The controversy in the appeals broadly speaking centres round two main questions; first: whether the Act, and particularly S. 4 of it, was ultra vires the Assam Legislature; and 2nd what is the effect of the Act upon the two suits. To deal with these questions the provisions of the Act will have to be considered; and for the first question a general view will be sufficient, but for the 2nd question a more detailed examination will be necessary. The 1st question will be taken up first. The long title of the Act is: "An Act to regulate the succession in the Bijni Raj." The preamble states:

Whereas it is expedient to declare and supplement the customary law of succession in the group of estates known as the Bijni Raj in Assam with a view to the prevention of disputes and the preservation of the Raj:

Section 1 gives the short title of the Act as "The Bijni Succession Act, 1931" S. 2 contains definitions of the following words and expressions: 'The Bijni Raj' or 'the Raj'; 'Family'; 'The Holder of the Raj' or "The holder" and 'prescribed.' S. 3 declares the Bijni Raj an impartible estate descendible to a single male holder according to the provisions of the Act. S. 4, which is the all-important section of the Act for the purpose of these cases, consists of three sub-sections. Sub-s. (1) declares Raja Jogendra Narain as the holder from his nomination on 28th September 1895 by Rani Abboyeswari and for his lifetime; sub-s. (2) declares Bhairabendra Narain as the next holder on Raja Jogendra Narain's death, and also provides for succession in case of Bhairabendra Narain predeceasing the Raja; and sub-s. (3) declares that subsequent successions were to be determined by nomination or appointment. S. 5 gives a list of persons in their order who would be entitled to nominate, together with the qualifications and conditions to be fulfilled to be so competent. S. 6 provides for confirmation of nominations and the effect of the confirmation. S. 7 provides for appointment to succession in case of failure of nomination. S. 8 lays down that publication in the gazette of a nomination confirmed or appointment made would be conclusive proof of title to the Raj from the appropriate date provided the person is alive on such date. S. 9 provides for temporary administration of the Raj when there is no holder. S. 10 lays down certain restrictions to transfer and on attachment or sale. Ss. 11, 12 and 13 lay down certain savings, succession fee and power to make rules. In the schedule appended to the Act the estates of the Raj are described.

Leaving out of account for the moment the other provisions of the Act and confining his attention solely to the first two sub-sections to S. 4, for that is the only part of the Act by which his client is hit, Mr. Das has argued in limine that the declaration contained therein is not 'law' in the sense in which a legislative body is competent to enact it. This contention has been raised in this Court for the first time by Mr. Das and does not appear to have been raised in the Court below. "Law in its most general and comprehensive sense," says Blackstone (Commentaries, Vol. 1, p. 38) signified a rule of action, and is applied indiscriminately to all kinds of action, whether animate or inanimate, rational or irrational. Thus we say, the laws of motion, of gravitation of optics, of mechanics, as well as the laws of nature and of nations. And it is that rule of action which is prescribed by some superior, and which the inferior is bound to obey.

Municipal Law, called so in compliance with common speech as denoting the rule by which particular districts, communities or nations are governed, says Blackstone (Ibid, p. 43), is properly defined to be a rule of civil conduct prescribed by the superior power in State, commanding what is right and prohibiting what is wrong.

And, says he,

First it is a rule, not a transient sudden order from a superior to or concerning a particular person; but something permanent, uniform and universal. Therefore a particular act of the legislature to confiscate the goods of Titius or to attain him of high treason, does not enter into the idea of a municipal law; for the operation of this act is spent upon Titius only and has no relation to the community in general; it is rather a sentence than a law. But an act to declare that the crime of which Titius is accused shall be deemed to be high treason; this has permanency, uniformity and universality and therefore is properly a rule. It is also a rule to distinguish it from advice or counsel which we are at liberty to follow or not, as we see proper, and to judge upon the reasonableness or unreasonableness of the thing advised; whereas our obedience to the law depends not upon our approbation, but upon the maker's will. Counsel is only a matter of persuasion, law is matter of injunction; counsel acts only upon the willing, law upon the unwilling also. It is also a rule to distinguish it from a compact or agreement, for the compact is a promise proceeding from us, law is a command directed to us * * * Municipal law is also a rule of civil conduct. This distinguishes Municipal law from the natural or revealed; the former of which is the rule of moral conduct, and the latter not only the rule of moral conduct but also the rule of faith. * * * It is likewise a rule prescribed. Because a bare resolution, confirmed in the breach of the legislator without manifesting itself by some external sign, can never be properly a law. It is requisite that this resolution be notified to the people who are to obey it. But the manner in which the notification is made is a matter of very great indifference.

Pertinent to this matter it is profitable to quote what Markby in his Elements of Law, when stating the conclusions of Austin drawn from Hobbes and Jeremy Bentham in his lectures on the Province of Jurisprudence has said. He has observed:

Law is a term which is used in a variety of different meanings; but widely as they differ, there runs throughout them all the common idea of a regular succession of events, governed by a rule, which originates in some power, condition or agency, upon which the succession depends. The conception of the law which we are about to consider, the law of the lawyer, is contained within and forms part of the conception of a political society. * * * In a political society one member or a certain definite body of members, possesses the absolute power of issuing commands to the rest, to which commands the rest are generally obedient. * * * It is the body of commands issued by the rulers of a political society to its members which lawyers call by the name 'law.' There are only two small and very insignificant classes of the commands so issued by the rules of a political society which are nevertheless not enforced; as for instance, rules of rank and procedure in society, orders to wear mourning when a great person dies, and so forth. These are no part of law in our sense of the term. So also the rulers of a political society sometimes, but very rarely, address a command to a particular individual or individuals by name. Such occasional and specific commands are not properly comprised under the term law which, as we have said, involves the idea of a general rule, applicable to all cases which come under a common class. Austin considers that there are two other objects included within the province of jurisprudence and called laws which are, nevertheless not commands; namely declaratory laws and laws which repeal laws. But, as it seems to me, every such law, if it is addressed by the sovereign one or number to its subjects generally, if it is a signification of desire and is imperative, falls under Austin's conception of law; though it may only be a complete law, that is, a complete command, when taken in conjunction with some other signification of desire.

The learned Advocate General has argued that it is not permissible to separate sub-sections (1) and (2) of S. 4 from the rest of the Act and to judge whether those sub-sections contain declarations which would satisfy the requirements of 'law' understood as above. That argument is undoubtedly reasonable. Mr. Das has argued that the declarations represent rules which are in the nature of senatus decreta or previlegia as contradistinguished from senatus consulta or legis in Roman Law—terms to which reference will be made hereafter in that they are not general rules which regarded the whole community. The argument is correct in the sense that the declarations relate to the status of two specified persons only and not of persons generally belonging to a given class or community; but to 'law' they are all the same. For even if the two sub-sections are taken entirely divested of the context, they do lay down a rule in the sense in which Blackstone has used that term, not a transient sudden order concerning either Raja Jogendra or Bhairabendra, the operation of which is spent on them or either of them only but something which would bind the members of the Bijni Raj family as also the community in general in their relations with those persons something which, in that way presents a feature of permanency, uniformity and universality. To apply the test which Markby has referred to, the declarations are not such as are not meant to be enforced nor are they addressed to any individuals in particular, but involve the idea of a general rule applicable to all relations which the said two persons would have with the world outside in their capacity as holders of the Bijni Raj. Mr. Das's contention therefore must be overruled.

Mr. Das has next contended that the declarations contained in the aforesaid sub-sections are in the nature of decrees in respect of the rights of particular individual or individuals and that though legislative enactments embodying such declarations are within the competency of the British Parliament which is a Sovereign body and which exercises not only legislative functions but certain judicial functions as well, they are entirely ultra vires the Indian legislatures, central as well as provincial. We shall have to discuss the nature of the Act taken as a whole hereafter and in that connexion will have to consider whether it can be regarded as a private Act, as Mr. Das has contended that it is. But, for the present we confine ourselves to the two sub-sections aforesaid which contain, what Mr. Das says, declaratory decrees in favour of the particular individuals referred to therein. "The principle of Parliamentary sovereignty" as Dicey in his Law on the Constitution has said, means neither more nor less than this, namely that Parliament thus defined has under the English Constitution, the right to make or unmake any law whatever; and further, that no person or body is recognized by the law of England as having a right to override or set aside the legislation of Parliament.

In the classical passage on the subject of unlimited legislative authority of Parliament, Blackstone in his commentaries, Vol. 1. p. 161 has said:

It can, in short, do every thing that is not naturally impossible; and therefore some have not scrupled to call its power, by a figure rather too bold, the omnipotence of Parliament. True it is, that what the Parliament doth, no authority on earth can undo.

Coke in his Institutes (4th Institute, p. 36) says:

The power and jurisdiction of Parliament is so transcendent and absolute that it cannot be confined, either for causes or persons, within any bounds, and gives some instances of interference with private rights which strikingly illustrate the absolute nature of the power that the Parliament can exercise. Dicey has said:

Parliament however habitually interferes, for the public advantage, with private rights. Indeed such interference has now become (greatly to the benefit of the community) so much a matter of course as hardly to excite remark, and a few persons reflect what a sign this interference is for the supremacy of Parliament. The statute book teems with Acts under which Parliament gives privileges or rights to particular persons or imposes particular duties or liabilities upon other persons. (Law of the Constitution, pp. 46 and 47.)

In Maitlands' Constitutional History of England under caption "The Work of Parliament," at pp. 380-383 it has been pointed out that though the most important work of the Parliament is that of making statutes this is not all that it does, and that leaving out of account the judicial power of the House of Lords as a Court for the trial of peers and as a Court to which appeals can be brought from the lower Courts, and the procedure by way of impeachment, the House of Parliament do a good deal of important work without passing statutes and hearing causes; and that such statutes as the Parliament makes are by no means confined within what a jurist or a political philosopher could consider the domain of legislation. There it has been observed:

A vast number of statutes he (i. e., jurist or the political philosopher) would class rather as privilegia than a legis; the statute lays down no general rule but deals only with a particular case. This is particularly noticeable in the last century One is inclined to call the last century the century of privilegia.

The legislative powers of the Indian legislatures, central and provincial, which are all non-sovereign law-making bodies, arise from definite Parliamentary enactments. The powers are wide and plenary, but the authority they exercise are as completely subordinate to, and as much dependent upon Acts of Parliament as is the power of any other body, which is a creature of a statute to make by-laws. When any particular case comes before the Courts, whether civil or criminal, in which the rights and liabilities of any party are affected by any legislation of an Indian legislature, the Courts may have to determine with a view to the particular case whether such legislation was or was not within the legal powers of the Council. This of course is the same thing as adjudication as regards the particular case in hand upon the validity or constitutionality of the legislation in question. The Courts however cannot declare invalid, annul or make void a law so passed, but if it is found ultra vires or unconstitutional they will refuse to give effect to it and treat it as void or invalid or having no legal existence. The leading case on the subject:

(1878) 3 A C 889 (1) in which the constitutionality of an Act (24 of 1869) of the Indian legislature was in question. Lord Selborne in delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee, expressed himself thus:

The Indian legislature has powers expressly limited by the Act of the Imperial Parliament which created it, and it can, of course, do nothing beyond the limits which circumscribe these powers. But when acting within these limits, it is not in any sense an agent or delegate of the Imperial Parliament, but has, as was intended to have, plenary powers of legislation as large and as of the same nature as those of Parliament itself. The established Courts of Justice, when a question arises whether the prescribed limits have been exceeded, must of necessity determine that question; and the only way in which they can properly do so is by looking to the terms of the instrument, by which affirmatively the legislative powers were created, and by which negatively they are restricted. If what has been done is legislation within the general scope of the affirmative words which give the power, and if it violates no condition or restriction by which that power is limited (in which category would of course be included any act of the Imperial Parliament at variance with it) it is not for any Court of justice to enquire further, or to enlarge constructively those conditions and restrictions.

It may be observed here that the same principles have since been held to apply to enactments of Colonial legislatures: see (1885) 10 A C 282 (2); (1885) 10 A C 279 (3); (1891) A C 272 (4) at p. 274. The powers of the Indian legislature (which, by S. 63, Government of India Act, shall consist of the Governor-General and two Chambers namely the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly) are given by S. 65 of Act. The portion of the section relevant runs thus:

The Indian legislature shall have power to make laws (a) for all persons, for all Courts, and for all places and things, within British India.

If the Act now under consideration or the declaration contained in its S. 4, subsections (1) and (2) which we are at present dealing with are 'law' as we have held they are, the same would obviously be entirely within the competence of the Indian legislature. But it has been suggested that the declarations concern only particular individuals and therefore do

1. Queen v. Burah, (1878) 3 A C 889.
2. Powell v. Apollo Company, (1885) 10 A C 282 = 54 L J P C 7 = 53 L T 638.
3. Harris v. Davies, (1885) 10 A C 279 = 54 L J P C 15 = 53 L T 601.
4. Musgrave v. Chun Teeong Toy, (1891) A C 272 = 60 L J P C 28 = 64 L T 378.

not fall within the category of 'laws for all persons.' In our opinion, S. 65 (1) (e) cannot be construed to mean that the laws are to be general laws for all persons for all Courts and for all places and things. So far as the Local legislature of a Province is concerned the powers are given by S. 80-A (1), Government of India Act which runs in these words :

The local legislature of any province has power, subject to the provisions of this Act, to make laws, for the peace and good government of the territories for the time being constituting that province.

We shall hereafter refer to the several contentions that have been urged in connexion with some of the expressions used in this sub-section; but at the present moment the point we are considering is whether the words of the sub-section would admit of a law in the shape of such declarations as are contained in the first two sub-sections of S. 4 of the Act under consideration. In our view of the 'laws' contemplated by S. 80-A (1) are laws of all kinds, not only laws in general or in the abstract, but rules of law in concrete cases as well. Reference in this connexion may be made to the decision of the Judicial Committee in (1893) A C 339 (5) at p. 344 where Lord Hobhouse said thus:

If the New Zealand legislature had enacted that in a concrete case such as the present one, the New Zealand Courts should have power to give the plaintiff a decree notwithstanding that the defendant held himself aloof, we should hardly have heard the suggestion that such a law was not one for the peace, order or good government of New Zealand. Of course they have framed their law in more abstract and flexible terms. But making those terms their Lordships are clear that it is for the peace, order and good Government of New Zealand, etc., etc.

We are of opinion therefore that the declarations contained in the first two sub-sections of S. 4 of the Act are such declarations as a Local legislature of a province, otherwise competent, is empowered to enact. In pressing his contention aforesaid, namely that it is beyond the competency of Local legislature of a province to make declaration of this nature Mr. Das has asked us to scrutinize carefully the words, laws for the peace and good government of the territories for the time being constituting that province.

He has not disputed that the Assam legislature has plenary powers to make such laws as may in its opinion be conducive to peace and good government, but he has contended that such laws must partake of the character of general legislation of provincial concern. For the purposes of this argument he was prepared to concede that a declaration, or "a declaratory decree," as he would call it, may be a law enacted for peace and good government. He does not dispute the correctness of the pronouncement of Rankin, C. J., in 54 Cal 727 (6) at p. 738, which is in these words :

In my judgment it is reasonably clear that these words (meaning the words peace and good government) appearing in S. 80-A (1) and some of the other sections of the Act are used because they are words of the widest significance and it is not open to a Court of law to consider with regard to any particular piece of legislation whether it is meritorious in the sense that it will conduce to peace and good government. It is sufficient that they are words which are intended to give, subject to the restrictions of the Act, a legislative power to the body which it invests with that authority.

Mr. Das also desires to stand clear of the decision of the Judicial Committee in 58 I A 169 (7) which has made it perfectly plain that the Court is no judge to determine whether a particular measure is or is not for peace and good government. And he does not dispute the decision of Lord Halsbury, L. C., in (1885) 10 A C 675 (8), that the words authorise the utmost discretion of enactment for the attainment of the objects pointed to and that :

They are words under which the widest departure from criminal procedure as is known and practised in this country (meaning England) have been authorised in Her Majesty's Indian Empire.

And further observed that there was not the least colour for a contention that:

If a Court of law should come to the conclusion that a particular enactment was not calculated as a matter of fact and policy to secure "peace, order and good government" they would be entitled to regard any "statute directed to those objects, but which a Court should think likely" to fail of that effect as ultra vires and beyond the competency of the Dominion Parliament to enact.

So in Keith on Responsible Government, Edn. 2, Vol. 1, p. 302, it has been said :

6. Girindra Nath Banerji v. Birendra Nath Pal, 1927 Cal 496=102 I C 647=54 Cal 727=31 O W N 593.

7. Bhagat Singh v. Emperor, 1931 P C 111=1931 Cr O 521=131 I C 415=32 Cr L J 727=58 I A 169=12 Lah 280.

8. Riel v. The Queen, (1885) 10 A C 675=55 L J P C 28=54 L T 339=16 Cox C O 48.

5. Ashbury v. Ellis, (1893) A C 339=62 L J P C 107=1 R 388=69 L T 159.

By modern usage the power of the Legislature is to legislate for the 'peace, order and good government' of the territory, and there can be no doubt that the phraseology agrees in effect with the older peace, welfare, and 'good government' or the Victorian power to make laws in all cases. The means to these ends are entirely for the judgment of the legislature which enacts; the test is subjective, not objective, and no Court can substitute its views of what should be enacted for those of the Legislature. This was laid down in 10 A C 675 (8).

Mr. Das however maintained that unless it is a general legislation of provincial concern it cannot be regarded as law which the local legislature of the particular province is competent to enact. He has relied in this connexion upon three cases to which we shall now refer. The first case is (1882) 7 A C 829 (9). The case was on appeal from the Supreme Court of the Province of New Brunswick and the Act of which the validity was the question for decision was the Canada Temperance Act, 1878. Under the British North America Act, 1867, commonly called the Federation Act, the legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada was conferred by S. 91, and the exclusive powers are given to the Provincial Legislatures of the Provinces in respect of certain subjects enumerated in S. 92. Under S. 91 the Canadian Parliament has authority to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Canada in relation to all matters not coming within the classes of subjects assigned by the Act exclusively to the legislatures of the Provinces. The section then proceeds to lay down 29 specified items with respect to which the exclusive legislative authority of the Parliament of Canada is reserved and then, at the end, it is said :

And any matter coming within any of the classes of "subjects enumerated in the section shall not be deemed to come within the "class of matters of a local or private nature comprised in the enumeration "of the subjects by this Act assigned exclusively to the legislature of the" provinces.

In S. 92 the subjects of exclusive provincial legislation are enumerated, the last item 16, being :

Generally all matters of a merely local or private nature in the provinces.

One important feature of this sort of classification is obvious and that has been pointed out by Lefroy in his Constitutional Law of Canada at p. 75 in these words :

9. Russel v. Queen, (1882) 7 A C 829=51 L J P C 77=46 L T 889.

The great importance of that feature of the Federation Act (S. 91) whereby a general undefined and unrestricted power to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Canada in relation to all matters not coming within the classes of subjects assigned exclusively to the legislatures of the provinces by S. 92 is given to the Dominion Parliament is obvious. Yet it may mislead to speak, as is often done, of the residue of Parliament, because the provincial legislatures under S. 92 also have a residuary power to make laws in relation to generally all matters of a "merely local or private nature in the province." The exercise of legislative power by the Dominion Parliament in regard to all matters not enumerated in S. 91 ought, therefore, to be strictly confined to such matters as are unquestionably of Canadian interest and importance. It derives "no jurisdiction from S. 91 when legislating on any subject not" included within the classes of subjects enumerated in that section "to deal with any matter which is in substance of local or provincial concern and does not truly affect the interest of the Dominion" as a whole. When so legislating it has no authority to trench or "encroach upon any class of subjects which is exclusively assigned" to provincial legislatures by S. 92. It cannot legislate "into matters which in each province are substantially of local or" private interest upon the assumption that these matters also concern the peace, order and good government of the Dominion.

The feature noticed as above is very important for, as will be seen when the classification of subjects in the schedule to the Devolution Rules framed under the Government of India Act is examined this feature is there absent and in that classification any conflict that may arise under the classification under the Federation Act has been sought to be avoided by safeguards which seem reasonably adequate. Under the classification under the Indian Constitution all subjects remain central subjects, unless expressly scheduled in Part 2 of the Schedule or declared by the Governor-General in Council to fall within the said Part as being merely of a local or private nature within a particular province. For the purpose of understanding the true import of the decision cited as aforesaid this feature has to be remembered; for the question which arose in the case was whether the subject falling exclusively within the scope of the provincial legislature as a subject of local or provincial interest, the Canadian Parliament could legislate on it as affecting the Dominion as a whole. Their Lordships referred to (1881) 7 A C 96 (10) in which the principles with the aid of which the distribution of legislative powers as provided for in Ss. 91 and 92, and their general scope and effect were to be construed, and held that the matter regulated by the Act in question was not a matter exclusively assigned to the provincial legislatures but was a matter which could be legislated upon by the Dominion Parliament by virtue of its general authority to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Canada. The next case relied on is (1896) A C 348 (11) and the Act concerned was the Canadian Temperance Act, 1886. It was held that the general power of legislation conferred upon the Dominion Parliament by S. 91, North British America Act, 1867, in supplement of its therein enumerated powers must be strictly confined to such matters as are unquestionably of national interest and importance, and must not trench on any of the subjects enumerated in S. 92 as within the scope of provincial legislation, unless they have attained such dimensions as to affect the body politic of the Dominion. Lord Watson observed:

Their Lordships do not doubt that some matters, in their original local and provincial, might attain such dimensions as to affect the body politic of the Dominion, and to justify the Canadian Parliament in passing laws for their regulation or abolition in the interest of the Dominion. But great caution must be observed in distinguishing between that which is local and provincial and therefore within the jurisdiction of the Provincial legislation and that which has ceased to be merely local or provincial and has become matter of national concern, in such sense as to bring it within the jurisdiction of the Parliament of Canada.

The third case relied upon is (1930) A C 97 (12) in which Lord Tomlin referred to several earlier decisions and stated the propositions which had been laid down therein on questions of conflict between the jurisdiction of the Parliament of the Dominion and provincial jurisdiction. These propositions were re-stated in a later decision, (1932) A C 54 (13), at p. 71, to which the learned Advocate-General has drawn our attention. Mr. Das seeks the cases in his favour because jurisdiction was said to be in the Dominion Parliament under the words "peace, order and good government of Canada" in S. 91 of the Federal Act, only when the subjects were held to be unquestionably of national interest and importance. Such a criterion was necessary to be resorted to in order to settle the conflict between the two jurisdictions, but it cannot enter into the meaning of the words themselves. That the above is a correct appreciation of the decisions will be apparent from what has been said of the case in 7 A C 829 (9) in Qick and Garran's Annotated Constitution of the Australian Commonwealth, pp. 512-513. There a Canadian case is quoted in which Strong, C. J. said:

It is established by 7 A C 829 (9) that the Dominion being invested with authority by S. 91 to make laws for the peace, order and good government of Canada, may pass what are denominated local option laws. But as I understand that decision, such Dominion laws must be general laws not limited to a particular Province.

And it has been further noted there that in (1896) A C 348 (11) Lord Watson observed that they need not be general laws, not limited to a particular Province, but they must be for the benefit of the whole of the Provinces, and Lord Herschell remarked that it would be too narrow to say that such laws must extend to every Province, but on the other hand they must not be local legislation in a particular Province. In our opinion, this contention of Mr. Das as will presently be seen that any matter which, though falling within a central subject is declared by the Governor-General in Council to be of a merely local or private nature within the Province is a provincial subject (Sch. 1, Devolution Rules, Part 2, Item No. 51) and so a subject on which the provincial legislature may legislate. There is nothing in the description of this item to suggest that the words 'local' and 'private' as used in this item should have a meaning only co-extensive with the entirety of the province of a meaning which involves such idea as of national interest and importance extending over the whole of the province and not merely over a part of it. The local legislature is fully competent to legislate on the subject for the peace and good government of the territories "for the time being constituting that pro-

10. Citizens Insurance Co. v. Passons, (1881) 7 A C 96=51 L J P C 11=45 L T 721.

11. Attorney-General for Ontario v. Attorney-General for the Dominions, (1896) A C 348=65 L J P C 26=74 L T 583.

12. Attorney-General for Canada v. Attorney-General for British Columbia, (1930) A C 97.

13. In re the Regulation and Control of Aeronautics in Canada, (1932) A C 54=146 L T 76=101 L J P C 1=75 S J 796=48 T L R 18.

vince": vide S. 80-A (1) of the Act. The case in (1893) A C 339 (5), which is an authority for the proposition that under the words "peace, order and good government of New Zealand" legislation decreeing a concrete case could legitimately be passed, has already been cited.

The next contention presented by Mr. Das is a more weighty one and deserves very careful consideration. For the purposes of this contention it makes no difference whether the first two sub-sections of S. 4 of the Act, are taken aloof from the rest of the Act or the whole of the Act is taken together. The contention, broadly stated, is that the Act is a piece of legislation on a subject which the Assam legislature had no power to deal with. With regard to legislation dealing with private matters we have been referred to several enactments. One of these is the Murshidabad Act (15 of 1891), but Mr. Das has contended that it is an Act of the legislature and that the Indian legislature is competent to make any law and so a law such as the Act deals with. Another is the Punjab Kalra Estate Act, 1932, which was passed by the Punjab Legislature with the sanction of the Governor-General under S. 80-A (3), Government of India Act; and Mr. Das's contention is that it is equally ultra vires, if it was passed in circumstances similar to those under which the Bijni Succession Act was passed. The several steps in the process of reasoning on which this contention is based have to be stated with precision. First: S. 80-A (1), Government of India Act, says: "The local legislature of any province has powers, subject to the provisions of this Act, to make laws" etc., and the expression "subject to the provision of this Act" means subject to the classification of subjects into 'Central' and 'Provincial' as enumerated in Sch. 1 of the Devolution Rules framed under S. 45-A of the Act.

Second: the subject with which this legislation is concerned rightly falls under item 16 or item 47 of Central Subjects and can become a provincial subject only if a declaration is made by the Governor-General in Council to the effect that it is of a merely local or private nature within the province so as to come under Item No. 51 of the Provincial Subjects, but in present case admittedly there was no such declaration; as the subject remained a Central subject the Provincial legislature had no authority to legislate on it. Third: The legislation purports to have been made with the previous sanction of the Governor-General in accordance with sub-s. (3) of S. 80-A, but that sub-section does not confer a power on the provincial legislature to legislate on a Central Subject but only imposes on it a disability. Fourth: Cl.(e) of the said sub-section speaks of "regulating a Central Subject" which only means this: that if there is a legislation on a Central Subject by the Indian legislature, and if a provincial legislature acting within its own field of legislation on a Provincial Subject, finds it necessary to impinge upon that legislation of the Indian legislature, it may do so but not without the previous sanction of the Governor-General under that sub-section; and in any event it does not mean that a provincial legislature can make an original law in respect of a Central Subject with the previous sanction of the Governor-General. If the reasoning be correct it is obvious that the Assam Legislature in enacting, only with the previous sanction of the Governor-General under S. 80-A (3), this piece of original legislation relating to a subject which is admittedly a Central Subject acted ultra vires its powers.

As regards the first of these points, it cannot be contended that the expression "subject to the provisions of this Act" means only subject to Sch. 1 of the Devolution Rules in which the Central and Provincial Subjects are classified in two parts: it must mean subject to all the provisions contained in the Act itself and the rules framed under the authority of the Act as well as the schedules which form a part of the rules. That being so, sub-s. (1) of S. 80-A would mean that the power which is conferred thereby on the provincial legislature and the power so conferred is otherwise unrestricted and unconditional, is subject to the rest of the Act including sub-ss. (2), (3) and (4) of S. 80-A itself and to the rules, including amongst others the Devolution Rules framed under S. 45-A and S. 129-A of the Act, and to Sch. 1 which is a part of R. 3 of the said Devolution Rules. These Devolution Rules appear to have been framed by the Governor-General in Council with the sanction of the Secretary of State in Council and to have received the approval of both Houses of Parliament before they were then notified. The power as already stated, is expressed in very wide terms, not restricted or conditioned except as "subject to the provisions of this Act." Under S. 45-A rules being framed classifying the subjects they fall under two heads "Central subjects" and "Provincial subjects" for the purpose of distinguishing the functions of the Government of India and the Indian Legislature from Local Governments and local legislatures. If the other sub-sections of S. 80-A were not there then sub-s. (1) being subject to S. 45-A and the classification which the rules framed thereunder have made would perhaps have enabled the provincial legislature to legislate on provincial subjects only, though it must be admitted that there is anything expressly stated in the Act which would show that such would be the position. But the power given by sub-s. (1) of S. 80-A is also subject to sub-ss. (2), (3) and (4). Now, firstly, in respect of any legislation within its exclusive field if such legislation affects any Act of Parliament the provincial legislature has no power to make it: sub-s. (4). Here then is a further curtailment of the power left to it after being subject to classification made by the rules framed under S. 45-A, when it is a matter of repealing or altering as to the particular province any law made by any authority in British India other than the legislature of that province, that provincial legislature may repeal or alter such law subject to the previous sanction of the Governor-General: sub-s. (2). Here the law to be repealed or altered may be either on a central subject or on a provincial subject and may be an enactment of the Indian legislature or of any other provincial legislature.

Sub-s. (2) speaks of any law, "any authority," and is not controlled either by sub-s. (1) or by S. 45-A or the rules and classification thereunder. On the other hand sub-s. (1) being subject to sub-s. (2) the result is that notwithstanding the curtailment of the power given by sub-s. (1), by reason of the classification, the provincial legislature is entitled to travel beyond its exclusive field. If the fact be that sub-s. (2) is not controlled by sub-s. (1) a fact which cannot possibly be controverted we do not see any reason why it should be presumed that the intention of the legislature was any different in respect of sub-

s. (3) and that that sub-section should be regarded as controlled by sub-s. (1). On the other hand it seems to us clear that just as it is the case with sub-s. (2), sub-s. (3) also reserves to sub-s. (1) a further instalment of powers notwithstanding the curtailment the latter has undergone by reason of the classification aforesaid.

The result, in our opinion, is that sub-s. (3) should be interpreted as meaning that the local legislature of a province if it makes or takes into consideration any law "(e) regulating a Central subject," it may not do so without the previous sanction of the Governor-General. In other words that it may do so with such previous sanction. In our judgment the expression "subject to the provisions of the Act" should be understood in the sense indicated above and not as Mr. Das has contended for. We are confirmed in the view that we take of the interpretation of sub-s. (3), S. 80-A on a reference to the rules framed under that sub-section which, as already stated, are always framed by the Governor-General in Council with the sanction of the Secretary of State in Council and the approval of both Houses of Parliament, as some of these rules enable the provincial legislatures to deal with subjects, some of which are central subjects.

So far as point 2 is concerned it may be premised that the subject matter of the legislation falls either under item 16 or item 47. Item 16 is "civil law, including laws regarding status, property, civil rights and liabilities and civil procedure." The subject, concerning, as it does, the succession to the Bijni Raj, comes well under 'status,' 'property' or 'civil rights'. But whether it does so or not it does not matter, for there is item 47, the residuary item: "all other matters not included among provincial subjects under Part 2 of this schedule." Admittedly, there has been no declaration bringing it under item 51, part 2. The scheme of the classification is that all subjects remain central subjects unless specifically scheduled in Part 2 or taken into that part by declaration. This, it may be noted is a cardinal point of distinction between the classification of subjects under the Government of India Act and such as it is under the Federation Act to which reference has already been made. The subject, therefore, is a central subject; and this legislation has been made on that footing, sanction under S. 80-A (3) having been obtained presumably, as the case was taken to fall within Cl. (e) of that section which speaks of "regulating any central subject." One branch of Mr. Das's argument was that no central subject can at all be dealt with by a provincial legislature having regard to the classification of the subjects in the schedule. This argument we have already dealt with. Another branch of his argument was that if there was a declaration such as is referred to in item 51 of Part 2 of the schedule, and if after such declaration legislation is undertaken by a provincial legislature, that would be a case where the provincial legislature would be legislating on a central subject; and that the sanction under S. 80-A (3) may have been obtained on an erroneous supposition that there was such a declaration when, in fact, there was none. To this branch of his argument there are two answers. One is that if clause (e) be held to apply to such cases, then the Governor-General in Council will first have to declare the matter "to be of a merely local or private nature within the province", and again before the law is to be made or taken into consideration, the Governor-General will have to grant sanction, a procedure which savours of unnecessary duplication. This answer, however, is not conclusive, for justification of such a double procedure is not altogether inconceivable. But the other answer is that afforded by R. 3, sub-r. (2) of the Devolution Rules which says:

Any matter which is included in the list of provincial subjects set out in Part 2 of Sch. 1, shall to the extent of such inclusion be excluded from any central subject of which, but for such inclusion, it would form part.

By this rule, therefore, the matter to which the declaration would relate would at once move out of part 1 and get into part 2 and become a provincial subject, never to step out again and resume its character as a central subject. After the declaration, therefore, there would be no room for the subject to come in under Cl. (e), sub-s. (3) of S. 80-A under the words "regulating any central subject."

To take up the fourth point before the third, Mr. Das's contention is based upon the meaning he seeks to attach to the word "regulating in Cl. (e) of S. 80-A (3). He has argued that the word 'regulate' does not mean 'enact' but means 'adjust'.

The Court below has illustrated this contention as being of this nature. If there is a legislation by the Indian Legislature on a central subject, a provincial legislature in regulating that central subject may only frame rules for adjusting that legislation to suit the particular province. Such an extreme position has been repudiated by Mr. Das, and rightly enough, for the words of the sub-section are "make any law regulating a central subject." He contends nevertheless that regulating, means 'adjusting,' so that if there is a legislation by the Indian legislature on a central subject that legislation may be varied by the provincial legislature in order to adjust it to the conditions and exigencies of the particular province, or, in other words, according to local conditions and needs of that province. It should be noticed that such a limited meaning would be inapplicable to the word, as used at other places in the Act, e. g. in S. 67. Sub-s. (2) (i) read with the context in that provision, reads:

It shall not be lawful . . . to introduce at any meeting of "either chamber of the Indian Legislature . . . any measure . . . regulating any provincial subject or any part of a provincial" subject which has not been declared by rules under this Act to be subject to legislation by the Indian Legislature.

It is clear that when the Indian Legislature makes an enactment, such enactment can hardly, if ever, be an enactment adjusting a pre-existing provincial legislation to the whole of British India according to the local conditions and needs thereof. Mr. Das has relied for this meaning upon the decision of this Court in 20 C W N 370 (14). We are unable to see anything in that decision which supports such a meaning. On the other hand in that case the Oxford Dictionary meaning of 'regulate' was referred to:

To control govern, direct by rules regulations; to subject to guidance or restrictions; to adapt to circumstances and surroundings.

To control by legislation, to subject to guidance by creating a law, are meanings which would be covered by this definition; and we see no reason why such a meaning should not be given. A subject on which there is no law is a subject which is at large and if a law is enacted in order to control or guide it, that law regulates the subject. There are Regulations, which have from time to time been enacted in respect of virgin subjects, and they regulate those subjects notwithstanding that there was no pre-existing legislation in respect of them. Mr. Das has asked us to look into the two cases which were referred to by Mukherjee, J. in that case: (1896) A C 188 (15) and (1896) A C 348 (11). The former case is an authority for the proposition that a power to regulate need not necessarily include a power to prevent or prohibit; and the latter that a power to regulate assumes the conservation of the thing which is made the subject of the regulation. The cases, in our opinion, do not help Mr. Das in any way. Point 3 taken is that sub-s. (3) of S. 80-A, in the form in which it is expressed, only creates a disability and does not mean to confer a power. It is certainly correct to say that taking the subsection out of the context, that is to say without reading it along with sub-s. (1) which is controlled by it, it is difficult to find in it words which would indicate that any power was being conferred by it. But, as we have pointed out, it has to be read with sub-s. (1). Sub-s. (1), as already observed, if its words "subject to the provisions of the Act" are omitted, confers the widest possible power; and if being subject to S. 45-A that power has been curtailed, that curtailment is vitally affected by sub-s. (3). There is certainly a marked difference in the phraseology adopted in sub-s. (3) as compared with that in sub-s. (2). In the former the words are:

14. Mathuramohan Saha v. Ram Kumar Saha, 1916 Cal 136=35 I C 305=43 Cal 790=23 C L J 26=20 C W N 370.

The local legislature of any province may not without the sanction of the Governor-General make or take into consideration, any law, etc., in the latter the words are:

The local legislature of any province may, subject to the provisions of the sub-section next following repeal or alter as to that province any law, etc.

Why then is this difference? Dr. Basak has treated us to a very interesting discourse on this matter and we acknowledge the great assistance that we have derived from his laborious research into the history of the legislation concerning the sub-sections. As regards an investigation into the history of an enactment there are certain cardinal rules to be observed when such investigation is undertaken for construing a statute. Three cases will be sufficient for the purpose. In interpreting a statute the proper course in the first instance is to examine the language of the statute and to ask what is its natural meaning uninfluenced by the considerations derived from the previous state of the law and not to start by inquiring how the law previously stood and then, assuming that it was probably intended to have it unaltered, to see if the words of the enactment will bear an interpretation in conformity with this view: per Lord Herschell in (1891) A C 107 (16) at p. 144. It is useless to enter into an enquiry with regard to the history of an enactment and any supposed defect in the former legislation on the subject which it was intended to cure, in cases where the words of the enactment are clear. It is only material to enter into such an enquiry where the words of an enactment are ambiguous and capable of two meanings in order to determine which of the two meanings was intended: Per Lord Esher M. R. in (1889) 24 Q B D 213 (17) at pp. 214-215. We have not to do with the history of the words unless the words are doubtful and require historical investigation to explain them. If the words are really and fairly doubtful then according to well-known legal principles and principles of common sense, historical investigation may be used for the purpose of clearing away the doubt which the phraseology of the statute creates: per Coleridge, C. J. in (1881) 7 Q B D 244 (18), at p. 251.

The doubt, which the difference in phraseology to which reference has been made, creates, necessitates an historical investigation, and so long as we do not attack the problem of interpretation at the wrong end we think we are justified in enquiring how the sub-sections found their way into this Act. S. 80-A in its present language was inserted by the Government of India Act 1919, 9 & 10 Geo. V, c. 101. The phraseology of sub-ss. (2) and (3) appearing in S. 80-A is the same as in S. 79, Government of India Act, 1915, 5 & 6 Geo. V, c. 61. If the history of the sub-sections is traced down from the Regulating Act, 1773 (Geo III, c. 63, Ss. 36

16. Bank of England v. Vallagno, (1891) A C 107 = 60 L J Q B 145 = 64 L T 353 = 39 W R 657 = 55 J P 676.

17. Reg. v. Bishop of London, (1889) 24 Q B D 213 = 58 L J Q B 385.

18. Reg. v. Most, (1891) 7 Q B D 244 = 14 Cox C C 583 = 50 L J M C 113 = 44 L T 823 = 29 W R 758 = 45 J P 696.

15. Municipal Corporation of Toronto v. Vergo, (1896) A C 188.

and 37), through the Indian Councils Act 1861 (24 & 25 Vic., c. 67, Ss. 42, 43, 44 and 48) and the Indian Councils Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vic., c. 14, S. 5) it becomes perfectly clear that while the provisions corresponding to sub-s. (3) of S. 80-A always imposed a restriction to the unrestricted power of legislation conferred on the local legislature by the provision corresponding to sub-s. (1), the provision corresponding to sub-s. (2) was originally introduced to confer a power on the provincial legislatures which the provision corresponding to sub-s. (1) which was there was not sufficient to confer. The difference in the phraseology is thus accounted for: when a power was being conferred, the word 'may' was used; when a power already possessed was being curtailed the words 'may not' were used.

The result, in our opinion, is that the several sub-sections of S. 80-A are not to be read as mutually exclusive, but the first is controlled by the other three, the second controls the first and is in its turn controlled by the third, the third controls both the first and the second, and the fourth with which we are not very much concerned here, controls all the others. To adopt Mr. Das's construction of sub-s. (3) as conferring a disability only would be to ignore the expression "without the sanction, etc," an expression which plainly indicates that there is some power reserved somewhere and, in our opinion, that power is contained in sub-s. (1).

The foundation of Mr. Das's arguments in connexion with the question of the competency of the Assam legislature rests on the assumption that the matter of the legislation falling within a subject which admittedly is Central can come within the purview of the jurisdiction of that legislature, only by being declared by the Governor-General-in-Council as being "of a merely local or private nature within the province" and so being brought under item 51, Part 2 of the Schedule of classification. His argument has been adopted by Mr. Gunada Charan Sen and Mr. J. N. Sen with some variations here and there the structure and substance remaining more or less the same. Mr. Gunada Charan Sen has submitted an alternative contention that as the language of item 51, Part 2 of the Schedule, attracts the matter of this legislation, that should be treated as a provincial subject and not a central subject; and that even if it be conceded that S. 80-A, sub-s. (3), Cl. (e), enables a provincial legislature to legislate on a Central Subject, that power would be of no avail because here the subject was Provincial and not Central. This argument is obviously untenable because unlike, as in the Federation Act, a matter, though it may be of merely local or private nature within the province, does not under the Government of India Act become a Provincial Subject unless there is a declaration by the Governor-General in Council to that effect.

In our judgment a declaration contemplated in item 51, Part 2 of the Schedule of classification is not the only way in which a provincial legislature is enabled to deal with a Central Subject, and we are of opinion that a Central Subject may be legislated upon by such legislature under S. 80-A (3), Government of India Act, as was done in this case. We are also inclined, as at present advised, to agree with Mr. Bose that these two are not the only ways in which a Central Subject may be handled by a provincial legislature; but of such other procedure as may be available, it is not necessary for us to go into details. In agreement with the Court below therefore we hold that the Act was intra vires the Assam legislature. We next come to the second question, namely as to the effect of the Act upon the two suits now before us on appeal. In dealing with the second question in the Court below a very large number of authorities were cited on behalf of the parties and have been noticed by the learned Judge in his judgment. Many of them are on principles governing the construction of statutes and their effects. About these principles there is no doubt whatsoever at the present day and accordingly they have not been disputed before us. This relieves us of the necessity of discussing some of these authorities. The points however which have been stressed upon before us on behalf of the parties as favouring their respective contentions and such authorities as may have some bearing on those points will only have to be considered. One important contention that has been urged by Mr. Das is that the Act is a private Act as distinguished from a public Act. On this head his argument, broadly speaking, is that the Act being so regarded, its construction and effect must be judged on the lines on which they are judged in English Courts. Blackstone, J., while saying that:

Law in its most general and comprehensive sense, signifies a rule of action; and is applied indiscriminately to all kinds of action whether animate or inanimate, rational or irrational.

and defining Municipal Law as a rule of civil conduct prescribed by the supreme power in a state, has classified statutes according to their several kinds in the manner following:

Statutes are either general or special, public or private. A general or public Act is a universal rule that regards the whole community; and of this the Courts of law are bound to take notice judicially and ex officio, without the statute being particularly pleaded or formally set forth by the party who claims an advantage under it. Special or private Acts are rather exceptions than rules being those which only operate upon particular persons and private concerns, such as the Romans entitled senatus decreta in contradistinction to the senatus consulta which regarded the whole community; and of these which are not promulgated with the same notoriety as the former, the Judges are not bound to take notice, unless they be formally shown and pleaded.

It should however be mentioned here that for the purposes of judicial notice all Acts passed after 1850 are decreed public Acts unless the contrary is declared therein. (Interpretation Act, 1889, 52 & 53, Vic., c. 63, S. 9.) The senatus consulta, in form, had nothing of the imperative of a lex about it; the presiding consuls or the Emperor submitted their proposals and the senate approved of them. These however were the principal statutory factors of the jus novum law that differed widely from the principles of the old jus civile: see Muirhead's Law of Rome, 3rd Edn., p. 278. About the end of the first century they had superseded legis, but just after the close of the second century they were in their turn superseded by the Imperial Constitution: see Hunter's Roman Law, 2nd Edn., p. 75. The private statutes lay down no general rule, but deal with a particular case, and would, as observed by Maitland in his Constitutional History of England in a passage already quoted, be classed by jurists and political philosophers rather as privilegia than as legis:

All legislative proposals which are submitted to Parliament are divided into two classes and are described either as public or private Bills. Parliament deals with each of these classes in a different manner. A public Bill may be introduced by any Member in either House, but a private Bill may only be laid before Parliament upon a petition presented by the parties interested; and the procedure which is adopted to pass a public Bill into law is not the same in all respects as that which is adopted with regard to a private Bill. The boundary line which divides the subjects which should be submitted to Parliament by means of a public Bill and those which should be submitted to it by means of a private Bill 'is extremely difficult to draw, but as a general rule . . . any measure which affects only private interests or refers to a particular locality should be introduced as a private Bill. . . . ' There are however many Bills which, although introduced into Parliament as public bills are found to affect private interests. Bills of this kind are subject partly to the rules of procedure which govern private Bills and partly to those which govern public Bills and are known as hybrid Bills: Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 21, pp. 702-703, paragraphs 1285-1288.

Private Bills, although they deal with almost every class of subjects, are divided into two groups, namely: (1) Local Bills, which are commonly referred to as private Bills, are Bills promoted by particular corporations, companies and other parties who require parliamentary powers for the object or undertaking which they have in view, and therefore include Bills in relation to specified railways, harbours, piers, roads or tramways, supply of gas, water or electricity improvements, sanitary or police matters in local districts. A general Bill dealing with any of these subjects could be a public Bill; but where it is desired to apply or extend the general law in the case of a locality or to give exemption from it, this is done by a private Bill. (2) Personal Bills which affect only the interests or property of the individuals to which they relate. Ibid pp. 727-728, para. 1353.

The procedure that is adopted with regard to private Bills is described in great detail in Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 21, p. 729, et seq, para. 1356, onwards. In May's Parliament Practice, pp. 686 to 689, it is clearly brought out how in passing public Bills Parliament acts strictly in its legislative capacity; while in passing private Bills it still exercises its legislative functions but its proceedings partake of a judicial character. The following extract may conveniently be quoted to illustrate the position:

The persons whose private interests are to be promoted appear as suitors for the Bill, while those who apprehend injury are admitted as adverse parties in the suit. Many of the formalities of justice are maintained; various conditions are required to be observed, and their observance to be strictly proved; and if the parties do not sustain the Bill in its progress by following every regulation and form prescribed, it is not forwarded by the House before which it is pending. If they abandon it, and no other parties undertake its support the Bill is lost, however sensible the House may be of its value. The analogy which all these circumstances bear to the proceedings of a Court of Justice is further supported by fees which is required of every party promoting or opposing private Bill, or petitioning or opposing any particular provision. . . . The union of the judicial and legislative functions is not confined to the forms of procedure but is an important principle in the inquiries and decision of Parliament, upon the merits of private Bills. 'As a Court it inquires into and adjudicates upon the interests of private parties, as a legislature it is watchful over the interests of the public.'

The analogy to proceedings in Court is so complete that even parties are sometimes restrained by prohibitory injunctions from promoting or opposing a private Bill or compelled by mandatory injunction to apply for a private Bill and in good faith to promote it.

As regards the classification of Parliamentary statutes at different periods the history from the earliest times to the present day is given in Crais on Statute Law, pp. 56-57: see also, per Parks, B., in (1846) 15 M & W 244 (19) and per Coleridge, J. in (1856) 25 L J Ex 254 (20). The words "of a merely local or private nature within the province" appearing in item 51 of Part 2 of the classification schedule under the Government of India Act have unquestionably some relations to the 'Local' and 'personal' Bills which are the two classes of private Bills referred to above. But merely because an Act is a local and personal Act, as being confined to certain local limits and as affecting the status of a particular description of persons only, it would not cease to be a public act, if the Act is the product of the legislature in its legislative capacity and is not the result of a procedure in which the legislature is called upon to enact a law embodying a conclusion arrived at by it judicially or upon the basis of a contract as between the rival parties for whose benefit the law is intended. The substance of the enactment may be of a local and personal nature regarded from some points of view and in that way the enactment may partake of some of the characteristics of a private Act under Parliamentary legislation; but if the procedure which is resorted to in the matter of enactment of private Acts by Parliament be, as it is, unknown to the Indian and Provincial Legislatures, it is not at all apparent why the present Act, even though it may be regarded as local and personal in some of its aspects, is any the less a public Act than any other piece of legislation in this country. Several decisions bearing on the rules of interpretation to be adopted as regards private Acts have been cited before us. One is (1844) 5 Hare 415=67 E R 974 (21). In that case Wigram V. C. said:

Where an act of Parliament in express terms or by necessary implication empowers an individual or individuals to take or interfere with the property or rights of another, and upon a sound construction of the Act it appears to the Court that such was the intention of the legislature in such cases it may well be the duty of the Court, whose province is to declare and not to make the law to give effect to the decree of the legislature so expressed. But where an Act of Parliament merely enables an individual or individuals to deal with property of his or their own, for their own benefit, and does not in terms or by necessary implication, empower him or them to take or interfere with the property or rights of others, questions of a very different character arise. Here the distinction between public and private Acts of Parliament becomes materials. By a private Act of Parliament I do not mean merely a private estate's Act. But local and personal as distinguished from general public Acts. Public Acts, it is said in the books, bind all the Queen's subjects. But of private Acts of Parliament, it is said, that they do not bind strangers, unless by express words or necessary implication the intention to affect the rights of strangers is apparent in the Act; and whether the Act is public or private does not depend on any technical considerations (such as having a clause or declaration that the Act shall be deemed a public Act) but upon the nature and substance of the case. For these general propositions it is not necessary I should do more than refer to 8 Co Rep 136 (b)=77 E R 681 (22) and (1671) 1 Ventris 175=85 E R 119 (23). That the defendants' Act in this case is a local and personal and in that sense a private Act of Parliament does not admit of dispute. It is local as being confined to a particular place; and personal as being expressed to be for the benefit of the individuals named in it, and not for the benefit of all Her Majesty's subjects: however all may incidentally be benefited by that which improves this particular district. (His Honour read the title and preamble of the Act.) Here we have that which in many of the reported cases is stated to be the distinguishing feature of a private Act of Parliament. It states that the persons intended to be benefited by the Act are the persons having personal interest in the property which is the purpose of the Act to improve; and the Act then appoints Commissioners, empowers them to enclose and contains the drainage clause upon which the defendants more especially found the right which they have insisted upon in this suit. The plaintiff is a stranger to the Act upon which the defendants are proceeding.

19. Richards v. Easto, (1846) 15 M & W 244=3 D & L 515=15 L J Ex 163=10 Jur 695.

20. Shepherd v. Sharp, (1856) 25 L J Ex 254=1 H & N 115=2 Jur N S 617=4 W R 570.

21. Dawson v. Paver, (1844) 5 Hare 415=4 Rail cases 81=16 L J Ch 274=11 Jur 766=67 E R 974.

22. Sir Francis Barrington's Case, (1616) 8 Co Rep 136 (b)=77 E R 681.

23. Lucy v. Levington, (1671) 1 Ventris 175=85 E R 119.

It may be observed in this connexion that in (1893) 69 L T 440 (24) on appeal (1893) 2 Q B 454 (25) also it has been held that the list of what are local and personal Acts is the substance and character of the Acts themselves and not the mere form or description. It is apparent that the matter is a matter of substance and not of form or technicality, and if from the general tenor of the Act it appears that it purports to determine the status of individuals not merely inter se but also as governing their relations with others (an element which is obviously present in the Bijni Succession Act) the Act can hardly be regarded as a private Act in the sense in which the term is understood in Parliamentary legislation. This is a point of difference arising upon the substance of the enactment. It will be seen that Wigram, V. C., in the case aforesaid observed :

The plaintiff is a stranger to the Act upon which the defendants are proceeding.

To understand the exact significance of this observation it is necessary to look into the facts, because in that case no question of procedure as regards the passing of a private Act was referred to and the word "stranger" therefore, was not used for the purpose of signifying that the plaintiff was not a contesting party in the legislation before the Parliament. The word was there used as meaning a person whose rights were not intended to be affected by the provisions of the Act. It is true to say that everybody is in some sense bound by a statute even though it be a private Act. As was explained by Hale, C. J. in (1671) 1 Ventris 175 (23):

Every man is so far party to a private Act of Parliament as not to gainsay it, but not so as to give up his interest; it is the great question in 8 Co Rep 136 (b) (22). The matter of the Act there decides it to be between the foresters and the proprietors of the soil; and there it shall not extend to the commoners to take away their common. Suppose an Act says, whereas in a controversy concerning land between A and B it is enacted that A shall enjoy it, this does not bind others, though there be no saving clause because it was only intended to end the difference between the two.

In 5 Hare 415 (21) the plaintiff was said to be stranger because the Act empowered certain persons to deal with their own property in a certain place and defined by a certain description and there were no words which either expressly or by necessary implication imported that the legislature intended to affect the rights of other persons in other property, and the plaintiff fell within the last mentioned category. As Wigram, V. C. pointed out in the case aforesaid :

In private Acts in general the legislature does nothing more than enable persons to enter into a contract who could not otherwise enter into it; and the persons who are parties to the Act are expressly named in it [quoting from the judgment of Lord Chief Baron McDonald in 4 Gwill 1387 (26)]. (Then referring to certain other cases) But these cases leave untouched the proposition that an Act of Parliament, not being a public Act, will not bind the right of strangers unless by express words or necessary implication the intention to do so can be collected. It is a question of construction.

The importance of the question whether the Act is a public Act or a private Act consists only in this that if it is the latter then, though there be no saving clause, the rights of third parties will not be regarded as affected by necessary implication: See Craies on Statute Law, p. 467, note (O), referring to Co. Litt, p. 25, note 16. To illustrate this rule of construction several other cases have been cited, (1859) 6 C B N S 1=141 E R 350 (27), in which Cockburn, C. J. said :

We have been reminded that a private Act could never bind persons who were not parties to the Act. Provisions, however general in their terms, could not be held to affect the rights of parties who were not before the Parliament and whose rights are not intended to be affected.

In (1885) 15 Q B D 597 (28), Lord Esher said :

In the case of a private Act which is obtained by persons for their own benefit you construe more strictly provisions which they allege to be for their benefit, because the persons who obtain a private Act ought to take care that it is so worded that that which they desire to obtain is plainly stated in it.

In (1789) 2 T R 701 (29) at p. 705, Lord Kenyon observed that :

Private Acts are not to be construed in precisely the same way as public Acts, but rather like a conveyance or contract according to the intention of the parties.

24. R. v. London County Council, (1893) 69 L T 440.

25. Reg. v. London County Council, (1893) 2 Q B 454=63 L J Q B 4=4 R 529=42 W R 1=69 L T 580.

26. Riddle v. White, 4 Gwill 1387.

27. Shrewsbury v. Scott, (1859) 6 C B N S 1=29 L J C P 34=6 Jur N S 452=141 E R 350.

28. Altrincham Union v. Chasire Lines Committee, (1885) 15 Q B D 597=50 J P 85.

29. Townley v. Gibson, (1789) 2 T R 701.

and Lord Wensleydale said in (1860) 8 H L C 348 (30), "as an agreement." So also Lord Halsbury, L. C. said in (1892) A C 498 (31) that the particular provisions may be regarded as words of contract to which the legislature has given its sanction rather than the words of the legislature itself. In (1909) A C 1 (32), Lord Loreburn, L. C. said :

The Courts will take every means of defeating an attempt by a private Act to take away the right either of the Crown or of persons who have not been brought in. And I desire to say for myself that I am not satisfied with regard to these private Acts of Parliament that there are sufficient means either of securing accurate drafting or of safeguarding the rights of persons other than those who are concerned in the private legislation.

The ratio of these decisions, on which Mr. Das has relied, is based upon the distinction in procedure that obtains for getting a private Act passed and inasmuch as the procedure is entirely foreign to the Indian legislatures, central as well as provincial, the principles of construction enunciated in them can hardly apply to the Bijni Succession Act, even though that Act in some of its features may be taken to resemble a private Act. On the other hand, the learned Advocate-General has relied upon several cases which have laid down that even as regards Acts of this nature the enactments contained in them must be given the fullest effect when the necessary implication of the enactment justifies the same, e. g. (1907) 1 Ch 50 (33). Mr. Das has drawn our attention to the compromise in the two suits, Nos. 255 of 1919 and 51 of 1922, in order to establish that the Bijni Succession Act, or at least S. 4 thereof, enacts what the parties, or at least two of them, namely, Raja Jogendra and Bhairabendra, agreed amongst themselves. And he has contended, that call it a private Act or a public Act, if the position be that an enactment merely declares what is a matter of agreement as between them the declaration can bind nobody but themselves. This principle has been affirmed in several cases on private Acts to which we have already referred. Now the Subordinate Judge has summarised the net result of the compromise in these words:

By the compromise Raja Jogendra Narain was acknowledged to be proprietor and holder of the Bijni Raj estate and he was to continue to own and hold the estate for the term of his natural life, and after his death the plaintiff in Suit No. 225 of 1919, Bhairabendra, was to become the proprietor of the Raj estate his interest being vested estate in remainder in it from the time of the compromise. Bhairabendra got besides Rs. 1,50,000 from Raja Jogendra Narain. The plaintiff in Suit No. 51 of 1922, Sourendra, gave up and abandoned all claims to the Raj, on getting five lacs of rupees from the Raja. Sourendra's sister was married to Bhairabendra.

This summary is substantially correct; except that to be more accurate it may be said that while the Raja Jogendra Narain was to be the proprietor of the Bijni Raj for life, Bhairabendra was to be absolute owner, the interest of Bhairabendra being a vested interest in the remainder in the sense that his sons, grandsons, and so on, in the eldest male line (lineal primogeniture) and failing them his nearest and eldest agnatic relations (ordinary primogeniture) would succeed to the Raj as an impartible Raj. The whole of the Act, with the exception of Ss. 3 and 4, is clearly outside the terms of the compromise. S. 3 declared the impartibility of the Raj, as the compromise also intended. Sub-s. (1), S. 4 not only declares Raja Jogendra as the holder of the Raj as was provided for by the compromise but also stated, "with title dating from his nomination to the succession made by Rani Abhoyeswari Debi on 28th September 1895," a statement the effect of which is not to be found anywhere in the compromise. In sub-s. (2), S. 4, Bhairabendra's title as the holder of the Raj after the death of Raja Jogendra is affirmed; this is what the compromise intended. But in that sub-section it is also provided that, in case Bhairabendra dies, his successor, according to lineal or ordinary primogeniture, as is also intended by the compromise, is to be the person who would, in the opinion of the Governor of Assam, be such heir, a condition which is not in the compromise but which perhaps does not after all signify a substantial deviation. But S. (3) deviates from the compromise altogether; for after there is one succession on Raja Jogendra's 80. Rowbotham v. Wilson, (1860) 8 H L C 348= 30 L J Q B 49=6 Jur N S 695=2 L T N S 642.

81. Herron v. The Rathmines and Rathgar Improvement Commissioners, (1892) A C 498= 67 L T 658.

82. Great Northern Piccadily and Brompton Ry. Co. v. Attorney-General, (1909) A C 1= 78 L J K B 185=98 L T 731=52 S J 411= 24 T L R 506.

83. In re Wilton's Settled Estate, (1907) 1 Ch 50=76 L J Ch 37=96 L T 193=23 T L R 64=51 S J 67.

death the right of Bhairabendra's heirs according to lineal or ordinary primogeniture, such as is reserved by the compromise, is entirely taken away by the Act and such succession is thenceforward to be governed by nomination or appointment.

The points of similarity between the compromise and the provision contained in S. 4 of the Act are so few while the divergence between them is so marked and wide, that it is not possible to presume that the section is merely an embodiment of an agreement, such as forms the essence of a private legislation. It should be remembered that at the date when the Bill was introduced there was in existence not merely the compromise, but also a judgment in a contested suit, namely No. 51 of 1922, in which, as it is said, various questions relating to succession to the Bijni Raj were discussed and adjudicated upon. It is possible and indeed very probable that the compromise was known to the legislature. But the supposition that it was on the footing of the compromise that the Legislature proceeded to make the declarations contained in sub-ss. (1) and (2) of S. 4, which are in their form declarations in rem is not founded on any tangible materials, either in the shape of express words or of recitals of circumstances or anything else, such as are to be found in private Acts. Indeed, it is quite possible and not at all unreasonable to imagine that upon such materials as were before it the legislature was satisfied that according to the customary law of succession to the Bijni Raj which it was laying down in the other provisions of the Act, Raja Jogendra, having had the nomination from Rani Abhoyeswari, was entitled to continue as the holder of the Raj in preference to all others and that Raja Jogendra, having consented to Bhairabendra coming in after his lifetime, had also nominated him as his successor, so that Bhairabendra under the said law was entitled to the declaration that was being made in his favour.

The only part of the Act by which Mr. Das's client, the plaintiff in suit No. 84, is hit is S. 4, because he has set up a title anterior to the date on which the Act came into being, a date on which the suit was pending. And as the declaration made in sub-s. (2), S. 4 will take practical effect only on the death of Raja Jogendra it will not be incorrect to say that the said plaintiff is more immediately hit by sub-s. (1) of that section which says :

Raja Jogendra Narain Bhup of Bijni is hereby declared and shall during his lifetime be the holder of the Raj with title dating from his nomination to the succession made by Rani Abhoyeswari on 28th October 1895.

To get over the effect of this declaration Mr. Das has advanced several arguments. It has been argued in the first place that the word prevention in the expression "with a view to the prevention of dispute" appearing in the preamble implies futurity, and that therefore the enactment should be read as intended to apply to such disputes as may in future arise, the disputes which were existing at the time when the Act came into being not being intended to be governed by it. For the meaning of the word 'prevent' reference has been made to the case in (1882) 8 Q B D 600 (34) where in a charter party the words were "accidents preventing the loading" and Pollock, J. made certain observations indicating that the strict grammatical and original meaning of the word "prevent" is averting something which is to come in future; but in the same judgment there are observations to the effect that the word in popular language means stopping something either before it has commenced or while it is going on. Disputes which had already commenced or were going on would therefore equally come within the purview of the word. Besides there are also the words, "for the preservation of the Raj," an expression which indicates a continuity in respect of a state of things existing from before and therefore the legislation may well be taken to have been intended to apply to disputes which had already commenced and which threatened the existence of the Raj, as being a legislation which would put an end to such disputes. Secondly, it has been pointed out that even though the portion of sub-s. (i), S. 4 which runs in these words :

Raja Jogendra Narain Bhup of Bijni is hereby declared and shall during his lifetime be the holder of the Raj stands as a declaration of his status for the entire period commencing from the point of time when the declaration is made and ending with the termination of his life, the plaintiff in suit No. 84 is not affected because his title is a title which was previously acquired. And that therefore the words which really affect him are the words with title dating from the nomination to the succession made by Rani Abhoyeswari Debi on 28th September 1895, words which speak of a continuity of title from the date aforesaid up to the present day that there is no room left for the title of anybody else. To get over the effect of these words it is said that they are no part of the enactment, but are mere recitals in the nature of a preamble, the correctness of which it is open to a party to challenge against whom they are sought to be used. It is pointed out that in many statutes there are subsidiary preambles other than the preamble to the statute as a whole; the subsidiary preambles being in the nature of recitals of facts prefacing some particular section or sections, and that the offending words referred to above are of that character. Several cases have been referred to in this connexion (1901) 1 Ch 842 (35) the case of a private Act in which Cozens Hardy, J. said that the recital though admissible against persons claiming under the Act is not conclusive and the Court is at liberty to consider the fact or the law to be different from the statement in the recital. 1 El and Bl 501=22 L J M C 89 (36) in which Lord Campbell made similar observations and also remarked that the recital in a private Act is merely evidence and not conclusive as an estoppel: (1844) 12 Cl & F 295 (37), in which it was held that the recital in a private Act was very strong evidence, for it is the well-known practice of the Parliament not to allow such recitals to be inserted unless their truth was judicially established. It has also been argued that though a recital in an Act of Parliament may be used as evidence it is not conclusive evidence and it is liable to be rebutted: see Craies on Statute Law, p. 492. As instances in which such recitals were distinguished from enactments, the cases in (1874) 1 I A 178 (38) and 2 Bom 19 (39) have been 35. Mettens v. Hill, (1901) 1 Ch 842.

36. R. v. Haughton, (1858) 1 El & Bl 501 = 22 L J M C 89=17 Jur 455=1 W R 165.

37. Wharton Peerage Claim, (1844) 12 Cl & F 295.

38. Brindaban v. Brindaban, (1874) 1 I A 178 = 13 Beng L R 408=21 W R 824 (P O).

39. Baban Mayacha v. Nagu Shranucha, (1877) 2 Bom 19.

cited. On the other hand the learned Advocate-General and Mr. Bose have referred to a number of cases for the purpose of showing the conclusive character of recitals in Acts of Parliament. One of them is (1891) A C 531 (40), in which at p. 549, Lord Halsbury, L. C., said:

That, in fact, the language of an Act of Parliament may be founded on some mistake and that words may be clumsily used I do not deny. But I do not think it is competent to any Court to proceed upon the assumption that the legislature has made a mistake. Whatever the real fact may be, I think a Court of law is bound to proceed upon the assumption that the legislature is an ideal person that does not make mistakes. It must be assumed that it has intended what it has said, and I think any other view of the mode in which one must approach the interpretation of a statute, would give authority for an interpretation of the language of an Act of Parliament, which would be attended with the most serious consequences.

Another case is (1893) A C 104 (41), in which, at p. 123, Lord Hannon said:

This is an absolute statement by the legislature that there was a seigneurie of Mingan. Even if it could be proved that the legislature was deceived, it would not be competent for a Court of law to disregard its enactments. If a mistake has been made the legislature can correct it. The Act of Parliament has declared that there is a seigneurie of Mingan, and that thenceforward its tenure shall be changed into that of frank aleuturier. The Courts of law cannot sit in judgment on the legislature, but must obey and give effect to its determination.

A third case is (1876) 4 Ch D 588 (42) which is an authority for the position that with regard to subsidiary recitals the canon of construction is the same, namely that if the enactment part is clear and unambiguous they may not be referred to for the purposes of construction. We do not consider it necessary to deal with these cases in further detail because we are clearly of opinion that there is no foundation for the contention that the words "with title dating back," etc., can be taken apart from the rest of the passage and treated as a mere recital and not as a part of the enactment. Thirdly, Mr. Das has addressed to us some arguments in order to emphasise the distinction between declaratory and remedial Acts. Declaratory statutes are generally retrospective in their operation. Blackstone, J. in (1779) 2 Wm 1277=96 E R 751 (43), said:

40. Commissioner for special purpose of Income-tax v. Pamsel, (1891) A C 531 = 61 L J Q B 265=65 L T 21=55 J P 805.

41. Labrador Co. v. Queen, (1893) A C 104 = 67 L T 730.

42. Bentley v. Rotherham and Kimberworth Local Board of Health, (1876) 4 Ch D 588 = 46 L J Ch 284.

Declaratory statutes do not prove the law was otherwise before, but rather the reverse.

"A declaratory Act," said Coleridge, C.J. in (1890) 63 L T 705 (44):

means to declare the law, or to declare that which has always been the law, and there having been doubts which have arisen Parliament declares what the law is and enacts that it shall continue what it then is.

But declaratory statutes may be of various kinds. For instance a statute may correct an error in a former statute, and if the two are of the same session of Parliament, the second has relation back to the time when the first one was passed: (1816) 2 Price 381=146 E R 130 (45). It may be explanatory of a former statute; and so there may be cases in which, unless retrospective operation is given, it would fail of its object: see Parke, B., in (1832) 3 B and Ad 465=110 E R 168 (46). There is also abundant authority for holding that if an Act is in its nature a declaratory Act the argument that it must not be construed so as to take away previous rights is not applicable: see (1890) 24 Q B D 557 (47); (1849) 18 L J Ex 332=154 E R 1014 (48). But it has been held that the use of the words "it is declared" in a statute does not necessarily import that the statute is merely declaratory of existing law and, therefore, retrospective; and that the use of the expression "it is declared to introduce new rules of law" is not incorrect and is far from uncommon: (1898) A C 769 (49). In (1898) A C 469 (50), Lord Waston delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee pointed out that the cases do not lay down an invariable rule and observed as follows:

It does not seem to me probable that the legislature should intend to extinguish by means of retrospective enactment, rights and interests which might have already vested in a very limited class of persons, consisting so far as appears of one individual, namely the respondent. In such cases their Lordships are of opinion that the rule laid down by Erle, C. J. in 10 C B N S 179 (51) at p. 191 ought to apply. They think that in a case like the present the learned C. J. was right in saying that a retrospective operation ought not to be given to the statute unless the intention of the legislature that it should be so construed is expressed in plain and unambiguous language, because it manifestly shocks one's sense of justice that an act legal at the time of doing it should be made unlawful by some new enactment.

It will serve no useful purpose to refer to the other cases cited before us in this connexion because here we are able, as we shall presently proceed to show, to distinguish upon the words of the Act itself, the language of the Act in that respect being plain and unambiguous, which of its provisions are retrospective and which prospective, and we have not to rely upon any presumption as to intent relating to its operation to be inferred from the character of the Act being declaratory or otherwise.

Fourthly Mr. Das has cited before us a variety of decisions either laying down general principles of interpretation relating to retrospective operation of statutes or dealing with specific enactments in which such principles have been applied. The rule is so firmly settled that we consider it unnecessary to refer to the cases in detail. Retrospectivity is never presumed and in law is regarded as retrospective only where it is so by express enactment or it is a necessary implication from the language employed by the legislature, the presumption always being against the taking away of vested rights. In Craies on Statute Law it is expressed thus (p. 326):

Before giving such a construction, (meaning a retrospective construction to an Act of Parliament) one would require that it should either appear very clearly in the terms of the Act or arise by necessary and distinct interpretation. And perhaps no rule of construction is more firmly established than this: that a retrospective operation is not to be given to a statute so as to impair an existing right or obligation otherwise than as regards matter of procedure unless that effect cannot be avoided without doing violence to the language of the enactment. If the enactment is expressed in language which is fairly capable of either interpretation it ought to be construed as prospective only: Referring to (1901) A C 297 (52) at p. 305;

43. Nicol v. Verelet, (1779) 2 Wm 1277=96 E R 751.

44. Jones B. Bennett, (1890) 63 L T 705=6 Asp M C 596.

45. Attorney-General v. Pongett, (1816) 2 Price 381=146 E R 130.

46. R. v. Dursley, (1832) 3 B & Ad 465 = 110 E R 168.

47. Attorney-General v. Theobald, (1890) 24 Q B D 557=62 L T 768=38 W R 527.

48. Attorney General v. Hertford, (1849) 18 L J Ex 332=154 E R 1014=3 Ex 670.

49. Harding v. Queensland Stamp Commissioners, (1898) A C 769 = 67 L J P O 144 = 79 L T 42=14 T L R 488.

50. Young v. Adams, (1898) A C 469=67 L J P O 75=78 L T 506=14 T L R 373.

51. Midland Ry. Co. v. Pye, (1861) 10 C B N S 179 =30 L J O P 314=4 L T 510=9 W R 658.

52. Smith v. Callander (1901) A C 297 = 70 L J P C 53=84 L T 801.

(1890) 15 A C 384 (53) at p. 387 (1679) 2 Mod 310 (54); (1848) 2 Ex 22 (55); (1883) 23 Ch D 690 (56); (1853) 8 Ex 352 (57); (1855) 5 H L C 481 (58); (1866) 1 H L 9 (59); (1884) 12 Q B D 224 (60); (1869) 4 Q B 271 (61); (1875) 1 Ch D 48 (62); (1898) 2 Q B 547 (63).

Some of these cases have been referred to by Mr. Das in his arguments on this part of the case. Other cases cited by him in this connexion are the following: (1886) 31 Ch D 402 (64) at p. 408 in which Bowen, L. J., said:

It seems to me that even in construing an Act which is to a certain extent retrospective and in construing a section, which to a certain extent retrospective, we ought, nevertheless, to bear in mind that maxim (i. e., omnis nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet non praeteritis) as applicable where we reach the line at which the words of the section cease to be plain.

(1878) 3 A C 582 (65), in which Lord O'Hagan said:

Unless there is a clear intention of the legislature, clear and unequivocal, or unless there are some circumstances rendering it inevitable that we should take the other view, we are to presume that an Act is prospective and not retrospective;

and Lord Blackburn observed:

Where the effect would be to alter a transaction already entered into, where it would be to make that valid which was previously invalid, to make an instrument of no effect at all and from which the party was at liberty to depart so long as he pleased binding, I think the prima facie construction of the Act is that it is not to be retrospective, and it would require strong reasons to show that it is not the case. (1878) 10 Ch D 518 (66), in which Fry, J., said that the retrospective construction was not to be favoured, unless the legislature clearly and distinctly authorised the doing of something which is physically inconsistent with the existence of an existing right.

53. Main v. Stark, (1890) 15 A C 384=59 L J P C 68=63 L T 10.

54. Gilmore v. Shuter, (1679) 2 Mod 310.

55. Moon v. Durden, (1848) 2 Ex 22 = 12 Jur 138=76 R R 479.

56. Hickson v. Darlow, (1883) 23 Ch D 690 = 48 L T 449=31 W R 417.

57. Waugh v. Middleton, (1853) 8 Ex 352 = 22 L J Ex 109.

58. Larpent v. Bibby, (1855) 5 H L C 481 = 24 L J Q B 301.

59. William v. Harding, (1866) 1 H L 9 = 35 L J B K 25=12 Jur N S 657=14 L T 139=14 W R 503.

60. Hough v. Windus, (1864) 12 Q B D 224 = 53 L J Q B 165=50 L T 312=32 W R 452.

61. Ellis v. McCormick, (1869) 4 Q B 271.

62. Re Joseph Suche Co Ltd., (1875) 1 Ch D 48.

63. Re Athlumnay, (1898) 2 Q B 547=67 L J Q B 935=79 L T 303=47 W R 144=5 Manson 322.

64. Reid v. Reid, (1886) 31 Ch D 402=55 L J Ch 294=54 L T 100=34 W R 333.

65. Gardner v. Lucas, (1878) 3 A C 582.

66. Mayor etc of Yarmouth v. Simmons, (1878) 10 Ch D 518.

Mr. Das has also referred to two Indian cases decided by the Judicial Committee both of which dealt with the question of succession of taluqdars under the Oudh Estates Act 1 of 1869. Under S. 10 of that Act the entry of the name of a person in certain lists to be prepared under the Act is conclusive evidence of the fact that he was a taluqdar. In one of these cases, 16 I A 71 (67), their Lordships held that an entry had been improperly made and so declined to give effect to it; a list to be prepared under an enactment is evidently of different probative value from the enactment itself. In the other case, 31 I A 30 (68), all that was decided was that the Act could have no retrospective operation, so as to deprive the successors of a person, who had died before the Act came into existence, of rights which they had already acquired on his death. The learned Advocate-General and Mr. Bose have also referred to some of these cases and also a number of other cases bearing on this question, but it will serve no useful purpose to refer to them as they also lay down the very same principle; the only difference being that in them it was possible to infer by necessary implication an intention to confer retrospective operation. Each of these cases, it may be stated turned on the language and intentment of the particular statute with which it was concerned; and it is obvious that the cases, beyond laying down the general rule, to which we have already referred, do not afford us any assistance in construing the Bijni Succession Act which neither bears any similarity to any of them in its provisions, nor are in any respect pari materia with any of them. As the learned Advocate-General has submitted, the authority of a decision whether it is to apply or not to apply to a different statute is of little value. Jessel, M. R., in (1882) 22 Ch D 484 (69), said:

Now as regards Little's case (70) of course it is binding on this Court whenever you get the identical circumstances, but it is not binding if you consider it a case of construction; because nothing is better settled than that the construction put upon an instrument by a Court of law or equity is not binding on another Court

67. Shankar Baksh v. Hardeo Baksh, (1891) 16 Cal 397=16 I A 71=5 Sar 299 (P C).

68. Mahammad Abdus Samad v. Kurban Husain, (1904) 26 All 119=31 I A 30=8 Sar 593 (P C).

69. In re New Callao, (1882) 22 Ch D 484=52 L J Ch 283=48 L T 251=31 W R 185.

70. (1878) 8 Ch D 806.

of law or equity, even of inferior jurisdiction, as regards the construction of an instrument couched in somewhat similar language.

Fifthly, Mr. Das has drawn our attention to certain decisions in which the effect of subsequent legislation upon pending suits have been considered. The general law of course is that the law as it existed at the date when an action was commenced must decide the rights of the parties in the suit, unless the legislature expresses a clear intention to vary the relation of litigant parties to each other: the words used must appear to the Court to compel them to give the law an ex post facto operation, (1837) 6 A & E 943 (71). Cases illustrative of this general rule (that when the law is altered during the pendency of an action the rights of the parties are decided according to the law as it existed when the action was begun unless the new statute shows a clear intention to vary such rights) are noted in Maxwell's Interpretation of Statutes 7th Edn., p. 192; 31 L J Ex 230 (72), 31 L J Q B 4 (73), 44 L J Q B 22 (74) and 4 H & N 76 (75). One of the cases relied upon by Mr. Das is 2 Ex 22 (55), which was a case in which the question was whether a new enactment could defeat a pending action for a wager already commenced, that is to say an action for enforcement of a vested right. Parke B, while observing that the general rule is nova constitutio futuris formam, etc., laid down there that that rule which is one of construction only will yield to a sufficiently expressed intention of the legislature that the enactment should have a retrospective operation. He said:

In some cases the legislature has thought it just to make enactments retrospective even at some sacrifice of general principles. But then it does so on express terms; and generally, I believe invariably, couples the retrospective enactment with the best indemnity in favour of vested rights which the nature of the case admits.

In (1875) 1 Ch D 48 (62), Jessel, M. R., in considering the effect of S. 10, Judicature Act, 1875, upon a winding up which had already commenced, observes:

I so decide because it is a general rule that when the legislature alters the rights of parties by taking away or conferring on them only right of action, its enactments unless in express terms they apply to pending actions, do not affect them.

A large number of important decisions bearing on the question of retrospective operation of statutes of pending actions were reviewed by McCardie, J. in (1823) 128 L T 342 (76). Some of these decisions also have been laid before us, the rule being everywhere stated in the same cogent fashion. It was argued that it would be attributing the grossest form of injustice to the legislature to proceed on the assumption that when an action has already commenced the legislature has passed an enactment turning a good claim into a bad claim, a good suit into a bad suit, without making any provision for cost and compensation in the shape of indemnity. If however that provision of the enactment itself is clear, unambiguous and compelling in its meaning, the absence of a provision as to costs or compensation is not quite material. And it may be stated also that the Code makes a provision, which leaves the discretion of the Court so wide in the matter of costs that it may be safely assumed that in cases in which a pending action is affected by a new enactment a proper order, even though it be an order entitling an unsuccessful party for costs against the successful one, may not be beyond the competency of the Court, provided of course the claim of the unsuccessful party is found prima facie to be a good claim under the law as it previously stood. Certain Indian decisions have also been referred to in this connexion, none laying down any principle other than this that in order to affect a pending suit, there must be something in the Act itself clearly indicating such an intention on the part of the legislature. The cases are 57 Cal 796 (77); 35 C W N 1047 (78); 39 C W N 1006 (79); 39 C W N 1213 (80). The cases turned on the special language and feature of the particular enactments to 71. Hitchcock v. Way, (1837) 6 A & E 943=2 N & P 72=6 L J K B 215.

72. Thistleton v. Frewer, (1862) 31 L J Ex 230.

73. Wright v. Greenroyd, (1862) 31 L J Q B 4=1 B & S 758=8 Jur N S 98=5 L T 347.

74. Comp. Leman v. Housley, (1875) 44 L J Q B 22.

75. Young v. Hughes, (1859) 4 H & N 76=28 L J Ex 161.

76. Bowling v. Camp, (1823) 128 L T 342.

77. Jnanendra Narayan v. Saroda Sundari, 1931 Cal 25=129 I C 355=57 Cal 796.

78. Debendra v. Pashupati, 1932 Cal 198=136 I C 889=35 C W N 1047.

79. Jagamohan Ghose v. Behari Barui, (1935) 39 C W N 1006.

80. Brojendra Kumar v. Sushil Chandra, 1936 Cal 334=163 I C 270=63 Cal 368=39 C W N 1213.

which they related and which bear no similarity to the Bijni Succession Act. The case in 48 C L J 150 (81) has also been referred to in which the decision in (1905) A C 369 (82) was relied on for holding that a right of appeal is not a mere matter of procedure but a vested right accruing as on the date of commencement of the suit. On behalf of the respondents reliance was placed on the decision in the case in (1882) 9 Q B D 672 (83) in which there are certain remarks which the respondents desire to use in their favour. The special features of that case are explained in the decision of this Court in 39 C W N 1213 (80). They have also referred to the recent decision of the Judicial Committee in 40 C W N 263 (84). It would be sufficient to say that the considerations that arose in that case were widely different. Several other cases were also placed before us on their behalf of which one deserves mention: 31 C L J 463 (85), which suggests no departure from the general rule that

The rule that enactments in a statute are generally to be construed to be prospective and intended to regulate the future conduct of persons is deeply founded on good sense and strict justice and in the absence of clear words to that effect, a statute will not be construed so as to take away a vested right of action acquired before it was passed.

For the purpose of deciding the second question, we shall have to construe the Act for ourselves, bearing in mind the cardinal rules of construction. But before we proceed to do so it would be convenient to deal with two matters which arise at the outset. Firstly we have been asked on behalf of the appellant to look into the statement of objects and reasons for the enactment. To this the respondents object; but at the same time the respondent, by way of retaliation as it were, have referred us to the debates in the Legislative Council relating to the passing of the enactment. We think we are precluded from looking into either of these things. Proceedings of the legislature in passing an Act including statements of objects and reasons, and debates of the legislature must be excluded from consideration: 22 I A 107 (86). Nor are we at liberty to construe the Act by any reference to the Bill in its original form: (1892) A C 498 (31) at p. 501. The Judicial Committee has said in 47 I A 33 (87) at p. 42:

No statement made on the introduction of the measure or its discussion can be looked at as affording any guidance as to the meaning of the words.

Also, as was observed by Denman, C. J. in 12 Ad & E 381 (88):

We are pressed with a history of the introduction of this proviso into the Act in its passage through Parliament. Of such facts, if capable of being ascertained, we are not permitted judicially to take notice. The law must ever be interpreted by the general rules of construction and we cannot travel out of its language in search of any supposed intention.

Another matter that arises is whether in construing S. 4 of the Act or rather the first two sub-sections of that section we should confine our attention to that section or the said two sub-sections alone or whether we should look at the rest of the Act as well. On behalf of the respondents we have been asked to adopt the former course, because certain difficulties were felt in construing the rest of the Act in the light of certain submissions that were made on their behalf. It was said that we need not trouble to consider whether a particular interpretation of S. 4 would fit in with the rest of the Act, because no question as regards the rest of the Act has yet arisen and any such question will be dealt with when, if ever, it does arise. We are of opinion that we must take the whole of the Act into consideration, and if any construction of S. 4 does not fit in with the rest of the Act we must reject it and look for some other construction which would apply to all parts of the Act equally well. But in doing so we shall not be permitted to alter the meaning of what is of itself clear and explicit. In (1876) 4 Ch D 585 (42) Jessel, M. R. expressed the rule in this way:

There is no doubt a rule applicable to Acts of Parliament as well as to other legal instru-

81. Shaikh Sardarali v. Sheikh Daliluddi Ostagar, 1928 Cal 640=113 I C 49=32 C W N 1130=48 C L J 150 (F B).

82. Colonial Sugar Refining Co. v. Irving, (1905) A C 369=74 L J P C 77=92 L T 738.

83. Quilton v. Mapleson, (1882) 9 Q B D 672.

84. K. O. Mukerji v. Mt. Ram Ratan Kuer, 1936 P C 49=160 I C 105=15 Pat 268=40 C W N 263 (P C).

85. Promotho Nath Pal v. Sourav Dasi, 1920 Cal 435=58 I C 327=24 C W N 1011=47 Cal 1108=31 C L J 463.

86. Administrator-General v. Premlal, (1895) 22 Cal 788=22 I A 107=6 Sar 603 (P C).

87. Krishna Ayyanger v. Nallaperumal Pillai, 1920 P C 56=56 I C 163=47 I A 33=43 Mad 550 (P C).

88. Q. v. Capel, (1841) 12 Ad & E 381=4 P & D 87=9 L J M C 65=4 Jur 886.

ments, that you may control the plainest words by reference to the context. But then, as has been said very often, you must have a context even more plain, or at least as plain as the word to be controlled.

The Rule is also expressed thus :

It is only when any part of the Act of Parliament is penned obscurely and when other passages can elucidate that obscurity, that recourse ought to be had to such context for that purpose. No rule of construction can require that when the words of one part of a statute convey a clear meaning it shall be necessary to introduce another part of a statute for the purpose of controlling or diminishing the efficacy of the first part. [Craies on Statute Law, p. 93, referring to (1784) 1 Leach C. C. (Edn. 4) 355 (89) and (1831) 2 D & Cl 480 (90) at 489].

Of the rule of construction to be adopted not many need be cited. One of the leading rules may be quoted, as the first rule from the language of Tindal, C. J. when delivering the opinion of the Judges in 11 Cl & F 85 (91) at p. 143 :

The only rule for the construction of Acts of Parliament is that they should be construed according to the intent of the Parliament which passed it. If the words of the statute are in themselves precise and unambiguous, then no more can be necessary than to expound those words in their natural and ordinary sense. The words themselves alone do in such cases best declare the intention of the law-giver. But if any doubt arises from the terms employed by the legislature, it has always been held a safe means of collecting the intention, to call in aid the ground and cause of making the statute and to have recourse to the preamble, which according to Dyer, C. J. in 1 Plow 353 (92) at p. 369, is 'a key to open the mind of the makers of the Act and the mischief they are intended to redress.'

A second rule, which may be availed of where a doubt arises, whether general words have been used in general or particular sense has been expressed thus by Turner, L. J. in (1854) 6 D G M & G 1 (93), quoting from 1 Plow 201 (94) at p. 204 :

Expositions have always been founded upon the intent of the Legislature, which they (the sages of law) have collected sometimes by considering the cause and necessity of making the Act, sometimes by comparing one part of the Act with another, and sometimes by foreign circumstances.

A third rule is to be found in 2 H & C 178=159 E R 178 (95) in which Pollock, C. B. pointed out the dangers of travelling out of the Act itself and observed :

In construing the statute it is our duty to ascertain the true legal meaning of the words used by the legislature and to collect the intention from the statute itself, either the preamble or the enactments, and not to make out the intention from some other sources of information and then construe the words of the statute in order to meet the assumed intention.

And there is a fourth rule, which is very important as it lays down the order in which one should proceed. Sir W. Page Wood, V. C., in 4 K & J 367 at 369=70 E R 154 (96) has said :

In construing any Act of the legislature the verbal construction of the particular section in question, if it be plain and simple, must govern the Court in arriving at its conclusion. If there be any doubt or difficulty in the wording of the particular section in question, the Court is entitled to look first at the circumstances attending the passing of the Act, next at the preamble, as far as it affords any indication which may serve as a key to the interpretation of the Act, and then, I may add, to the whole purport and scope of the Act to be collected from the various clauses other than the particular clause the meaning of which is in dispute.

Bearing in mind the procedure laid down in the decision last mentioned let us first of all examine S. 4, sub-s. (1). The sub-section contains a clear and unequivocal declaration :

Raja Jogendra Narain Bhup is hereby declared and shall during his lifetime be the holder of the Raja with title dating from his nomination to the succession made by Rani Abhoyeswari Debi on 28th September 1895.

Sub-s. (2) also contains a declaration about Bairabendra succeeding as the holder of the Raj upon the death of Raja Jogendra. The declaration in sub-s. (1) therefore though made 'hereby,' that is to say as at the time when the Act comes into operation, does, by its own words, go back to the nomination at the one end and the death of the other of Raja Jogendra giving him a continuous status as holder of the Raj during the entire period. There is no question, upon the words used, of the declaration having anything to do with any period antecedent to the nomination. And commencing from the nomination and ending with his natural life the same status is assured to him. There is no question of any further retrospective or prospective 89. Palmer's Case, (1784) 1 Leach 355.

90. Warburton v. Loveland, (1831) 2 D & Cl 480 =6 Bligh (N S) 1.

91. Sussex Peerage Case, (1844) 11 Cl & F 85=8 Jur 793=65 R R 11.

92. Stowel v. Lord Zouch, 1 Plow 353.

93. Hawkins v. Gathercol, (1854) 6 D G M & G 1=24 L J Ch 332=1 Jur (N S) 481=3 W R 194.

94. Stradling v. Morgan, 1 Plow 201.

95. Attorney-General v. Sillem, (1863) 2 H & C 178=159 E R 178.

96. Cope v. Doherty, (1858) 4 K & J 367=70 E R 154=2 De Gex & J 614.

operation of the declaration. It does not matter for the purposes of the cases before us, whether the declaration contained in S. 3 is retrospective in its operation. As regards S. 5 the word 'shall' being used in the proviso contained in that section, the section, as an enactment, is prospective. So also are the sections that follow. So far then, no doubt or difficulty arises.

Then, what is the status that has been declared in sub-s. (1)? The answer must be,—The status of Holder of the Raj with title to that status as obtained by the nomination. 'The Raj' or 'The Bijni Raj' is defined as a group of estates, etc.: S. 2 (1), and the estates are listed in the Schedule. 'The Holder of the Raj' or 'The Holder' means the owner of the Raj: S. 2 (3). It thus appears that instead of declaring the title of Raja Jogendra to the estates, etc., which comprise the Raj, his title as 'Holder of the Raj' is declared, the expression 'Holder of the Raj' meaning that he is the owner of group of estates, etc., which constitute the Raj. The form in which the declaration is expressed suggests that the group of estates, etc., constitutes one entire entity to which Raja Jogendra having succeeded as owner by virtue of his nomination acquired the status of the 'Holder' and that the status he so acquired would continue throughout his life. The question at once arises whether he would remain 'the Holder' only so long as he remains owner of the estates, or whether he will cease to be 'the Holder' if he loses the estates in whole or in part, or whether on the other hand it was the intention of the Legislature that he would in no case lose his title as owner either to all the estates or any of them. It is clear to our minds that there are no words in the two sub-sections or, for the matter of that, in the whole of the section, either expressly or by implication answering the questions. And yet the question has to be answered in order to make out whether the claim of title, if any, of persons other than Raja Jogendra or Bhairabendra to the properties or any of them would be barred by the declarations. We have therefore to travel outside S. 4 and try to collect the intention.

First, as to the circumstances attending the passing of the Act. Of these all that we have are the litigations, some of which had already come to an end and others which were pending. They by themselves do not throw much light, for nowhere in the Act are any of them referred to; and regarded as circumstances attending the passing of an Act they are at best equivocal for they leave us where we were, not enabling us to ascertain what exactly was the kind of mischief that was sought to be prevented or remedied by the Act.

The next thing to look into is the preamble. The decisions are quite clear that the preamble may always be referred to for the purpose of ascertaining generally the scope of the Act, where the enacting words are ambiguous: (1828) 7 B & C 643 (97); (1830) 1 B & Ad 538 (98); (1844) 11 Cl & F 85 (91); (1880) 16 Ch D 368 (99); (1891) A C 531 (100); (1903) A C 443 (101); that the enacting words of the Act are not always to be limited by the words of the preamble and must in many instances go beyond it, and where they do so they cannot be cut down by reference to it: (1848) 2 Ex 256 (102); (1852) 18 Q B 789 (103); (1876) 4 Ch D 395 (104); (1883) 8 A C 386 (105); (1897) 2 Q B 242 (106); (1907) 1 K B 205 (107), and that on the other hand, the preamble does not extend the provisions of the Act beyond what the enacting part of the Act contains: (1744) 3 Atk 203 at 204=26 E R 918 (108); (1898) 2 Q B 578 (109); (1894) 1 K B 811 (110). The mischief intended to be remedied by the scope and purview of the Act, as stated in the preamble, is:

Whereas it is expedient to declare and supplement the customary succession in the group of estates known as the Bijni Raj in Assam with a view to the prevention of disputes and the preservation of the Raj.

97. D. Bywater v. Brandling, (1828) 7 B & C 643.
98. Halton v. Cove, (1830) 1 B & A D 538=9 L J K B 74.
99. Crowder v. Stewart, (1880) 16 Ch D 368=50 L J Ch 136=29 W R 831.
100. Commissioners of Income-Tax v. Pemsel, (1891) A C 531.
101. Fenton v. Thorley & Co. Ltd., (1903) A C 443=72 L J K B 787=89 L T 314=52 W R 81=19 T L R 684.
102. Salkeld v. Johnson, (1848) 2 Ex 256.
103. Pocock v. Pickering, (1852) 18 Q B 789.
104. Taylor v. Corporation of Oldham, (1876) 4 Ch D 395.
105. Overseas of West Ham v. Ides, (1883) 8 A C 386.
106. Powell v. Kempton Racecourse Co., (1897) 2 Q B 242=66 L J Q B 601=77 L T 2=46 W R 8=61 J P 548.
107. Fetcher v. Birkenhead Corporation, (1907) 1 K B 205.
108. Basset v. Basset, (1744) 3 Atk 203=26 E R 918.
109. Kinnaird v. Cory & Son, (1898) 2 Q B 578.
110. Walter v. Lane, (1894) 1 K B 811.

The legislature therefore aims at prevention of disputes and preservation of the Raj and with that object in view proceeds to declare and supplement that customary law of succession. Does it intend by the Act to prevent all kinds of disputes possible and to preserve the Raj from all attacks? The answer cannot be in the affirmative; for it undertakes a legislation which covers only one particular branch of the law, namely the customary law of succession. As it is only the customary law of succession which the Legislature proceeds to declare and supplement, it is only such disputes and such attacks as may injure the Raj in the absence of such law that were meant to be settled or repelled. It follows therefore that the avowed object of the legislature in passing the enactment was to remedy a mischief due to the absence of a proper piece of legislation dealing with the succession to the Raj. Therefore the meaning of S. 4, which we have been trying to ascertain, of the declaration contained in its sub-ss. (1) and (2) is, according to the preamble, that the said sub-sections purport to declare the title to the status of 'the holder of the Raj' as owner by right of succession of the entire entity of the group of estates, etc., as constituting the Raj, as distinguished from the title to the properties themselves. The words of the enactment, which are of doubtful import, are neither cut down nor extended if this meaning is attributed to them. Next we proceed to see what is the scope and purview of the Act and for that purpose we have to examine the other parts of the Act, other than the particular clause that we have to construe. Lord Moulton in (1913) A C 546 (111) has observed:

While it is admissible to use the full title of an Act to throw light upon its progress and scope it is not legitimate to give any weight in this respect to the short title which is chosen merely for convenience, its object being identification and not description.

And in the same case there is an observation of Lord Parker, which is important and should be borne in mind when examining the other parts of the enactment. He said:

It does not appear to me to be consonant with sound principles of construction to cut down the plain meaning and effect of one section of an Act because if this meaning and effect be given to the section certain provisions of another section might be otiose.

The short title is, "The Bijni Succession Act, 1931;" the full title is, "An Act to Regulate the Succession in the Bijni Raj."

The full title must not be neglected or disregarded and it may be some guide to the meaning: Per Williams, J. in (1836) 2 Hr & W 9 (112); per Lord Denman, C. J. in (1842) 2 Q B 646 (113); per Coleridge, J. in (1852) 18 Q B 93 (114); per Willes, J. in (1890) 25 Q B D 99 (115); per Chitty, J. in (1888) 39 Ch D 524 (116); per Kekewich, J. in (1900) 1 Ch 749 (117); per Lord Macnaughten in (1903) A C 443 (118). The full title and preamble have been often used to determine the scope and the purview of the Act and the object of the Legislature: see e.g. Per Jessel M. R. in (1879) 12 Ch D 655 (119); (1898) A C 210 (120). They as well as the rest of the enacting part of the statute are to be all taken together: (1826) 3 Add 210=162 E R 456 (121). Both the preamble and the full title plainly indicate that it is the succession to the Raj with which the Act is concerned. This is not a case in which there is any conflict, either real or apparent, as between the preamble and the enacting part that is before us for construction. Now let us examine the other parts of the enactment. S. 5 speaks of the persons entitled to nominate; S. 6 of confirmation of nomination and the effect of the confirmation; S. 7 provides for appointment in case of failure of nomination; S. 8 states that publication in the Gazette of a nomination confirmed or an appointment made is 112. Smith v. Preston, (1836) 2 Hr & W 9.

113. Hinton v. Dibbin, (1842) 2 Q B 646=2 G & D 36=6 Jur 601.

114. Blake v. Midland Railway Company, (1852) 18 Q B 93=21 L J Q B 233=16 Jur 562.

115. Kenrick & Co. v. Lawrence & Co., (1890) 25 Q B D 99=38 W R 779.

116. East and West India Dock Co. v. Shaw Savill & Albion Co., (1888) 39 Ch D 524=57 L J Ch 1038=60 L T 142.

117. Attorney General v. Marget Pier & Harbour Co., (1900) 1 Ch 749=69 L J Ch 331=82 L T 448.

118. Fenton v. Thorley & Co. Ltd., (1903) A C 443=72 L J K B 787=89 L T 314=52 W R 81=19 T L R 684.

119. Griffiths Carr v. Griffith, (1879) 12 Ch D 655.

120. Dartford Rural Council v. Bexley Heath & Co. Ltd., (1898) A C 210=67 L J Q B 231=77 L T 601=46 W R 235=14 T L R 91=62 J P 227.

121. Brett v. Brett, (1826) 3 Add 210=162 E R 456.

111. National Telephone Co. Ltd. v. Post Master General, (1913) A C 546=82 L J K B 1197=109 L T 562=57 S J 661=29 T L R 637.

conclusive of such nomination or appointment. All these sections deal with succession to the Raj.

Section 9 is very important. It makes provision for administration of the Raj when there is no holder; for it says, "pending the confirmation of the nomination or pending the appointment, as the case may be, of the next holder;" that is to say, it speaks of a period during which there is no holder. It also speaks of an "Incoming Holder." Can it be suggested that when there is no holder there is nobody who has title as owner to the estates, etc., comprising the Raj? The answer clearly is, No. The meaning is that so long as there has been no confirmation of a nomination made, or no appointment made of anybody giving him the status of a holder, the estates etc., are not without an owner and the title to them rests with somebody, that is to say, with the true owner, whoever he may be, and it is only their administration that is provided for by the section. This, in our opinion, removes the doubt that we felt as to the meaning of S. 4, sub-ss. (1) and (2), and makes it plain that the expression "Holder of the Raj" or "Holder" was not intended to exclude the title of anybody on any ground other than succession to the Raj, the rules as to which are laid down in the Act. Proceeding to consider the different clauses of S. 10 we find that they unmistakably show that it is possible that at some time or other the properties, the whole of them or in part, may have passed to outsiders by transfer made in contravention of the provisions of sub-s. (1) of that section, a transfer which is declared void by sub-s. (2) of that section, and yet the holder remains the holder notwithstanding such transfer. Sub-s. (3) of S. 10 provides that in the case of a transfer made in contravention of sub-s. (1) any holder would be competent to institute a suit for recovery of the property transferred within 12 years from the date of death of the transferor, or if on such death he is subject to any disability then within three years from the cessation of such disability, whichever of the two is the longer period.

The extent to which Limitation Act is intended to be affected by this Act is thus expressly specified in S. 10, sub-s. (3). It is important to notice that according to the provision contained in S. 10, the holder of the Raj is given a special period of time within which he may sue for recovery of properties transferred by the previous holder in contravention of the law, and if no such suit is commenced within that period the transferee who was holding under such void transfer cannot be defeated thereafter. In the circumstances last mentioned, the holder remains the holder but the title to the transferred properties comes to be in the transferee. The status and the title are then in two different persons. The savings contained in S. 11 need not be detailed, but they are of importance as specifying the extent to which the general law is intended to be affected. S. 12 deals with succession-fee, and S. 13 with the power to frame rules relating to nominations, confirmation of nomination, temporary administration when there has been no nomination or confirmation of nomination or no appointment, and succession fees, and generally to carry out the purposes of the Act.

The whole Act appears to us to be entirely consistent with the preamble and the short title and none of the provisions contained in the sections carry the object of the Act beyond that which is declared by the preamble and denoted by the short title. In our judgment it must be held that the Act is confined to the succession to the Raj, and any title otherwise than on the basis of succession which anybody may have to the properties of the Raj or any portion thereof appears to us clearly to be outside the scope and purview of the enactment. And we are of opinion that the only title that sub-ss. (1) and (2) of S. 4 purport to declare, and the only title which S. 8 speaks of, is title as holder of the Raj on the basis of succession, either by nomination or by appointment and no title based on any other ground. Any other view would, in our opinion, be inconsistent with the words of S. 4 of the Act, read along with the context, the scheme and the intent of the Act. It follows that suit No. 84 of 1930 in which the plaintiffs claim is based upon, an alleged title acquired by adverse possession even though that claim is in respect of the properties which constitute the Bijni Raj as defined in the Act, but does not concern any question of status as the holder of the Raj or any question of succession is not barred by the Act. It also follows, that suit No. 164 of 1930 in which the plaintiffs' claim is solely based on their alleged right of succession to the Bijni Raj is hit by S. 4, sub-ss. (1) and (2) and cannot succeed. In dismissing suit No. 84 the Subordinate Judge has said :

It is apparent that in view of S. 4 (1), Bijni Act, there could be no question of acquisition of title by Abhoyeswari by adverse possession ; for, in the first place, she had not completed 12 years' possession before 28th September 1895 from which the title of defendant 1 was declared by the section to commence, and secondly Abhoyeswari must be deemed to have abandoned her alleged adverse possession by the very fact of her nominating defendant 1 to the succession of Bijni Raj on that day.

In our judgment the title which was declared by S. 4 of the Act is the title to succession based upon the nomination as made on 28th September 1895, and had nothing to do with any title based on adverse possession that might have accrued to any other person and, therefore, the declaration contained in S. 4 of the Act did not affect such title. The question whether Rani Abhoyeswari, by the nomination that she made, abandoned her adverse possession or should be deemed to have done so, or whether she completed the requisite period of adverse possession at all or in any manner is a question of fact which will have to be tried on evidence adduced by the parties and is not a pure question of construction of the provisions of the Act. So far as S. 9 of the Act has any bearing on the question, we are clearly of opinion that the enactment contained in it is expressly prospective in its language. The Subordinate Judge has held that suit No. 84, in so far as it concerns properties situated outside the province of Assam, may proceed because the plaintiff's claim in that suit is based on adverse possession and he has also observed that this was conceded by the Advocate General. As in our judgment the Bijni Succession Act does not affect a claim based on adverse possession, the Judge's reason applies to the whole of the claim in suit and the whole suit will now proceed in spite of the Act. In connexion with both the suits the learned Judge has also observed :

As S. 4 (1) is an enacting and operative part of the Act the defendants (meaning plaintiffs), for reasons already stated, cannot be allowed to question the fact or the date of nomination of defendant 1 for succession to the Raj. They cannot also be allowed to prove, as against S. 4 (1) of the Act, the alleged custom or Kulachar of succession as put forward in their plaint. The conclusion is, therefore, that by expressly declaring the title of the defendant 1 with effect from 28th September 1895 the Act by necessary intendment and implication and nonetheless effectively imposed insurmountable bar to the present suits.

These observations in so far as they lay down that the plaintiffs in the two suits are debarred from questioning the correctness of the declaration contained in S. 4 of the Act are undoubtedly correct. But while the plaintiffs in Suit No. 164 by being so debarred are precluded from establishing the only ground on which their alleged title rests, the plaintiff in Suit No. 84 whose alleged title rests on adverse possession on the part of Rani Abhoyeswari does not necessarily stand in need of proving or disproving any of the matters which are covered by the declaration, but if he does require to go into any of those matters he also is barred to that extent.

It has been argued on behalf of the contesting respondents in these appeals that if the interpretation that we have indicated above is to be accepted, then the intention of the legislature would be frustrated because the legislature aimed at the preservation of the Raj, and it would then be open to any person to attack it from outside and injure it. The answer to this argument is that the legislature for reasons of its own has not provided for all possible or conceivable contingencies and, at any rate, for no contingencies other than such as arose or would arise on the ground of succession to the Raj.

There remain now to consider a few special arguments which have been advanced to us by Mr. Gunada Churn Sen and Mr. J. N. Sen in connection with Appeal No. 205 of 1933. Mr. Gunada Churn Sen, appearing on behalf of the appellants in that appeal, while adopting all the arguments of Mr. Das has submitted a special contention with regard to the two items of property which lie outside the territorial limits of the Province of Assam. He has argued that his client's title (i. e. of the plaintiffs in Suit No. 164) to those properties at any rate are unaffected by the Bijni Succession Act inasmuch as the Act being an Act of the Assam Legislature has no force outside the Province of Assam. Now, it is a general presumption that the legislation of a country is territorial and that the Legislature does not intend to exceed its jurisdiction. But the scheme of the Act may be such as to affect properties outside the territorial limits of jurisdiction of a particular legislature and this generally happens when the legislation is intended to act through a person who is within such jurisdiction. In Maxwell on Interpretation of Statutes, Edn. 7, p. 123, the law is thus expressed:

The state has a right to impose its legislation on its subjects, natural and naturalised, in every part of the world; and on such matters as personal status or capacity it is understood always to do so; but with that exception, in the absence of an intention clearly expressed or to be inferred either from its language or from the object, subject matter, or history of the enactment, the presumption is that Parliament does not design its statute to operate on its subjects beyond the territorial limits of the United Kingdom. They are, therefore, to be read usually, as if words to that effect had been inserted in them.

In the Bijni Succession Act there is no definition of its Local Extent. On the other hand the scheme of the Act is such as would plainly indicate that the Bijni Raj consists of a group of estates in Assam (See preamble and schedule) with other properties moveable and immovable, wherever situate, as additions and accretions to the said group of estates: See S. 2, Cl. (1); and that the entire Bijni Raj is intended to be dealt with by the Act in so far as the status of its 'Holder' is concerned. The nature of the enactment which purports to lay down the customary law by which the succession to the Raj is to be governed indicates that the intention of the Legislature is to treat the subject matter as lying within the territorial limits of the Province, moveable and immovable properties appertaining to the subject matter but lying outside the province being regarded as 'additions and accretions'. The assumption of this position is probably also historically correct; in any event, there is nothing to suggest the contrary. In such circumstances we think we should hold that the Act applies to the status of the Holder of the Raj wherever the properties appertaining to the Raj may be situate, and that the Assam Legislature did intend the Act to operate even outside the territorial limits of the Province of Assam and was within its authority in legislating on that footing.

Mr. Sen has next argued that the items of properties situated outside the province of Assam are not 'additions' or 'accretions' within the definition of 'Bijni Raj' or 'Raj' as contained in S. 2, Cl. (1) of the Act; but that those words are to be understood as implying such interests other than proprietary rights as the interest of a tenant or a sub-tenant in alluvial accretions, encroachments, etc. We do not find any justification for putting such a narrow meaning upon the words. He has also contended that there is nothing to show that the items of properties lying outside the province of Assam were not acquired by one or other of the previous Rajas of Bijni, and that if they were so acquired they would not be covered by the definition referred to above. It may be pointed out here that no question was raised by the plaintiffs in their additional statement in the Court below that such properties were not 'additions' or 'accretions' within the meaning of the Act or that the Act did not apply to them. But in any case there does not seem to us to be any substance in this objection, because any previous Raja would come within the expression 'Holder of the Raj' or 'Holder' as defined in the Act. If that be so then acquisitions that may have been made by Raja Kumud Narain or Raja Amrita Narain must have been made by them in their capacity as 'the Holder' as defined. In the definition of 'the Bijni Raj' or 'the Raj' the expression used is 'may have been or may hereafter be made from time to time' an expression which embraces the past, the present and the future. Besides, there are in the said definition the words, "by or on behalf of the Holder." It may be repeated that the claim of these plaintiffs is based entirely on an alleged right of succession and a title by adverse possession or on any other footing finds no place (vide para. 19 of the plaint in Suit No. 164).

1936 O/79 & 80

Mr. J. N. Sen, as already stated, appeared in Appeal No. 205 of 1933 on behalf of the respondent, Maharaj Kumar Prince Victor Nityendra Narayan, who was the defendant 5 in the suit. The prince, as a defendant in the suit and a respondent in the appeal has been impleaded as represented by a Trustee in bankruptcy in London. He was impleaded as a party defendant as he had purported to purchase the Raj by a conveyance from Uday Narain dated 14th February 1922. The plaintiffs challenged this conveyance alleging, that at the time of the sale-deed the said Kumar Uday Narain Deb was seriously ill and hard pressed for money. The said Maharaj Kumar Prince Victor Nityendra Narain had the said deed executed in his own favour by exercising undue influence and coercion.

The trustee in Bankruptcy did not appear or contest the suit and has not entered appearance in the appeal. In the bankruptcy proceedings the Prince has been finally discharged. When the appeal came on for hearing he applied to be added as a party respondent for himself, so that he may support the appellants, the plaintiffs, in their contentions in so far as they are directed against the decree dismissing the suit. To this application two objections were taken on behalf of the other respondents. One is that the decree dismissing the suit is a decree in favour of the Prince, and in as much as he is not adversely affected but rather benefited by the decree he cannot claim to be added in order to help the plaintiffs in carrying on the suit further as against himself; and the other is that the order of discharge in the bankruptcy proceedings had not the effect of restoring to him the title to the estate which had vested in the Trustee on the adjudication order; in other words, that he has no right, title or interest in the properties, such as would entitle him to come in the appeal as a party in his own right and as apart from a party represented by the Trustee. So far as the first of these objections is concerned we do not see much force in it, for the Prince having been made a party to the suit and being a party to the decree has the right to show, even as a respondent in the appeal and even though the effect of setting aside the decree be to re open the suit as against him, that the decree was wrongly passed. And as regards the second objection it would, we think, be sufficient to say that the application of the Prince was not for striking off the Trustee in bankruptcy from the record but only for getting himself added as a respondent in order to enable him to support the appellant. Very wide powers are given to the Court to add a party to a suit or an appeal and the addition, if permitted, will not be taken to decide any question of title to the properties as between him and the trustee or the creditors. In such circumstances, we have allowed the Prince to be added as a party respondent without prejudice to the right of any body in the properties involved in the suit. Mr. J. N. Sen, on behalf of the Prince while purporting to support the appellants by adopting the arguments of Mr. Das, has put forward only one additional contention. It is this that the legislature had no authority to make any enactment which had the effect of forfeiting or confiscating one man's properties for the benefit of another and that in any event it can exercise no such power unless adequate provision is made by it for compensation to the party injured. He has sought to support this contention by reference to certain decisions, amongst which reference may be made to (1893) 1 Ch 16 (122) and (1920) A C 508 (123). We have noticed the contention but only for the purpose of rejecting it; the legislature in the present enactment has passed no provision forfeiting or confiscating the property of any person; it has merely declared a rule of succession which according to it, is the customary law, and has only supplemented that law where, in its view, it needed supplementing.

Mr. Bose appearing on behalf of Bhairabendra in Appeal No. 171 of 1933 has pressed the cross-objection which his client has preferred in that appeal. The cross-objection relates to the items of properties with regard to which the claim of the plaintiff in the suit out of which that appeal has emerged has been held not hit by the Act. The cross-objection has not been filed in the shape of a cross-objection which the Code contemplates. But as the grounds are contained in a petition of Bhairabendra filed in Court within the time allowed by law for filing cross-objections, we have allowed the petition to be treated as a petition of cross-objection. In the view that we have taken of the effect of the Act on the whole suit, the cross-objection must be dismissed.

The result of our judgment is: (1) that Appeal No. 171 of 1933 will be allowed and the decree of the Court below in the suit to which it relates being set aside the suit will be remanded to that Court for trial on the issues not yet dealt with, and will after such trial be disposed of; the costs of the Court below will abide the final decision of the suit in that Court, but the costs of this appeal shall be payable by respondent 1 to the appellant; and (2) that Appeal No. 205 of 1933 will be dismissed with costs, respondent 1 being entitled to his costs from the appellants. No further orders for costs are made. The applications are rejected.

122. London and North Western Railway Company v. Evans, (1893) 1 Ch 16=62 L J Ch 1=2 R 120=67 L T 630=41 W R 149.

123. Attorney General v. De Keyser's Royal Hotel Ltd., (1920) A C 508=89 L J Ch 417=122 L T 691=36 T L R 600=64 S J 513.

R.M./R.K. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 627

M. C. GHOSE, J.

Mt. Khairan Nissa—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Mahamad Hussain Bara — Defendant—Respondent.

Appeal No. 1816 of 1933, Decided on 4th June 1936, from appellate decree of Special Sub-Judge, Jorhat, D/- 20th December 1932.

Mahomedan Law — Dower — Divorce — Woman living with husband divorced after many years — Husband providing in Talaknama to pay deferred dower by monthly instalments—Woman should be granted instalment decree.

When a disagreement occurs between a husband and a wife it is very difficult to apportion the blame. Where a woman has lived with her husband as his wife for a period of 15 years, that is to say, during the period of the bloom of her youth and when her early youth is gone she has been divorced and the husband himself felt it right to state in the deed of divorce "Talaknama" that he would pay her deferred dower by monthly instalments, it is fair and equitable that the woman should be allowed an instalment decree. [P 628 C 1, 2]

Woopendra Nath Neogi — for Appellant.

Syed Saadulla and Shyama Prosanna Deb—for Respondent.

Judgment. — This is an appeal by a wife against her husband claiming deferred dower money of Rs. 1,000. The defendant husband is a clerk at Shillong on a salary of Rs. 110 per month. He had married the plaintiff, and apparently they lived together for a period of 14 to 15 years, at the end of which there was disagreement between the parties and she thereafter left his house and went to live with her parents at Sibsagar. Her case was that she was driven out of the house at Shillong. The defendant's case was that she became extremely insubordinate and of her own accord she left his protection after he had duly pronounced a divorce on 2nd May 1927. After the separation she instituted a maintenance case under S. 488, Criminal P. C., and apparently obtained an ex parte order, but when she proceeded to execute the order the defendant in 1930 produced the Talaknama and thereupon the Court dismissed the plaintiff's maintenance suit. The plaintiff's case was that she came to know of the Talaknama in January 1930. Thereafter, on 15th July 1930, the present suit was instituted. The plaintiff being a poor destitute woman was allowed to sue as a pauper.

The trial Court dismissed the suit on the ground of limitation. The Court found that the Talaknama was pronounced on 2nd May 1927. As a period of three years had elapsed from the date of the divorce the claim for dower money was extinguished by limitation. In appeal by the plaintiff the Court of appeal below affirmed the finding of the trial Court and held that the claim for dower money was barred by limitation. For the first time in the Court of appeal the plaintiff urged that if the claim for Rs. 1,000 be barred by limitation the plaintiff may be granted a decree on the basis of the deed of divorce produced by the defendant, for in that Talaknama executed by the defendant on 2nd May 1927 he stated that he would pay the dower money of Rs. 1,000 by monthly instalment, of Rs. 20. The Court of appeal below held that the claim for a monthly instalment was not made in the plaint nor in the first Court, and as she never accepted the offer made by the defendant in the Talaknama she was not entitled to a decree.

The first point in appeal is whether the plaintiff's claim is governed by Art. 116, Lim. Act, on the ground that the deed of dower was registered according to the Mahomedan Marriage Registration Act of 1876. The argument appears to be without substance, for there is apparently no Kabinnama registered even under the Mahomedan Marriage Registration Act. All that there is is the certified copy of the marriage from the register of the Mahomedan Marriage Registrar. In that copy there is a column stating that the prompt dower was Rs. 500 and the deferred was Rs. 1,000. Apart from this there is no other document registered or unregistered. It cannot be said merely because the amount of the deferred dower was stated in the marriage which was registered under the Marriage Registration Act that the matter of the dower was in a registered document.

The next point is whether the plaintiff's claim for Rs. 20 a month according to the Talaknama executed by the defendant can be granted to her. On behalf of the plaintiff it is urged that though the plaintiff claims the whole of Rs. 1,000 in the suit, in the third prayer made by her in the plaint she stated that if for any reason the whole of the dower money could not be granted, anything which the plaintiff was found entitled to might be decreed to her, and that this prayer is sufficiently wide to allow her to take advantage of the offer which the defendant made in the Talaknama. On the other side it is urged that though she was duly informed of the Talaknama in May 1927 she refused to accept the Talaknama. She made a case in the criminal Court claiming maintenance from her husband and he was dragged to the criminal Court and he had to defend himself there. Then she brought three suits, one suit for her ornaments which she said had been kept by the husband, and obtained a decree for Rs. 800, and a second case claiming that the Talaknama was inoperative until 2nd January 1930 when she first came to know of it. That suit was dismissed, it being found that she knew of the Talaknama in May 1927. The present is a third suit instituted by her. It is urged that the husband is a poor clerk and that it was her refusal to live with the husband's mother which led to disagreement and the defendant was forced to divorce her on the ground of her unreasonable conduct and that in spite of the Talaknama of May 1927 she spurned his offer of Rs. 20 a month and even in the plaint she made no claim on that basis and it was not till the appeal Court that she for the first time claimed Rs. 20 a month on the basis of the Talaknama.

The matter is not free from difficulty. When a disagreement occurs between a husband and a wife it is very difficult to apportion the blame. It may be stated that the defendant may reasonably complain of the conduct of the plaintiff in the three years following the divorce in May 1927. But when all things are considered it is to be noted that this poor woman lived with him as his wife for a period of 15 years, that is to say, during the period of the bloom of her youth and now when her early youth is gone she has been divorced. Apparently the defendant himself felt it right to state in the deed of divorce that he would pay her deferred dower of Rs. 1,000 in instalment of Rs. 20 a month.

Having regard to all the circumstances it appears fair and equitable that the plaintiff should be allowed an instalment decree of Rs. 20 a month. It is, however, to be noted that the claim at Rs. 20 a month arose on 2nd May 1927 when the divorce was pronounced. The claim for each month would be barred at the end of three years. In that view when the suit was instituted on 15th July 1930 the claim for three months, namely, Rs. 60, was barred by limitation. She is, therefore, now entitled to get only the balance of the deferred dower, namely Rs. 940 at the rate of Rs. 20 a month. Let a decree be made accordingly that she is entitled to a decree for Rs. 940 in all, but that it will be paid to her by the defendant at the rate of Rs. 20 a month until the sum is liquidated. The appeal is accordingly allowed and the plaintiff's suit decreed in part. Having regard to all the circumstances the parties will bear their own costs throughout. Leave to appeal is refused.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 628

REMFRY, J.

In the matter of Jambad Coal Syndicate, Ltd.

O. O. C. J. Decided on 16th August 1934.

(a) Landlord and Tenant—Rent—Withholding of — Apprehension that third party might claim paramount title against landlord — Tenant cannot withhold payment of rent.

An alleged apprehension that their possession may be disturbed or ended by a party said to have a title paramount to that of their landlords is no excuse for tenants to withhold their rent. [P 629 O 1]

(b) Company — Winding up of — Debt demanded should be presently due — Title of creditor should be complete.

For a winding up order the debt must be presently payable and the title of petitioner demanding it should be complete. The law requires that a demand must be made for a debt that is due, and it is not permissible to support a petition by alleging that something else is due. [P 629 O 1]

(c) Lease—Lease not registered — Landlord cannot claim rent either under S. 53-A, T. P. Act, or under S. 47, Registration Act.

Neither under S. 53-A, T. P. Act, nor the amended S. 47, Registration Act, can a landlord claim rent under an unregistered lease.

[P 629 C 2]

Order.—This is a petition for winding up a public company with limited liability. The ground in the petition is that after the statutory notice the company has failed to pay a debt of some Rs. 72,000 due for royalties and rent. For the company it is stated in the affidavit that a claim by a third party who is alleged to have a title paramount to that of the petitioning company is apprehended, and that as the lease has not been registered the petitioners are not entitled to claim rent or royalties. As far as the first ground is concerned an alleged apprehension, that their possession may be disturbed, or ended by a party said to have a title paramount to that of their landlords, is no excuse for tenants to withhold their rent. The other point is more difficult. It appears that by a consent decree in 1927 the Syndicate, as the company is called, agreed to take a new lease and surrender their old one. This lease has been executed by all the parties and as the affidavit states :

The lease was registered by the company and the Syndicate and various parties. Registration has not been completed by four persons who executed the document, and summonses have been issued to compel registration.

These four persons appear to be interested in the Syndicate. It may be that under S. 35, Registration Act, the company could have completed the registration as regards the parties admitting execution, but that has not been done. The delay in preparing the lease has been caused by difficulties in the company's title. For a winding up order the debt must be presently payable and the title of the petitioner complete. Clearly it is insufficient to show that some other debt is due or even that there is something over Rs. 500 due in respect of the claim made, if that was not the sum claimed. The law requires that a demand must be made for a debt that is due, and it is not permissible to support a petition by alleging that something else is due. The company therefore cannot rely on any admission that Rs. 13,000 and not Rupees 72,000 is due under the former lease if it is in force, nor is it sufficient to allege that Rs. 60,000 is due under the old lease. The demand was not made for rent or royalties under the old lease.

In my opinion it is clear that neither under S. 53-A, T. P. Act, nor the amended S. 47, Registration Act, can a landlord claim rent under an unregistered lease. If the lease required registration I cannot accept the argument that under S. 47, Registration Act, a claim for rent is permissible when the lease is not registered, for that would be to repeal part of the Act. It may be that the Syndicate would have no defence in a suit for specific performance of the agreement, and in fact it is not suggested that the Syndicate has ever refused to execute that lease, but the petitioning company is in the unfortunate position, that without completing the registration of the lease it can only sue for specific performance as a preliminary to a decree for the rent, though doubtless both claims can be made in one suit. It was argued that the rent was due under the consent decree and that a consent decree does not require registration. That is so, but only in so far as it relates to the subject matter of the suit. But the consent decree was not put in nor the pleadings.

It may be that the term as to a fresh lease was the subject-matter of the suit, but it is rather difficult to imagine how it could be. Further it does not appear that any demand was made for payment under the consent decree, and to adopt the classical illustration the petitioner cannot demand payment for beans and then in a petition for winding up the company prove a debt for the same amount due for peas. In my opinion the petitioning company were not in a legal position to make a demand for the rent. The petition is therefore dismissed with costs.

B.D./R.K.

Petition dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 629

D. N. MITTER AND RAU, JJ.

Secy. of State—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Brajendra Kishore Rai Choudhury and others—Respondents.

Appeals Nos. 56 and 68 of 1929, Decided on 26th August 1935, from original decrees of Addl. Sub-Judge, 3rd Court, Sylhet, D/- 24th September 1928.

(a) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), S. 154—Land revenue settlement—Government is sole judge of propriety of classification and suitability of rent.

The invariable rule of law is that at every new settlement there must be a new classification and a new rate of assessment to be determined by the settlement officer under the direction of the Government and with its approval. Government is the sole judge of the propriety of the classification and suitability of the rate and the amount of revenue settled by the Government officer is final. [P 632 C 1]

(b) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886)—Fisheries can be offered separately for settlement and assessed separately from land.

Fisheries included in a lease can be assessed and offered for settlement separately from the other lands of the patta. There is nothing in the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation to prevent such splitting up. [P 632 C 1]

(c) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886)—Beels can be settled separately or assessed on profits.

Government has power to settle the Beels separately or to assess them on their own profits. [P 632 C 2] (d) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), S. 6 (b)—Right founded on adverse possession is legally derived.

A right founded on adverse possession for more than the statutory period is one legally derived right within the meaning of S. 6 (b) of the Regulation : 1922 P C 48 and 1917 Cal 213, Ref. [P 635 C 1]

(e) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), Ch. (6), S. 154—Offer of re-settlement and temporary settlement should be of whole estate.

Regulation does not contemplate the partition of an estate except in the manner provided for in the provisions regarding partition as embodied in Ch. (6) of the Regulation ; and a temporary settlement of a part of the estate, viz, the Beels is in contravention of the provisions of the Regulation making the action of the settlement officer ultra vires of the statutes. Similarly offer of re-settlement should be of the whole estate : Colonial Bank of Australasia v. William, (1874) 5 P C 417, Ref.

[P 635 C 2; P 636 C 1]

(f) Res judicata—Court trying previous suit not competent to try subsequent suit—Finding creates duty on party against whom finding given to displace it—It does not operate as res judicata.

Where the finding is by a Court not competent to try the subsequent suit it cannot operate as res judicata, but the finding creates a paramount duty on the party against whom it is given to displace it : 1922 P C 241, Ref.

[P 637 C 1]

(g) Mesne Profits — Government making settlement ultra vires of its powers is liable for mesne profits to person dispossessed.

Where a settlement by the Government is ultra vires, the possession of the person claiming under the Government is wrongful possession and the Government is liable for mesne profits to the person dispossessed. [P 637 C 2]

(h) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), S. 154 (1)(a)—Composite proceedings partly settlement and partly partition and entirely foreign to Regulation—Civil Court can pronounce such proceedings ultra vires.

Although the validity of a mere settlement cannot be questioned in a civil Court under S. 154

(1) (a), there is no bar to the civil Court pronouncing a composite proceeding partly a settlement and partly a partition entirely foreign to the regulation to be ultra vires. [P 639 C 1]

Pares Lal Shome (in No. 56), Basak and Mukerji (in No 68)—for Appellants. Sen Gupta, Birendra K. De and Ramaprasanna Sen Gupta—for Respondents.

D. N. Mitter, J.—The suit in which these two appeals arise was brought by the plaintiff, now respondent, for several reliefs, viz: (ka) for declaration of plaintiffs' mourashi maliki right by settlement and by right of adverse possession for upwards of 12 years to 1/3 share of the two beels (fisheries) known as Dhola and Baruri beels described more fully in the schedule to the plaint and of the Chapras, Nalas, khals and Kuris attached thereto; (kha) for a declaration that according to the provisions of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation of 1886 the plaintiff is entitled after the expiry of the period of the settlement of 1902 to get fresh settlement at a proper Jama of lands described in the schedule and of the two said beels from Government; (ga) for a declaration that the Government has no right to separate the lands of the beels, Baruri and Dhola, from the other lands of pattas Nos 82 and 129 to assess any rent therefor separately in an arbitrary manner or upon the produce; (gha) for a declaration that the rent which has been demanded on behalf of the Government separately, and unjustly and illegally on account of the land in claim in the schedule is ultra vires, null and void; (cha) for a declaration that with respect to land mentioned in the schedule the settlement which had been granted by the Government in favour of defendants 2, 3 and 4 may be declared void, ultra vires and inoperative; (chha chaa) for recovery of possession if during the pendency of the suit the plaintiff be said to have been dispossessed from the two beels or any portion thereof; (ja) for mesne profits from the month of Pous 1330 B. S. to the time of recovery of possession; (jha) for such other reliefs as plaintiffs may be entitled to and (niya) for costs and for these other reliefs embodied in prayer Una, Chha and Ja in respect of which plaintiff's claim has been dismissed and there is no controversy in the present appeal. The principal defendants to the suit were the Secretary of State for India in Council (Defendant 1) who is the appellant in Appeal No. 68 of 1929 and Hanif Mahi, (Defendant 2), and Karimdi Mahi, (Defendant 3), who are appellants in Appeal No. 56 of 1929 and Madan Mahi, defendant 4, who was party respondent to both these appeals but who has died during the pendency of the appeal. The learned Senior Government Pleader asked for an adjournment in order to bring the legal representatives of defendant 4 on the record. But as these two appeals were very old appeals having been filed in 1929, Dr. Sen Gupta appearing for the plaintiff-respondent objected to the adjournment contending that defendant 4 was not a necessary party to these appeals as the settlement in favour of defendant 4 has been cancelled and agreed that the decree against defendant 4 may be discharged.

The suit was instituted by Brajendra Kishore Rai Choudhury (plaintiff 1), against 47 defendants. Defendants 1 to 4 were described as the principal defendants; amongst the pro forma defendants 5 to 41 were described as the co-sharers defendants; 42 to 47 were lessees under plaintiff 1 and have on their own application been transferred to the category of plaintiffs and are now plaintiffs 2 to 7. The case stated in the plaint is that the plaintiff is the owner in possession in maliki right by settlement and by right of adverse possession of 1/3 share of Baruri covered by illam patta bearing No. 117 ⁴³⁸⁷⁴/₈₂ present No. 2 and No. 149 ⁴³⁸⁷⁴/₈₃ present No. 3 and of the two Beels Baruri and Dhola covered by Illam Pottah bearing No. 118 ⁴³⁹¹³/₁₂ present No. 1 which are fully described in the boundaries in the schedule and that he has been in possession by granting settlement to tenants; that the lands covered by the Beels were waste lands unfit for reclamation and were settled originally under the waste lands rules; that the plaintiff and his predecessors with great care and at enormous cost erected embankments and have turned them into a highly valuable fishery; that the plaintiff has acquired by settlement and by adverse possession for more than 12 years the status of landholder within the meaning of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation and that he is entitled to get fresh settlement from the Government not only of the two Beels but the entire lands described in the schedule; that after the last cadastral survey the lands in the schedule together with other lands were given by Government in Ilak settlement in 1902 for a period of 20 years and the settlement expired in March 1922; that notwithstanding the expiry of the lease the Government accepted for the years 1922-23 from plaintiff and other proprietors mentioned in the patta the entire rent for the entire lands covered by the patta as the Government was bound under the law to do; that there is a custom as to how the rate of rent per bigha is to be fixed for lands settled when patit lands are re-claimed or when the condition of the same is changed and according to the said custom Ilam lands are given in settlement; that if there is any Beel in any Ilam mahal or if any lands in Ilam mahal are converted into Beel, there is no custom that only the lands appertaining to the said Beel should be separated from Ilam mahal or that the land of the Beels should be given in settlement separately, that the Government has right to grant settlement separately of only the Beel lands or to assess revenue upon the produce of the Beel in an arbitrary manner; that on receipt of a notice signed and issued by the Subdivisional Officer of Moulavi Bazar, an agent of defendant 1 on 17th June 1923, the plaintiff came to know that a proposal was made to settle the Beels Baruri and Dhola with the plaintiff at an annual rental of Rs. 500 for a period of three years from 1329 to 1331 B. S.; that on receipt of the said notice the plaintiff appeared before the Subdivisional Officer of Moulavi Bazar and filed a petition of objection on the allegations that the Government had no right to assess any rent arbitrarily and separately only for the two Beels; that the petition of objection having been dismissed by the Subdivisional Officer of Moulvi Bazar, defendants 2 and 3 and defendant 4 (Madan Mahi) on accepting the rental of Rs. 500 fixed by Government, took settlement of the said two Beels from the Government for a period of three years on 17th September 1923 and on 20th September 1923; that the Government however had already realized from the plaintiff and the other proprietors mentioned in the aforesaid two Pattas Nos. 82 and 129 the entire rental for 1329 B. S., at the previously fixed rate; hence the Government had and has no right to accept the rent of Rs. 500 again for 1329 B. S., on account of the lands of the disputed two Beels of Baruri and Dhola; that the plaintiff having refused to take settlement of the Beels Baruri and Dhola at an annual rental of Rs. 500 in accordance with the improper and unjust proposal of the Government, only the lands appertaining to the said two Beels were settled with defendants 2, 3 and 4 on behalf of defendant 1 upon which the principal defendants in collusion with each other attempted to dispossess the plaintiff and his Ijaradars, the pro forma defendants from the lands of the said two Beels in Pous 1330 B. S. Upon this state of the pleading the plaintiff has asked for the reliefs mentioned in the beginning of the judgment.

The defence of the Secretary of State falls under several heads: (1) That the suit is barred by the provision of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (2) The Civil Court has no jurisdiction to try and decide questions raised in prayers 'Ga' to 'Cha'. (3) Rights are enjoyed subject to the power of legislation vested in the Government. From the beginning of the Land Revenue Settlement it has been an invariable rule of law that at every new settlement there must be a new classification and a new rate of assessment to be determined by the Settlement Officer under the direction of the Government and with its approval. Government is the sole judge of the propriety of the classification and the suitability of the rate, and the amount of revenue settled by the Government officer is final. This has been the law always and this is the law now. It is also not a correct proposition of law that fisheries included in a lease cannot be assessed and offered for the settlement separately from the other lands of the patta. There is nothing in the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation to prevent such splitting up. (4) It is not true that there was no rule for splitting up a patta into two or more pattas. Even in the case of the present pattas, old patta No. 82 was split up into two new pattas, Nos. 2 and 3, and the old patta No. 129 was split up into two new pattas, Nos. 1 and 2, at the last re-settlement and the plaintiff and his predecessors accepted settlement of the split up pattas without any objection, protest or murmur. It is not a correct proposition of law that Government has no power to settle the Beels separately or to assess them for their own profits. Government has not assessed them in an arbitrary manner. (5) In course of time the Dhola and Baruri Beels falling within the 4 pattas mentioned have become one fishery and it is inconvenient, nay well nigh impossible, to fish them separately and it was this circumstance which gave the plaintiffs a footing in those portions of the fishery which fell outside the pattas out of old patta No. 82 of which he was one of the settlement holders. Though he was not entitled, as of right, to settlement of those portions of fishery falling within the two pattas out of old patta No. 129, as he was not the settlement-holder thereof and had not acquired the status of the landholder in respect of the same, yet the Settlement Officer determined in the exercise of his own discretion to offer him settlement of those portions also on the strength of his possession as the plaintiff has neither any right nor any possession of the rest of the lands of the two pattas; this necessarily involved the separation of the fishery from these lands.

The defence of defendants 2 and 3 is substantially the same as that of the Secretary of State, but special defence was pleaded with reference to the claim of the plaintiff to 1/3rd share of Dhola Beel by virtue of adverse possession. These defendants maintained that the plaintiff has not acquired any title to Dhola Beel as they have not been in adverse possession of the same for more than 12 years. A further defence was taken that the plaintiffs obtained an unjust and illegal order for temporary injunction in the present suit by various devices and the High Court set aside the same on appeal. These defendants claimed compensation under S. 95, Civil P. C. On this state of the pleadings as many as 25 issues were framed: see pp. 110 to 112, Book A. The principal controversy, however, centred round issues 16, 17 (a) (b) (c), 18 and 19. The Subordinate Judge of Sylhet, after taking oral and documentary evidence which are voluminous, has come to the conclusion that plaintiffs are entitled to all the reliefs prayed for except the relief in the prayer clauses 'Una' 'Chha' and 'Ja'. He also held that plaintiffs are entitled to mesne profits against all the defendants jointly up to 31st March 1925, but held that the Secretary of State was not liable for mesne profits after that period. As against defendants 2 and 3 it has been held that they are liable up to the period of their last fishing before delivery of possession.

It is against this decree of the Subordinate Judge that two appeals have been preferred: one by the Secretary of State and the other by defendants 2 and 3. Some of the grounds of the two appeals are common and we will deal with them first. It is contended for the appellants in both the appeals that the Subordinate Judge has done wrong in holding that separate settlement of the two Beels without assessment of the rest of the lands of the estate was illegal and ultra vires, and that the joint settlement of the two Beels was illegal. It is argued that there is no provision of the Assam Regulations which prohibits a Revenue Officer from assessing revenue on a part of the estate and making a settlement thereof with the original holders at a particular revenue and settling the rest of the estate later at a particular revenue. It is also argued that so far as Dhola Beel is concerned the plaintiff 1 cannot be regarded as a land-holder within the meaning of the Regulation because no settlement of Dhola Beel was made with him or his predecessor-in-interest, and it cannot be said that the right which the plaintiff acquired by adverse possession in one-third share of the said Beel was a right legally derived from a previous landholder within the meaning of S. 6 (b) of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation, 1886. It was further contended that the civil Court has no jurisdiction to question the validity of the assessment and that therefore the decree of the Subordinate Judge must be varied if the other contentions fail by deleting from prayer 'Kha' the words 'at a proper Jama' in line 4 of the said prayer as also by deleting from prayer 'Ga' the words 'or upon the produce' in line 5 of the said prayer.

In order to understand the contentions raised on behalf of the appellants the following facts require to be stated. The lands mentioned in the schedule to the plaint along with the Beels belonged to Government as waste lands locally known as Ilam lands. The history of Ilam lands is given in the admirable introduction to the Assam Land Revenue Manual at pp. 93 to 103. There is one passage in the introduction which may be quoted below:

Certain principles were laid down by the Bengal Government in 1869 which among other things declared the proprietary right in Ilam lands to belong to Government and that Government was at liberty to dispose of them as it thought proper.

These lands of Baruri held under an Ilam Pattah No. $\frac{43874}{82}$, referred to later in this judgment as Pattah 82, belonged to (1) Bama Sundari, (2) Rajendra Das, (3) Rajendra K. Roy Chowdhury, father of plaintiff, (4) Bissessari Debya, mother of plaintiff, and (5) Akboy Nath Roy. The interest of (1), (2) and (5) is $\frac{2}{3}$ rd passed by private treaty to Alim Mahi, father of defendant 2, and Golamdi Mahi, father of defendant 3, and $\frac{1}{3}$ rd devolved on plaintiff 1. In 1902 patta 82 was split up into two pattas, pattas Nos. 2 and 3 and was settled with plaintiff 1 and father of defendant 2 and defendant 3 for 20 years ending with 31st March 1922. With reference to Dhola Beel it may be stated that the original patta was 43913/129 referred to as patta 129 throughout this judgment. It was originally held by some persons whose interest was sold in 1877 for arrears of revenue, and went into khas possession of Government. Under Ilam patta dated 23rd August 1872 it was settled along with other properties by Government with Madhab Kar for 17 years from 1285 B. S. to 1301 B. S. corresponding to 1878.79 to 1894-95. After expiry of this settlement in 1895 settlement operations were taken up by Government. In 1902 this patta 129 was resettled with Madhab Kar for 20 years from 1902 ending on 31st March 1922. This patta was split up into patta Nos. $\frac{1 \text{ and } 2}{129}$. The disputed lands of Dhola Beel appertained to this patta. On 23rd January 1903 Madhab sold portions of the lands of pattas 1 and 2 including Dhola Beel to Inus Mahi. In 1903 Alim Mahi, father of defendant 2, instituted a suit against Madhab and his vendees in the Sub-Judge's Court at Sylhet for specific performance of a contract of sale which was entered into with Madhab previous to sale. The suit was amicably settled between Alim Mahi and Inus Mahi by selling the said portion to Alim Mahi father of defendant 2 and two others on 15th February 1904. Defendant 4, Madan Mahi, also purchased other lands of patta 129 (1 and 2) from Madhab Kar and both the names of Alim and Madan were registered as settlement holders of the patta. Golamdi, father of defendant 3, also acquired a share in pattas 1 and 2 by purchase. On 31st March 1922 the period of settlement of all these pattas expired and re settlement became due. The re-settlement was started. The Settlement Officer started proceedings under Ss. 29 and 30 of the Regulation (Assam Regulation). The Settlement Officer submitted a general proposal of assessment and submitted the same to Government. The regularity of proceedings is in question in this suit. The Assam Government approved of the scheme of re-settlement and issued a general order directing that the re-settlement should be made for three years from 1st April 1922 pending decision of the question of the term of the next settlement and provisional patta should be issued for three years for the two Beels only. The Government decided that the Beels be formally assessed as waste lands and should form a separate class and should be assessed on a percentage of the average net income, 50 per cent of the average income. (See letter Ex. 'F' Vol. B p. 82). It is contended that the Government could make the separate assessment. Under S. 29 Government made a rule—R. 61—Settlement Rules, i. e. 51 new rule, No. 70-A, i. e. 61 new rule.

The Settlement Officer under S. 31 ascertained the amount of revenue for the said Beels and he fixed Rs. 500 as the revenue for the two Beels. Then settlement was made by defendant 1 with defendants 2, 3 and 4: see order-sheet in Vol. F, p. 1277, Ex. E. A notice had previously been served on plaintiffs, and defendants 1, 2 and 3, to take the settlement: see Ex. 18, p. 1285, Vol. P. On the issue of the said notice objections were taken by defendants 2 and 3 (see p. 84 B. K. B.). The objection related both to separation and assessment. Defendants 2 and 3 objected to assessment, see Ex. 7, p. 84, Vol. B. The plaintiff was excluded under S. 35, p. 1280, Vol. F. Defendants 2 and 3 and then No. 4 also got the settlement. It is argued for the Government that that was a perfectly legal procedure: p. 1290, Vol. F. It will appear from Ex. B-2, Vol. F-1292, that the order admitting defendant 4 to the settlement was set aside and the settlement was made with defendants 2 and 3 with regard to Dhola Beel. It is contended that plaintiff cannot acquire any title by adverse possession. It is contended that plaintiff did not appeal to the authorities against the settlement. The settlement with regard to the rest of the lands other than the beels was made and accepted by the plaintiff in April 1925 and the settlement was made for 15 years, 1st April 1927 to 31st March 1942: B. K. B., p. 147, Ex. 2 (c). In other words by patta 82/2 settlement was made of the Baruri Beel (147-B) and by 82/9 (not pointed) settlement was made of the rest of the lands with plaintiff and defendants 2 and 3. The Beels were separated and similar settlement of Dhola Beel by patta 129/1 and the rest of the lands by patta 129/2, on 19th December 1923, the present suit had been instituted by the plaintiff. The plaint was subsequently amended on a petition filed on 25th September 1926 (see p. 60 B. K. A.) and a prayer for mesne profits was added.

At the outset we desire to observe that the Subordinate Judge should not have allowed two letters, Exs. 9 and 9-a, pp. 112 and 104, Book B which passed between the Government and the Commissioner, Surma Valley and the Superintendent and the Remembrancer of Legal Affairs of Assam and Surma Valley respectively to go into evidence seeing that these letters were written in view of a compromise between the Government and Brajendra after notice of the suit had been served by the plaintiff, for these letters must be taken to be without prejudice to the rights of the parties. We can state at once that although the Subordinate Judge was considerably influenced in his decision regarding the ultra vires nature of the settlement which is impugned in this suit we have kept our mind free from anything which has been said in these letters and we propose to deal with the legal questions raised by these appeals on a construction of the provisions of the Assam Regulations. This leads us to consider the main question in controversy in these appeals, as to whether the settlement of a part of the estates, covered by the pattas 82 and 129 was ultra vires of the statute or not. The question turns on the construction of some of the relevant sections of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (Regulation 1 of 1886 as amended by Regulation 2 of 1889 and Regulation 2 of 1905). Under S. 3, Cl. (b) an estate includes (1) any land subject either immediately or prospectively to the payment of land revenue for the discharge of which a separate engagement has been entered into. Under S. 3, Cl. (g) "landholder" means any person deemed to have acquired the status of a landholder under S. 8. The status of a landholder is acquired in the following manner under S. 8 which runs as follows:

(a) Any person who has before the commencement of this Regulation held immediately under the Government for ten years continuously any land not included either in a permanently settled estate or in a revenue free estate, and who has during that period paid to the Government the revenue due thereon, or held the same under an express exemption from revenue; and (b) except as provided by S. 15, any person who has whether before or after the commencement of this Regulation acquired any such land under a lease granted by or on behalf of the Government, the term of which is not less than ten years, shall be deemed to have acquired the status of a landholder in respect of the land.

With regard to lands covered by patta No. 82 there can be no question from the facts narrated above that plaintiff 1 has acquired the status of a landholder and this has not been disputed. With regard to Patta No. 129 regarding Dhola Beel, it has been strenuously contended on behalf of the appellants that the plaintiff has not acquired the status of a landholder. On the evidence which we shall discuss later, when dealing with the special defence of defendants 2 and 3, we have no doubt that the plaintiff has acquired as against the said defendants a right to one-third share of the Dholla Beel by adverse possession for more than the statutory period of 12 years, and as such shall be deemed to have acquired a right over lands of Patta No. 129 in respect of which a separate engagement was admittedly entered between the predecessors-in-interest of defendants 2 and 3 as also defendants 2 and 3, under S. 6, Cl. (b) of the Regulation. It has been strenuously contended by the Senior Government pleader that right acquired by adverse possession is not a right legally derived from any right mentioned in Cl. (a) of the said section which includes the rights of landholders. We are unable to accept this contention. The law does recognise a right founded on adverse possession for more than the statutory period to be a legally derived right. Just as property can be acquired from another by sale, by gift, lease or mortgage, so property of another can be acquired by the adverse possessor where he holds the property for more than 12 years dispossessing the rightful owner. In 48 I A 499 (1) at p. 507 the Judicial Committee observed that an interest not directly created by the taluqdar but allowed to grow up by his sufferance and negligence is an encumbrance within the definition of S. 161, Ben. Ten. Act, and that there was a current of decisions in India to that effect. In 44 Cal 412 (2) it was held by Sanderson, C. J., as he then was, and A. T. Mukherjee, J. that a person in adverse possession of an entire estate held under the Regulations might by lapse of time acquire a proprietary interest in that estate and would be liable for payment of Government revenue. There can be no question of these authorities that a right acquired by prescription is a legally derived right within the meaning of S. 6, Cl. (b) of the Regulation. The Indian law, like the English law, practically transmutes long possession of real property into ownership by bringing to an end the right of the owner. S. 28, Lim. Act, Statute 3 & 4 Will IV, c. 27, S. 34.

Under S. 9 of the Regulation a landholder shall have a permanent heritable and transferable right of use and occupancy in these lands subject to certain conditions mentioned in Cls. (a), (b), and (c) of the said section. Under S. 32 Cl. (1) the Settlement Officer shall offer the settlement to such persons (if any) as he finds to be in possession of the estate and to have a permanent heritable and transferable right of use and occupancy in the same or to be in possession as mortgagees of person having such a right. The word "estate" is important. Under this section after the expiry of the term of two patta 82 and 129 on 31st March 1922 the Settlement Officer should have offered the re-settlement of the entire estate and not of portions of the two estates. The Regulation does not contemplate the partition of an estate except in the manner provided for in the provisions regarding partition as embodied in Ch. (6) of the Regulation. The partition could be done by consent which is not the present case. In making the temporary settlement of a part of the estate, namely the Beels, the Settlement Officer has clearly contravened the provisions of the Regulation. The question is whether this contravention makes the action of the Settlement Officer ultra vires of the statutes. In our opinion it has that effect. It is one of the essentials of the offer of re-settlement that the re-settlement would be of the whole estate; if such offer has been made and the revenue had been increased considerably the plaintiff could not have questioned the re-settlement in favour of defendants 2 and 3 on his refusal to accept the settlement. S. 154 would have prevented him from questioning the assessment in the civil Court. That section lays down:

1. Bipradas Pal v. Kamini Kuar, 1922 P O 48 = 66 I C 674 = 48 I A 499 = 49 Cal 27 (P O).
2. Mohim Chandra v. Peary Lal Das, 1917 Cal 213 = 39 I C 213 = 44 Cal 412 = 21 O W N 537.

Except when otherwise expressly provided in this Regulation or in rules issued under this Regulation no civil Court shall exercise jurisdiction in any of the following matters: (a) questions as to the validity or effect of any settlement or as to whether the conditions of any settlement are still in force.

The offer of an estate for re-settlement after partitioning the same was in excess of the authority of a Settlement Officer. S. 154, Cl. (1) (a) refers to cases where an act of the Settlement Officer is in conformity with the essential provisions of the Regulation which gives him jurisdiction to act, but there has been irregularities in the mode of carrying out the act. As for instance where the re-settlement had been offered of the whole estate but the assessment of revenue has been based on a new basis which might have increased the assessment considerably. To such a case 154 (1) (a) might apply. The following authority which was cited at the Bar gives the true limit of the jurisdiction of tribunals whose powers are limited by the Statutes: see 5 P C 417 (3) at p. 442:

Their Lordships understand the final judgment of that Court to state, as the grounds upon which the order ought to be quashed, that the Judge of the Court of Mines who made it had acted without jurisdiction and that he had been misled into doing so by the fraud of the petitioning creditors. The question upon this appeal is whether the materials before the Court justified either conclusion. And as these two points, want of jurisdiction in the Judge, and fraud in the party procuring the order, are essentially distinct, it will be well to consider them separately. In order to determine the first it is necessary to have a clear apprehension of what is meant by the term 'want of jurisdiction.' There must of course be certain conditions on which the right of every tribunal of limited jurisdiction to exercise that jurisdiction depends. But these conditions may be founded either on the character and constitution of the tribunal, or upon the nature of the subject matter of the inquiry, or upon certain proceedings which have been made essential preliminaries to the inquiry, or upon facts of a fact to be adjudicated upon in the course of the inquiry. It is obvious that conditions of the last differ materially from those of the three other classes.

If as we hold for the reasons above given, that the offer of re-settlement to the plaintiff and defendants 2 and 3 was not in accordance with the statutes, it follows that the re-settlement of the two Beels in favour of defendants 2 and 3 was ultra vires of the statute, and on the basis of that re-settlement it was not permissible to defendants 2 and 3 to dispossess the plaintiff for under S. 34 of the Regulation in so far as it is material:

when a settlement has been accepted the revenue fixed thereby and no more shall be payable from such date, and for such term, as the Chief Commissioner may fix in this behalf; or, if at the expiry of that term no new settlement has been made, until a new settlement has been made.

The plaintiff was therefore entitled to hold on after the expiry of the term ending with 31st March 1922 on the previous revenue. We now proceed to consider the grounds taken on behalf of the Government with reference to the decree granted to the plaintiff by the Subordinate Judge in respect of prayers Kha and Ga of the plaint. It is contended that the decree should be varied by striking out the words 'at a proper jama' from prayer Kha and the words 'or upon the produce' in prayer 'Ga.' We think that this contention is well founded for under S. 154 (1) (a) of the Regulation it is not open to the plaintiff to question the validity of the assessment. The declarations with regard to prayers (Kha) and (Ga) must therefore be varied by striking out the words in the two prayers mentioned above respectively. It remains now to consider the question as to whether with reference to Dholla Beel the plaintiff has acquired a title to one-third share by adverse possession for more than the statutory period. This is a defence peculiar to defendants 2 and 3's appeal.

3. The Colonial Bank of Australasia v. William, (1874) 5 P C 417=43 L J P C 39=30 L T 237=22 W R 516.

namely Appeal No. 56 of 1929. It appears that in a previous litigation between the plaintiff and defendants 2 and 3 it was decided by the Munsif, the District Judge and eventually by the High Court that plaintiff 1 had acquired a title by adverse possession in the Dhola Beel to the extent of his share against Madhab Kar or his successors, and that the plaintiffs in that suit claiming through Madhab Kar had no subsisting right in the one-third share held by the defendants who were the present plaintiff and others: see judgment of the High Court BK. 'B', p. 106, Ex. 10 (g). The decree of the High Court, although it cannot operate as res judicata against defendants 2 and 3, because the suit in which the appeal to the High Court arose, was tried by a Munsif who had no jurisdiction to try the present suit, still the finding on the question of adverse possession was the finding of a Court which was dealing with facts nearer to their kin than the facts are to the High Court now and it certainly creates a paramount duty on the appellants in this appeal to displace that finding: see 48 I A 49 (4) at p. 55. It remains to consider whether the appellants have been able to discharge the burden which lay on them of showing that the finding was wrong. Very strong reliance has been placed on the evidence of Nazabdi, plaintiff's witness, who is one of added plaintiffs in the suit where he states: "My father paid rents to Madhab Kar when I was young: Vol. A, p. 89," but the same witness in re-examination said that "Madhab Kar had no possession of Dhola or Baruri Beels." So this admission of payment of rent to Madhab Kar cannot help the defendants, for he has made the position clear in re-examination. Besides, the Subordinate Judge observed that Nazabdi's admission of payment of rent to Madhab Kar cannot help the defendants as his lease comprised many other Beels, also of Patta No. 129 regarding which there is no dispute: p. 123, Book A. The plaintiff has by the production of documentary evidence, i. e., Touzis Exs. 1 to 1 (Z) 21 and Jama Kharach, Exs. 2 to 2-L from 1281 B. S. up to 1329 B. S. established that he was in possession through a fisherman who executed kabuliats in his favour and that he was dispossessed in Pous 1330 B. S. by the defendants under the settlement which is impugned in this suit. The Touzis and the Jama Kharach papers support the kabuliats Exs. 3, 3j, 3c and 3h. Far from displacing the finding arrived at by the Munsif, the District Judge and the High Court in the judgments Exs. 10e, 10f and 10g that Madhab Kar never possessed Dolla Beel and that plaintiff 1 and his co-sharer in Patta No. 82 possessed them all along with Baruri Beel, a duty which was cast on defendants 2 and 3, the plaintiffs have by producing abundant documentary and oral evidence shown that the said findings were right. This defence of defendants 2 and 3 must therefore fail.

It remains now to consider the question of mesne profits. The Subordinate Judge has made defendant 1 (Secretary of State) liable jointly with defendants 2 and 3 for mesne profits up to 31st March 1925. It has been argued by Dr. Basak that Government was not all liable for mesne profits seeing that they made the offer of temporary settlement to plaintiff 1 and he refused settlement because it was not profitable. The liability of Government for mesne profits is now established by the most recent decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 62 I A 53 (5). In that case it was held in circumstances mentioned below that the Government was liable in the same way as a trespasser, for mesne profits:

In 1890 the Government obtained possession under Bengal Act 4 of 1863, S. 3, of an island char which had emerged from the river Padma, and settled and assessed the land according to the rules in force. In 1902 the respondents brought a suit claiming a fourth share of part of the char lands, with mesne profits, on the ground that the land in suit was a re-formation in situ of land of which there were co-proprietors. They ultimately obtained possession under a judgment of the Privy Council delivered in 1917; and in the appeal before the Privy Council, in 62 I A 53 (5), the question related to mesne profits only. We have no doubt that as the Settlement by the Government was ultra vires possession of persons claiming under the Government was wrongful possession and the Government was liable for mesne profits. The next point taken is that in any event Government's liability should be limited to the revenue which the Government obtained for the one-third share of plaintiff 1. The Government was receiving Rs. 500 per year from defendants 2 and 3 and that may be taken to be the minimum profit which was available from the two Beels or fisheries, and plaintiff could have obtained one-third of Rs. 500 in his share, if he had obtained settlement. The relief of mesne profits as against defendant 1 will be varied in this way. The plaintiffs are entitled to get their one-third share of Rs. 250 for 1330 B.S. as the defendants are liable according to the finding of the Judge for half the fish of that year. As regards 1331 B.S. defendant 1 will be liable to pay one-third of Rs. 500.

4. Midnapore Zemindary Co. v. Nares Narayan Roy, 1922 P O 241=64 I C 231=48 I A 49=48 Cal 460 (P O).

5. Secy. of State v. Saroj Kumar, 1935 P O 49=154 I O 1=62 I A 53=62 Cal 499 (P O).

We now proceed to consider the objection of defendants 2 and 3 to the amount of mesne profits for which they were made liable. The Subordinate Judge has held that Rs. 2,600 per year would be the net profits from the fisheries in question. He has referred to certain evidence which we have examined. It seems to us that the claim for mesne profits is exaggerated, and the witnesses also have placed before the Court figures which do not represent the actual profits. It seems to us that it would be right to proceed on the basis of the findings of the Settlement Officer who has held an inquiry with regard to mesne profits during the cadastral survey proceedings, which were held in the presence of all the parties, and on that basis the mesne profits should come to about Rs. 1,000 per year. On this basis the Subordinate Judge's decree must be varied in this way. The plaintiffs are therefore entitled to get their one-third share of Rs. 250 for 1330 B.S. and of Rs. 500 for 1331 B.S. as also for the period after 1331 B.S. up to the period of the last fishing before delivery of possession. With regard to the objection of defendants 2 and 3 that they are entitled to compensation for improper injunction under S. 95, Civil P. C., we think there is no substance in it, seeing that the same has been taken into account by the Subordinate Judge in the assessment of mesne profits.

Both the appeals are allowed in part and the judgment of the Subordinate Judge must be varied in accordance with the observations mentioned in the previous part of the judgment. The costs of these appeals will be in the following proportion: The respondents will get two-thirds of the costs, that is, two-ninths from the Secretary of State and four-ninths from defendants 2 and 3. Defendants 1, 2 and 3 will get one third of their costs from the plaintiff. The order of the lower Court as to costs will stand. It has been brought to our notice that notices to the minor substituted respondents 10/5 to 10/8 and 10/9/3 have been duly served, but their proposed guardians ad litem have not entered appearance. It is also reported by the serving peon that respondent 10/12 is dead. This will not affect our decision seeing that these persons were all heirs of defendant 4 who, as has been pointed out before us, had no interest in the suit and as such his heirs are not necessary parties to this appeal. As a matter of fact Dr. Sen Gupta agrees that the decree as against them should be discharged.

There is a clerical error in the decree of the first Court which needs to be corrected. In place of the words "Dag 81" in the said decree the words "Dag 431" should be substituted. This amendment is obviously necessitated by the clerical mistake occurring in the decree as will appear from the plaint printed at p. 44 of the first of the paper book of appeal from Original Decree No. 56 of 1929, i. e., Book A. A table has been annexed to this judgment at the end showing references to the different volumes by the figures of the alphabet for facility of Court purposes. There are also cross-objections on behalf of the plaintiff-respondent which are not pressed and are dismissed. No order as to costs is made in the cross-objections.

Rau, J.—I agree in the order proposed by my learned brother, but would like to add a few observations. The settlement of the two beels for the three years from 1st April 1922 to 31st March 1925 was in reality more than a settlement. These two beels had previously formed part of two different estates; what the Settlement Officer did, in effect, was to partition the two estates into three new ones and then re-settle one of the three. The partition was effected without any application from the land-holders concerned and was not authorized by any provision of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation. We are therefore concerned here not with the validity of a mere settlement, such as is referred to in S. 154 (1) (a) of the Regulation, but with the validity of a composite proceeding which was partly a settlement and partly a partition entirely foreign to the Regulation. S. 154 of the Regulation is no bar to the civil Court pronouncing such a proceeding to be ultra vires.

This is not to say that all the issues framed and decided by the learned Subordinate Judge were within the competence of the civil Court. I refer in particular to issues 16 and 17 (c) set out in his judgment. Issue 16 runs thus: "Have plaintiff 1 or other settlement-holders converted the lands into fisheries or have they effected any improvement in the fisheries in dispute? If so, is this a legal bar to the Government enhancing the revenue of the fisheries settled as estate on part of the estate?"; and issue 17 (c) thus: "Is the assessment of the fisheries at other than bigha rate illegal as beyond the power of Government?" Both these issues were decided in plaintiff's favour, but it is clear that under S. 154 (1) (b) of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation the civil Court has no jurisdiction to decide either, since they are questions as to the amount of revenue to be assessed or as to the mode of principle of assessment. I may also point out that in the decision of these issues, the learned Subordinate Judge appears to have treated certain executive instructions in the Assam Land Revenue Manual regarding enhancement of revenue as if they were statutory rules not to be broken on pain of illegality.

V.B./R.K.

*Decree modified.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 639

M. N. MUKERJI AND JACK, JJ.

Manmatha Pal Choudhury — Defendant 1—Appellant.

v.

Saroj Ranjan Singha and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 141 of 1934, Decided on 5th June 1936, from original decree of Addl. Sub-Judge, Nadia, D/- 30th April 1934.

Receiver—Powers of—No title of receiver against owner—Right to realize rent depends upon appointment of receiver.

It is not the law that a receiver, unless he be a receiver in insolvency, is vested with title to the property itself as against the owner. And so far as the right to realize the rents is concerned, such right depends entirely on the appointment of the receiver : 11 I C 102, Rel. on. [P 640 C 2]

Amarendra Nath Bose and Hemanta Kumar Bose—for Appellant.

Panchanan Ghose and Hari Prosanna Mukerji—for Respondents.

M. N. Mukerji, J.—This is an appeal by defendant 1 from a decree passed against him in a suit for khas possession, for rent and for mesne profits in respect of a durpatni tenure. One Mathura Mohan Pal Choudhury held a putni, which had its origin in 1818, of Mehal Taraf Mahatpur comprising 57 mauzabs and appertaining to Touzi No 334 of the Nadia Collectorate, the said touzi belonging to the Nadia Raj. Prior to his acquisition of the putni, Mathura Mohan had a durpatni in some of the mauzabs. The appellant holds some mauzabs in durpatni and others in sepatni. Mathura Mohan died leaving two daughters, Sarat Kumari and Joydurga and the plaintiffs are the sons of the former. He also left a will by which he bequeathed all his properties to his two daughters in equal shares. The two daughters executed an agreement in 1316 (1909) and the plaintiffs have been in possession of a moiety share in the properties since their mother's death. In 1922, Joydurga, the surviving daughter, commenced a suit praying for a declaration of her absolute right in a moiety share of the properties left by her father. This litigation went up to the Privy Council and the result was a declaration that she had only a life interest and the agreement also was upheld. For arrears of putni rent for the period Baisakh to Aswin 1334 (April to October 1927) the putni was sold under Reg. 8 of 1819 on 1st Augrabayan 1334 (17th November 1927) and was purchased by the Maharaja of Nadia, the proprietor of the touzi. The putni having been created prior to the Regulation, the sale under the Regulation was void. Several suits were then instituted for setting aside the sale: One by the plaintiff, another by the appellant, and several others by holders of some of the under-tenure. Pending these suits the appellant entered into a compromise with the Maharaja on 14th Bhadra 1335 (30th August 1928), under which he obtained a putni lease from the latter in respect of all the mauzabs that he was holding in durpatni and seputni under the plaintiff.

Later on however the other suits, amongst which the plaintiffs' suit was one were decreed, the sale being set aside. The date of this decision was 30th April 1930.

On 17th April 1931, the plaintiffs instituted the present suit for khas possession on the ground that there was forfeiture incurred by the appellant in taking a patni lease of the mauzabs on the basis of the compromise which amounted to a denial of the plaintiff's title for rent from Kartic 1334 (October 1927) to Sravan 1335 (August 1928); and for mesne profits from Bhadra 1335 to end of 1337 (September 1928 to date of suit). Various other litigations cropped up, to the particulars of which it is not necessary to refer; and all that is necessary to say is that the Collector of Nadia was appointed receiver by this Court on 24th July 1931. The Collector, it is admitted, has, as such receiver, realised the rents of the appellant for the years 1336 and 1337. The plaint of this suit was filed insufficiently stamped. The deficit was made up and the suit registered on 18th July 1932. The Subordinate Judge dismissed the prayer for khas possession holding that there was no forfeiture and has made a decree for rent in plaintiff's favour for the period ending with 1335. From this decree the present appeal has been preferred, and at the hearing the decree has been challenged upon three grounds.

It has been contended, in the first place, that the plaintiff had no title to recover the rents at all. The plaintiffs derive their title from the Ikrarnama between the two daughters of Mathura Mohan to which reference has already been made. The Subordinate Judge has construed the effect of the Ikrarnama in connexion with the plaintiffs' prayer for ejectment and in that connexion has observed that the decision of the Judicial Committee, whatever it may have been, was not binding on the appellant who was a stranger; and that inasmuch as the right which the plaintiffs acquired under the Ikrarnama was not an absolute right to the properties, they were not entitled to claim ejectment as against the appellant. He has in this connexion used some expressions which are somewhat unfortunate, viz., that the plaintiffs are in permissive possession of the disputed property on the basis of the Ikrarnama;

also that the plaintiffs did not get any absolute right in their mother's share of the property but inasmuch as they are in possession without any right, their possession is simply a permissive one or it is a case of leave and license to possess without any title.

Now, whatever the character of the plaintiffs' title to the properties may be their title to recover the rents from the appellant can scarcely be denied, and such title has been rightly found in their favour by the Subordinate Judge. It is an admitted fact that they had been realizing such rents from the appellant ever since they came into possession and it is not easy to see how the appellant can dispute their title to recover the rents that he has to pay. The Judicial Committee in 33 C W N 1117 (1) held that the Ikrarnama was binding upon her, observed that under its terms the plaintiffs were entitled to remain in possession of their mother's moiety of the estate during Joydurga's life and rejected the contention that it was a disposition of a mere expectancy. That a contention of this nature is not fit to prevail has been expressly laid down by the Judicial Committee in the later decision in 57 I A 10 (2).

Secondly, it has been urged that the property vested in the Receiver and the title to recover the arrears of rent did also vest in him, and so the plaintiffs had no title to recover the rents. Reliance for the purpose of this contention was placed on the decision in 15 C L J 339 (3). That was a case in which the Receiver contested the right of the owner of the property to recover the rents in defiance of his right and in that way was a case very different from the present. It is true that there is a passage in the judgment in the case, which shorn of its context may lend some support to the contention. But it is not the law that a receiver, unless he be a receiver in insolvency, is vested with title to the property itself as against the owner. And so far as the right to realize the rents is concerned, such right depends entirely on the terms of the appointment of the receiver. That the Collector, as receiver,

1. Sreejoy Durga v. Saroj Ranjan, 1929 P O 214=120 I O 53=33 C W N 1117 (P O).
2. Ma Yait v. Official Assignee, 1930 P O 17=121 I O 225=57 I A 10=8 Rang 8.
3. Bhubaneswari Koer v. Ajodhaya Singh, (1912) 15 C L J 339=11 I O 102.

had no right to realize the arrears for any period prior to 1336 is clear from an order that this Court made. Lastly, it has been urged that the plaintiffs are not entitled to interest on the arrears. It is not clear from the decision of the Court below on what ground the claim was resisted, and all we get in the written statement and also in the judgment is that it was pleaded that the interest claimed was excessive or unfair. A paragraph in the judgment dealing with the question whether there was demand and willingness to comply subject to a condition has been referred to before us. But that paragraph evidently deals with the question whether forfeiture was waived. If the appellant wanted to have exemption or deduction of interest, it was for him to put in a proper plea and have it adjudicated on proper materials. Two facts however are perfectly clear.

There was no justification whatsoever for withholding the rents due up to the date of the compromise and if any rent due for any subsequent period had been tendered it would never have been received, for by such acceptance the plaintiffs would have to waive their claim on the ground of forfeiture. It is fair therefore, that the plaintiffs should get interest on arrears due up to Sravan 1335 and not for any arrears for the remainder of 1335. The decretal amount however should carry interest at the rate allowed by the Court below. Subject to the variation made above, the appeal will be dismissed. Costs to parties in proportion to their success.

Jack, J.—I agree.

B.D./R.K. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 641

M. C. GHOSE, J.

Dharanikar Parah and others—Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Chairman of Commissioners of Tamluk Municipality and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No. 924 of 1935, Decided on 18th June 1936, against appellate decree of Sub-Judge, 3rd Court, Midnapur, D/- 31st January 1935.

Bengal Municipal Act (15 of 1932), S. 129 (f)—Definition of "owner"—Definition not exhaustive—Decision of "ownership" is matter for Municipal Commissioner's discretion—Commissioners deciding "occupancy raiylats" as owners—Decision is not ultra vires.

1936 C/81 & 82

Section 129, Bengal Municipal Act leaves the decision of the matter of deciding "ownership" to the Commissioners themselves and not to the Court. It may be stated that the definition of "owner" is not exhaustive. It begins with "owner includes etc." But there may be 'owner' other than what is stated in the definition. An owner may be a person who actually occupies the land. It depends upon the circumstances of each case. In a case where the plaintiffs are the occupancy raiylats holding agricultural lands within the Municipality and they receive rent from nobody and on the contrary they pay rent to the landlords the term 'owner' may be applied both to the holder of the occupancy right in the land and to his landlord. In the Municipal Act it is left to the discretion of the Commissioners to determine which of the two shall be taken to be the owner. Where the Commissioners thought it to decide that the owners of the occupancy right shall be considered to be the owner within the Municipality it cannot be said that they have exceeded their right. The right is given to them absolutely under S. 129 (b), Bengal Municipal Act (1932). [P 642 C 2]

Atul Chandra Gupta and Sarat Chandra Janah—for Appellants.

Amarendra Nath Bose, Bijan Kumar Mukherji, A. S. M. Akram and Saroj Kumar Maiti—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the plaintiffs in a suit against the Commissioners of the Tamluk Municipality. The suit was instituted by eight persons for a declaration that a resolution of the Commissioners passed on 23rd February 1934 was ultra vires and illegal and without jurisdiction and was the result of an illegal proceedings of Commissioners; that the assessment lists as made were illegal that the plaintiffs are not liable to be assessed in the manner indicated in the said resolution. The suit was instituted under O. 1, R. 8, Civil P. C. Many other rate payers joined as plaintiffs until the plaintiffs numbered no less than 269. The suit was dismissed by the trial Court. That decree was affirmed in appeal. Upon hearing the learned advocate for the plaintiffs-appellants the facts appear as follows:

The plaintiffs are the occupiers of lands within the Municipality. They use the lands for the purpose of cultivation, growing paddy and other crops therein. They pay rent for their lands to their landlords. They receive no rent from any person. The question was considered for a long time by the Municipal Commissioners whether in the circumstances the plaintiffs should be considered as owners within the meaning of the Municipal Act or whether their landlords, whom they pay rent for their holdings, should be considered the owners liable to pay the Municipal rates.

The Commissioners at a meeting of 23rd February 1934 decided by majority acting under S. 129 (b), Bengal Municipal Act that with regard to the tenanted lands, the ownership of a Mukarari raiyati or an occupancy raiyati or an under-raiyati with occupancy right for Mukarari right to be taken as a deciding test of ownership. These plaintiffs are affected by the decision as they are holders of land with occupancy rights. The first question is whether the meeting of 23rd February was a lawful meeting. It is urged that there was no proper notice served on the Commissioners for the meeting of that day. That, however, as the learned Subordinate Judge pointed out, is of no importance, for all the Commissioners without exception attended the meeting of 23rd. The question of no notice, therefore, is immaterial. They all having attended the meeting, the resolution was discussed and passed by a majority and at a subsequent meeting it was duly confirmed. It cannot therefore be held that the meeting was ultra vires or illegal. The main question urged by the learned advocate for the plaintiffs-appellants is that the test of ownership which the Commissioners resolved upon is ultra vires. An "owner" is defined in S. 3 (38) of the Act. According to that Act:

"Owner" includes the person for the time being receiving the rent of any land or building or any part of any land or building whether on his own account or as agent or trustee for any person or society or for any religious or charitable purpose, or as a receiver, or who would so receive such rent if the land, building or part thereof let to a tenant.

The lands of the plaintiffs do not contain any building. They are purely agricultural lands used for the purpose of growing paddy and other crops. It is urged on their behalf that as they are not the persons receiving rent, they cannot be owners within the meaning of the definition. In support of this contention a decision of the Patna High Court in 1934 Pat 357 (1), was cited. In that case the Commissioners of Arrah Municipality had decided under the corresponding section of the Bihar and Orissa Municipal Act 1922 that as regards the agricultural lands the landlords who received rent for those lands would be considered the owners and not occupiers who occupied such lands. Against that decision of the Commissioners the landlord filed an appeal to the High Court and failed. It is to be noted that S. 129, Bengal Municipal Act leaves the decision of the matter to the Commissioners themselves and not to the Court. It may be stated that the definition of "owner" is not exhaustive. It began with "owner includes etc." But there may be "owner" other than what is stated in the definition. An owner may be a person who actually occupies the land. It depends upon the circumstances of each case. In the present case the plaintiffs are the occupancy raiyats holding agricultural lands within the Municipality. They receive rent from nobody. They pay rent to the Raja of Mohisadal and other landlords. The term "owner" may be applied both to the holder of the occupancy right in the land and to his landlord as will appear clear when such a piece of land is acquired under the Land Acquisition Act. Both the landlord and the occupancy holders have right of ownership to the land and the extent of their right is considered by a Land Acquisition Officer in case of acquisition. In the Municipal Act it is left to the discretion of the Commissioners to determine which of the two shall be taken to be the owner. In this case of Arrah Municipality the Commissioner thought it right to take the landlords to be the owner. The Commissioners of the Tamluk Municipality thought fit to decide that the owners of the occupancy right shall be considered to be the owners within the Municipality. It cannot be said that they have exceeded their right. The right is given to them absolutely under S. 129 (b), Bengal Municipal Act (1932) which states:

The Commissioners at a meeting shall determine what class of ownership shall be accepted as the test for determining whether lands within a Municipality are held under one title or agreement.

As to the case of each one of the plaintiffs, the learned Subordinate Judge was right in stating that when each of them is assessed by the Commissioners, it is open to him to make objection to the said assessment and the Commissioner will then appoint an objection Committee whose duty will be to adjudicate each case upon its merits. As to the general proposition, in my opinion, the Municipal

1. Harihar Prosad v. Municipal Commissioners, Arrah, 1934 Pat 357=152 I C 647=13 Pat 693=15 P L T 424.

Commissioners were within their right in deciding the matter according to their judgment under S. 129, Bengal Municipal Act. The appeal is dismissed. Parties will bear their own costs in this appeal. Leave to appeal under S. 15, Letters Patent is refused. The cross-objection is not pressed and is, therefore, dismissed with costs.

B.D./R.K. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 643

D. N. MITTER AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Anukul Chandra Haldar — Claimant No. 1 (h)—Appellant.

v.

Gurupada Haldar—Claimant No. 1 (a) and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 186 of 1934, Decided on 28th May 1936, from original decree of President, Calcutta Improvement Tribunal D/- 29th August 1934.

Will—Construction—Earlier clause making complete bequest in favour of son—Later clause restricting it—Later clause should be read as not to be inconsistent with earlier clause.

Where in an earlier clause of a will there is a bequest of all the properties in favour of the son of the deceased, the later clause restricting the bequest should be so read as not to be inconsistent with the earlier provisions of the will in favour of his son. An endeavour should be made in construing the will to reconcile inconsistent clauses: 8 M I A 66 (PC) and 5 Cal 438 (PC), Rel. on. [P 644 C 2]

Radhica Charan Chatterji and Charu Chandra Choudhury—for Appellant.

Basak, Subodh Ch. Basak, Surendra M. Mallik, Ram Chandra Mukerji and Bhupendra Nath Roy Chowdhury—for Respondents.

D. N. Mitter, J.—This is an appeal by Anukul Chandra Haldar, one of the claimants in proceedings before the President, Calcutta Improvement Tribunal, arising out of acquisition of certain premises in Mudiali Road for a project of the Improvement Trust known as a Street Scheme No. 33, Southern Avenue, S. 1, in Ward No. 27, Calcutta Municipality. The President has awarded the entire compensation money in accordance with his award which comes to about Rs. 3,54,000 odd to claimant No. 1 (a) Gurupada Haldar and his wife claimant No. 1 (b) Sukumari Debi. It appears that the present appellant Anukul Chandra Haldar put in a statement of claim under S. 9, Land Acquisition Act, before the Land Acquisition Collector, Calcutta, on 30th May 1932 in which he alleged that the famous goddess Sri Sri Iswari Kali Mata Thakurani, and the gods Sri Sri Iswar Shyam Roy Thakur and Sri Sri Iswar Nakuleswar Thakur are the sole owners and proprietors of the premises proposed to be acquired. He stated in that petition that he and his uncle (his father's step-brother) Gurupada Haldar are the joint shebaites of the said gods and goddesses. Upon this he claimed for a joint compensation for the acquisition of this property alleging that the said premises being debuttar property the claimant and the said Gurupada Haldar are not competent to alienate the same. Upon this a claim petition was put in by Srimati Sukumari Debi on 13th June 1932 in which she alleged that she was the Mourashidar of the premises in question and that her husband Gurupada Haldar was the superior landlord thereof. She claimed compensation for the acquisition of the said premises. Upon this the Land Acquisition Collector seems to have made a joint award of the compensation money, which has been awarded by the Collector, in favour of Gurupada Haldar, his wife Sukumari Debi, and the other claimants Nos. 1 (c) to 1 (g) who are the purchasers of the portion of the premises in question from both Gurupada Haldar and Sukumari Debi as well as in favour of the present appellant Anukul Chandra Haldar, the total compensation being Rs. 2,54,749-14-1. Gurupada and Sukumari were apparently not satisfied with the award made by the Collector.

A reference under S. 18, Land Acquisition Act, was made on behalf of Sukumari Debi in which she alleged that she was the Mourashidar of the premises which were sought to be acquired, under Gurupada Haldar; and she wanted an increased compensation. There were petitions for reference under S. 18 by some other claimants also. The learned President who dealt with these references came to the conclusion that the property that was sought to be acquired was the property of one Kenaram Haldar, Gurupada being his son by his third wife Hemangini Debi, and that the said property has been bequeathed in absolute right to Gurupada Haldar who had granted a Mokalari Mourashi lease in favour of his wife. The President held that there was merely a nominal charge for worship of the said deities on the property bequeathed by Kinuram to his son Gurupada in absolute interest. On the question of compensation the President came to the conclusion that the compensation awarded by the Collector was inadequate and that he increased it to the sum which has already been mentioned, namely Rs. 3,54,000 odd, to be divided between Gurupada and his wife Sm. Sukumari Debi. He rejected the contention raised on behalf of Anukul that the property sought to be acquired was debuttar property and that the same was inalienable. He held that the property was secular property and belonged to Kinuram who had full power of disposing of the same by his will.

Against this award of the learned President the present appeal has been brought by Anukul, and on his behalf two contentions have been put forward by the learned Advocate for the appellant. It has been contended firstly that on a proper construction of the Will of Kinuram Haldar, who died on 27th April 1894, it should have been held by the learned President that the premises sought to be acquired belonged really to certain deities who are named in the Will; that there was a bequest in favour of these idols; that therefore the property was inalienable and no portion of the compensation money should have been awarded either to Gurupada or to his wife Sukumari Debi. The second contention was that in any event under the provisions of S. 32, Land Acquisition Act (Act 1 of 1894), a certain sum of money should have been retained by the President and it should have been invested in approved securities seeing that in any event by the Will a charge was created on all the properties bequeathed by Kinuram Haldar for the purpose of the Sheba of the several deities mentioned in the Will. It becomes necessary therefore to examine the provisions of the Will which is printed at p. 102, part 2 of the paper book, and which has been marked as Ex. 2 in the case. The material portion of the will to which it is necessary to refer for the purpose of repelling the first contention of the appellant before us is as follows:

Excepting the properties described in the 2nd paragraph, I hereby bequeath all these moveable and immoveable properties, ancestral and self-acquired, and the Government Promissory Notes, and the bonded warehouse shares and the money lying in deposit in the Savings Bank and all the other (properties) which I have, to my son Sriman Gurupada Haldar born of the womb of my third wife; after my death Gurupada Haldar will become entitled to all my properties in absolute right, and shall enjoy the same down to his sons, grandsons and so on and heirs in succession; to that no objection on the part of anybody will be entertained (Cl. 3). I bequeath by this Will to my said son Sriman Gurupada Haldar, in absolute right, all the Palas of Sri Sri Iswari Kali Thakurani and Sri Sri Iswar Nakuleswar and other (deities), to which I am entitled (Cl. 4). Out of the income of the properties left by me, the expenses of the Seva of the Siva Thakurs established by me, viz. Sri Sri Iswar Kalyaneswar, Sri Sri Iswar Sarbeswar, Sri Sri Iswar Kasiswar, Sri Sri Iswar Anandeswar and Sri Sri Iswar Jogeswar and of the Sri Sri Iswar Syam Roy Thakur; Sri Sri Sri Iswari Kali Thakurani and Nakuleswar Thakur and other dieties established by my ancestors shall be borne. The executrix shall perform the Seva of the said Thakurs and Thakuranis; after her death my son Sriman Gurupada Haldar shall do the same down to his heirs in succession; my properties remain liable for the Seva of all these deities (Cl. 5).

There can be no doubt having regard to the provisions of Cl. 3 of the Will which have been just quoted that there has been an absolute bequest in favour of Gurupada Haldar of the properties mentioned therein. By the said clause all the properties which Kinuram died possessed of passed to Gurupada except the properties described in para. 2 of the Will, viz. 5 cottas of land within holding No. 66 in village Kalighat, Division 6, Sub-Division 1 and the legacy of Rs. 1,000 referred to in the same Cl. 2 of the will. The contention that the property is debuttar is based on Cl. 5 of the Will which has just been quoted in extenso. It is contended that the clause which gives absolute interest to Gurupada has practically been superseded by the subsequent clause, viz., Cl. 5, where all the properties of Kinuram are made liable for the Sheba of these deities and reference has been made to S. 88, Succession Act of 1925, in support of this contention. We have no hesitation in rejecting this view of the construction of the Will which has been submitted to us, for it is absolutely clear from Cl. 3 that there is a bequest of all the properties in favour of Gurupada Haldar, and Cl. 5 should be so read as not to be inconsistent with the earlier provisions of the Will in favour of his son. An endeavour should be made in construing the Will to reconcile the inconsistent clauses. But one can see nothing in Cl. 5 to sustain the contention raised by the appellant that this clause gives any of the properties to any deity. There are no words in Cl. 5 of the Will which can possibly lend colour to this contention that there is gift in favour of the idols, Cl. 5 is absolutely clear. All that is stated is that it is the desire of the testator that out of the properties left by him the expenses of certain deities established by the testator as also of other ancestral deities of Kinuram should be met and for that purpose properties left by Kinuram should remain liable for the Sheba of those deities.

In other words properties left by Kinuram should be charged with the worship of these deities. The construction which the appellant contends for is directly opposed to what has been repeatedly laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in construing a Will of this kind. We may refer in this connection to the very early case in 8 M I A 66 (1), where it was held that even where a Hindu by will gave all his moveable and immoveable property to his family idol, and after stating that he had four sons, he directed that his property should never be divided by them, their sons or grandsons in succession, but that they should enjoy the surplus proceeds only, and the will, after appointing one of the sons manager to the estate, to attend to the festivals and ceremonies of the idol and maintain the family, further directed, that whatever might be the surplus, after deducting the whole of the expenditure, the same should be added to the corpus, and in the event of a disagreement between the sons and family, the testator directed, that after the expenses attending the estate, the idol and maintenance of the members of the family, whatever net produce and surplus there might be, should be divided annually in certain proportions among the members of the family; the bequest to the idol was not an absolute gift, but was to be construed as a gift to the testator's four sons and their offspring in the male line as a joint family, so long as the family remained joint, and that the four sons were entitled to the surplus of the property, after providing for the performance of ceremonies and festivals of the idol, and the provisions in the will for maintenance. The terms of the will in 8 M I A 66 (1) were much more favourable to the idol than in the present case.

There is no question of dedication to the idol in the present case. Besides, this clause creating a charge for the worship of the deities is preceded by the clause of giving the properties absolutely to the son of the testator. The construction of the provisions in the will in 8 M I A 66 (1) which was decided in the year 1859, came up for consideration by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 5 Cal 438 (2), where it was held with reference to somewhat similar provisions of the will that the property was a secular property charged with the worship of ancestral deity. The learned advocate for the appellant very frankly admitted that the case 8 M I A 66 (1) was directly opposed to his contention in the present case. We have no doubt that the President rightly held that this property which included the acquired premises was secular property which it was open to Kinuram to dispose of by a will.

In this connexion it is important to remember the circumstance that shortly after the death of Kinuram Haldar an attempt was made by Ram Chandra Haldar the father of the present appellant to set aside the will on the ground that Kinuram had no disposing power over the properties which have been disposed of by the will and it appears that on 5th September 1894 a plaint was filed on the original side of this Court by Ram Chunder Haldar against Hemangini Debi executrix to the will of Kinuram and mother of Gurupada Haldar as well as against Gurupada who was then an infant for a declaration that the will was void and incapable of being given effect to and that the whole of the property which Kinuram died possessed of was debuttar and that Kinuram had no power of testamentary disposition over it and that the same descended to the plaintiff and the defendant Gurupada Haldar jointly in the course of succession according to the Hindu law. It appears that on 4th March 1896 the plaintiff presumably finding it difficult to sustain his claim on the original side of this Court did not appear either in person or by counsel, and this suit was dismissed: see Ext. B. p. 121 of part 2, of the paper book.

It remains to consider the other contention as to whether the properties, the subject matter of the acquisition were not charged with the worship of the deities. The learned President while dealing with part of the case has said that there was a nominal charge for worship but notwithstanding that, Gurupada had full and unfettered right over it. There is no question that Gurupada had the right of alienation over the properties which are now the subject matter of compulsory acquisition under the Land Acquisition Act. At the same time if there is a charge for worship it is desirable that the monies that might be spent for these deities should be secured out of the compensation money awarded to Gurupada Haldar. We have been taken through the evidence as to what was spent by Kinuram for these deities and we have been referred to Ext. HH the account book of Kinuram Haldar for 1299-1300 B. S. and it appears that a very small sum used to be spent for the worship of "Shiva". The expenses are shown in the accounts printed at p. 68 onwards of the part 2 of the paper book. It may be that having regard to the passage of time the expenses at this date cannot be met at the said small sum. Taking into consideration the present condition of the prices of things we think that a sum of Rs. 10 per mensem would be sufficient to meet the expenses of the Sheba of the deities.

1. Sonatun Bysack v. Sreemutty Juggutsoondree Dossee, (1859) 8 M I A 66=2 Suther 37=1 Sar 721 (P C).

2. Ashutosh Dutt v. Doorga Churn Chatterjee, (1880) 5 Cal 438=6 I A 182=4 Sar 58 (P C).

In other words the expenses would be Rs. 120 per annum and capitalizing that by twenty years we think that a sum of Rs. 2,400 or say Rs. 2,500 should be sufficient to meet these expenses. In that view we direct that out of the compensation money which has been awarded to Gurupada Haldar a sum of Rs. 2,500 be detained by the President of the Improvement Tribunal and Gurupada Haldar might be asked to deposit in approved Government securities of the real value of Rs. 2,500 with the President to secure the charge of worship and the interest is to be paid to Gurupada who has been entrusted with the worship of the deities under Cl. 5 of the will of Kinuram and that interest of the securities which will be deposited by Gurupada Haldar will be paid to him for the Sheba of the deities. Subject to this slight modification in the judgment of the President of the Tribunal the appeal stands dismissed. The appellant will pay to Dr. Basak's client a sum of Rs. 500 as costs of this appeal. The sum of Rs. 500 includes the costs of the preparation of paper book as well as the hearing fee. It is stated that by an order of this Court Sukumari Debi took the sum which was awarded to her on furnishing as security of Rs. 50,000 in immoveable property. Now that the appeal is disposed of in her favour she is permitted to be discharged from that security.

Patterson, J.—I agree.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 646

R. C. MITTER, J.

David Elias Duek Cohen—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Baidyanath Mukerji and another—Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No. 823 of 1935, Decided on 26th June 1936, from appellate decree of Dist. Judge, 24-Perganas, D/- 30th April 1935.

Mortgage—English mortgage—Mortgagee given possession—Mortgagor undertaking to repay loan by certain date—Condition of reconveyance present—Simply because mortgagor undertakes to pay taxes cannot change nature of English mortgage—S. 58, Cl. (a), T. P. Act, must be looked into.

Where the mortgagor binds himself to repay the money lent on a certain day and he conveys the property absolutely to the mortgagee and there is the provision for reconveyance by the mortgagee to the mortgagor on repayment of the loan, and on substitution of security the original security is to be released by the mortgagee but only through a reconveyance, and on sale of portions of the mortgaged premises, the same is to be realised by the mortgagee on fulfilment of certain conditions but also through such a reconveyance, simply because mortgagor undertakes to pay the taxes, etc., on the mortgaged property will not change the character of the mortgage from an English mortgage. In India a mortgage is the transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property; in substance it is not the transfer of the whole interest of the mortgagor to the mortgagee. In determining such questions Cl. (a) of S. 58, T. P. Act, cannot be ignored: 1932 Cal 775 and 40 C W N 846, Rel. on; 1935 Cal 659, Explained.

[P 648 C 2]

Carden Noad, Jatindra Mohan Choudhury and Rabindra Nath Choudhury—for Appellant.

Bijan Kumar Mukerji, Promod K. Roy, Bhupendra Nath Das Gupta (Jr.), Someswar P. Mukerji, A. C. Sen and Amod C. Sen—for Respondents.

Judgment.—In this appeal, which has been preferred by the mortgagor, the legality of the appointment of a receiver by the mortgagee is in question. The Court of first instance declared the said appointment illegal, and restrained the person so appointed from taking possession of the mortgaged premises and from realising rent from the tenants in possession. The learned District Judge has however held otherwise and has dismissed the appellant's suit. Premises No. 57 (formerly No. 28) Ballyganj Circular Road, which comprised an area of 10 bighas 10 cottas 13 chittaks with buildings originally belonged to Miss Mary Jones. She had mortgaged the same to the Administrator-General of Bengal, who is the executor to the estate of Sagore Dutt, deceased. She sold the said premises, subject to the said mortgage to the appellant. The appellant executed on 27th July 1928 a mortgage in favour of her of the said premises for a sum of Rupees one lac. One of the clauses of the mortgage bond, the terms and conditions of which will have to be examined hereafter in detail, is that the mortgagor will have the right to dispose of any portion of the mortgaged premises and the mortgagee will have to realise and reconvey the said portion to the mortgagor or his nominee, provided that the price received for the same, less brokerage, was paid to the mortgagee.

In pursuance of this right reserved to the mortgagor, the appellant has sold about 7 bighas 2 cottas odd land out of the mortgaged premises, and the remaining area of about 3 bighas 8 cottas odd land together with the building standing thereon is still subject to the mortgage. Interest being admittedly in arrears for over six months Mr. Deveria, acting on behalf of Miss Jones, and acting under a power of attorney executed by her on 12th February 1926, appointed, under the provisions of S. 12, Trustees and Mortgagees Powers Act, respondent 1, Mr. Baidyanath Mukerji, a pleader of Alipur, receiver on 16th June 1933. This gentleman having attempted to realise rent from the tenants occupying the mortgaged premises, the mortgagor, namely the appellant, brought the suit out of which this appeal arises, for a declaration that the said appointment was illegal, and from restraining Mr. Mukerji, from taking possession of the mortgaged premises or from realising rent or from disturbing the appellant's possession. The appellant's Counsel has presented his case before me on the following grounds : (i) As the mortgage is not an English mortgage, the appointment of Mr. Mukerji by the mortgagee as receiver is invalid. (ii) Even if the mortgage is an English mortgage, the Court only can appoint a receiver, S. 69-A added to the Transfer of Property Act, by Act 20 of 1929, having abrogated S. 12, Trustees and Mortgagees Powers Act. (iii) The appointment of a receiver could not be made at the time at which it was not made according to the terms of the mortgage instrument as the mortgage money had not at that time become due and payable. (iv) At any rate the mandatory provisions of S. 12, Trustees and Mortgagees Powers Act, have not been complied with, as Mr. Mukerji, was nominated receiver by Mr. Deveria, before the expiry of ten days from the time when the letter written by the latter asking the appellant to nominate a receiver reached him. And (v) Mr. Deveria had no power under the terms of his power of attorney to appoint the receiver.

Besides meeting the points raised by the appellant's Counsel Dr. Mukerji, appearing on behalf of respondent 1, has raised a further point. He says that even if the mortgage be not an English mortgage, it is undoubtedly an anomalous mortgage, and according to the provisions of S. 98, T. P. Act, the rights and liabilities of the mortgagor and mortgagee must be determined in accordance with their contract. He further contends that by the contract the mortgagee has been given the power to appoint a receiver in accordance with the provisions of the Trustees and Mortgagees Powers Act. In the view I am taking of the first point raised by Mr. Carden Noad it is necessary to deal with this further point raised by Dr. Mukerji, although I must admit that there is great force in his argument. In order to decide the first point it is necessary to recite the main terms of the mortgage instrument.

The mortgagor admits receipt of one lac of rupees and promises to repay it with interest on 27th July 1938. He expressly conveys No. 57, Ballygunj Circular Road, absolutely to the use of the mortgagee but subject to the provision that on repayment of the mortgage money with interest it is to be reconveyed to him by the mortgagee. The mortgagor undertakes to pay rates and taxes and other impositions "now or hereafter to become payable" in respect of the mortgaged premises. Part payments of the principal are to be made on fifteen days' notice. The mortgagor reserves the right to substitute with the consent of the mortgagee other properties as security for the mortgagee's dues and the mortgagee cannot withhold this consent if the properties proposed to be given as substitutes are of a certain value defined in the third clause of the instrument. On such substituted security being given the premises then included in the mortgage are to be reconveyed to the mortgagor by the mortgagee. The mortgagor reserves the right to sell any portion of the mortgaged property, and the mortgagee is bound to release and reconvey the said portion so sold at the cost of the mortgagor to him or his nominee, provided that the price obtained, less the brokerage commission, was paid to the mortgagee. In default of payment of the mortgage money or interest on 27th July 1938 or in default of payment of any money which the mortgagor undertook to pay, the mortgagee will have the right to enter into possession and realise rents and profits. The instrument then provides that it is to be considered as an English mortgage as defined by the Transfer of Property Act and the power of sale and provisions ancillary or auxiliary thereto conferred upon the mortgagee by the said Act or by Ss. 6 to 19 inclusive of Act 28 of 1866 (I. C.) or any statutory modification thereof shall apply and be deemed to be incorporated in these presents but without the restriction of the last mentioned Act (Act 28 of 1866 I. C.) contained as to giving notice, provided also and it is hereby agreed and declared that the power of sale hereinbefore provided shall not be exercised unless and until default shall be made in the payment of the said principal sum of Rupees one lac or any part thereof or any other moneys that may become for the time being due and payable together with interest, if any, thereon on 27th July 1938 or at any other time when the same may become due and/or payable.

It is contended by the counsel for the appellant that the clause by which the mortgagor undertook to pay taxes and rates, the clause for substitution of security and the clause for sale of portions of the mortgaged premises by the mortgagor make the mortgage which would otherwise have been an English mortgage not an English mortgage but an anomalous mortgage. His contention proceeds upon the basis that by an English mortgage the mortgagee is made the full owner till redemption, and on redemption only the title is re-vested in the mortgagor by the act of reconveyance by the mortgagee. In support of his contention he relies upon the cases in 62 C L J 28 (1) and 25 Mad 220 (2). I cannot accept the contention that the mortgage here is not an English mortgage. The mortgagor binds himself to repay the money lent on a certain day; he conveys the property absolutely to the mortgagee and there is the provision for re-conveyance by the mortgagee to the mortgagor on repayment of the loan. On substitution of security the original security is to be released by the mortgagee but only through a re-conveyance, and on sale of portions of the mortgaged premises the same is to be realised by the mortgagee on fulfilment of certain conditions but also through such a re-conveyance. The only other thing pointed out by Mr. Noad is that by his undertaking to pay rates and taxes the mortgagor retained to himself some of the obligations of an owner. He says that indicates that absolute ownership was not really intended to be conveyed to the mortgagee. I do not quite follow this argument. The deed conveys absolutely the mortgaged premises to the mortgagee in express terms, subject to the proviso for redemption. I do see that when by contract the mortgagor undertakes to discharge some of the liabilities which ordinarily are to be discharged by an owner, how can he be said to have retained some of the rights of the owner. To follow the contention to its logical effect, when the mortgagor retains possession under a contract embodied in the mortgage, the mortgage cannot be considered to be an English mortgage even if all the three elements of an English mortgage, as defined in S. 58, T. P. Act, be present, for in that case it may be urged with greater force that the mortgagor by contract retains the valuable part of ownership. In India a mortgage is the transfer of an interest in specific immoveable property; in substance it is not the transfer of the whole interest of the mortgagor to the mortgagee. In determining such questions, in my view Cl. (a) of S. 58, T. P. Act, cannot be ignored. The view I am taking is supported by two decisions of the Division Bench, namely in 36 C W N 709 (3) and 40 C W N

1. Satya Charan Srimani v. Ramkinkar Banerji, 1935 Cal 659=159 I C 1001=62 C L J 28.

2. Narayana Ayyar v. Venkata Ramana Ayyar, (1902) 25 Mad 220 (F B).

3. Fala Krista Pal v. Jagannath Marwari, 1932 Cal 775=140 I C 788=59 Cal 1314=86 C W N 709=56 C L J 187.

846 (4) at p. 854. In 62 C L J 28 (1) the learned Judges were also inclined to follow: 36 C W N 709 (3); and although one of the learned Judges (Guha, J.) relied upon the fact that the mortgagor undertook to pay rents royalties for coming to the conclusion that one of the mortgages was not an English mortgage, but the other learned Judge (Lodge, J.) did not think it necessary for the case before them to decide whether the said mortgage was an English mortgage or not. That observation of Guha, J. at the bottom of p. 33 of the report relied upon by the Counsel for the appellant cannot therefore be considered to be the decision of a Division Bench and so binding on me.

I accordingly, hold that the mortgage which the appellant executed in favour of Miss Mary Jones is an English mortgage. By the terms of S. 69, T. P. Act, before amendment, and by the contract between the parties also, S. 12, Trustees and Mortgagees Powers Act, has been incorporated in this mortgage. In my judgment S. 69-A, introduced into the Transfer of Property Act by Act 20 of 1929 (I.C.), has not repealed or modified that section, namely S. 12 of Act 28 of 1866; but the only effect of the amendment in my judgment is that S. 12 of Act 28 of 1866 is not to be deemed to be incorporated in an English mortgage, proprio vigore executed after the amending Act came into force. In this case the mortgage was executed before the amending Act and the terms and incidents thereof, including the term and conditions introduced into the deed by virtue of S. 69, T. P. Act, as in force at the date of the mortgage, including the term about the appointment of receiver by the mortgagee without recourse to Court have not been modified or affected by reason of the amendment by Act 20 of 1929 by which the last paragraph of the original S. 69 has been taken out of the statute. Interest for more than six months was admittedly due at the time of the appointment of respondent 1 as receiver. As I construe the mortgage instrument the power of sale could not be exercised before 27th July 1938 or till the mortgagor made default in payment of taxes and rates, etc., but the power of appointment of receiver could be exercised before the said date or before the said events, if interest for six months was due. I accordingly overrule the first three points urged on behalf of the appellant.

Regarding the fourth point, the facts are these: Mr. Deveria wrote a letter to the appellant on 2nd June 1933 requiring him to nominate a person as receiver. The appellant received the letter on 6th June 1933 and did not nominate a person as receiver. Mr. Deveria appointed respondent 1 as receiver on 16th June 1933. The learned District Judge has held that the period of 10 days mentioned in S. 12 of Act 28 of 1866 is to be counted from the date of the letter and not from the date of the receipt of the same by the appellant. Here he is wrong. Time is to be counted from the date of delivery of the letter to the appellant. The statute plainly gives the mortgagor a period of 10 days to make his choice. But I do not think that the appointment made on 16th June 1933 is invalid, because in my judgment the mortgagor, by his contract as embodied in the mortgage is not entitled to 10 days' time as provided for in S. 12. The words there are to this effect: "but without restriction in the last mentioned Act (Act 28 of 1866) contained as to giving notice." This in my judgment is sufficiently comprehensive. I accordingly overrule the fourth point also urged on behalf of the appellant.

Regarding the last point I hold that under Cl. (2) of the power of attorney which Mr. Deveria held for Miss Jones he could exercise the power he has exercised in this case. The attorney is given the power "to execute or enforce powers of sale or other rights, power of receiving incident to such mortgages, charges or securities." This point however was not raised in either of the Courts below and if raised in the Court of first instance could have been met by the plea of ratification by the principal, or the assumption that Mr. Deveria had not the power of appointing a receiver of the mortgaged premises. It would accordingly be wrong to allow the appellant to urge this point for the first time here. I accordingly overrule all the points urged on behalf of the appellant and dismiss this appeal with costs. It must be however made clear that respondent 1 is the receiver in respect of that portion of premises No. 57 Ballygunj Road which is still under mortgage. Leave to appeal under S. 15 of the Letters Patent is refused.

4. Satya Priya Ghoshal v. Borid Baran Mukerji, (1936) 40 C W N 846.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

 A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 650

R. C. MITTER, J.

Monindra Lal Chatterjee—Defendant—Appellant.

v.

Hari Pada Ghose and others—Plaintiffs—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1625 of 1935, Decided on 3rd July 1936, from appellate decree of Dist. Judge, Birbhum, D/- 10th September 1935.

(a) Civil P. C. (1908), O. 1, R. 1—R. 1 applies to joinder of causes of action also.

Rule 1 applies not only to the joinder of plaintiffs, but also to the joinder of causes of action in one suit. So under that rule several causes of action can be joined in one suit if some common question of law or fact would arise. [P 651 C 2]

Where the defendant was the agent of two sets of principals appointed at different times and by different acts, and the principals sued him for rendition of accounts and having regard to the scope of agency some common questions of fact and law were bound to arise:

Held: that the principals could join their causes of action in one suit, and hence there was no misjoinder of parties: 1918 Cal 858, Rel. on. [P 651 C 1, 2]

* (b) Contract Act (1872), S. 201—Agency—Termination—Joint and several principals—On death one agency terminates only as regards representative of deceased principal but continues as regards surviving principal—Surviving principal may sue for rendition of accounts within three years of termination of agency as against him.

Where there are two or more principals and they are joint and several, and if one of them dies, the agency terminates only as regards the representatives of the deceased principal, but it continues as regards the surviving principal. So the period of limitation for the suit against agent for rendition of accounts does not begin to run as against the surviving principal from the death of the deceased principal: Phillips v. Hull Alhambra Palace Co., (1901) 1 K B 59; 1917 Cal 436; 1918 Mad 279 and 1916 Cal 680, Rel. on; Case law discussed.

[P 652 C 2; P 653 C 1]

Bejoy Kumar Bhattacharjee and Amarendra Mohan Bagchi—for Appellant.

Gopendra Nath Das—for Respondents.

Upendra Kumar Roy—for Deputy Registrar.

Judgment.—This appeal is on behalf of the defendant. It is directed against the judgment and decree of the learned District Judge, Birbhum, which have affirmed the judgment and decree of the Munsif of Suri. The defendant has been held liable to render account from 1313 to 1337 B. S., and a Commissioner has been appointed to take accounts. Hari Pada Ghose, plaintiff 1, Guru Pada Ghose, the father of the minor plaintiff 2, and plaintiff 3, Gokul Mohini Dassi, wife of Rakhal Das Sarcar, now dead, were the owners of some zemindary and other properties. Hari Pada and Guru Pada were both minors before 1313; the latter who was the eldest of the two attained majority in 1313. At the time when both of them were minors, Rakhal Das Sarcar was appointed their guardian by the District Judge. As such guardian he appointed the defendant-appellant an agent of the minor's estate. His wife also appointed the same gentleman as her agent. The duties of the defendant were to collect the rents and profits of all their properties, to put in Government revenues and rent due to the superior landlords and to pay the net profits to his principals.

The plaint states that he submitted regular accounts to Rakhal Das Sarcar acting as guardian of the said minors and to him, as the husband of plaintiff 3, till 1313, when Guru Pada attained majority; but since then he has not submitted complete accounts for a single year. The plaint further states that after Hari Pada and Guru Pada attained majority he continued as their agents, and after Guru Pada's death in Magh 1335 (February 1929) he continued as the agent of Hari Pada and Guru Pada's minor son till 1337 or the beginning of 1338 on the same terms. There is no further question that he continued as the agent of plaintiff 3 since his appointment till the beginning of 1338. The plaintiffs have accordingly sued him for accounts for the period 1313 to 1337, as he refused to render accounts in spite of repeated demands made since the commencement of the year 1338. The plaint was filed on 17th April 1934. The main defences now maintained are that the suit is not maintainable and that it is bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action, and that it is barred by limitation; at least the claim for accounts up to the death of Guru Pada, the father of plaintiff 2, is so barred. Both the Courts below have overruled these defences and have granted the plaintiffs a decree for accounts from 1313 to 1337.

The points urged by Mr. Bhattacharjya are the following: (i) That the suit is bad for misjoinder of parties and causes of action; (ii) that the claim for accounts up to the death of Rakhal Das Sarcar is not maintainable on the plaint as filed; (iii) that the defendant's agency under Guru Pada and Hari Pada terminated on the death of Guru Pada, and the claim for the period up to Guru Pada's death is barred by limitation; and (iv) that the claim after the death of Guru Pada is also barred by limitation as the suit has been instituted beyond three years of the termination of the defendant's agency under plaintiffs 1 and 2. Regarding this last mentioned point the learned Subordinate Judge found that the defendants' services were dispensed with not in Pous 1337 as alleged by him, but in the beginning of the year 1338. He did not precisely find on what date of Baisakh 1338 the defendant ceased to be the plaintiff's agent, but assuming that his services ceased on 1st Baisakh 1338, which corresponds to 15th April 1931, the suit would be in time if filed on 15th April 1934. It was filed on 17th April 1934, and Mr. Bhattacharjya contended that it was filed too late by two days, but as soon as it was pointed out that 15th and 16th April 1934, were civil Court holidays, he did not pursue the point further and conceded that there was nothing in it. The fourth point therefore need not be considered further.

Regarding the first point there cannot be any doubt that two suits have been combined into one. The defendant was employed as an agent by Gokul Mohini by a separate power of attorney. This agency has continued from before 1313 till the beginning of 1338 without any break. The agency of defendant 1 under Guru Pada and Hari Pada was a separate agency. The properties which defendant 1 was to manage were no doubt the same, viz., the joint properties of Gokul Mohini and Guru Pada and Hari Pada, but the defendant was the agent of two sets of principals appointed at different times and by different acts. But having regard to the scope of the agency and the defence taken some questions of fact and law were bound to arise and have in fact arisen. The Court of first instance overruled this point on this ground and the point was not further mooted by the defendant before the lower appellate Court where the defendant was the appellant. On the principle formulated in 45 Cal 111 (1) I overrule this point.

The second point urged by Mr. Bhattacharjya, is based on the following facts: He says that the plaintiffs admit in their plaint that they have received from the defendant complete account papers up to a certain time. In their plaint they do not say that the defendant was asked to explain those papers and had refused. Under these circumstances Mr. Bhattacharjya says that the plaint is bad as it does not succinctly state the contents of those account papers so received from the defendant and does not indicate what items appearing in them are under challenge by the plaintiffs. This contention of Mr. Bhattacharjya is supported by the observations made in 52 Cal 766 (2) at pp. 781-782 and is a sound one, but it does not affect the decree made. The decree for rendition of accounts is from 1313 to 1337. The admission in the plaint is that complete papers had been submitted up to the time when Guru Pada and Hari Pada were both minors, and no such papers have been submitted by the defendant after Guru Pada had attained majority, which was in the year 1313. The principle formulated in 52 Cal 766 (2) does not accordingly help the defendant in respect of the claim after 1313.

The third point urged by Mr. Bhattacharjya raises a very important question. He says that the defendant was appointed an agent of Guru Pada and Hari Pada by their guardian Rakhal Das Sarcar. He continued to be the agent of the said persons till February 1929 (Magh 1335) when Guru Pada died. On that event he says that the agency terminated and a suit for accounts for this period has to be brought within three years from February 1929, under the second part of Art. 89, Lim. Act. He further says that the continuance of the employment of defendant by Hari Pada and Guru Pada's son under the same terms and conditions after February 1929 is really in the eye of the law a new agency, and in the suit as filed by the plaintiffs can only get a decree for accounts from Magh 1335

1. Ramendra Nath Roy v. Brojendra Nath Dass, 1918 Cal 858=41 I C 944=45 Cal 111=21 C W N 794.
2. Bharat Chandra Chakravarty v. Kiran Chandra Roy, 1925 Cal 1069=90 I C 944=52 Cal 766.

(February 1929) till Chaitra 1337. This argument cannot apply to Gokul Mohini's claim because the defendant was her agent under a separate power of attorney and there has not been a termination of that agency till the beginning of 1338. The claim of Hari Pada and plaintiff 2, Guru Pada's son, has to be examined carefully.

Where one man employs an agent, there cannot be any difficulty. S. 201, Contract Act, which does not make an exception in favour of a special contract, says that the agency is terminated by the death of either the principal or the agent. If the same person continues to be employed on the same terms as before under the legal representative of the deceased principal, in the eye of the law a new agency is constituted, and for the purpose of limitation a suit for accounts for the old agency must be brought within three years of the termination of the said agency e. g. from the principal's death, assuming that there had been no previous demand and refusal to account: 43 Cal 248 (3) at pp. 254-255; 40 C W N 245 (4). This, I gather, is also the principle formulated by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 44 Cal 1 (5) where Lord Parmoor said that the legal representatives of Nanda Kumar Barua had a right to demand accounts from the agent appointed by Nanda Kumar for a period of three years from the death of Nanda Kumar under the last part of Art. 89, Limitation Act.

Cases, however, where two or more persons appoint an agent by the same act or instrument, and where only one of such principals dies, present difficulties. These cases cannot be answered simply by the terms of S. 201, Contract Act. The principle that the death of the principal terminates the agency as embodied in S. 201, Contract Act, is a principle taken from the English law. In England, however, cases where the appointment of an agent had been made by a firm have presented difficulties when one member of the firm subsequently died. It has been held that death of one of the partners does not ipso facto terminate the agency, but the scope of the agency and the business for which the agent was employed are material factors: 6 H & N 575 (6) and (1901) 1 K B 59 (7). In 21 C W N 620 (8), a case which has been followed by the Madras High Court in 35 M L J 294 (9), Mookherjee, J. examined the position in detail and laid down the law in these terms:

We cannot consequently hold as an inflexible rule of law that whenever two principals appoint an agent to take charge of some matter in which they are jointly interested, the death of one terminates the authority of the agent not merely as regards the deceased, but also as regards the remaining principal. We have in each case to determine the true intention of the parties to the contract, from the terms thereof and from the surrounding circumstances.

In that case, as also in 35 M L J 294 (9), members of a joint Mitakshara family had appointed one of them as agent for a certain purpose. It was held that the death of one of the members who had appointed their coparcener as agent, did not affect the agency at all, the agency continued not only under the surviving coparceners who had concurred in the appointment, but also under all the coparceners including sons and descendants of the deceased coparcener. This view that the agency continued, so to say, under the joint family as before, may be due to the special facts of those cases and to the peculiar position of a joint Mitakshara family. That fact may account for the continuance of the agency not only under the survivors, but also under the descendants of the deceased principal, but I do not see why in other cases the agency should not continue under the surviving principals only in the absence of any evidence that all the principals were, as Mookerjee, J. points out, in 21 C W N 620 (8), and to use his convenient expression, "joint principals" and not "joint and several principals" and "the power given to the agent is not joint and several." It may terminate so far as the representative of the deceased principal

3. Madhusudan Sen v. Rakhal Chandra, 1916 Cal 680=30 I C 697=43 Cal 248=19 C W N 1070.

4. Bir Bikram v. Jadab Chandra, 1935 Cal 817=160 I C 388=62 C L J 464=40 C W N 245

5. Nobin Chandra Barua v. Chandra Madhab Barua, 1916 P C 148=36 I C 1=44 Cal 1=21 C W N 97 (P O).

6. Taskar v. Shepperd, (1858) 6 H & N 575=30 L J Ex 207=4 L T 19=9 W R 476.

7. Phillips v. Hull Alhambra Palace Co., (1901) 1 K B 59=70 L J K B 26=83 L T 431=49 W R 223=17 T L R 40.

8. Re Sital Prosad, 1917 Cal 436=41 I C 288=21 C W N 620.

9. Ponnusami Pillai v. Chidambaram Chettiar, 1918 Mad 279=44 I C 849=35 M L J 294.

is concerned and to that extent only. This accords with the view taken in 43 Cal 248 (3), a case which I have already noticed. The power of attorney which Rakhal Das Sarcar as guardian of his wards executed in favour of the defendant has not been produced. The defendant's statement that he never saw it and never knew of its terms does not seem to me to be either convincing or truthful. If he wants to maintain the position that the death of Guru Pada terminated his agency under Hari Pada also, it was incumbent on him to prove from the terms of the power of attorney, either by producing the power of attorney or from secondary evidence, that Guru Pada and Hari Pada were "joint principals" and not "joint and several principals" in the words of Mookerjee, J. S. 109, Evidence Act, in my judgment, places the burden of proof on him.

I accordingly hold that on the death of Guru Pada the defendant continued to be the agent under Hari Pada. The same agency continued and Hari Pada can by invoking Art. 89, Limitation Act, get accounts from him from 1313 to 1337.

On Guru Pada's death, however, the old agency under him terminated and a new agency under Guru Pada's son, namely, under plaintiff 2, sprang up. Plaintiff 2 was bound to sue for accounts of his father's time within three years of his father's death which occurred in February 1929. If he had not been a minor at his father's death and at the date of this suit his claim from 1313 to Magh 1335 (February 1929) would have been barred by time, but his minority has saved his claim for this period. S. 6, Limitation Act, covers the case and there is no need for him to invoke S. 7 at all. I accordingly overrule this point also. The result is that this appeal is dismissed with costs.

D.S./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 653

M. C. GHOSE, J.

Jaques and others — Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Narendra Lal Das — Plaintiff — Respondent.

Appeal No. 1922 of 1934, Decided on 22nd June 1936, from appellate decree of Addl. Sub-Judge, Sylhet, D/- 4th August 1934.

Limitation Act (1908), Art. 2 — Police officers exceeding their lawful authority and causing hurt when acting bona fide in exercise of what they understood to be their duty under Criminal Procedure Code — Suit for compensation is governed by Art. 2.

When a public officer acts bona fide in the exercise of his lawful authority but needlessly exceeds his authority then a suit would lie and the limitation prescribed by Art. 2 would apply. [P 655 C 2]

Where police officers exceeded their lawful authority and caused hurt when acting bona fide in exercise of what they understood to be their duty under Criminal Procedure Code:

Held: that Art. 2 governed the case and the suit for compensation brought more than 90 days after injury was barred.

[P 655 C 2 ; P 656 C 1]

S. M. Bose, S. M. Akram and Bijan Kumar Mukherji—for Appellants.

Paresh Lal Shome and Priya Nath Dutta—for Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal by the defendants in a suit for damages. The plaintiff is a man of Habiganj. Defendant 1 was the Assistant Superintendent of Police of Sylhet. Defendant 2 was the Deputy Superintendent of Police at Habiganj. Defendant 3 was the Sub-Inspector in charge of Habiganj Police Station.

The plaintiff's case is that from April 1930 peaceful and well-regulated processions and meetings were held in Habiganj Sub-Division according to the programme of the Indian National Congress; that on 18th June 1930 the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Habiganj without any justification issued an order under S. 144, Criminal P. C., prohibiting such meetings and processions and that the people of Habiganj considered the order to be illegal and unjustifiable and were determined to disobey the same. Accordingly at 3.30 p. m., on 1st July 1930, nine civil resisters called Satyagrahis started in procession through the principal street of Habiganj town, followed by a motor lorry in which there were three men including the plaintiff with red cross badges on their dress. They meant to render first aid to the Satyagrahis who might be wounded or injured by the Police; that the civil and military Police under the instructions of the three defendants assaulted the nine Satyagrahis and then advanced towards the lorry in which the plaintiff and two other members of the ambulance were and without justification assaulted the plaintiff. Defendant 3 struck him a blow and other constables assaulted him with the result that he fell down unconscious, his left elbow joint was dislocated and it has been permanently injured. The plaintiff claimed damages of Rs. 509.

The defence was that the Sub-Divisional Magistrate was justified in issuing the order under S. 144, having regard to the intense excitement of the people during the period of propaganda of the Civil Disobedience Movement by meetings and processions and that the procession of the Satyagrahis together with the so-called ambulance lorry carrying the plaintiff and others and the people following the lorry formed one and the same assembly in violation of the order under S. 144, Criminal P. C., and that defendant 1 judging the assembly to be an unlawful assembly in exercise of the authority vested in him under S. 127, Criminal P. C., commanded the assembly to disperse and when his command was disobeyed, he ordered his constables to disperse the assembly by force; that the lorry men had no legal right to make use of the red cross and that only minimum force was used in dispersing the crowd; that defendant 1 had ordered the policemen that no blows would be struck above the waist and that when the men in the lorry refused to disperse, the policemen only struck the sides of the lorry and there was a scramble amongst the occupants who jumped off and fell one upon another but that the defendants were not aware of any injury received by the plaintiff. The trial Court decreed the suit and the decree was affirmed in appeal. The learned Subordinate Judge in a long and careful judgment has found that the order of the Sub-Divisional Magistrate under S. 144, Criminal P. C., was invalid and illegal. He found that from January 1930 there was a great agitation in the whole of the sub-division and meetings and processions were organized throughout the sub-division. Civil disobedience was launched with the result that the people were excited to break the salt laws and forest laws, not to pay Chowkidary tax, to abandon schools and to burn foreign cloths. Lectures were delivered asking the people to go to jail and even to sacrifice their lives and that they should not be afraid of bloodshed; that the Government Officers were molested in various ways and on a certain day of a Hartal the Magistrates had a great difficulty in reaching their offices. The learned Subordinate Judge found that the Magistrate could reasonably be of opinion that the situation prevailing at the time was sufficiently urgent to call for an order under S. 144, Criminal P. C., but that the order was invalid and illegal, inasmuch as it did not comply with the provisions of Cl. (3), S. 144, Criminal P. C., which runs as follows:

An order under this section may be directed to a particular individual or to the public generally when frequenting or visiting a particular place.

The order of the Magistrate was to forbid the meetings and processions throughout the sub-division of Habiganj. The Court of appeal below held that such a wide order was not contemplated by Cl. (3), S. 144, Criminal P. C., which meant a particular place which the public would be asked not to visit. On the question whether the nine volunteers and four lorry men formed one and the same assembly, the learned Subordinate Judge held that their common object was not the same. The object of the nine Satyagrahis was to defy the Magistrate's order and the object of the red cross men including the plaintiff was not to defy the Magistrate's order but to give first aid to the nine Satyagrahis in case they were wounded by the police. It is urged by the learned Standing Counsel that the Court of appeal below has not taken a correct view. These men all came from the camp of the Civil Disobedience Movement. Nine of them dressed up as Satyagrahis who offered themselves to be injured by the police and their friends, the plaintiff and others put on red cross badges on their dress and followed in a lorry to give them first aid when they were wounded by the police.

On a proper view, it is clear they formed one and the same assembly; the front men were out to defy the orders of the Government and the men in the lorry were behind them to aid and abet them. They were followed by a crowd of about 1,000 people. The lorry was at some distance behind the nine men who were marching ahead. But when in front of the local Treasury Office the policemen stopped the nine men, a large number of men gathered between them and the lorry. The Court of appeal below has criticised the defendants because they took the aid of the armed police. In this the Court committed an error. Actually defendant 1 used only his fists and the constables used only lathis. No firearms were used. The order under S. 144 being found to be illegal the question is whether the defendants acted bona fide in the exercise of their rights under Ss. 127 and 128, Criminal P. C., in declaring the assembly unlawful and in commanding it to disperse. Considering the large number of men who were led by the persons who were openly defying the law, it cannot be said that the defendants who were in charge of the peace of the sub-division were wrong to hold that the assembly was unlawful.

Defendant 1 who was the Police Officer in charge was right to declare the assembly to be unlawful under S. 127 and was right to direct his policemen to disperse the assembly. The learned Subordinate Judge considers that the lorry men did not disobey the order to disperse; when they were ordered to disperse the driver of the lorry tried to back, but he was prevented by the police. He tried to drive forward; from that also he was prevented by the police. Then the policemen beat on the sides of the lorry and struck at the occupants. The Court of appeal below has held that in assaulting the occupants of the lorry the police acted wrongly. It is urged by the learned Standing Counsel that the view taken by the Court of appeal below is not correct. When the order was given for the assembly to disperse, apparently the greater number of the assembly quickly dispersed. The men dressed with red cross badges stayed in the lorry. It was clearly their duty to get down from the lorry, but instead of doing that they kept their seats on the lorry and refused to move. In the circumstances it cannot be said that the police exceeded their rights in striking the sides of the lorry and commanding the men to disperse.

As to the actual injury which happened to the plaintiff it has been proved that his left elbow joint was dislocated. He says that he was struck on the left arm by the constables and by such injury his left arm was dislocated. He stated in evidence that defendant 3 struck him. That story has been disbelieved by the Court of appeal below. It would appear from that that the plaintiff is not a witness of truth. It appears that he got his arm broken either by a direct stroke or in falling down from the footboard of the lorry after receiving a lathi blow. In any case the police who struck him must be held responsible for the severe hurt which was caused and it cannot be said that in causing the hurt to the plaintiff the policemen were within their rights. The plaintiff would therefore be entitled to damages if his claim be not barred by limitation.

It is urged that the suit is barred by limitation, that the proper Article to apply is Art. 2, Sch. 1, Lim. Act. That article applies to a suit for compensation for doing or for omitting to do an act alleged to be in pursuance of any enactment in force for the time being in British India. The period of limitation is 90 days from the time when the act complained of takes place. It is urged that here the plaintiff claimed compensation from the Police Officers for doing an injury to him which they did in the course of the dispersal of an unlawful assembly under the Criminal Procedure Code and therefore this is the proper Article and as the suit was not brought within 90 days, the plaintiff cannot succeed. The Courts below have held that the Article applicable is Art. 22 for compensation for any other injury to the person. The period of limitation is one year from the time the injury is committed. It is urged by the learned Standing Counsel that Art. 22 would apply in the case of tort against a private person or against a public officer acting mala fide. But when a public officer is acting bona fide in pursuance of the law and commits a tort Art. 2 is the proper Article to apply. That Article which lays down a short period of 90 days for a suit is for the protection of public officers who have acted bona fide in the exercise of their duties.

It has been held in many cases that Art. 2 will not protect a public officer who has acted mala fide under colour of his office. In this case it is clear that the three defendants acted bona fide in exercise of what they understood to be their duty under the Criminal Procedure Code. The injury that was caused to the plaintiff was done in the exercise of that duty, but in doing the injury they exceeded their lawful authority. If the act complained of is believed to be actually authorised by law, then no question of limitation would arise, as in that case the action itself would not be maintainable. It is when a public officer acted bona fide in the exercise of his lawful authority but heedlessly exceeded his authority, then a suit would lie and the limitation prescribed by Art. 2 would apply. The present is such a case, and as the suit was brought more than three months after the injury was received by the plaintiff, the plaintiff's claim is barred by limitation. In the result the appeal is allowed and the plaintiff's suit is dismissed with costs in all the Courts. Leave to appeal under S. 15 of the Letters Patent is refused.

D.S./R.K.

*Appeal allowed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 656

MUKERJI AND S. K. GHOSE, JJ.

Khoka Das — Decree-holder — Appellant.

v.

Mahendra Nath Biswas and others — Respondents.

Appeal No. 478 of 1934, Decided on 24th June 1936, from original order of Sub-Judge, Khulna, D/- 28th July 1934.

Costs—Decree for—Enforcement of—Suit for possession—Different sets of defendants entitled to different interests in property — Decree against defendants for costs payable by defendants jointly — Plaintiff treating as satisfied his claim for costs in respect of defendant A—No intention of parties to treat entire order for costs as satisfied—Plaintiff held entitled to proceed against defendants other than A for proportionate share of costs —In calculating proportion, respective shares of defendants in property should be taken into account.

In a suit for possession of property different sets of defendants were entitled to different interests in the property. A decree against them was made in respect of the properties and one joint order for costs payable by the defendants jointly was made. Under a compromise with defendant A the plaintiff released him from his liability for the costs, but there was no intention of the parties to treat the entire order for costs as satisfied :

Held: that in such circumstances the decree-holder was entitled to proceed against other defendants than A for realization of a proportionate share of the costs. [P 658 C 1]

Held further: that in calculating the proportion of costs the proportion of the respective shares of the defendants in the property should be taken into account: 11 I C 450, Not Foll. [P 658 C 2]

Prakash Chandra Mazumdar and Santindra Nath Roy Chowdhury—for Appellant.

Sarat Chandra Roy Chowdhury and Sris Chandra Dutt—for Respondents.

Judgment. — This is an appeal by a decree-holder from an order passed by the Subordinate Judge of Khulna dismissing an application for execution of a decree for costs. The question which arises for consideration in the appeal is one of some nicety. The decree was passed in a suit which the decree-holder as plaintiff had instituted for recovery of possession of four items of property and also for certain other reliefs. There was a very large number of defendants in the suit. As regards property No. 1, the suit was dismissed. One Jogendra Nath Shome, who was defendant 1 in the suit, claimed 8 annas share in properties Nos. 2 and 3 and the other 8 annas share in those properties was claimed by defendants 2 to 6. In property No. 4, the said defendant 1 claimed to be owner of the landlord's interest and in that property the tenants' interests were claimed by certain persons amongst whom were defendants 22 and 22-Ka. The plaintiff succeeded in obtaining a decree for possession in respect of properties Nos. 2, 3 and 4, and also certain other reliefs amongst which was a relief in the shape of a decree for account as against defendant 1, Jogendra. Two appeals were thereupon preferred to this Court from that decree; Appeal No. 71 of 1931 by defendant 1 and Appeal No. 43 of 1931 by defendants 2 to 6.

In the former appeal there was a compromise arrived at as between the plaintiff and defendant 1, and that appeal was disposed of on 12th April 1933 in accordance with the terms of the said compromise. In that appeal the other defendants had been made respondents but they were not parties to the compromise and the appeal was dismissed in so far as it was against them. The latter appeal remained pending and after running its usual course was eventually dismissed on a date with which we are not concerned here. During the pendency of the latter appeal, an application for execution which has given rise to the appeal now before us was filed by the plaintiff as decree-holder, and it was only for execution of the portion of the decree of the Subordinate Judge by which costs were awarded to the plaintiff as against defendants 1, 2 to 6 and 22 and 22-ka jointly. The Subordinate Judge has held that by reason of the compromise which the plaintiff had entered into with defendant 1, the plaintiff had absolved and released that defendant from all liability in respect of costs as provided for by the decree under execution and that, therefore, the present application for execution in respect of the said costs, which had been awarded to the plaintiff as against the defendants jointly including defendant 1, could not be allowed to be proceeded with as against the defendants other than defendant 1. It is from this order that the present appeal has been taken.

One of the contentions that have been urged before us on behalf of the decree-holder is that as a matter of fact under the compromise which was effected as between the plaintiff and defendant 1 and which was given effect to by the decree of this Court in Appeal No. 71 of 1931, there was no release granted to defendant 1 or satisfaction recorded as between the decree-holder and the said defendant in respect of the decree for costs. In this connexion, reliance has been placed upon the different clauses of para. 5 of the petition of compromise which set out the terms of the said compromise. We are of opinion that this contention is not well founded and if the terms contained in the several clauses of that paragraph have to be given effect to simultaneously it must be held that so far as defendant 1 is concerned, it was not the intention of any of the contracting parties that that defendant should have any further liability under the order for costs which had been made in the decree of the trial Court which is the decree now under execution. Whatever may have been said in Cl. (a) of that paragraph, it is perfectly clear to our mind upon a reading of Cl. (g) of the paragraph that it was the intention of the parties that the claim which the plaintiff has as against defendant 1 under the order for costs that had been made in the decree was to be treated as satisfied.

In Cl. (g) there is a specific reference to the fact that defendant 1 had spent a large sum of money over the litigation and it was expressly stated that in consideration of that fact as also for certain other considerations a sum of Rs. 1,600 was being paid by the plaintiff to the said defendant. We are clearly of opinion that the decree in so far as it was a decree as against defendant 1 was not intended to be kept alive for the purpose of execution even after the compromise effected as between that defendant and the plaintiff.

1936 C/83 & 84

The question, therefore, that has to be considered is whether in circumstances such as these when a decree for costs has been passed in favour of the plaintiff and against the defendants jointly, the plaintiff by adopting this particular course, namely, having absolved defendant 1 from liability in respect of the costs can be permitted to proceed as against the parties other than defendant 1 for realizing the said costs. On this question, one matter that has to be considered at the very outset is whether by the compromise it was intended that the entire decree for costs as against all the defendants should be treated as satisfied. Well, on this point whatever may have been the intention of the parties it is not possible for us to hold that upon the language that was used in the petition it could be held that such was the intention of the parties; and indeed it seems to us somewhat improbable that such could have been the intention seeing that the other appeal, viz. Appeal No. 43 of 1931 which had been preferred by some of the other defendants, remained pending in this Court at the time. Now the whole question, therefore, is whether as a matter of law it can be said that the decree became incapable of further execution in so far as it was against the other defendants and, if not, then to what extent was it executable as against them.

A very learned argument has been addressed to us by the learned advocates who have appeared on behalf of the parties in this case, but it seems to us that the decision that we will have to give will depend entirely upon the consideration of the peculiar equities of the particular case now before us. Here, it was a case in which a number of defendants in their character as tort-feasors had wrongfully entered into possession of the property which belonged to the plaintiff, and it was to recover possession of such properties that the plaintiff instituted the suit. Different interests were claimed by the different sets of defendants in the properties that were the subject-matter of the suit. Appropriate decree was made as against the different sets of defendants in respect of the properties and, one joint order for costs was made in favour of the successful plaintiff payable by the defendants jointly.

In those circumstances, if the plaintiff treats as satisfied his claim for the costs, in so far as they could be realized from one of the defendants, then ordinarily and in the absence of any other facts which may be considered to be relevant, the principle to be followed is that the other defendants who are also liable under the decree jointly with the one in respect of whom the claim had been treated as satisfied, may plead either that the entire claim has been satisfied or that the plaintiff decree-holder having released one of the joint defendants from his liability, for the costs is entitled only to proceed against them for realization of their share of the costs pro tanto. The first of these pleas, as we have already stated, cannot succeed because we are not able to put upon the terms of the compromise the interpretation that by it the parties intended that the entire order for costs was to be treated as satisfied. The result, therefore, must be that the decree-holder would be entitled to proceed as against the other defendants for realization of a proportionate share of the costs.

The next question, therefore, is on what principle has the proportion to be calculated. There is a decision of this Court in 14 C L J 354 (1), in which it has been held that the costs should be treated as distributed in equal proportion amongst all the defendants. The rule laid down in that case, however, in our opinion, should not be treated as an inflexible rule but a rule which with propriety may be applied to a case in which the facts are similar to those as in the case in which that rule was laid down. So far as the present case is concerned, the matter will have to be decided upon considerations of equitable principles. We find that defendant 1 claimed an 8 annas share in the properties Nos. 2 and 3, and the other 8 annas share in those properties was claimed by defendants 2 to 6, and that while defendant 1 claimed the landlord's interest in property No. 4 the tenants' interest in that property was claimed by defendants 22 and 22 Ka. By the compromise the plaintiff must be regarded as having given up his claim for costs which is proportionate at least to the 8 annas share in properties Nos. 2 and 3 and the landlord's interest in property No. 4, if not to the tenants' interest in that property as well, a question which we are not called upon here to decide. In such circumstances, we think it would be quite in consonance with principles of equity to hold that the plaintiff as decree-holder will be able to realise by execution as against defendants 2 to 6 only a quarter share and no more of the costs awarded to him under the decree of the trial Court. The appeal, in our opinion, should succeed to the extent indicated above and we order accordingly. The appellant will be entitled to his costs of this Court, hearing-fee being assessed at three gold mohurs.

D.S./R.K. Appeal partly allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 658

MUKHERJI AND S. K. GHOSH, JJ.

Emperor

v.

J, a Pleader—Opposite Party.

Reference No. 7 of 1935, Decided on 1st June 1936, made by Dist. Judge, Mymensingh, D/- 26th September 1935.

Legal Practitioner—Carelessness—Pleader checking account books of his client and filing application for withdrawal of money from Court—Money found already withdrawn—No ground for proceeding under Legal Practitioners' Act — Yet, pleader warned to be more careful.

A pleader filed an application for withdrawal of money in Court deposit, and it was found that the money was already withdrawn, but the pleader had checked the account books of his client to ascertain the amount to be withdrawn from the Court:

Held: that there was no sufficient material before the Court to proceed under the Legal Practitioners' Act, but it was noticed that the pleader should be more careful in such circumstances. [P 659 C 2]

S C. Basak and Bijan Kumar Mukherjee—for the Crown.

Amarendra Nath Basu, Gopal Chandra Das, Prasanta Bhushan Gupta and Satyendra Kishore Ghose—for Pleader.

Order.—We are not prepared to take too severe a view of the conduct of the pleader concerned in this case. The pleader appears to have been a practitioner of about 25 years standing and, as far as can be gathered from the papers before us, he commands a considerable practice. For the purposes of the affidavits which he swore, and in which he went out of his way to make a statement that the facts deposed to by him were true to his knowledge, he did, as a matter of fact, make such enquiry as was open to him to make. From the evidence that has been recorded in this case it appears that in the course of that enquiry the books of the office of the client himself were consulted and when it was found that the moneys were not entered therein and a list was prepared for his use stating the amounts which had not been withdrawn and for which applications for withdrawal had to be made, he bona fide put in the application and swore to the affidavits which had to be filed therewith. There was no dishonesty on the part of the pleader and indeed Dr. Basak appearing on behalf of the Crown has said that there are no materials whatsoever upon which he can contend that the conduct of the pleader was in any way dishonest. What has been complained of before us and what seems to have struck the learned District Judge, as appears from the letter by which he has forwarded this reference to this Court, is that the carelessness of the pleader was such as required to be firmly dealt with in order that others may not take advantage of such carelessness or other pleaders may not resort to the tactics of colluding with the clients and put in applications for withdrawal of moneys which had already been withdrawn. The learned District Judge has rightly observed in that letter that there was gross negligence and lack of care on the part of the pleader in the discharge of his professional duties and that his conduct amounted to professional negligence which should be taken notice of by this Court, because otherwise pleaders would think that they could safely be careless and collude in matters like this with unscrupulous clients, and he has proceeded to observe further that it would not be beyond the bounds of possibility that the pleader deliberately turned the blind eye to any check that he might apply at the request of the admittedly guilty law agent who was convicted for misappropriating the money originally withdrawn.

So far as the last-mentioned conclusion is concerned, we do not find any materials on the record on which we can say that this particular case in putting forward the six applications which form the subject matter of this case, the pleader deliberately connived at a false claim put forward by his client. The pleader in this particular case had to deal with the very large number of withdrawal applications of which all the others were genuine cases. At the same time, it is quite true that it is expected that when the Court requires the assistance of the pleader for the purpose of enabling it to satisfy itself that the money is due and had not been withdrawn the Court certainly expects a greater degree of care on the part of the pleader. Having regard to all these circumstances, however, we feel that we are not able to hold that the conduct on the part of the pleader amounted to such misconduct as would justify the Court in proceeding to take action under the Legal Practitioners' Act against him. We, therefore, discharge the reference. We hope that the pleader concerned will be more careful in matters of this description in future, and we have no reason to suppose that the present proceedings that have been taken against him and have been pending for all this time will not serve as a warning to him for that purpose.

B.D./R.K. Reference discharged.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 659

LORT-WILLIAMS AND CUNLIFFE, JJ.

Elimuddin Sarkar—Petitioner.

v.

Umed Ali Bepari and others—Opposite Parties.

Criminal Ref. No. 55 of 1935, Decided on 13th November 1935.

Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 145 (6)—Former dispute—Order under S. 145 (6) in favour of one party—Subsequent dispute relating to same property and between same parties or parties deriving their interest from same parties—Order in former dispute held binding on parties in subsequent dispute.

In a dispute concerning certain land between two parties an order under S. 145 (6) was made in favour of one party. In a subsequent dispute relating to the same property and between same parties or between parties deriving their interest from the same parties, the Magistrate reversed the order made in the former dispute:

Held: that the Magistrate's order was wrong. The two disputes being related to the same property and between same parties or parties deriving their interest from same parties, the order in the former dispute was binding on the parties in the subsequent dispute. Consequently as provided by S. 145 (6) the party declared to be entitled to possession in the former dispute was entitled to be protected against disturbance of such possession until evicted therefrom in due course of law; otherwise it would be possible for the opposite party to continue to harass his opponents by instituting successive proceedings under S. 145. The party alleging that it was aggrieved had its remedy in a civil Court, where the questions of title and possession could be settled as between contending parties.

[P 661 C 3]

N. K. Basu and Nirmal Chandra Chakravarty—for Petitioner.

H. S. Suhrawardy and A. S. M. Akram—for Opposite Parties.

Lort-Williams, J.—This is a Reference under S. 438, Criminal P. C., made by the Sessions Judge of Dacca. It relates to an order under S. 145 passed by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Manikgunj on 7th December 1934 in respect of lands comprising Sheet No. 1 of the Cadastral Survey of Mouza Purulia. In 1919 the present applicant's mother-in-law Fakrunnessa Chaudhurany, who was the predecessor-in-interest of the applicant's son who is the present malik of Touzi No. 97 of the Pabna Collectorate to which the disputed property belonged, obtained an order under S. 145, Criminal P. C., declaring the possession of herself and her tenants to the entire area covered by Sheet No. 1 of Mouza Purulia. This order was the result of proceedings taken in respect of a dispute between her and her tenants on the one hand and U. N. Roy, the Malik of the property covered by the adjoining Sheet No. 2 of Mouza Purulia, on the other; Elimuddin, the principal member of the first party in the present proceedings was a party to that case. That order came before this Court in Criminal Revision No. 985 of 1919 and was upheld. In 1921 the property belonging to U. N. Roy was purchased by Hara Sundar Majumdar, and as a result of further trouble between his tenants and the tenants of the present applicant's party, a second proceeding under S. 145, Criminal P. C., was drawn up in 1922. This matter came before the High Court, and in Criminal Revision No. 468 of 1922 reported in 27 C W N 171 (1) their Lordships, B. B. Ghose and Chotzner, JJ. quashed the proceedings on the ground that the original order of 1919 was binding on the parties and that fresh proceedings were improper. They held that it was clearly the duty of the Magistrate to see that the possession of the first party adjudged under the previous order was not disturbed.

In 1927 further trouble arose and the present applicant's party secured an order under S. 144, Criminal P. C., in respect of the same property. Subsequently, the boundary of Sheet No. 1 was demarcated with pegs in a proceeding under the Survey Act of 1875 and this demarcation was confirmed by the Collector of Dacca in 1928. There was no appeal against this order. In 1933 there was further disturbance, with which it is not necessary to deal in this judgment, and in May 1934 there was a further disturbance, as a result of which the Sub-Divisional Officer of Manikgunj passed a further order under S. 144 in favour of the present applicant's party and in respect of the same property. This order came before the High Court and was dealt with by Guha and Bartley, JJ. in Criminal Revision No. 693 of 1934 (2). Their Lordships held that the original order of 1919 was not binding in the sense that fresh proceedings under S. 145 were not barred. Accordingly, they quashed the proceedings under S. 144. The present applicant was not a party to those proceedings. In the meantime, the applicant's party had instituted cases of rioting, trespass and theft against the members of the opposite party who were convicted. One of these cases was dealt with by this Court in Criminal Revision No. 1191 of 1934 when the conviction was upheld on the ground that the applicant's party was secured by the order of 1919 in their possession of the disputed property, that possession not having been challenged in any civil Court. The present order was passed against the applicant Hamid and 38 others. The learned Sessions Judge recommends that this order of the Subdivisional Officer of Manikgunj should be set aside. The grounds given for the opinion expressed by the Sessions Judge are that the property and the parties in the present proceedings and in the proceedings in 1919 are identical, that is to say, the parties in the present proceedings are either the same or they derive their interest from persons who were parties to the 1919 proceedings.

The learned Judge then proceeds in his letter of reference to refer to what he considers to be conflicting decisions of this Court, namely the decision reported in 27 C W N 171 (1) and the decision of Guha and Bartley, JJ., to which I have already referred. In my opinion, it is not clear that these decisions are in conflict. The first decision proceeded upon the assumption that the property and the parties concerned were the same. But the decision of Guha and Bartley, JJ. so far as we have been able to ascertain both from the record and the remarks addressed to us by the learned advocates, proceeded upon the assumption that the parties, at any rate, were not the same and, therefore, the order of 1919 could not be a bar to the proceedings in 1934 between different parties. Mr. N. K. Basu, in his argument before us, has proceeded upon the same lines and sought to show that both the property and the parties are different, and that they are different in the present proceedings from the property and the parties with which the proceedings of 1919 were concerned. He has failed to show this distinction by means of any document upon the record. The learned Judge has stated in his letter of reference that both sets of proceedings concern the same property and are substantially between the same parties. The order of 1919 was passed against the party of U. N. Roy. His interest passed in 1921 to Hara Sundar, the present owner of the property covered by sheet No. 2, and the present landlord of the tenants of the opposite party. This appears from the record. Mr. Basu has drawn our attention to the petition filed in Criminal Revision No. 693 of 1934 (2) in which it is stated that the Official Receiver of this Court was appointed Receiver of U. N. Roy's property and was at first made a party to the 1919 proceedings. This was without the leave of the Court, and this leave not having been obtained, the Receiver made an application to the Magistrate in the S. 145 proceedings for time in order that leave might be obtained. The petition, however, was rejected and the Magistrate passed a final order declaring possession of the first party. Subsequently, the Official Receiver moved the High Court in Criminal Revision No. 985 of 1919 decided on 13th January 1920. The High Court discharged the Rule, but observed as follows:

1. Aran Sardar v. Hara Sundar Mazumdar, 1923 Cal 95=71 I C 225=24 Cr L J 97=27 C W N 171=37 C L J 39.

2. Harpad Mazumdar v. Dhani Ahmad Sardar, 1935 Cal 494=1935 Cr O 886=157 I C 674.

It has been pointed out to us that the order may be construed as affecting the rights of the Receiver. In that view we think that as no formal leave from the High Court was obtained to add him as a party, his name may be deleted from the proceedings. The order stands good otherwise.

Mr. Basu then sought to argue that his clients, the opposite party in the present proceedings, derived his interest from that Receiver and, therefore, is not bound by the order made in 1919. Mr. Basu, however, has failed to show anything upon the record which supports this contention. According to his argument, this information was before their Lordships Guha and Bartley, JJ. in Criminal Revision Case No. 693 of 1934 (2), and it was this fact which was the basis of their judgment, namely that the parties in 1934 were not the same as those in 1919. This fact not appearing on the record which is before us, and which was before the Sessions Judge, we must proceed upon the assumption that the Sessions Judge is correct when he states that the parties to the two sets of proceedings were the same or derived their interest from the same parties. It is upon this basis, namely that the property and the parties are the same in the two sets of proceedings that my judgment herein is based. That being so, in my opinion the learned Sessions Judge is right in his contention that the proceedings in 1919 are binding upon the parties concerned in the proceedings of 1934. Consequently, as provided by S. 145, sub-s. (6), the party declared to be entitled to possession in 1919 is entitled to be protected against disturbance of such possession until evicted therefrom in due course of law. Otherwise it would be possible for the opposite party to continue to harass his opponents by instituting successive proceedings under S. 145. The party alleging that they are aggrieved have their remedy in a civil Court, where the question of title and possession can be settled as between the contending parties. Mr. Basu further attempted to show that the property affected by the two sets of proceedings is not the same. He failed, however, to show anything upon the record supporting his contention and we must accept the statement of the learned Sessions Judge that a map of the property was prepared by a Kunangoe after local enquiry and that the boundaries shown are identical with the boundaries with which the proceedings of 1919 were concerned, that is to say, the property comprised in sheet No. 1 of Mouza Purulia. The result is that the decision in this case turns upon questions of fact, namely that the property and the parties in the 1934 proceedings are identical. We accordingly accept the reference and set aside the order drawn up by the Sub-Divisional Magistrate of Manik-gung under S. 145, Criminal P. C., dated 7th December 1934.

Cunliffe, J.—I am of the same opinion. It is quite obvious that only in the most exceptional circumstances and, I should say, within the longest distance of time, would an order under S. 145, Criminal P. C., be upset. In considering this question, Rampini and Mookerjee, JJ. in 33 Cal 33 (3) at p. 49 said as follows after reviewing all the authorities with regard to the matter:

It appears to be clear to us that there is no inflexible rule of law, that a Magistrate, in deciding the question of possession under S. 145, Criminal P. C., is concluded by every previous order of a Civil or Criminal Court relating to the subject of dispute, and that the weight to be attached to any such previous order must depend upon the facts and circumstances of the particular case.

As my Lord has related, there have been conflicting orders in relation to this particular piece of land. I should have thought that the real basis on which any particular order under S. 145 could be reversed by a subsequent Court would be only on the ground that the parties affected by the previous order have been completely dispossessed. There is no such evidence of that having occurred here and for these reasons I concur with my Lord in accepting this reference.

D.S./R.K. Reference accepted.

3. Khulada Kinkar Roy v. Danesh Mir, (1906) 33 Cal 33=10 C W N 257=2 Cr L J 670=2 C L J 271 (F B).

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 662

MACNAIR, J.

In re Jalpaiguri Banking and Trading Corporation Ltd.

O. O. C. J. Decided on 25th November 1935.

Companies Act (1913), Ss. 153, 169—Stay of proceedings—Arrangement between company and its unsecured creditors including decree-holders for sanctioning scheme postponing payment of all such creditors—Such arrangement sanctioned by Court—Decree-holder creditor carrying on execution of decree against such compromise—Court has power to order stay of execution proceedings.

Section 153 contemplates the type of arrangement arrived at between the company and its unsecured creditors including decree-holders for the sanction of a scheme postponing payment of all such decree-holders. It does not contemplate merely a compromise or arrangement come to in or after a winding up order has been passed, and it provides in clear language that when such compromise has been sanctioned by the Court, such compromise shall be binding on the creditors. Hence the Court has power to stay the execution of a decree started by one of the decree-holders creditors questioning the compromise and issue injunction to restrain him from proceeding further with such proceedings. The injunction would remain so long as the scheme is in operation: Booth v. Walkden Spinning and Manufacturing Co. Ltd., (1909) 2 K B 368, Disting. [P 663 O 1,2]

Sudhish Roy—for the Company.

N. C. Chatterjee—for Kalipada Banerjee.

Order.—This is an application by the company that certain execution proceedings that have been undertaken by Rai Bahadur Kalipada Banerji in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Jalpaiguri be stayed, so long as the scheme passed by this Court, remains in force. Kalipada Banerji obtained a decree against the Jalpaiguri Banking and Trading Corporation Limited in July 1934. Various payments were made under that decree and on 17th December 1934 the Company applied under S. 153, Companies Act, for the sanction of a scheme postponing payment of all unsecured creditors including decree-holders. A meeting was held and the scheme was passed in February of this year. In March there was an application by Kalipada Banerji to this Court in which he submitted that the scheme was not binding on him. That application was heard by my learned brother Cunliffe, J., who decided in a judgment reported in 39 C W N 875 (1), that the creditor Kalipada Banerji was not entitled as a decree-holder to be considered separately as a "class" of creditor. The scheme was sanctioned as I have said, and in view of this judgment of the learned Judge in this particular matter the creditor Kalipada Banerji is bound by that scheme and the compromise which was being entered into between the Company and its creditors. Kalipada Banerji however was not satisfied and has attempted to nullify the orders of the Court by getting his decree transferred to the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Jalpaiguri and attempting to execute it against the assets of the Company.

The main ground of opposition to the present application is that this Court has no jurisdiction to stay the proceedings in the Jalpaiguri Court because no such jurisdiction is vested in the Court under the Companies Act except under S. 169. S. 169 merely provides, it is argued, a stay of proceedings after presentation of a winding up petition and in no other circumstances is a stay of proceedings possible. Reliance is placed on the case in (1909) 2 K B 368 (2). But that case is in many respects different to the present. There an order had been made that meetings of the creditors and of the members of the Company should be summoned to consider whether a scheme should be come to between the Company and its creditors and members. Before the order had been made summoning the meetings a creditor obtained judgment and the application in that case was by the Company for stay of execution of that judgment. In his judgment Darling, J. states the question which the Court was called on to decide, and says :

1. In re Jalpaiguri Banking & Trading Co. Ltd., (1935) 39 C W N 875.

I am far from saying that, if the meetings of the creditors and of the shareholders of the Company had been held, and if the proposed scheme of arrangement had been agreed to at those meetings and had been sanctioned by the Court, a stay of execution on a judgment obtained against the Company might not be ordered. It is however not necessary to decide that point for that stage has not yet been reached in this case. All that has happened here is that the Judge has made an order for the summoning of meetings of creditors and shareholders, and until those meetings have been held it is impossible for anyone to say whether the scheme will or will not be agreed to.

Stress is laid on the same point by Jelf, J. in his judgment in the same case. He points out that the scheme had only been proposed and that it was impossible to say what would be the outcome of the meetings which were being convened for approving the Scheme. S. 153, Companies Act, which is similar to S. 120 of the English Act, on which the case to which I have just referred was based, provides that if a majority of three-fourths in value of the creditors agree to a compromise or arrangement, such compromise or arrangement shall, if sanctioned by the Court, be binding on all such creditors, as also on the Company, or, in the case of a Company in the course of being wound up, on the liquidator and contributories of the Company.

There is no doubt that S. 153 contemplates the type of arrangement which has been come to in this case and not merely a compromise or arrangement come to in or after a winding up order has been passed and it provides in clear language that when such compromise has been sanctioned by the Court, such compromise shall be binding on the creditors.

2. Both v. Walkden Spinning & Manufacturing Co. Ltd., (1909) 2 K B 368=78 L J K B 764 =16 Manson 225.

Mr. Banerji has already had one decree of this Court given against his contention that he was not bound by the compromise and he is now endeavouring to set that decree at naught by starting execution proceedings in the mofussil. In my opinion, this Court has the power to stop such proceedings and there will be an injunction restraining him from proceeding further with the execution of the proceedings of the decree in this suit dated 20th July 1934 now pending in the Court of the Subordinate Judge of Jalpaiguri. The injunction will remain so long as the scheme is in operation. The application is allowed with costs.

R.W./R.K. Application allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 663

D. N. MITTER AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Adhar Chandra Mondal — Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Dolgobinda Das — Defendant 1 and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 107 of 1933, Decided on 4th March 1936, from original decree of Sub-Judge, Murshidabad, D/- 23-12-1932.

(a) Contract Act (1872), Ss. 2 and 69—Stranger to contract, when can sue—Darpatni kabuliati stipulating for payment into zamindari shiresta on behalf of patnidar—No trust created—Sapatnidar making payment of arrears of rent and averting sale of patni can claim reimbursement from patnidar and not darpatnidar.

A stranger to a contract cannot take the benefit of a contract between two other persons reserving a benefit to that stranger unless from the terms of the contract it is clear that a trust for the stranger was intended. Consequently where under a darpatni kabuliati the darpatnidar contracts with the patnidar that he would pay the darpatni rent into the shiresta of zamindar in the name of patnidar, and stipulates that in default of the payment of the assigned darpatni rent according to the kist he shall remain bound to pay what sum will fall due to the zamindar on account of interest for the defaulted kists in terms of patni kabuliati between the patnidar and the zamindar, there is no trust created in favour of the zamindar so as to entitle him to enforce payment by darpatnidar, nor is the darpatnidar "bound by law to pay" within the meaning of S. 69, if proceedings for sale of patni under regulations for arrears of rent are taken and sapatnidar pays the arrears and averts sale of patni so as to give him cause of action for reimbursement under S. 69 against darpatnidar: 1934 Cal 682 and 1914 Cal 129, Dissent; 1926 Cal 1009 and 1928 Cal 518, Foll; 1917 Bom 55; 32 All 410 (P O); 7 W R 377; 1922 P C 176 and 1930 Mad 382 (F B), Ref.; English and foreign cases discussed.

[P 667 C 1; P 671 C 1,2; P 672 C 1,2]

(b) Precedent — Conflict of decisions— Benches of same High Court—Proper procedure is to refer question to Full Bench.

Where a Bench of a High Court takes view on a question of law opposed to the view taken by other Bench or Benches of the same High Court, although that view may agree with a view of yet another Bench, the proper procedure to follow is to refer the question to the Full Bench to decide what so far as their High Court is concerned would be a binding decision.

[P 671 C 1]

(c) Bengal Patni Taluqs Regulation (8 of 1819), S. 13—Non-registration of name of purchaser of patni tenure—Effect of.

Until registration of the name of a purchaser of patni tenure is effected in the landlord's sherista, the transfer does not affect the zamindar's right and in spite of the transfer the landlord may ignore the transferee and may continue to hold the recorded tenant responsible for the rent and other obligations imposed upon the tenure: 1928 Cal 94, Foll.

[P 672 C 2]

Mukherji, Benoyendra P. Bagchi and Kumud Bandhu Bagchi—for Appellant.

Ramaprosad Mukerji, Sambhu Nath Banerjee, Bejoy K. Mukherji, Bankim Chandra Roy and B. N. Mukerji—for Respondents.

D. N. Mitter, J.—The plaintiff whose suit for contribution has been dismissed by the Subordinate Judge of Murshidabad has preferred this appeal. The facts on which his right of contribution is founded lie within a narrow compass and may be briefly stated: Estate No. 199 of the Murshidabad Collectorate belongs to a lady Daibakumari and to the Nawab Bahadoor of Murshidabad in the shares of 12 annas and 4 annas respectively. On 2nd September 1907 the Nawab Bahadoor granted a patni lease in respect of the 4 annas share of his said zemindari to Daibakumari, the proprietor of the 12 annas share. On 29th April 1905 Daibakumari granted a darpatni to Tarini Dhar in respect of 4 annas share of the zemindari. On 9th August 1905 Tarini Dhar created a sepatni in favour of Adhar Chandra Mandal, the plaintiff, of some mouzas comprised in his darpatni and he granted sepatni of the remaining mouzas to defendants 4 to 11. On 20th February 1923, Tarini sold the darpatni interest to Nirod Barani (defendant 2) as benamidar for her husband Dolgobinda who is defendant 1 to the suit. From 1332 B. S. onwards the darpatnidars used to pay the superior (patni) rent to the zemindar under the terms of the darpatni kabuliyat which regulate the rights between the patnidar and dar-patnidar to which detailed reference will be made hereafter. The patni rents for 1335 to 1336 B. S. fell into arrears and proceedings under Regn. 8 of 1819 were taken to sell the property on 1st Baisakh 1336. In order to avert the sale the plaintiff had to pay Rs. 1173-9-6. The Patni rents for 1336 and 1337 B. S. fell due and two other Astam proceedings were taken for the sale of the patni under the regulation, and in order to avoid the sale the plaintiff sepatnidar had to pay a further sum of Rs. 2,602-10-0 to the zemindar.

The plaintiff has sued for recovery of the aggregate sum of Rs. 3,776-3-6 and as neither the patnidar nor the darpatnidar paid the said sum on demand by the plaintiff, the plaintiff has impleaded in the suit both the patnidar and the darpatnidar and has sought for relief in the first instance against the darpatnidar (Nirod Barani, defendant 2, and her husband, defendant 1), and in the alternative against the patnidar's (Daibakumari's) adopted son who is defendant 3 to the suit. The case made in the plaint is that defendant 1 remained bound to pay the zamindar, the Nawab Bahadoor, the patni rent payable by Daibakumari Bibi according to the terms of the darpatni kabuliyat executed by Tarini Dhar and actually made amicable payments. The gist of the action is stated in para. 7 of the plaint where it is stated that defendants 1 and 2 were bound by law to pay the rental aggregating Rs. 3,776-3-6, and as they did not pay, the plaintiff was forced to pay alone the entire sum and hence the suit in which this appeal arises.

The defence of defendant 1 to the suit is that he had nothing to do with the patni which had been purchased by defendant 2 with her own money and that the suit against him should be dismissed and costs awarded. The defence of defendant 2 Nirod Barani is that she purchased the patni with her own money, that the payments made by plaintiffs were voluntary payments and that the defendant was not bound to pay the amount of patni rent to the zamindar, and further that the plaintiff was not bound and had no right in law to pay the amount under the Regulation. Defendant 3 stated in his defence that he was the adopted son of Daibakumari and pleaded that he had sold away, on the basis of a registered deed of sale, the 4 annas patni interest which he owned in the Mahals in Touzi No. 199 to defendant 6 Serowgi on 20th Magh 1335 to the full knowledge of the plaintiff, and that he was not liable. On these pleadings several issues were framed and arose for decision. It is necessary to state only two issues for the purposes of the present appeal. They are issues 5 and 6. Issue 5 is as follows: Were defendants 1 and 2 bound to pay the money which was paid by plaintiff? Issue 6 is in these terms: Can the plaintiff recover the amounts claimed? If so, from whom?

The conclusion of the Subordinate Judge on issue 5 was that the patnidar was the person bound to pay the rent to his superior landlord and that, although by the terms of the darpatni patta the darpatnidar was bound to pay the rent payable by the patnidar to the zamindar but as the Nawab Bahadur of Murshidabad could not sue defendant 1 or defendant 2 for the patni rent as he was no party to the contract between the patnidar and darpatnidar, defendant 1 or defendant 2 was not bound by law to pay to the zamindar; and in support of his view he relied on a decision of Page, J. (as he then was) and Cumming, J. in 53 Cal 922 (1). The Subordinate Judge dismissed the suit against defendants 1 and 2 on this ground. He dismissed the suit against the patnidar, defendant 3, on the ground that Daibakumari (predecessor of defendant 3) sold her patni rights to Joy Chand Serowgi defendant 6 in 1335 B. S.; the patni rent for the period in question was not payable by her.

This appeal has consequently been brought by the plaintiff, and on his behalf it has been contended by Dr. Mukerji that the Subordinate Judge has gone wrong on both the points. He contends that it should have been held that S. 69, Contract Act, applied to the present case and that the darpatnidar was "bound by law" to pay the patni rent to the Nawab Bahadoor by reason of the terms of the darpatni kabuliyat and that the zamindar (Nawab Bahadur) could enforce the covenant in the darpatni kabuliyat against the darpatnidar although he was no party to the same, and that the view of Page, J. in 53 Cal 922 (1) has been dissented from in later decisions of this Court, in particular by Lord-Williams, J. and M. C. Ghose, J. in 38 C W N 682 (2). Dr. Mukerji has argued further that even if the decision of Page, J. on which the trial Court has relied be held to be right, it does not affect plaintiff's right to contribution as defendant 1 or defendant 2 (darpatnidar) were bound by law to pay under the darpatnidar kabuliyat and a suit could lie at the instance of the patnidar and he has relied in support of this contention on certain observations of the learned Judges of the Bombay High Court in 42 Bom 93 (3) at p. 98 where it is said that bound by law does not mean bound by law to the plaintiff but that the defendant at the suit of any person might be compelled to pay.

It becomes necessary to examine the two contentions respectively a little carefully, more particularly the first of the above contentions as the decisions of this Court seem to be in conflict. Taking the first ground contended for that a suit would lie at the instance of the Nawab Bahadur for recovery of the patni rent from the darpatnidar it appears to us that this contention is opposed to the general rule that no rights can be acquired by third parties under a contract unless by the creation of a trust, and the question whether a trust was created in favour of the Nawab Bahadur would depend on the construction of the darpatni pottah in the present case (Ex. 3), p. 1, part 2 executed by Daiba Kumari in favour of Tarini Prosad Dhar. We propose in the first instance to discuss the English law relating to the general rule just indicated. Sir William Anson in his principles of the English Law of Contract, Edn. 17 (1929) (p. 279) expounds the English law on the subject as follows:

(a) It was at one time thought that if the person who was to take a benefit under the contract was nearly related by blood to the promisee a right of action would vest in him. The case in 1 B & S 393 (4), is conclusive against this view; (b) Equity Judges have used language sometimes, very explicit, to the effect that where a sum is payable by A for the benefit of B, B can claim under the contract as if it had been made with himself

2. Khired Behary v. Man Gobinda, 1934 Cal 682=152 I C 351=61 Cal 841=38 C W N 682.

3. Somashastri v. Swami Rao, 1917 Bom 55=49 I C 482=42 Bom 93=19 Bom L R 939.

4. Tweedle v. Atkinson, (1861) 1 B & S 393=124 R R 610=8 Jur (N S) 332=30 L J Q B 265=121 E R 762=4 L T 468=9 W R 481.

1. Jiban Krishna v. Nirupama Gupta, 1926 Cal 1009=96 I C 846=53 Cal 922=30 C W N 812.

The impression that in any such case a third party who is to be benefited acquires equitable rights ex contractu arises as was explained by Jessel, M. R., in 16 Ch D 125 (5), from the fact that an agreement between two parties might well be so framed as to make one of them trustee for a third Whether a trust has or has not in any particular case been created must be a matter of construction as may be seen by reference to the case in 25 Ch D 89 (6) and 25 Ch D 103 (7). In the case last cited Lindley, L. J. put the matter very tersely thus :

But an agreement between A and B that B shall pay C gave C no right of action against B. I cannot see that there is in such a case any difference between Equity and Common Law. It is a mere question of contract. It is said that Mr. Peace has an equity against the company because the company has had the benefit of his labour. What does that mean? If I order a coat and receive it I got the benefit of the labour of the cloth manufacturer but does any one dream that I am under any liability to him. It is mere fallacy to say that because a person gets the benefit of work done for somebody else he is liable to pay the person who did the work.

Professor Langdell has put the English Common Law view in the following clear and vigorous language :

A person for whose benefit a contract is made if he is a stranger to the consideration, cannot maintain an action on it. This latter proposition is so plain upon its face that it is difficult to make it plainer by argument. A binding promise vests in the promisee, and in him alone, a right to compel performance of the promise, and it is by virtue of this right that an action is maintained upon the promise. In the case of a promise made to one person for the benefit of another there is no doubt that the promisee can maintain an action not only in his own name but for his own benefit. If therefore the person for whose benefit the promise was made could also sue on it, the consequence would be that the promisor would be liable to two actions. In truth a binding promise to A to pay 100 to B confers no right upon B in law or equity. It confers an authority upon the promisor to pay the money to B, but that authority may be revoked by A at any moment: (see Langdell on Contract, Art. 62).

In Leake on Contract, Edn. 7, p. 301 it is said:

A contract can create no right or liability in a person who is not a party to it unless he can claim or be charged through a party, as in the case of a cestui que trust claiming through a trustee, or a principal claiming or being charged through an agent.

From the statement of the law in the leading text books we now turn to the leading English decision on the subject. In 6 Ch A 671 (8) Lord Hatherley, L. C. uses language to suggest that in equity, where a sum is payable by A B for the benefit of C D, C D can claim under the contract as if it had been made with himself. In In re Empress Engineering Co. (5) Sir George Jessel, Master of the Rolls, was of opinion that the principle laid down in Touche v. Metropolitan (8) can be justified on the ground that an agreement between the two parties might be so framed as to make one of them a trustee for a third. In (1919) A C 801 (9), where the Charterer sued the Shipowner for the amount of the broker's commission as trustee for the broker, the claim was allowed as against the Shipowners on the footing of a trust. This is manifest from the speeches of some of their Lordships to which reference will presently be made. Lord Chancellor Birkenhead said:

My Lords, so far as I am aware, that case has not before engaged the attention of this House, and I think it right to say plainly that I agree with that decision and I agree with the reasoning, shortly as it is expressed, upon which the decision was founded. In this connection I would refer to the well-known case In re Empress Engineering Co. (5). In the judgment of Sir George Jessel, M. R. the principle is explained which in my view underlies and is the explanation of the decision in 8 Ex 299 (10). The Master of the Rolls uses this language: 'So, again, it is quite possible that one of the parties to the agreement may be the nominee or trustee of third person. As Lord Justice James suggested to me in the course of the argument, a married woman may nominate somebody to contract on her behalf, but then the person makes the contract really as trustee for somebody else, and it is because he contracts in that character that the cestui que trust can take the benefit of the contract.' It appears to me plain that for convenience, and under long-established practice, the broker in such cases, in effect, nominates the charterer to contract on his behalf, influenced probably by the circumstance that there is always a contract between charterer and owner in which this stipulation which is to enure to the benefit of the broker, may very conveniently be inserted. In these cases the broker, on ultimate analysis, appoints the charterer to contract on his behalf. I agree therefore with the conclusion arrived at by all

5. Empress Engineering Co., In re, (1881) 16 Ch D 125=43 L T 742=29 W R 342.

6. Murry v. Flavell, (1884) 25 Ch D 89=53 L J Ch 185=49 L T 690=32 W R 102.

7. Rotherham Alum and Chemical Co., (1884) 25 Ch D 103=53 L J Ch 290=50 L T 219=32 W R 131.

8. Touche v. Metropolitan Ry. Warehousing Co., (1870) 6 Ch A 671.

9. Les Affreteurs Reunis v. Leopold Ealford, (1919) A C 801=88 L J K B 861=121 L T 393=35 T L R 542=24 Com Cas 268.

10. Robertson v. Wait, (1853) 8 Ex 299=22 L J Ex 209=1 W R 132.

the learned Judges in Robertson v. Wait (10), that in such cases charterers can sue as trustees on behalf of the broker.

Lord Wrenbury observed in the same case:

We have here to do with a contract between two parties reserving a benefit to a third. The two parties are the Shipowners and the Charterers, the third party is the broker of one of them, who is to be remunerated in respect of a contract which is being made for the hire of a ship. The particular form of contract in question is of course prepared by or is under the eyes of the broker who is negotiating the matter. It is sent to the principals for signature, and they sign it, and there is contained in it a clause which reserves a benefit to the broker. Under these circumstances an action is brought by the broker against the shipowner for the commission which is expressed to be payable to him under the contract between the shipowner and the charterer, a contract to which he himself, I agree, was not a party. By agreement between the parties the record is to be treated as if the charterers were joined as a plaintiff in the action. The case is one in which an action can be brought on behalf of a person to whom a benefit is reserved although he is not a party to it. That is the subject of the decision in Robertson v. Wait (10).

And again Lord Wrenbury remarks:

Directly it is conceded that the broker although not a party to the contract, can sue on the contract, inasmuch as he can sue by the charterer as trustee for him, it appears to me that the case really is over.

In 30 Ch D 57 (11) the rule of the Common law and the exceptions to the rule have been stated by Lord Justice Cotton thus:

Now, of course, as a general rule, a contract cannot be enforced except by a party to the contract; and either of two persons contracting together can sue the other, if the other is guilty of a breach of or does not perform the obligations of that contract. But a third person, a person who is not a party to the contract, cannot do so. That rule, however, is subject to this exception: if the contract, although in form it is with A, is intended to secure a benefit to B, so that B is entitled to say he has a beneficial right as cestui que trust under that contract, then B would, in a Court of equity, be allowed to insist upon and enforce the contract. That, in my opinion, is the way in which the law may be stated.

It seems to us that the reason for the rule that none but those in privity with the consideration can maintain an action on the promisee is found in the original conception underlying assumpsit. This remedy of assumpsit was founded on the notion of giving redress for damages incurred by the non-fulfilment of a deceitful promise; only the person who suffered the damage in question could therefore bring a suit upon breach of the promise. This rule was clearly a procedural one and was peculiar to the action of assumpsit. The statement of the rule that the stranger to the consideration cannot maintain assumpsit does imply according to English Courts that the promisor owes no legal duty to the person for whose benefit the contract is made. Thus Lindley, J. in Rotherham Alum (7) once said that if an agreement is made between A and B that B shall pay a sum of money to C the inability of C to sue is not due to any defect of remedy. "It is," said he, "a mere question of contract." The remedy by the action of assumpsit is as broad as the limits of contractual liability. If it were otherwise then one would have expected that the English Courts should have recognised the right of a stranger to sue upon a contract made for his benefit now those forms of action have been abolished by the Judicature Acts. English Courts have refused to sanction the actions, generally, although exceptions have been introduced to the general rule by introducing the theory of trust, agency etc. In (1915) A C 847 (12) at p. 853 Lord Haldane L. C. said:

My Lords, in the law of England certain principles are fundamental: one is that only a person who is a party to a contract, can sue on it, our law knows nothing of a jus quaestum terties arising by way of contract; such a right can be conferred by way of property, as for example under a trust.

The rule deducible from the authority above cited is that it is a general principle both at Common law and at equity, that a stranger to the contract cannot sue on it although the stranger takes a benefit under it. There are however several apparent exceptions from this principle. At one time it was considered that the nearness of relationship of one party to the contract with the party to be benefited by it gave the latter the benefit of the considerations and the right to sue on it. The Physician's Case cited in 1 Ventr 6 (13) was a leading authority on this point. There A made a promise to his physician, that if he would effect a certain cure, he would pay a sum of money to the physician's daughter and it was held that she might sue. 1 Ventr

12. Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre v. Selfridge, (1915) A C 847=84 L J K B 1680=113 L T 386=31 T L R 399=59 S J 439.

13. Bourne v. Mason, (1680) 1 Ventris 6=86 E R 5.

11. Gandy v. Gandy, (1885) 30 Ch D 57=54 L J Ch 1154=53 L T 306=33 W R 803.

318 (14) at p. 332 was another case of this type illustrating the exception from the general principle on the ground of nearness of relationship. There in assumpsit the plaintiffs who were husband and wife declared that the wife's father being seized of land which had subsequently descended to the defendant was about to fell £1000 worth of timber to raise a portion for his said daughter; and the defendant promised the father that, if he would forbear to fell the timber, he would pay the daughter £1000. It was held negating the contention that the father alone could have brought the action, that the husband and wife could sue on the ground of nearness of relationship. This last case was approved of by Lord Mansfield, C. J. a century after in 2 Cowper 437 (15) at p. 443 but these two cases were in the year 1861 considered and deliberately disapproved in 1 Best & Sm 393 (4) and can no longer be considered law.

Another exception to the general principle is illustrated by cases where A having as trustee for B contracted with C, B was held entitled to sue both C and A for the performance of the contract; the case in 6 Ch A 671 (8), already referred to is a case of this sort. So too in 25 Ch D 89 (6) where a widow who was the cestui que trust of a trust created by partnership articles was allowed to sue upon them. There are cases of agency which may be considered as furnishing another apparent exception from the rule, see 3 S W 417n (16). In some of the American States there was some early recognition of the right of the third person to sue. See the leading case in (1859) 20 N Y 268 (17). Mr. Street in his treatise on the Foundations of Legal Liability, Vol. 2, p. 157 points out that in the State of New York the right of the third person to sue on a contract made for his benefit was by this leading case fully established. The American doctrine laid down in the leading case is not binding on us and we are bound to follow the principle laid down by the Courts of Equity in England unless there are overriding authorities in Indian Courts which prevent us from doing so. I am not unmindful also of the fact that in several other foreign countries like Germany and Italy the view is taken that in a contract between A and B for benefit of C, C can bring an action against the person by whom the benefit is to be conferred and there is an interesting article by an American writer in the Harvard Law Review Vol. 15, p. 43, showing the comparative statement of the law in different states including Japan, but we are not troubled with either the Roman Law or the law of other foreign nations but we have to determine the matter by rules of equity as obtained in England. We now turn to the Indian decisions.

The question of the applicability of the rule laid down in 1 Best & Sm 393 (4) to India where rights of parties have to be determined by equity, justice and good conscience came up for consideration by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 37 I A 152=32 All 410 (18) there on 25th October 1877 the appellant executed an agreement with the respondent's father that in consideration of the respondent's marriage with his son (both being minors at the time) he would pay to the respondent Rs. 500 a month in perpetuity for her betel leaf expenses from the date of her reception and charged certain properties with the payment with power to respondent to enforce it; it was held in a suit in 1901 by the respondent to recover arrears of this annuity from 1896, when husband and wife separated that respondent 1, although no party to the agreement was clearly entitled to enforce her claim and Mr. Ameer Ali who delivered the judgment of the Judicial Committee referred to the case in 1 Best & Sm 393 (4) and observed as follows:

First, it is contended on the authority in 1 Best & Sm 393 (4) that as the plaintiff was no party to the agreement she cannot take advantage of its provisions. With reference to this it is enough to say that the case relied on was an action of assumpsit and that the rule of common law on the basis of which it is dismissed is not in their Lordships' opinion applicable to the facts and circumstances of the present case. Here the agreement executed by the defendant specifically charges immovable property for the allowance which he binds himself to pay to the plaintiff. She is the only person beneficially entitled under it. In their Lordships' judgment although no party to the document she is clearly entitled in equity to enforce her claim; and then their Lordships proceed to state:

14. Dutton v. Poole, (1681) 2 Lev 210=1 Ventr 318.

15. Martyn v. Hind, (1776) 2 Cowper 437=1 Doug 142.

16. Hook v. Kinnear, (1818) 3 S W 417n=19 R R 251.

17. Lawrence v. Fox, (1859) 20 N Y 268.

18. Khwaja Muhammad Khan v. Husaini Begam, (1910) 32 All 410=7 I C 237=14 O W N 865=37 I A 152 (P C).

Their Lordships desire to observe that in India and amongst communities circumstanced as the Mahomedans, amongst whom marriages are contracted for minors by parents and guardians, it might occasion serious injustice if the common law doctrine was applied to agreements or arrangements entered into in connexion with such contracts.

The next case to be considered is 41 Cal 137 (19) which contains the weighty opinion of Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J., and it is necessary to quote at some length the observations of the learned Chief Justice (with whom A. T. Mukerji, J. concurred) for this decision has been the subject of consideration in two later judgments of this Court and has been held to lay down the rule of equity somewhat too broadly. There the facts shortly put were these: In 1899 defendants 1 to 4 borrowed from plaintiff Rs. 300 on 18th August 1903; defendants 1 to 4 executed a registered instrument of transfer of all their property moveable and immoveable to defendant 5 for Rs. 2,000; Rs. 2,000 was not paid in cash and it was stated in the Kobala that out of the consideration money the sum of Rs. 330 due to plaintiff should be paid by defendant 5. On the same day there was an arrangement between plaintiff and defendant 5 by which the liability of defendant 5 was acknowledged and accepted and the Patta, the title deed of one of the properties was handed over to defendant 5. This money not having been paid by defendant 5 a suit was brought by plaintiff against defendants 1 to 4 as also against defendant 5. Both Courts dismissed the suit. In allowing the appeal Sir Lawrence Jenkins uses the following language with regard to the applicability of Tweedle v. Atkinson (4) to the facts aforesaid:

If we were governed by Tweedle v. Atkinson (4), there might possibly be a difficulty in our way, but it has to be borne in mind that Tweedle v. Atkinson (4) was a decision on a form of action peculiar to the Common Law Courts in England and that the case was influenced by the rule that no action in assumpsit could be maintained upon a promise unless consideration moved from the party to whom it was made. Here we have a definition of consideration which is wider than the requirement of the English Law: [S. 2 (d), Contract Act]. And it has been laid down by Sir Barnes Peacock in a Full Bench decision of this Court in relation to Courts in mofussil, (1867) B L R Sup Vol 675=7 W R 377 (20), that in those Courts the rights of parties are to be determined according to the general principles of equity and justice without any distinction as in England, between that partial justice which is administered in the Courts of law and the more full and complete justice for which it is frequently necessary to seek the assistance of a Court of Equity. The rules and the fictions which have been in many cases adopted by the Common Law Courts in England for the purpose of obtaining jurisdiction in cases which would otherwise have been cognizable only by the Courts of Equity are not necessary to be followed in this country where the aim is to do complete justice in one suit. More than that we now have ample authority for saying that the administration of justice in these Courts is not to be in any way hampered by the doctrine laid down in Tweedle v. Atkinson (4). That I take to be the result of the decision of the Privy Council in the recent case, Khwaja Muhammad Khan v. Husaini Begum (18). In the report of that case in 14 C W N 865 (18) at p. 868 there is an interlocutory remark of Lord Macnaghten which indicates the limits imposed on a Court of Common Law. He there says 'Supposing she (that is the plaintiff) were an English woman, it is true she could not bring an action in the King's Bench Division, but could she not bring a suit in equity?' The answer of the learned counsel was 'Yes'. It is possible that this distinction can be explained by the history of the action of assumpsit which was a development of the writ of trespass. In the old writ in indebitatus assumpsit it was alleged that the defendant not regarding his said promise and undertaking but contriving and fraudulently intending craftily and subtly to deceive and defraud, has not paid and so forth. The breach of contract was charged as deceit and it was only the person deceived who could sue. The bar then in the way of an action by the person not a direct party to the contract, was probably one of procedure and not of substance. In India we are free from these trammels and are guided in matters of procedure by the rule of justice, equity and good conscience.

19. Debnarain v. Chunilal Ghose, 1914 Cal 129 =20 I C 630=41 Cal 137.

20. Rambuz Chittangeo v. Modhuscodum, (1867) Beng L R Sup Vol 675=7 W R 377.

With regard to the observation of Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J. that the decision in Tweedle v. Atkinson (4) was influenced by the rule that no action in assumpsit could be maintained upon a promise unless consideration moves from the party to whom it was made it seems the learned Chief Justice was of opinion that the remedy by action of assumpsit is not as broad as the limits of contractual liability; but as against this view Lindley, J. uses language, in Rotheram Alum Co. (7) which has already been quoted before and which goes to show that inability of the stranger to sue is due to any defect of remedy but is a mere question of contract. Then again Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J. remarks at p. 146:

The bar then in the way of an action by a person not a direct party to the contract was probably one of procedure and not of substance.

Here again the view of Sir Lawrence Jenkins conflicts with the view of Lindley, J., who regards the bar to action as a matter of substance and not of form or procedure. Then the learned Chief Justice observes:

The case with which we are now dealing finds a close parallel in (1817) 3 Mer 583 (21) and also in the more recent cases of Touche v. Metropolitan (8) and Gandy v. Gandy (11).

There is a valuable exposition of the law by Lord Hatherley in the first of these last two cases which was adopted by Lord Justice Cotton in the second. The Lord Chancellor said:

The case comes within the authority that where a sum is payable by A B for the benefit of C D, C D can claim under the contract as if it had been made with himself. That appears to me to be a principle which is of distinct use in the consideration of this case. It appears to me that we have therefore in the circumstances of this case a condition of affairs in which it would be right to hold that the plaintiff is entitled to enforce his claim in this suit.

Lord Hatherley's observations must in our opinion be taken with reference to the context in which they appear, and if they are so taken then the following criticism by Page, J., (as he then was) in Jiban v. Nirupama (1), of Sir Lawrence Jenkins's view in 41 Cal 137 (19) seems justified: see 53 Cal 925 (1):

But these observations of Lord Hatherley must be taken with reference to the context in which they appear, and in 6 Ch App 671 (8), it is clear that Walker was treated as holding the sum which he received from the company under the agreement between himself and the company as a trustee for the plaintiff. Lord Hatherley's observations in Touche's case (8) were considered in In re Empress Engineering Co. (5). In that case Jones and Pride were solicitors who claimed in the liquidation of the company for work done upon instructions received by one of the promoters.

Referring to Touche v. Metropolitan Railway Warehousing Co. (8) Jessel, M. R. observed that:

In that case the Lord Chancellor finds, as a fact, that Walker was to receive the money as a trustee for the plaintiffs. If you can make out that Jones and Pride are cestuis que trust that alters the case. It appears to me that they are not. The promoters were liable to Jones and Pride who are simply their creditors. A being liable to B, C agrees with A to pay B. That does not make B a cestui que trust.

In Jiban Krishna Mullick's case (1) the facts were similar to that in present case. There A, a putnidar, created a darpatni in favour of B for Rs. 244 per annum. B created a sepatni by an instrument in favour of C for Rs. 344 per annum, out of which Rs. 244 was to be paid to A for the darpatni rent, and Rs. 100 was to be paid to B, the darpatnidar. C paid the Rs. 244 to A for sometime and then fell in arrear. A sued C for rent and in this state of facts it was held that (1) mere payment of a sum of money by C to A could not be made the foundation of a legal obligation on the part of C to pay to A a like sum in like circumstances in the future. Moreover, there was no consideration passing to C from A to bind any such agreement; and (2) it was further held that as the instrument creating the sepatni was not executed for the purpose of conferring a benefit upon A, A was not entitled to sue C upon the agreement thereto contained either at law or in equity. In 55 Cal 1315 (22) Sir George Rankin, C. J. (as he then was) subjected the statement of the law by Sir Lawrence Jenkins in Debnarains' case (19) to considerable criticism and used language which would seem to suggest that the proposition formulated by Sir Lawrence Jenkins in that case was too wide. Sir George Rankin observed at p. 1326 of the report:

Not only, however, is there nothing in S. 2 to encourage the idea that contracts can be enforced by a person who is not a party to the contract, but this notion is rigidly excluded by the definition of 'promisor' and 'promisee.' The decision in Tweedle v. Atkinson (4) was a decision at law and was unaffected by the rules of equity. For this reason the Judicial Committee in Khwaja Muhammad Khan v. Hussaini Begum (18) regarded it as inapplicable to the facts of the case before them where the agreement included a specific charge on immoveable property. In my judgment it is erroneous on the basis of that case or on the observations of Jenkins, C. J., in Debnarain Dutt v. Chunilal Ghose (19), to suppose that in India persons who are not parties to a contract can be admitted to sue thereon, except where there is an obligation in equity amounting to a trust arising out of the contract. I say nothing as to whether special rules of law may be applicable to communities among whom marriages are contracted for minors by parents and guardians. But putting aside such cases I see no reason to think that the law in India contains a series of exceptions to the principle that a contract can only be sued upon as such by a party thereto. A trust may be founded on the contract and is capable of being enforced by a party to the trust in appropriate proceedings as was pointed out in 10 Hare 168=68 E R 882 (23).

22. Krishnalal Sadhu v. Pramilabala Dass, 1928 Cal 518=114 I O 658=55 Cal 1915=32 C W N 634.

23. Page v. Cox, (1851) 10 Hare 168=68 E R 882.

21. Gregory and Parker v. Williams, (1817) 3 Mer 583.

To hark back to such cases as 2 Lev 210 (14) and (1680) 1 Ventris 6=86 E R 5 (13), is, in my judgment, a clear mistake and the mistake is not cured by the circumstances that, under the Contract Act, the definition of 'consideration' is wider than in English Law.

The next case to be considered is the decision of Lord Williams, J. in the more recent case in Kshirode Behari Dutt v. Man Gobinda Panda (2), where the facts were similar to the facts of the case in Jiban Krishna v. Nirupama (1) and it was held that right of action lay in a third person under a contract between two persons which if performed will benefit such third person. Lord Williams, J., came to the conclusion directly opposed to the view taken by Sir George Rankin in Krishnalal Sadhu's case (22), as these cases seemed to be in conflict with Debnarain's case (19) which he proposed to follow. Lord Williams, J. did not follow the constitutional principle of referring the matter to a Full Bench when he dissented from two decisions of this Court, in Jiban Krishna Mallik's case (1) and Krishnalal Sadhu's case (22) just referred to for that is the proper procedure to take as the Courts of India have been reminded by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 53 I A 164 (24). In that case Sir John Edge observed as follows on the question of the proper procedure in case of conflict:

Previous to that amendment in 1907 subs 2 and 3 had been variously construed by different Benches of the High Court at Calcutta none of which seems to have considered themselves bound by any previous decision on the subject by a Bench of that Court, and had not followed the constitutional principle of referring the question on which they differed from a previous decision of their own Court to a Full Bench to decide what, so far as the High Court was concerned, would be a binding decision on all the Benches of that Court. If such a question had been referred to a Full Bench the Chief Justice would no doubt have appointed a Full Bench to consider such an important reference and to decide the question referred.

An independent examination of English cases as also the decisions of the Judicial Committee shows that the view taken by Page, J. in Jiban v. Nirupama (1) and of Sir George Rankin, C. J., in Krishnalal v. Pramila-bala (22) is the right view to take and it follows therefrom that a stranger to a contract cannot take the benefit of the contract between two other persons reserving a benefit to a stranger unless from the terms of the contract it is clear that a trust for the stranger was intended. This view also receives support from the high authority of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 26 C W N 514 (25) cited before us by Mr. R. P. Mookerji, the learned Advocate for the darpatnidar respondent. The facts in that case were that after a sale of certain properties the vendor sold another item of property to a third person and it was agreed between them that the latter should discharge the incumbrance on the property which the vendor had sold to the first purchaser free from incumbrance, it was held that a suit by the first purchaser against the second purchaser for recovery of the amount of the incumbrance was misconceived, the former being no party to the latter's purchase and no trust having been created in his favour. Lord Buckmaster said (at 515 bottom, of the report):

The plaint was a clumsy document and the suit as against Bindeswari was misconceived, for the plaintiffs were no parties to the deed of 7th September 1904 and no trust was created in their favour.

A Full Bench of the Madras High Court in 53 Mad 270 (26), after review of the cases English and Indian have reached the same conclusion as we have reached in the present case. That case states the general rule in the manner we have done but states four exceptions to the rule one of which is that "where a contract between A and B creates a trust in favour of C." The question whether a trust was created or not in the present case depends on the construction of the terms of the contract between two parties. In the present case it appears from the darputni kabuliyats, see p. 7, Part 2, that the darpatni rent was to be paid into the Sherista of the Nawab Bahadur of Murshidabad in the name of the patnidar and receipts taken from the zemindar and then at p. 8, line 5 it is stated:

If you fail to pay the assigned darpatni rent according to kists you shall remain bound to pay what sum will fall due to the Nawab Bahadur on account of interest for defaulted kists, in terms of our patni kabuliyat.

From these two clauses in the kabuliyat it is apparent that no trust was in 24. Bindheswari Prasad v. Maharaja Kesho Prasad, 1926 P C 79=95 I C 1025=53 I A 164=5 Pat 634 (P C).

25. Nathu Khan v. Burtonath Singh, 1922 P C 176=66 I C 107=26 C W N 514.

26. Subbu Chetti v. Arunachellam Chettyar, 1930 Mad 382=124 I C 55=53 Mad 270=53 M L J 420 (F B).

tended to be created in favour of the zamindar, the Nawab Bahadur, so as to entitle the Nawab Bahadur to sue the darpatnidar. On the other hand it seems to us that this stipulation was for the protection of the interest of the darpatnidar. We are therefore of opinion that the darpatnidar was not bound by law to pay the patni rent to the zamindar.

It is next argued that although the darpatnidar might be held not liable to pay the patni rent to the Nawab Bahadur still he would be bound to pay to the patnidar under the contract between him and the patnidar; and it is argued that for the purpose of S. 69, Contract Act, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to establish that money was payable to the Zamindar in the sense that a right of action should lie in the Zamindar. Reliance is placed on a decision of the Bombay High Court in Soma v. Swamirao (3); the following observations made in that case no doubt support the contention of the appellant:

Then the only question is whether the defendant is bound by law to pay that judi. Taking each step in order, I think it is very clear that he is 'bound by law' does not mean bound by law to the plaintiff but that the defendant at the suit of any person might be compelled to pay. Here we should have to begin with the original donor Krishnaji against whom, it is conceded, the plaintiff might bring a suit to recover this judi upon the covenants of the deed of 1878. Krishnaji in turn, it is conceded, might reimburse himself from Bisto according to the tenor of the deed of 1902 and the understanding and resultant contract of the parties.

Then it becomes merely a question of fact whether Bisto in turn could compel the defendant Swamirao to reimburse him, and that is the question which I have already answered in anticipation by indicating that in our opinion, notwithstanding the inartificial character of the deed of 1905, its real intention, that intention being well understood, was that the defendant undertook Bisto's obligation to pay the judi on plaintiff's land. Thus by three stages the plaintiff could put the law in motion in such a way that the result would show that the defendant was bound in law to pay the money in the payment of which the plaintiff was interested and which the plaintiff had thus in the first instance to pay. On that view we think that we find solid ground for doing what we do not doubt is justice in the case, i. e. compelling the defendant to carry out the original donor's obligations to pay the judi on the plaintiff's land.

Accepting the view taken in the Bombay case the question still remains whether the plaintiff, the sepatnidar can take advantage of his right to contribution which founded on principles of equity, seeing that he himself was in default in the payment of sepatni rent to the darpatnidar. The facts show that a suit had to be instituted for realisation of the sepatni rent of the material period. Being himself in default at the time when the patni was advertised for sale he cannot get any relief in equity. We are therefore of opinion that the suit has been rightly dismissed as against the darpatnidars, e. g. defendants 1 and 2. In the case before Lord-Williams, J. all the parties were present before the Court and that circumstances made it possible for the learned Judge to give relief in the appeal before him instead of driving the parties to a separate suit. In the present case the Zamindar Nawab Bahadur of Murshidabad is not a party to the present proceedings, and even if the decision of Lord-Williams, J. is right, the present case can be distinguished therefrom.

The question next arises whether plaintiff is not entitled to a decree against the patnidar Daibakumari or rather against defendant 3 who is her adopted son. There can be no question that the patnidar was liable to pay the Zamindar's patni rent and he was therefore bound by law to pay the same but defendant 3 seeks to evade the liability in the suit on the ground that the interest of the patnidar had been transferred to another defendant in the suit namely Joy Chand Serogi, towards the end of 1335 B. S. Serogi is defendant in another capacity and no relief has been asked against him on the footing of his being the transferee of the patni interest. The patnidar defendant 3, does not produce the sale deed neither has the transferee got his name registered in the Zamindar's Sherista and under S. 13 of the patni Regulation the Zamindar is not bound to recognise the patnidar's transferee until certain conditions are fulfilled. In 54 Cal 1064 (27), to the decision of which I was a party, it was held that until registration of the name of a purchaser of a patni tenure is effected in the landlord's Sherista the transfer does not affect the Zamindar's right, and in spite of the transfer the landlord may ignore the transferee and may continue to hold the recorded tenant responsible for the rent and other obligations imposed upon the tenure. In the present case as a matter of fact the proceedings under the patni Regulation were issued against Daibakumari and as a receipt Ex. 1-A (Part 2, page 47) shows that the present plaintiff paid the patni rent for Agrahayan 1336 as also for the other period in question. In these circumstances the Subordinate Judge was not right in dismissing the suit against the patnidar, defendant 3, on the ground that the plaintiff himself admitted in his deposition that Daibakumari, predecessor of defendant 3, sold her patni right to Joychand Serogi in 1335 B. S.

27. Krishna Chandra Chowdhury v. Dinanath Biswas, 1928 Cal 94=107 I C 357=54 Cal 1064.

The result is that the appeal must be allowed and a decree for the amount claimed will be passed against defendant 3. The appeal is dismissed as against the darpatnidar defendants 1 and 2 with costs. It is allowed as against defendant 3 and the suit is decreed against him with costs of the trial Court. But the appellant is not entitled to any costs of this appeal as against defendant 3.

Patterson, J.—I agree.

V.B./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 673

JACK, J.

Abinash Chandra Kumar—Accused — Petitioner.

v.

Dhani Buksh Mahammad—Complainant—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 839 of 1935, Decided on 14th November 1935.

Criminal Misappropriation — Complainant pawning ornaments with accused — Complainant returning money and asking for return of ornaments—Ornaments not returned forthwith—Next day accused denying existence of pawn — Facts found against accused — Conviction under S. 406, Penal Code, held justified.

A complainant took a loan from the accused and pawned with him certain ornaments. When the loan was returned the accused, instead of returning the ornaments forthwith, asked the complainant to come over the next day to receive back the ornaments pawned. The next day accused denied the pawn. The trial Court found against the accused on all the facts:

Held : that the findings were sufficient for a conviction under S. 406, Penal Code.

[P 673 O 2 ; P 674 O 1]

S. K. Basu, Ramdas Mukherji and Debabrata Mukherji—for Petitioner.

Order. — This Rule was issued on the Deputy Commissioner of Jalpaiguri and 1936 C/85 & 86 the opposite party to show cause why the conviction of and the sentence imposed on the petitioner should not be set aside. The grounds set out in the petition are : (1) that on the findings arrived at by the learned Magistrate himself the conviction is illegal, (2) that the Magistrate having in effect found breach of trust having been committed in respect of the pledged ornaments the conviction under S. 406, I. P. C., in respect of the charge as framed in the case is not maintainable; (3) that the Court should have treated the case as one of a civil nature ; (4) that in the absence of a clear finding that the petitioner had acted dishonestly in violation of a trust the conviction under S. 406 is not sustainable ; (5) that the learned Magistrate failed to consider if the facts and circumstances of the entire case precluded the possibility of the petitioner having acted in the bona fide belief that he had a lien on the pledged ornaments ; and lastly, that the elements necessary to constitute the offence charged have neither been found nor established by the evidence.

The case for the prosecution is that the complainant had taken a loan of Rs. 12 from the accused by pawning two gold ear-rings with him; that on 24th February last the complainant went to the house of the accused and paid the sum of Rupees 17-4-0 which was due to the accused ; that the accused accepted the amount and went inside the house to bring out the ornaments but returned without them and asked the complainant to come on the next day ; that on the next day the complainant went to the house of the accused and asked for the ornaments but that the accused denied having ever lent any money to the complainant or having taken any ornaments as security for the loan from the complainant. On all these points the findings are against the accused except that the Magistrate stated that even if he did not deny the pawn altogether he committed misappropriation as he did not return the ornaments on the payment of the amount due as he should have done according to the contract between the parties. He finds that the accused did not return the ornaments perhaps with a view to misappropriate them entirely or to extort further money from the complainant by retaining them. He finds that the complainant paid off the entire dues of the accused amounting to

Rs. 17-4-0 but that the accused did not return the ornaments belonging to the complainant which he should have done forthwith and that the accused instead of returning the ornaments to the complainant denied the pawn and misappropriated the ornaments. These findings appear to be sufficient for the conviction of the petitioner under S. 406 inasmuch as they show that the accused dishonestly used or disposed of the property in violation of the trust created by a contract express or implied, the trust being the deposit of the ornaments as security for the loan.

As regards the second point it is true that there is an error in the form of the charge. But the error appears to be a clerical error. The charge states that the accused took Rs. 17-4-0 as the principal and interest of a loan given by him on the pawn of two gold ear-rings but that he did not return the ornaments and thereby committed breach of trust of the money and committed an offence punishable under S. 406. This appears to be a clerical error in the framing of the charge. The fact is that the ornaments were entrusted to the accused and that he committed breach of trust of them in not returning them after the repayment of the loan. There is therefore no substance in this ground as the accused has not been in any way prejudiced by this clerical error in the framing of the charge. The third point is that the dispute is one of a civil nature. It is true that cases of this kind are not generally admitted in a criminal Court, as generally there is some dispute about the amount payable and the criminal Courts are reluctant to take up cases of this nature. On this ground I had some hesitation in discharging the Rule. But in this case there was no dispute as to the amount payable; there is no evidence whatever that there was a dispute at the time of the transaction. So that although on the facts found the accused would be civilly liable there is no doubt that he is also criminally liable under S. 406.

As regards the fourth point, it is clear on the findings of the learned Magistrate that the petitioner acted dishonestly in the violation of the trust and therefore the conviction under S. 406 is sustainable. As regards the fifth point it is clear on the finding of the learned Magistrate that it is impossible to hold that the petitioner acted in the bona fide belief that he had a lien on the pledged ornaments. The elements necessary to constitute the offence appear to have been found and there is evidence in support of the findings. The Rule must, accordingly be discharged.

B.D./R.K.

Rule discharged.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 674

M. C. GHOSE, J.

Kalipada Mondal — Accused — Petitioner.

v.

Kali Kinkar Chatterjee—Complainant—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 627 of 1936, Decided on 24th July 1936.

Penal Code (1860), S. 406—Accused purchasing gramophone on instalment basis—Mere non-payment of instalment cannot be considered as criminal offence.

A person purchased a gramophone on monthly instalments. As there was no payment of any instalment for some months the seller went to his house and asked for the machine. The accused had not sold the machine and though he could not immediately produce the machine when demanded he produced it in the Court:

Held: that the matter was of civil dispute. It was the business of the seller not to sell his machine unless he could see reasonable prospect of monthly instalments. If traders passed on their goods to improvident and impecunious persons, they must suffer the loss. The mere non-payment of monthly instalments could not be considered as a criminal offence.

[P 674 C 2 ; P 675 C 1]

Sudhansu Sekhar Mukherjee—for Petitioner.

Probodh Chandra Chatterjee—for Opposite Party.

Order.—In this case the petitioner purchased a gramophone from the shop of the complainant, paid Rs. 80 and promised to pay Rs. 9 per month for ten months. This was in October 1934. Thereafter the petitioner paid nothing. About ten months afterwards the complainant went to his house and asked for the machine. The petitioner could not immediately produce it and a criminal complaint was lodged. The petitioner produced the machine in Court. He has been convicted under S. 406, I. P. C. Upon perusal of the papers it appears that it is a matter of civil dispute. It was the business of the complainant not to sell his machine unless he could see reasonable prospect of monthly instalments. If traders pass on their goods to improvident and impecunious persons, they must suffer the loss. The mere non-payment of monthly instalments cannot be considered as a criminal offence. As for the delay in producing the machine, it was actually produced in Court. There is no finding that he had actually sold the machine. The conviction is set aside. The fine, if paid, is to be refunded.

D.S./R.K.

Conviction set aside.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 675

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Samarali and others—Appellants.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 450 of 1936, Decided on 30th July 1936.

(a) Criminal Trial—Hostile witness—Duty of prosecution—It is not right for Public Prosecutor to declare prosecution witness as hostile—Only way in dealing with hostile witness lies with Judge.

It is not right for a Public Prosecutor to declare a prosecution witness as hostile. The only way in dealing with witnesses who go back on their statements or testify in a way which is frankly against the interest of the party calling them lies with the Judge of the Court. It is the duty of the Public Prosecutor or of counsel representing the Crown to formally ask the leave of the Court to cross-examine the offending witness both with regard to the evidence he has already given which is complained about and also, if necessary, to put questions to him to discredit his testimony generally.

[P 675 C 2 ; P 676 C 1]

(b) Penal Code (1860), S. 366—Procedure—Judge should specifically question jury as regards its conclusion on age of girl—English system is to be followed.

In trying a case under S. 366, it is the duty of Judges with jury to adopt in part the system which is prevalent in England, and that is to put a specific question to the jury as to the conclusion they have come to in relation to the age of the girl whose maltreatment has been the subject of the charge. The jury, unless it is specifically put to them, never really understand what their duty is under S. 366.

[P 676 C 1]

Joges Chandra Sinha—for Appellant.

Khundkar, Dy. Legal Remembrancer, and Fanindra Mohan Sanyal—for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—These appeals have been ably argued before us and are put forward on behalf of three men who were convicted by a Judge and jury at Mymensingh for crimes of abduction and rape upon a young Hindu married woman. The appellants are Mohammedans. In my opinion, this was a false case and it was made no more easy before the jury to come to a correct conclusion by the manner in which it was handled by the learned Judge. As the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer pointed out, it is perhaps difficult to put one's finger upon any striking piece of misdirection: but the whole of the summing up, in my opinion, was apt to mislead the jury by the learned Judge's misappreciation of the evidence which was laid before the Court. One of the most striking features of the case was that the witnesses whom one might have expected to have been called for the prosecution were called for the defence, while other witnesses whose names were originally mentioned as being prosecution witnesses concerning whom the defence alleged that they were at the bottom of the false charge made against these three men, were never called at all and the extra feature of the case is that one of the prosecution witnesses gave evidence which was quite inimical to the prosecution case and thereupon the learned Judge recorded in his diary that the Public Prosecutor declared this witness to be a hostile witness. He refers again to this event in the charge by using the expression.—'The witness was declared hostile by the prosecution'—a phrase which I imagined at first was a slip, but evidently it is a true version of what occurred. It is very difficult to appreciate exactly what effect it would have upon a jury. But I think it is fair to draw the conclusion that the Public Prosecutor in this Court has very much more influence than he ought to have, and if he has very much more influence than he ought to have, it would only be a step further to imagine that the jury think that his evidence or rather the way he presents his evidence is to be accepted at a greater value than the way in which the defence evidence is presented. The conclusion that I draw is not far fetched in that regard and it is not right to declare a prosecution witness as hostile. The only way in dealing with witnesses who go back on their statements or testify in a way which is frankly against the interest of the party calling them lies with the Judge of the Court.

That is laid down quite correctly by S. 154, Evidence Act, and it is the duty of the Public Prosecutor in such circumstances or of counsel representing the Crown to formally ask the leave of the Court to cross-examine the offending witness both with regard to the evidence he has already given which is complained about and also, if necessary, to put questions to him to discredit his testimony generally. The case is also an unfortunate one, because one of the charges against the accused is under that dreadfully drawn S. 366 of the Code which is always giving trouble in these Courts, because we never know in an appellate Court really how the jury have made up their minds. It is an omnibus section dealing with both abduction and kidnapping and I think it is the duty of Judges with jury to adopt in part the system which is prevalent in England, and that is to put a specific question to the jury as to the conclusion they have come to in relation to the age of the girl whose maltreatment has been the subject of the charge. It was not done here. I very much doubt that the jury, unless it is specifically put to them, ever really understand what their duty is under S. 366. It is difficult even for a trained lawyer to appreciate and it must be extremely difficult for a layman. I am leaving to my learned brother a close analysis of this charge. I think the appeals must be allowed, the convictions and sentences set aside and the appellants set at liberty forthwith.

Henderson, J.—The prosecution case was briefly as follows: One night at about 10 o'clock Tarubala, P. W. 4, who is the wife of the complainant Jatindra Nag went out of the house to ease herself accompanied by her mother-in-law. She was suddenly attacked by a body of 8 to 10 persons, including the appellants and was forcibly carried off after being gagged. A search organised by the mother-in-law proved fruitless. The girl said in her evidence that the appellants had committed rape upon her at various places. Eventually the complainant received information from the thana to the effect that his wife had been found and was there. He accordingly, went and recovered her. It was never disputed by anybody that she was taken to the thana by the Chaukidar who gave evidence for the defence and who, as my learned brother has pointed out, ought really to have been called by the prosecution. There is divergence as to what happened at the thana. According to the police witnesses, the girl refused to return to her husband and the Sub-Inspector made her over to the witness Ram Kumar Das, with the request that he would send her back either to her brother or eventually to her husband.

There were several startling features about the case and, in my opinion, the learned Judge altogether failed to put them before the jury in a proper manner. The charge was far too long, dealing with petty and unimportant matters and presented in a thoroughly confused manner. It was the sort of charge which has frequently been condemned by this Court, in which no attempt was made to marshal the evidence under the proper headings and I very much doubt whether the Jury derived any assistance from it at all. Now, the first thing to notice is that the explanation of the law was confused and unsatisfactory. The prosecution made a simple and straightforward case of abduction. Probably in view of the very unsatisfactory nature of the evidence with regard to the girl's age and the fact that she had given her age in the committing Magistrate's Court as 17, the prosecution thought that they were not justified in putting forward a charge of kidnapping. In spite of that, the learned Judge introduced it himself and did so in a thoroughly confusing way. His first direction of the law is in these terms:

If these points are proved, then the charge under S. 366 should be regarded as proved. If it is found that her age is above 16 years and she willingly went with the accused, then the charge under S. 366 fails.

Now, the natural inference to draw from this is that if the girl was not over 16, the charge under S. 366 would be established even though she went willingly. Of course, it would and if the learned Judge thought that a parallel line of enquiry should go on in this case, he should have altered the charge accordingly and given the appellants due notice of the fact that the age of the girl was going to be called in question. It could not be doubted that if she was below 16 and went away willingly with the accused they certainly were guilty of an offence punishable under S. 366. Instead of dealing with the matter on these lines, the learned Judge tells them not to convict of kidnapping under S. 366, because no such offence was charged, and then proceeds to introduce a lot of irrelevancy about S. 366. Now, if all the odd passages dealing with this matter are put together, the irresistible conclusion is that the jury must have been in a hopeless muddle. We find it difficult to suppose that they really believed the evidence with regard to abduction and the directions of the learned Judge are such that they may well have thought that they were entitled to bring in a verdict of guilty of kidnapping. There are, of course, as the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer points out, passages in the charge which should have prevented the jury from arriving at such a conclusion, but we are not concerned with isolated passages. We are concerned with the charge as a whole and the law has been presented in such a confused way that we really do not know what the Jury thought.

But it is not only with regard to the explanation of the law that the charge is unsatisfactory. There are several striking features about the case. The duty of the Judge was to marshal the evidence with regard to the points succinctly and clearly, so that the Jury would clearly understand the materials upon which they should take the facts into consideration. Instead of doing that, he delivered a charge which is a long and rambling account of what the various witnesses said a matter of which the Jury were perfectly aware without any direction. I do not propose to deal with every matter but with only the more important ones. Now, the first admitted fact to which I would refer is the existence of Ex. A. This is an entry made by the officer in charge of Gaffargaon thana on 29th May 1935, and recorded by the Sub-Inspector Syder Rahaman. The occurrence is said to have taken place on the 24th May. It was, therefore, prior to this entry. The learned Judge rightly told the Jury that if they believed that this information was really given by Jatindra, they could not convict the appellants. He, however, did not point out to them the circumstances which related to the question whether such information was, in fact, given. It was really a serious misdirection in the sense that the learned Judge was not dealing with the realities of the case with regard to this particular entry. On this point the learned Judge said this:

As the statement of the informant is noted in a gist form and as it is not read over to him to show that it has been correctly recorded, these General Diary entries have in reality very little evidentiary value, as the writer of the entry can write anything according to his sweet will.

Of course, in any view of the matter, the learned Judge was over stating it when he said that such entries have very little evidentiary value. It is only when definite circumstances are proved to suggest that it has not been made in a bona fide way that its value could be called in question. Now, it is quite true that if Jatindra said that he did go to the thana and that he gave the information that his wife had been carried off by the appellants and others, then the observation of the learned Judge would have been to the point and of some use. But in the present case, they are entirely irrelevant and misleading. The case of the prosecution is that Jatindra never went to the thana at all and never gave any information. What the learned Judge should have put before the Jury was two theories: (1) that the Police Officer made this entry in the ordinary course of business, as he made hundreds of other entries; and (2) that he invented the whole thing out of his own head about a person whose existence, so far as we know, he may have been quite unaware of for no reason whatever. The very fact that a great deal of this entry is admittedly true is enough to show that the prosecution suggestion is purely fantastic. Another fact is that the girl was brought to the police station by the Chaukidar D. W. 3 and it was obviously necessary to instruct the jury how this admitted fact fitted in with the respective cases of the two parties. Now, it would be perfectly idle for the prosecution to suggest that the Chaukidar is not a real and genuine witness. He obviously is and the explanation which he gives is perfectly natural and straightforward. He was a witness who ought to have been examined by the prosecution and they ought not to have thrown his evidence overboard in the absence of very strong reasons.

The reason for doing so is a ridiculous explanation given by the prosecution witness, the girl herself. She solemnly suggests that she was sent to the thana by the accused. What reason the accused should have for doing so, it is impossible even to imagine. But she is not consistent even about this. First of all, she says that she was taken to the thana by the Chaukidar after he had consulted with the accused. Later on she says that the accused told the Chaukidar to take her back to her own house. Instead of pointing out to the jury the circumstances in which the girl was produced at the thana, which strongly suggest that the prosecution case was entirely false, the learned Judge devoted a good deal of time to dealing with petty discrepancies in the depositions of witnesses which did not make the least difference one way or the other. Then another admitted fact is the existence of Ex. B, which is the entry in the General Diary with regard to the admitted fact that the girl was produced in the thana by the Chaukidar. An abstract of the statement alleged to have been made by the girl is included and it contains a reference to the alleged ill-treatment by a person referred to as her dadi sasuri. The prosecution pounced upon this word and proceeded to erect a huge theory that a Hindu girl would not refer to dadi sasuri, and it must have been introduced by some Mahomedans, presumably some of the appellants, although it is common ground that none of them was there.

The thana officer who is said to have engineered this falsehood was of course himself as well aware of the use of the word as anybody else. Instead of pointing out to the jury that there was no evidence to support this theory except the use of the word itself, the learned Judge expatiated on it at great length and appeared to attach enormous importance to it, the result being that he presented before the jury a highly coloured picture and entirely neglected what was on the other side. He failed to point out the whole of this entry part of which was admitted by everybody to be true and was therefore not invented by some unknown Mahomedans. It is quite obvious that when the girl was produced in the thana she must have made a statement of some kind and there is no reason to suppose that the Sub-Inspector, instead of recording what she really stated, invented something else for no reason at all. Then, again, the jury were positively misled with regard to the general effect of the evidence. The learned Judge should have placed it prominently before them in the forefront of the charge that they could not possibly convict, unless they believed the girl and her mother-in-law. Instead of doing that, he suggests that the evidence of certain other witnesses is sufficient to prove the charge. Further, his language is so unhappy that the jury may well have thought that he intended to lay down that if they disbelieved the defence witnesses or were not satisfied with the genuineness of the entries in the General Diary, they would be justified in finding the accused guilty.

It only remains for me to say a word or two about the witness Ram Kumar Das. As my learned brother has pointed out, the Public Prosecutor ought not to have been allowed to declare him hostile and deal with him on those lines. It was for the learned Judge to decide whether he would allow the Public Prosecutor to cross-examine this witness. On turning to his deposition it appears that the witness had given a great deal of what was almost transparently false evidence in favour of the prosecution, and it was only a substratum of truth which came out at one place that induced the Public Prosecutor to declare him hostile. In these circumstances, the learned Judge would have exercised a wise discretion if he had rejected the application and left the cross-examination to the defence alone. From what has been said above, it will appear that the prosecution might have been able to establish a case with regard to kidnapping. But it is really very doubtful whether the evidence with regard to the age of the girl justified such a course. The learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer did not really ask for it and we have reached the conclusion that we ought not to send the case back for a re-trial. I therefore agree that this appeal must be allowed.

D.S./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 678

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Giridhari Lal and others—Accused—Appellants.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Admitted Appeals Nos. 146, 147, 174 and 314 of 1936, Decided on 21st July 1936.

Penal Code (1860), S. 420 — 'Cheating'—Offence does not depend upon accused's success in swindling amount of times but upon successful inducement of person cheated.

The question whether an offence has been committed under S. 420 does not depend upon the accused's success in swindling of the amount of times that he has managed to obtain property by cheating but depends on the successful inducement of the person cheated. [P 680 C 1]

D. N. Bhattacharja, Fanindra Mohan Sanyal, S. C. Taluqdar, Joy Gopal Ghose, Amiya Prosad Moitra and Satindra Nath Mookerjee—for Appellants.

Khundkar, Anil Chandra Roy Choudhury and Nirmal Ch. Das Gupta—for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—The four appellants here were convicted by the Chief Presidency Magistrate of offences for cheating under S. 420 of the Code read with the conspiracy S. 120-B and they were also convicted of individual offences of cheating. The learned Magistrate refrained from passing separate sentences under the conspiracy charges but he sentenced each of them to two years' rigorous imprisonment on the bare cheating convictions. It is a very bad case indeed of organised and up to discovery successful attempts at swindling traders by means of the persons concerned putting themselves forward as being members of a reputable firm of buyers. The firm which they invented had no existence. They called it a firm of Gangadhar Beni Prosad, and their method was to hire and lock up a room, keep a durwan there and operate from this place obtaining goods by swindling. After they had obtained the goods they would resell them at prices under the market rate and it was through a police officer inspecting one of the accused customer's stocks that the goods were found and the crime was detected. One of the appellants has been at this game before and presented an appeal, none too successful one, so far as this Court was concerned. We think that the facts which were very adequately dealt with by the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate are quite unassailable and as far as they are concerned, the appellants have never had any chance of success at all. But they had the advantage of an interesting and able argument put forward by Mr. Bhattacharya who appeared for one whom I think I might safely call the leading appellant Giridhari Lal on grounds of law and procedure. Mr. Bhattacharya's contention amounted to this that in addition to the charge of conspiracy brought against these persons they were improperly charged with cheating in a manner contrary to the provisions of S. 234, Criminal P. C. That section which is complementary to the preceding S. 233 affords an exception to the usual rule in the criminal case that each offence must be the subject of a separate charge. S. 234 lays down that if a person is accused of more than one offence of the same kind committed within a space of 12 months he may be charged with and tried at the same trial for any number of those offences not exceeding three. Mr. Bhattacharya argued here that the charges did, in fact, amount to more than three and he urged upon us that as they were put before the Court together with a charge of conspiracy they constituted an illegal procedure as laid down in the well-known case, decided in the Privy Council over 30 years ago, that in 25 Mad 61 (1).

The answer of the Crown to this point of law was that the Subrahmania's case (1) was decided when the only type of conspiracy offence which was recognised by Indian Penal Code was that form of conspiracy which is known as conspiracy by abetment, but that since the decision in Subrahmania's case, (1) a new and supplementary S. 120-B, extending the law of conspiracy in India and bringing it into line with the law of conspiracy in England has been introduced and by the appearance of that section it is possible to try persons at one and the same time for conspiracy under S. 120-B together with numerous other charges not necessarily of the same kind. A number of authorities were cited to us by the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer in regard to his view of the law dealing not only with misjoinder of charges but also with the common case of misjoinder of parties. The whole position is a curious one, because I for one find it a little difficult to distinguish in principle between the decision in Subrahmania's case (1) and these other more recent decisions even though it may be accepted that S. 120-B has extended the law of conspiracy beyond the narrow confines of the law of conspiracy depending upon abetment alone. It seems to be that at some time or another, (it may be quite soon), that the Judicial Committee will be asked to give an authoritative ruling upon any possible change in the law which has been introduced by the appearance of S. 120-B and it may well be that the governing factor in laying down the procedure as to what is permissible in framing charges against accused persons will depend upon some necessary finding as to whether the particular conspiracy in the particular case amounted to a single transaction or several transactions. I have perhaps taken too much time in dealing with this point. I have only done so in deference to the argument addressed to the Court.

1. Subrahmania Ayyar v. Emperor, (1902) 25 Mad 61=28 I A 257=8 Sar 160 (P O).

We are of the opinion that on the actualities of this case there has been no infringement of the provisions laid down in S. 234, Criminal P. C. No doubt the question whether an offence has been committed under S. 420 does not depend upon the accused's success in swindling of the amount of times that he has managed to obtain property by cheating but depends in each individual case, on the successful inducement of the person cheated. In this particular case, we are of the opinion that if the charges, carelessly drawn up as they are, are regarded in their proper perspective, there are only three charges which come within the legitimate purview of the section. For all these reasons, we dismiss these appeals so far as the convictions are concerned. We dismiss also the appeals, so far as the sentences are concerned, with the exception of the sentence upon the appellant, Radha Kissen Brahmin. He has alleged in this petition of appeal that he is only 18 years of age. The Crown are unable to help us at the moment as to testing that allegation. If it is true, we shall reduce his sentence. He must now surrender to his bail along with the others and we further direct that he be examined by the Police Surgeon who will report to this Court as to his exact age; and on receipt of his report, if Radha Kissen is found to be under 20, we shall certainly reduce his sentence.

Henderson, J. — I agree that Mr. Bhattacharya was unable to lay the necessary foundation for his argument on the point of law. I am bound to say that had he been successful in doing so, then it was an argument which would have deserved our very serious consideration. In the present circumstances, I do not desire to express any opinion on the point raised.

R.W./R.K.

Appeals dismissed.

 * A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 680

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal—Appellant.

v.

Akhil Bandu Guha and others—Respondents.

Govt. Appeal No. 1 of 1936, Decided on 24th June 1936.

(a) Company — No banking business — Deposit account similar to Government Savings Bank account — Overdraft not allowed on deposit accounts but allowed on current accounts only—Company giving loan to depositor but showing as overdraft conceals true statements of facts.

A common form of deposit account is a Government account in Savings Bank. It is difficult to visualise any deposit customer of a Savings Bank going to the Manager of the Savings Bank and obtaining an overdraft. Neither would anyone be strictly allowed an overdraft based on a deposit account in an ordinary Bank. Overdrafts are the usual accompaniments of current accounts. Therefore a Company giving loan to one of its depositors and showing it to be an overdraft to him conceals the true statement of facts. [P 683 C 1]

 (b) Companies Act (1913), S. 282—Interpretation—"Wilfully" does not mean with criminal intent—Spontaneous action of person who is free agent is wilful action—Term to be interpreted according to facts of each case.

The expression 'wilfully' in S. 282, Companies Act, does not embody the idea of a criminal mentality, but the expression 'wilfully' used in the Companies Act in this country means nothing more nor less than the spontaneous action of a person who is a free agent. It is of course, a term that must be interpreted according to the facts of each case. It has been described as not being a term of art, but a legal expression to be fitted to the circumstances being considered by the Court. [P 683 C 2]

 (c) Company—Balance sheet—Should not be mere inventory—It should be pictorial representation of trading position understandable to people in commercial line.

A balance sheet need not be, in fact it must not be, a mere inventory. It is supposed to be a pictorial representation of the trading position of the Company, easily appreciated not by ignorant people but by persons who are reasonably able to understand commercial expressions and commercial conditions: Gluskslein v. Barnes, (1900) A C 240; Peck v. Gurney, (1874) 6 H L 377; Rex v. Kysant, (1932) 1 K B 442 and Rex v. Bishirgian, (1936) 154 L T 499, Ref.

[P 683 C 2; P 684 C 1]

 * (d) Company—Balance sheet—Loan and deposit accounts—Difference between—Consolidation, amounts to suppression of truth.

A loan and a deposit are items differing completely in principle from the balance sheet point of view. Strictly speaking they ought to appear on different sides, for one is an asset and the other is a liability. Consolidating the two and presenting them as one item to the readers is a striking case of non-disclosure, amounting to a suppression of the truth. [P 684 C 2]

 * (e) Company—Position of directors—Directors stand in fiduciary capacities with respect to capital under their control—Investing public should have confidence in managers—Directors are not allowed to publish false balance sheets to cover their improper conduct.

It is of paramount importance that the investing public in India, now that modern methods are being adopted in business should have the utmost confidence in those persons who are managing Indian concerns. Directors of Joint Stock Companies stand in a fiduciary capacity with regard to capital under their control. They are in the position of trustees and are bound to deal with the capital under their control as a trust and cannot be allowed with impunity to publish false balance sheets to conceal their own improper conduct.

[P 684 C 2; P 686 C 2]

(f) Company—Balance sheet not disclosing true state of affairs—Opinion of auditor that it is properly drawn is of no value.

The opinion of an accountant or an auditor that a balance sheet which does not disclose the true state of affairs of a company has been properly drawn is of no value whatsoever for no opinion expressed by him can turn a false balance sheet into a true one.

[P 685 C 1, 2]

*S. M. Bose and Bireswar Chatterjee—*for Appellant.

*Barwell, Nirmal Kumar Sen, N. K. Basu, D. N. Bhattacharjee and Hemendra Nath Basu—*for Respondents.

Cunliffe, J.—This is an appeal by the Crown against an acquittal passed by the Sessions Judge at Dacca. The learned Judge himself was dealing with an appeal from convictions and sentences passed upon three respondents here by a Local Magistrate for offences under the Companies Act. The facts which led up to this prosecution are, I think, not in great dispute. It is the construction to be put on those facts which formed conflict between the prosecution and the defence in the trial Court and which has been the subject of an elaborate argument both in the lower Court and before us at the hearing of the appeal. Now, the facts are shortly these: The three respondents Akhil Bandu Guha, Surjya Kumar Bose and Rajani Mohan Basak, were Managing Directors of a concern known as the Dhakeswari Cotton Mills Ltd. They were appointed to this responsible position out of a large Board of Directors amounting sometimes to as many as 17. The Company appears to have been a flourishing one paying dividends and was, as far as one can see, run and intended to be run upon up-to-date modern lines both in its equipment and in its management. It may be seen from the contents of a small booklet that was handed to me which contained both a review of the year's working ending December 1933, the balance sheet, profit and loss account, and the revenue account, that the Directors were full of confidence as to their commercial position and also with regard to certain subsidiary aims which took the form, as authorised by the memorandum and articles of association, of training young Bengalee businessmen in up-to-date business methods. There was another Company formed sometime after the Dhakeswari Cotton Mills Ltd. which was known as the Eastern Bengal Jute and Cotton Mills Ltd. This Company was at the material time in a formative stage only. It was engaged in the same branch more or less, of industry as the Dhakeswari Cotton Mills and it had the advantage of having as its Managing Directors the three respondents here who had already considerable experience in the trade.

The trouble, however first came to light with regard to the Dhakeswari Cotton Mills Ltd., and its Directors when the balance sheet for the year ending December 1933, was produced in draft. An objection was taken at a Directors' meeting by one of the Directors, who was not a Managing Director, to two items which appeared in the balance sheet. The first was shown on the capital and liability side of the sheet and was entitled "Deposits by others" Rs. 2,52,496. Then exception was taken also to an item which appeared on the property and assets side of the balance entitled "Advances to contractors and others" Rs. 69,334.

It is not disputed, to turn first to the deposit item, that this figure represented or purported to represent the net balance of a deposit account which had been opened by the firm for the purpose of receiving cash from depositors which was divided. I think I am right in saying, into two deposit accounts; one on a $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent basis and the other at a higher rate of interest at 6 per cent. The indulgence in cash deposit taking which the Company had undertaken was perfectly valid. It was authorised generally by Art. M of the Memorandum of Association. But it is again not in dispute that this figure of roughly Rs. 2½ lakhs was the net balance of this account, because the actual deposits amounted to nearly Rs. 3 lakhs, but for the purpose of arriving at Rs. 2½ lakhs figure, a deduction had been made from the total deposits by subtracting the loan of over Rs. 40,000 and its interest which had been made by the Managing Directors to the Eastern Bengal Jute and Cotton Mills Ltd. The Eastern Bengal Mills had at one time been depositors with the Dhakeswari Cotton Mills but at the time the loan was made, they were no longer depositors. It may also be noted that earlier than the date of this balance sheet the loans extended to the Eastern Jute Mills had amounted to well over Rs. 60,000. So much for that figure.

Turning to the other figure that I mentioned, "Advances to Contractors and others," it is said that this figure contained a much smaller item of cash advanced to the Managing Directors themselves by way of prepayment of annual commission on the Company's profits and travelling expenses, and it was objected, as far as the accounting expression "Contractors and others" was concerned, "and others" did not indicate clearly that a loan had been made to officers of the Company. In fact it was argued that such payments did not constitute loan items at all. When the objections were raised at the Directors' meeting there was a good deal of fuss and it is said that at the meeting which subsequently took place when the balance sheet was confirmed, the meeting was packed and the objectors were howled down. Then came this prosecution on the part of a nominal shareholder who, it is suggested, was set up to complain by the recalcitrant Director who had started the first objection and had not signed the balance sheet. The respondents were prosecuted under S. 282, Companies Act of 1913. That section is in the following terms:

Whoever in any return, report, certificate, balance sheet or other document, required by or for the purposes of any of the provisions of this Act, wilfully makes a statement false in any material particular, knowing it to be false, shall be punishable with imprisonment of either description for a term which may extend to three years, and shall also be liable to fine.

Closely connected with the penalty section of the Act, are the earlier sections which deal specifically with the form of balance sheet to be adopted. S. 132 for example is in these terms:

The balance sheet shall contain a summary of the property and assets and of the capital and liabilities of the Company giving such particulars as will disclose the general nature of those liabilities and assets and how the value of the fixed assets has been arrived at. The balance sheet shall be in the form marked F in the Third Schedule or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

Section 134 deals in part with a penalty to be sought in a still earlier section, that of S. 32, if a default is made in the required form of the balance sheet, and the penalty for infringement there is a fine. Turning to the schedule mentioned in S. 132, Form F, one finds a specimen balance sheet in a very full form and as far as this case is concerned, I think the only requirement which needs notice is that, apparently, the Statute insists upon the loans made by the Company being itemised with some precision on the capital and liability side of the sheet. Loans and mortgages are dealt with, also general loans prescribed as loans otherwise secured; and it is necessary according to the form to state the nature of the security. Finally we find the items of unsecured loans.

It is not necessary for me I think to enter into all the elaborate arguments which were discussed in the two very long judgments of the Court below. I think it will suffice if I endeavour to deal with the arguments which were addressed to us in this Court. It was contended on the part of the Crown that this manner of accounting concentrating upon the item 'by other deposits' amounted to a breach of S. 282. It was said that this was a false statement because it amounted to a non-disclosure of a material particular. The Crown argued that the figure ought not to have been the net amount at all, but ought to have been in the neighbourhood of Rs. 2,90,000 which would have shown the true deposit account and that the Rs. 40,000 loan ought to have been shown as a separate item altogether. It is necessary to deal with this point more particularly because I had omitted to say that the learned Magistrate, for reasons which commended themselves to him, convicted the respondents for a false statement in relation to the 'by other deposit items', but he acquitted them of the charge based upon the alleged mis-statement wrapped up in the item "Contractors and others." The way in which the defence met this argument on the part of the Crown was this: they said that the Company was in reality carrying on a subsidiary banking business and that they were entitled to do this under the two Arts. L and M in the memorandum and that this loan of

Rs. 40,000 made to the Eastern Bengal Mills was nothing more or less than a banker's overdraft granted to a banking customer and therefore it was quite in order to enter as the banking deposit account the actual net figure of the account, when showing it in the balance sheet. There was a further argument to illustrate this contention based on the well known difference in banking law between banker's loan and banker's overdraft; and it was strenuously argued that here there was nothing more or less than an overdraft, because the Eastern Bengal Mills was an old client of the banking side of the Company's activities. I shall deal with that point at once.

It seems to me however that in reality this Company was not carrying on a banking business at all. Its object in receiving deposits in cash from its customers was merely to assist its working capital. These were of course deposit accounts and were treated as deposit accounts, but in my experience I have never heard yet of an overdraft based on a deposit account. A common form of deposit account is a Government account in a Savings Bank. It is difficult to visualise any deposit customer of a Savings Bank going to the Manager of the Savings Bank and obtaining an overdraft. Neither do I imagine that anyone would be strictly allowed an overdraft based on a deposit account in an ordinary Bank. Overdrafts are the usual accompaniments of current accounts. Therefore I am not prepared to accept that this figure of Rs. 2,53,200 odd, the net balance of the deposit account, with the isolated loan subtracted, was a proper way of entering the Company's activities in this regard in the balance sheet to be issued to the shareholders. It is not disputed that this was an isolated loan. There was no evidence that any of the other depositors had loans extended to them; and one cannot free one's mind from the thought having regard to the aspect of suggested concealment about the manner of accounting, that the Rs. 40,000 loan was made to a Company of which three respondent persons who made the loan were also the Managing Directors.

Another point which was strenuously canvassed before us, and in the Courts below, was that supposing the method adopted of entering this combined financial transaction was a wrong one, could it possibly come within the mischief of S. 282, having regard to the section's exact wording? It must be recollected that the word "wilfully" is employed in the section and the section also contains the words, as was apparent when when I read it, "a statement false in any material particular." This argument based on the word 'wilfully' very greatly impressed the Judge of the lower appellate Court.

I have no hesitation in saying that it was largely due to his construction of the expression 'wilfully' on the facts which were disclosed to him when considering the judgment of the Magistrate's Court that he reversed the conviction. The learned Judge apparently took the line that the expression 'wilfully' embodies the idea of a criminal mentality and he came to the conclusion that there was no criminal mentality on the part of the three accused persons here. There I differ from him. In my opinion also the expression 'wilfully' used in the Companies Acts, both in this country and in the United Kingdom, means nothing more nor less than the spontaneous action of a person who is a free agent. The word 'wilfully' has been dealt with in certain well-known decisions to which I need not refer exactly but such seems to be the considered opinion with regard to its exact significance. It is, of course, a term that must be interpreted according to the facts of each case. It has been described as not being a term of art, but a legal expression to be fitted to the circumstances being considered by the Court.

Now the really important question in this case falls at last to be considered, and it is this: Was the entry of the figure to which I have referred over and over again appended to the expression "deposits by others" in the circumstances of the case, a statement false in any material particular? In my opinion, it was. The requirements of a balance sheet have often in law been discussed both in the Courts of this country and in England and it had been said that a balance sheet need not be, in fact it must not be, a mere inventory. It is supposed to be, to use an expression employed in one judgment, a pictorial representation of the trading position of the company, easily appreciated not by ignorant people but by persons who are reasonably able to understand commercial expressions and commercial conditions. There is a well known observation of that great Judge, Lord Macnaughten, in (1900) A C 240 (1) at p. 250. The learned Law Lord there said :

It is a trite observation that every document as against its author must be read in the sense which it was intended to convey. And every body knows that sometimes half a truth is no better than a downright falsehood.

Then, again, in the old case, 6 H L 377 (2), it was said in the House of Lords with regard to a prospectus that the foundation in relation to a projected company was therefore necessarily laid in concealment; and to render the scheme attractive to the public, the promoters were not only compelled to hide the truth but to give such a colour to the statements put forth in the prospectus as to render them (though perhaps literally true) yet, in the sense in which they must have known the statements would be understood by the public, really false.

I apprehend that all these cases which sometimes deal with balance sheets and sometimes with prospectuses are governed by the same principles of law with regard to the making of false statements, and it is the effect upon the ordinary investor reading the statements in an ordinarily careful manner in which an investor would do which has to be considered, when one is making up one's mind as to whether the breach of S. 282 in this case of the Indian Companies Act has been committed. Those were the principles which were adopted by the Court of Appeal in England in two recent cases which are very familiar to those of us who study the law in relation to joint stock companies. The first is the case of Rex v. Kysant (3), the second being the case of Rex v. Bishirgian (4) better known as the Pepper case. These were both instances in which the convictions that followed the trial depended upon the false prospectuses, although in the Royal Mail Case (3) Lord Kysant was also charged with concealment of material particulars in balance sheets. In both cases also the jury were directed to consider what would be the effect on the minds of the members of the investing public.

Now, applying these principles to this case, I have no hesitation in saying that

1. Gluskstein v. Barnes, (1900) A C 240=83 L T 393=7 Manson 321=16 T L R 321.

2. Peek v. Gurney, (1874) 6 H L 377=22 W R 29=43 L J Ch 19.

3. (1932) 1 K B 442=101 L J K B 97.

4. (1936) 154 L T 499.

ordinary investors reading the item 'by other deposits' would imagine that it represented a total figure of accumulated deposits and not an incorporated net figure making an outgoing loan. It is quite obvious that a loan and a deposit are items differing completely in principle from the balance sheet point of view. Strictly speaking, they ought to appear on different sides, for one is an asset and the other is a liability. Consolidating the two and presenting them as one item to the readers, to my mind, is a striking case of non-disclosure, amounting to a suppression of the truth. I further regret very much to say that there was every inducement for the people who drew up this balance sheet to make it up, in this irregular fashion. It was certainly an improper thing for the directors of the Dhakeswari Cotton Mills to advance money to the East Bengal Jute and Cotton Mills which was an embryonic concern and which might possibly turn out afterwards to be a competitor. These directors knew, or at any rate ought to have known, before the final minutes, which included the balance sheet, were confirmed that grave objections were being raised among their own colleagues to this type of action being adopted. They knew or at any rate ought to have known that the shareholders of this very big concern, scattered all over India, could not possibly on receiving by post a balance sheet of this nature appreciate these particular activities of the company.

In my opinion, the three respondents here were rightly convicted by the Magistrate. It is of paramount importance that the investing public in India, now that modern methods are being adopted in business a fact which should be gratifying to all men of good will should have the utmost confidence in those persons who are managing Indian concerns. Directors of Joint Stock Companies stand in a fiduciary capacity with regard to capital under their control. They are in the position of trustees and I regret to say, that these three gentlemen do not seem to have appreciated their position and that they wilfully misled the shareholders by making up the balance sheet in the way they did. The convictions as passed by the Magistrate on the respondents are restored. As to the sentences, we take a graver view than the learned Magistrate did. We consider that the finer imposed by the Magistrate ought to remain; but the sentences of imprisonment are enhanced in each case to one of three months' simple imprisonment.

Henderson, J.—I have had no difficulty in reaching the conclusion that the balance sheet was false. It was grossly misleading. It suggested that the amount due from the company to depositors was Rs. 2,50,000 odd, whereas in reality it was over Rs. 2,90,000. Then, in the second place, it deliberately suppressed the fact that an advance of Rs. 40,000 was made to the Eastern Bengal Jute and Cotton Mills. No explanation or juggling with figures can suggest that that balance sheet was true. The next question which requires consideration is whether this false balance sheet was prepared wilfully by the respondents and whether they knew that it was false. Their defence was that they had drawn it up in good faith, because they thought that, as drawn up, it was in conformity with law and with Form No. F. I may note that it is clear that the respondents were not over scrupulous or punctillious with regard to money matters from the transactions which formed the subject matter of the third charge. Two of the respondents with the connivance of the third drew advances for themselves on account of their commission and travelling allowances and then showed it under the heading 'advances to contractors and others.' This was clearly an unscrupulous thing to do. But in support of their plea of good faith, they examined two expert witnesses, viz., a chartered accountant, named Reed, and the auditor of their own company, and both these witnesses gave evidence to the effect that, in their opinion, the balance sheet was properly drawn up.

Of course, no opinion expressed by an auditor or accountant can turn a false balance sheet into a true one and the only importance of this lies in the effect that it may have had upon the intention of the respondents. So far as Mr. Reed is concerned, it has none at all because he was only shown the accounts a few days before he gave evidence and was merely called to depose that there was nothing wrong in the balance sheet. He was severely shaken in cross-examination and I do not believe him when he says that in his opinion the balance sheet was carefully drawn up. I am further of opinion that the learned Magistrate formed a proper estimate of the auditor. He was related to one of the respondents and was clearly under an obligation to them. That he was not carrying out his duties to the share-holders is abundantly clear from the fact that he did not press and call their attention to his objection that the advances made by the respondents to the Eastern Bengal Jute Mills were improperly made. I cannot place any reliance on the opinion that he has given. But be that as it may, the plain fact of the matter is that the opinion of an accountant or an auditor that a balance sheet, which does not disclose the true state of affairs of a company has been properly drawn is of no value whatsoever.

Then, again, the respondent relied upon the fact that the same method had been employed in drawing up previous balance sheets. As my learned brother has pointed out there never was any advance to any depositor, except to the Eastern Bengal Mills. So all this amounts to is that on previous occasions the respondents did the same improper thing for exactly the same reason. This clearly is no evidence of good faith. The explanation given for the contention that the balance sheet was properly drawn up is that this advance was in reality a banker's overdraft and not a loan. My learned brother has given full reasons for rejecting that contention and I have no desire to elaborate it. In my opinion it makes not the slightest difference whether this advance was an overdraft or a loan. Supposing it were true that a banker was bound to disclose the existence of loans but was entitled to suppress the existence of overdrafts, there might have been something to be said. But there cannot be any doubt that a banker in drawing up a balance sheet must disclose both. In my opinion, the respondents have entirely failed to show that the balance sheet was properly drawn up. They knew obviously that it was false, and it was further apparent from their own conduct that it was done wilfully. P. W. 8 is the Director who refused to sign this balance sheet.

He had heard rumours of this improper advance to the Eastern Bengal Mills and was anxious to investigate the matter. He was not allowed to enter the office or to inspect the accounts without the permission of the Managing Directors. The Directors' meeting to pass the balance sheet was called on 8th April. This witness received the draft balance sheet the previous evening at 9 p. m. and had not time to examine it properly. In previous years he was given four or five days for this work. Accordingly, as soon as the meeting began, he asked that it might be postponed for three days so that he might have time to examine the balance sheet properly. This was disallowed, and he was left in ignorance of the true position. Such conduct is clearly not the conduct of honest men who think that they have drawn up their balance sheet properly and have nothing to conceal. Then, again, if we found on examination that the irregularities were of no importance to anybody and were of no benefit to the respondents, we might be able to hold that the action of the respondents was not wilful; but exactly the opposite is the case. There were two irregularities both of which were of benefit to the respondents and both of which were necessary to the respondents in order to enable them to cover up their tracks. From this it is transparent that they wilfully drew up a false balance sheet for their own benefit.

I think the respondents were ill-advised, when they became the Managing Directors of a rival Company. At any rate, they received a warning from the objection of a co-director, P. W. 8, when he objected to their taking up the management of the new mill as well. They promised him that the new mill would deal with jute and not with cotton; but that promise was soon broken. The result was that when the new mill required money, the respondents were placed in a position in which their duty to one mill conflicted with their duty to the other. Not to mince matters they took money belonging to the Dhakeswari Mill in an improper and irregular way and used it for the rival mill. They knew that their action was improper and irregular, because even their timid auditor had warned them of the fact before. Having done this, they were determined to conceal their improper conduct from their own shareholders and from such members of the public as might be interested in the position of the company. Accordingly, they drew up the balance sheet in this false way and, so far as the balance sheet alone goes, they were completely successful in hoodwinking their shareholders. Thus, there can be no question that they knew the balance sheet to be false, and that they acted wilfully in every possible sense of the term, in order to conceal their own improper conduct. On the question of sentence, Mr. Basu contended that although it is necessary to inflict imprisonment, it should be nominal in the case of a technical offence of this description. I can find nothing technical in this offence. The only thing that can be said in favour of the respondents is that they did not put the money which they had taken from the company into their own pockets. But, of course, if they had done that, they would have been charged with another offence. I entirely agree with my learned brother that this is a serious offence, because persons in the position of these gentlemen are entrusted with the money of the public and are bound to deal with it as trustees and cannot be allowed with impunity to publish false balance sheets in order to conceal their own improper conduct.

B.D./R.K.

*Sentence enhanced.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 686

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Shib Chandra Roy — Accused — Petitioner.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 557 of 1936, Decided on 4th August 1936.

Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 403 (1), 235 (1) — Person, prosecuted under S. 283, Penal Code for obstructing river by extending tank-banks, acquitted on appeal—Subsequent prosecution under Embankment Act for meddling with embankment — Subsequent offence held not distinct offence and principle of autrefois acquit applied.

A person was prosecuted under S. 283, Penal Code, for creating obstruction in the bed of a river by extending a tank, and making banks. He was acquitted on appeal. Subsequently he was prosecuted under S. 76-B, Bengal Embankment Act, for meddling with embankment :

Held : that the subsequent offence did not constitute a distinct offence within the meaning of S. 235 (1), Criminal P. C., from one in the former case and, therefore, the principle of autrefois acquit operated and the second prosecution was barred. [P 687 C 2]

Probodha Chandra Chatterjee — for Petitioner.Khundkar — for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—We granted this rule on a point of law based upon the principle of autrefois acquit laid down in S. 403, Criminal P. C. The petitioner was originally tried for an offence under S. 283, Penal Code, and sentenced to pay a fine with a term of imprisonment in default of the fine. S. 283 is widely drawn, Section dealing with criminal acts causing danger to property, obstruction or injury to persons in a public highway or in a public line of navigation. After that conviction, the petitioner went up on appeal. On appeal, he was acquitted somewhat technically perhaps on the ground that the place which he had obstructed was not a navigable river as during considerable portions of the year, it consisted of a dry bed and the learned appellate Court Judge relied on a definition of 'navigable river' laid down in the Government Estates Manual. Whether the learned Judge was right in specifically relying upon a definition which I should regard as being rather more executive than judicial I am not prepared to say; but at any rate the petitioner was acquitted. That acquittal took place on 5th December 1934. Subsequently, the authorities returned to the attack, because there is an order sheet on the record referring to a fresh prosecution under the Embankment Act, this time for an offence under S. 76-B of that statute. S. 76-B, Bengal Embankment Act, deals with the offence of interfering with embankments. Apparently after that, Mr. Ahmed, the Local Sessions Judge at Nadia was approached by way of motion and his record of what occurred in its material particulars runs as follows: "Arguments heard. For judgment 21st May 1936." Then, a short judgment came to be delivered. The learned Judge said this:

I went through the records. The only question for determination in the case is whether S. 403 (1) applies to this case. It is contended that as the applicant was once fined and acquitted on appeal under S. 283, Penal Code, he cannot again be tried upon the same facts under a different enactment. But in this case I think the prosecution of the applicant under S. 76, Cl. (b), Embankment Act, is a distinct offence and it is governed by S. 235 (1), Criminal P. O., and as such, S. 403 (1) has no application. The motion is hereby rejected.

That means that a preliminary point of law, which raised a plea in bar to the second prosecution, was rejected as the new offence under the Embankment Act, in the opinion of the learned Judge, was quite distinct from the old offence under S. 283 and the learned Judge pre-supposed that the new prosecution was going to be upon exactly the same facts as the petitioner was tried in the earlier case. I need not refer in terms to S. 403 in its entirety. By sub-s. (2) it refers back to the provisions of S. 235, sub-s. (1) on the basis and on the basis alone that a distinct offence has been committed. S. 235 (1) runs as follows:

If in one series of acts so connected together as to form the same transaction, more offences than one are committed by the same person, he may be charged with, and tried at one trial for, every such offence.

The question is whether the offence of meddling with an embankment is a genuinely distinct offence from the kind of offence with which the petitioner was charged under the widely drawn S. 283. It is no good looking at the bare terms of S. 283. One must, I think, in equity look at the exact charge as embraced by S. 283 and the charge against the petitioner, as I understand it, was of creating an obstruction in the bed of the river by extending a tank and making banks which would constitute an obstruction under the section. In my opinion, it cannot be said that meddling with an embankment is a distinct offence as compared with this first offence with which the petitioner was charged, and then acquitted which was, as I have indicated, concerned with making a tank together with extending some kind of protection to it in the way of an embankment. For these reasons, I think that the principle of autrefois acquit operates in favour of the petitioner here. The prosecution in 1934 had reached a finality before this new prosecution under the Embankment Act was launched. We had a case the other day when we ordered a man to be retried by a Magistrate under another section of the Code after he had been convicted under a separate section, and when the learned Magistrate proceeded to carry out our order, learned counsel rose and said 'My client has been acquitted of the offence; I would plead autrefois acquit.' And when he came to us, we pointed out to him that he could not plead autrefois acquit, because there was no finality there; but here there was. The rule, therefore, will be made absolute.

Henderson, J.—I agree. In showing cause, the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer tried to persuade us that the present prosecution is really for a different offence. The argument he made is this: the previous prosecution was for obstruction of the river by the erection of banks in connection with the extension of the petitioner's tank. The present prosecution is not really for that at all, but for something done in the course of smashing down the embankment of the river itself. I can find nothing whatever in the record to support any such argument. There is nothing to show us that the petitioner smashed down anything in connexion with the extension and excavation of the tank. The present prosecution is based upon a letter written by the Collector and the impression that letter has made on my mind is that the present prosecution was intended to be precisely the same thing on a misapprehension of the law. Certainly that is the course which the proceedings took in the Court of the learned Sessions Judge. It by no means follows that anything which the petitioner is supposed to have done to what is called the bank of a river would be an offence under S. 76-B, Embankment Act, at all. I have, therefore, reached the conclusion that there is no foundation for the argument made on behalf of the Crown and I agree that this rule must be made absolute and the proceedings quashed.

D.S./R.K. Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 688

GUHA, BARTLEY AND R. C. MITTER, JJ.

Collector of Dacca—Appellant.

v.

Gholam Kuddus Choudhury and others—Respondents.

Letters Patent Appeal Nos. 1 to 5 of 1935, Decided on 31st March 1936, from Mukerji and M. C. Ghose, JJ., D/- 14th March 1935.

(a) Appeal — Right of — Must be given by express enactment.

A right of appeal from any decision of any tribunal must be given by express enactment; such a right can not be implied: Sand Bank Charity Trustees v. North Staffordshire Ry. Co., (1877) 3 Q B D 1, Rel. on. [P 690 C 1]

(b) Letters Patent (Calcutta), Cl. 15—"Judgment", meaning of—"Judgment" in land acquisition case is judgment under Cl. 15.

The "judgment" in Cl. 15, Letters Patent, means a decision which affects the merits of the question between the parties, by determining some right or liability; judgment in a land acquisition case is a judgment as mentioned in Cl. 15, Letters Patent, and is appealable: 8 Beng L R 433; 9 Cal 482 (P C) and 6 Cal 594, Rel. on. [P 690 C 1,2]

(c) Land Acquisition—Basis of valuation — There is more than ordinary room for guess-work—Exact exposition of reasons for conclusions arrived at should not be demanded.

In all valuation, judicial or otherwise, there must be room for inference and inclinations of opinion which are difficult to reduce to exact reasoning or to explain to others i. e. something more than guesswork. It would be unfair to require an exact exposition of reasons for the conclusions arrived at: 26 Bom 1 (P C), Rel. on. [P 691 C 1]

(d) Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 18—Owner of land objecting to amount awarded but not to apportionment between tenants—Afterwards he would be entitled only to proportionate and not full increased amount resulting from his objection less compensation accepted by them—Government and not owner is entitled to benefit arising from tenants having accepted compensation at lower value.

Where in proceedings under Land Acquisition Act, the owner of the land has objected under S. 18 to the amount awarded, but has not objected to the apportionment between them, the owner is not entitled to an increased amount resulting from his objection less the compensation accepted by the tenants, but only to such proportion of the increased amount as accords with the apportionment awarded; the Government and not the owner is entitled to the benefit arising from the tenants having accepted compensation upon a lower value: 1932 P C 102 and 1929 All 525, Rel. on. [P 692 C 1]

(e) Land Acquisition Act (1894), S. 30—Interests of landlord and tenant with right of occupancy—No general rule exists as to apportionment.

In the matter of determining the value of the two different interests, the landlords and the tenants, the position that the tenants on the lands acquired, had right of occupancy in the same has to be taken into consideration. There is no doubt that there is, and can be no rule of general application, applicable to apportionment between a landlord and a tenant with a permanent right of occupancy; and what is sometimes called a rough and ready method of settling the matter of apportionment has to be adopted. Landlords held entitled to 2/5 of value of entire interest in land acquired. [P 692 C 2]

Sarat Chandra Basak and Bijan Kumar Mukherjee—for Appellant.

Atul Chandra Gupta, Nurul Huq, Hamidul Huq Choudhury (in 3 and 4), Shamsuddin (in 1 and 5), Rajendra Chandra Guha and Mahendra Kumar Ghose (in 2)—for Respondents.

Judgment.—These five appeals are under S. 15, Letters Patent, and have arisen out of proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act. In pursuance of a declaration, dated 17th December 1928, lands were acquired for a project named "Landing Grounds for Aeroplanes at Dacca, in the village of Dhanmandal, Zillah Dacca." The village is just outside the Municipal limits, and the lands acquired were near the other lands in the village purchased by private owners for residential purposes. The lands acquired had tenants on them, having rights of occupancy; their landlords had lakheraj right in the same. The Collector valued the tenants' interest in the lands acquired at Rs. 275 per bigha and the lakheraj right of the proprietors at twenty-five times the annual rent, and five years' purchase in addition for the loss of selami of the net annual profit for rent paid by the tenants to the proprietors; the total valuation of all interests in the lands acquired was about Rs. 450 per bigha. The tenants accepted the Collector's award; there were, however, references under S. 18, Land Acquisition Act, to the Special Land Acquisition Judge, on applications made by the proprietors claiming increment of the valuation of their interest in the lands acquired. The proprietors claimed that the lands acquired should have been valued by the Collector at Rs. 5,000 a bigha.

The learned Special Land Acquisition Judge, on consideration of the materials placed before the Court, increased the valuation of the lands acquired: that value of the lands was estimated by the Judge at Rs. 1,150 per bigha. The increase in the valuation was based on three transactions subsequent to the notification under which the lands in question were acquired. The two Mirash Pottas, Exs. 1 and 2 in the case, according to which the value of the lands covered by the documents worked out at Rs. 1,350; a deduction was made from that valuation, for the reason that the lands acquired were at a greater distance from the town of Dacca, and therefore slightly less favourably situated. The third transaction relied upon by the Judge was an offer of which, as it appears from the Judge's judgment itself, the exact terms were not in evidence and in regard to which negotiations had not been completed. The evidence relating to this transaction was oral, coming from a witness examined on the side of the Government; from the particulars given by the witness in his deposition before the Court, the learned Judge came to the conclusion that the total value of the land, in regard to the granting of a permanent lease negotiations had not been completed, was Rs. 1,150 per bigha. This plot of land comprised an area of five bighas adjoining the lands acquired. It may be noticed also, while referring to the judgment of the Special Land Acquisition Judge, that according to the Judge, the landlords claimants before the Court were entitled to get the full value of the land less the value of the tenant's interest as valued by the Collector. The landlords were to get Rs. 875 per bigha as their share of the value of the lands acquired.

1936 C/87 & 88

The Collector of Dacca preferred appeals to this Court directed against the decision of the Special Land Acquisition Judge to which reference has been made above. The appeals (Appeals from Original Decrees Nos. 242 to 247 of 1930) directed against that decision, were heard by two learned Judges of this Court; one of the six appeals (No. 247) was dismissed by the learned Judges, while in the other five (Nos. 242 to 246), there was difference of opinion as between the Judges, and those appeals were also dismissed in view of the provision contained in S. 98, Civil P. C. The Collector of Dacca preferred these appeals under S. 15, Letters Patent, in those five cases in which the opinion of the Senior Judge of the Division Bench prevailed.

It is necessary at this stage to give our decision on the question of competency of these appeals, raised by way of preliminary objection. It was urged on behalf of the respondents in these appeals that no appeal was permissible under the Letters Patent, inasmuch as the decision of the High Court in a land acquisition case was not a judgment within S. 15 of the Letters Patent, so as to enable a party to file a further appeal to the High Court under that provision of the law. In support of this position, reliance was placed on the decision of the Madras High Court given in the year 1918, in 41 Mad 943 (1), based principally on the judgment of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, delivered in the year 1912, in 39 I A 197 (2) and on the observations of Lord Macnaughten in a case decided by the Judicial Committee

1. Manavikraman Tirumalpad v. Collector of Nilgiris, 1919 Mad 626=49 I O 27=41 Mad 943=35 M L J 110 (F B).
2. Rangoon Botatoung Co. v. Collector of Rangoon, (1912) 40 Cal 21=39 I A 197=6 L B R 150=16 I O 188 (P O).

in the year 1913, 17 C W N 421 (3). The provisions in the Land Acquisition Act contained in S. 26 of the Act, were however amended in the year 1921, by the Amending Act 19 of 1921. Every award under the Land Acquisition Act was to be deemed to be a decree, and the statement of the grounds of every such award, a judgment within the meaning of S. 2, Cl. (2) and S. 2, Cl. (9) respectively of the Code of Civil Procedure, 1908, (S. 2, Amending Act); consequential changes were also introduced in S. 54, Land Acquisition Act, providing for appeal to His Majesty in Council, subject to the provisions contained in S. 110, Civil P. C., (S. 3, Amending Act).

The reason for the amendments referred to above, was to remove the anomaly created by the decision of the Judicial Committee in 39 I A 197 (2), and to meet the observations made in that case by their Lordships based on Lord Bramwell's dictum in (1877) 3 Q B D 1 (4), that an appeal did not exist in the nature of things; a right of appeal from any decision of any tribunal must be given by express enactment; such a right could not be implied. By the Amending Act of 1921 the awards of Courts made in land acquisition cases were placed in the same category as decrees, and awards are now, after the passing of the Amending Act, decrees and orders of Civil Courts; and the statements of the grounds of such awards are judgments within the meaning of the Code of Civil Procedure. The question for consideration now is whether a judgment in a land acquisition case is a judgment as mentioned in Cl. 15 of the Letters Patent and the question in our judgment must be answered in the words used by Couch, C. J. in 8 Beng L R 433 (5) :

The judgment in Cl. 15 means a decision which affects the merits of the question between the parties, by determining some right or liability.

The definition of "judgment" in 8 Beng L R 433 (5), must be taken to have received the approval of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council by their decision in 10 I A 4 (6), which affirmed the decision of this Court in 6 Cal 594 (7), in which the definition of the word "judgment" contained in 8 Beng L R 433 (5) was adopted. A judgment in a land acquisition case is now under the Code of Civil Procedure, and appealable as such, and we do not see any reason to give a limited meaning of the word as used in the Letters Patent. The view taken by the Lahore High Court in 3 Lah 420 (8), was that the Land Acquisition Amendment Act (19 of 1921) did not in any way affect the right of appeal from the judgment of one Judge to a Division Bench under the Letters Patent; the scope of the amendment was to extend the right of appeal, and not to curtail any existing right. As it was pointed out by the learned Judges in the above case, S. 111, Civil P. C., prohibits an appeal to His Majesty in Council from the judgment of a single Judge of a High Court established by the Letters Patent, and the reason of the prohibition was that an appeal from such a judgment is provided for in the Letters Patent; that an aggrieved party should not be permitted to appeal to His Majesty in Council, but that he should not in the first instance appeal under the Letters Patent, to the other Judges of the High Court. As indicated above, the word "judgment" as used in S. 15 of the Letters Patent, must, in our judgment, be held to include all judgments affecting the merits of the question between parties before the Court, by determining some right or liability; and by the express provision contained in the Amending Act of 1921, a judgment includes a judgment in a land acquisition case. The appeals preferred by the Collector of Dacca in the case before us are competent.

On the merits of the appeals it must be stated at the outset that one of the learned Judges of this Court was of opinion that the decision of the Special Land Acquisition Judge valuing the lands acquired in the cases before us, at Rupees 1,150 per bigha, should be accepted. In the opinion of the other Judge, it would be amply generous to the landlords claim-

3. The Special Officer Salsette Building Sites v. Dosabhai, (1913) 20 I C 763=17 C W N 421 (P O).

4. Sand Bank Charity Trustees v. North Staffordshire Ry. Co., (1877) 3 Q B D 1.
Justices of the Peace for Calcutta v. The Oriental Gas Co., (1872) 8 Beng L R 433=17 W R 364.

6. Hurrish Chunder v. Kali Sundari, (1884) 9 Cal 482=10 I A 4 (P C).

7. Kally Sundari v. Hurrish Chunder, (1881) 6 Cal 594=7 C L R 543.

8. Har Dial Shaha v. Secy. of State, 1923 Lah 275=69 I C 428=3 Lah 420.

ants for compensation, if the market value of the lands was fixed at Rs. 960 per bigha. Regard being had to the position indicated above, the appellant before us cannot be allowed to challenge the valuation of the lands acquired at the rate of Rs. 960 per bigha. It must be conceded, as it has been conceded by the learned Senior Government Pleader that there was agreement as between the learned Judges of the Division Bench to this extent, that the Collector's valuation of the lands must be increased from Rs. 450 to Rs. 960 per bigha. The question arising for consideration in these appeals is whether on the materials on the record, any further increase in the valuation of lands as mentioned above, could be allowed. In our judgment, no such increase would be justifiable. In the first place there is no reason why the market value as indicated in the documents, Exs. A and B in the case of lands lying immediately to the north of the acquired lands, should be kept out of consideration and preference given to the value of lands deducible from the two other transactions evidenced by Exs. 1 and 2, and from an offer of a permanent lease of which the exact terms were not in evidence and relating to which there is no evidence other than the statement by a witness examined in Court, a transaction which admittedly was not complete even after more than a year after the date of the publication of the declaration for acquisition of lands. The transaction evidenced by Exs. 1 and 2 relates to a time more than a month after the publication of declaration under the Land Acquisition Act for the acquisition of lands in the case before us.

The law requires that the market value of lands acquired is to be determined as it was at the time of the publication of the notification under S. 4, Land Acquisition Act [S. 23 (1), Land Acquisition Act]; and in the case before us, there was no special reason for relying on transactions after the publication of the declaration for acquisition of lands, and giving them preference over Exs. A and B on which the Collector's valuation was based. It is however unnecessary to pursue the matter any further, as both the learned Judges constituting the Division Bench must be presumed to have relied upon the basis of valuation afforded by transactions to which reference has been made above, and the increase in valuation to the extent of Rs. 960 per bigha must be accepted by us, based presumably upon these transactions and the oral evidence in the cases before us. In accepting the figure Rs. 960 as we are bound to do, we desire to express our opinion, in the words used by Lord Hobhouse in 28 I A 121 (9), that both the learned Judges of this Court appear to have admitted into their minds those very considerations which the law directs to exclude, namely speculation on the value likely to be conferred on the lands taken for a particular project, by the completion of the project itself.

The position however must be recognized, as was pointed out by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in the case mentioned above, that in all valuation, judicial or otherwise, there must be room for inference and inclinations of opinion which being more or less conjectural, are difficult to reduce to exact reasoning or to explain to others; there is more than ordinary room for guess work; and it would be very unfair to require an exact exposition of reasons for the conclusions arrived at. On the materials before us, we fix the market value of the lands acquired in the cases before us, at the rate of Rs. 960 per bigha, as mentioned in the judgment of one of the learned Judges of this Court, as, in our opinion, no increase on that figure could be held to be justifiable. The valuation of Rs. 960 per bigha, as mentioned above, represents the value of the proprietor's interest in the lands acquired on the one hand, and that of the tenants on the lands on the other. The value of the lands being determined as a whole, the question of the apportionment of the compensation awarded had to be taken into consideration with reference to the interests of different degrees as amongst the claimants. The Collector's basis of calculation of the two different interests in the cases before us shows that the valuation of the tenants' share of the compensation money based on average price paid on lands in the immediate neighbourhood as represented by the transactions evidenced by Exs. A and B was Rs. 275 per bigha, out of the total valuation of about Rs. 450 per bigha as a whole, representing the value of the two different interests in the lands. The Special Land Acquisition Judge increased the valuation as a whole, from about Rs. 450 to Rs. 1,150 per bigha; and as the tenant has not applied for any reference under S. 18, Land Acquisition Act, against the valuation of the Collector, the landlords were held by the Judge to be entitled to get the full value of the land, less the value of the tenants' interest, namely Rs. 275 per bigha, i. e. Rs. 875 per bigha, as their share of the compensation money for the lands acquired.

9. Secy. of State for Foreign Affairs v. Charlesworth, Pilling and Co., (1901) 26 Bom 1=28 I A 121 (P O).

One of the learned Judges of this Court affirmed the decision of the learned Special Land Acquisition Judge mentioned above, while the other learned Judge of the Division Bench expressed the opinion that the view taken by the Judge in the Court below was not sound. In our judgment, the question arising for consideration on this part of the case must be decided in accordance with the rule laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 59 I A 155 (10), that where in proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act, the owner of the land has objected under S. 18 to the amount awarded, but has not objected to the apportionment between them, the owner is not entitled to an increased amount resulting from his objection less the compensation accepted by the tenants, but only to such proportion of the increased amount as accords with the apportionment awarded; the Government and not the owner is entitled to the benefit arising from the tenants having accepted compensation upon a lower value. The above rule is in consonance with what was held by the Judicial Committee in 51 All 765 (11). In the case before us, there was, in the words of Lord Russell of Killowen in 59 I A 155 (10) no foundation for the landlords' claim to be entitled to extra amount which the tenants might have received if they had not accepted the lower valuation and the landlords were therefore only entitled to their share of the compensation money, so much of the value of the lands acquired, as represents their interest in the same.

In the matter of determining the value of the two different interests, the landlords and the tenants, the position that the tenants on the lands acquired had right of occupancy in the same has to be taken into consideration.

There is no doubt that there is, and can be no rule of general application, applicable to apportionment between a landlord and a tenant with a permanent right of occupancy; and what is sometimes called a rough and ready method of settling the matter of apportionment has to be adopted. In view of all the circumstances that have to be taken into consideration in the matter of rights conferred with rights of occupancy, it is not, in our judgment, unreasonable to hold in the cases before us that the landlords claimants for compensation who applied for a reference under S. 18, Land Acquisition Act, for increased valuation, were entitled to get two-fifths of the value of the entire interest in the lands acquired, which is fixed at Rs. 960 per bigha. In the result, the appeals are allowed in the manner indicated above. The Collector's valuation of the lands acquired in the cases before us is increased to Rs. 960 per bigha, representing the valuation of the landlords' and tenants' interests in the same. The landlords claimants are held entitled to get two-fifths of the increased valuation of Rs. 960, the statutory compensation 15 per cent allowed by law being added to the same.

The appellant is entitled to get his costs in these appeals, and in the appeals heard by the Division Bench of this Court, as also in the reference cases before the Special Land Acquisition Judge, in proportion to his success.

R.W./R.K. Appeals allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 692

LORT-WILLIAMS AND CONLIFFE, JJ.

Rebati Mohan Bose—Petitioner.

v.

Chottal Chandra Sen—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 613 of 1935, Decided on 13th November 1935.

Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 133, 137 and 142 — Magistrate, in spite of making order under S. 142, is entitled to proceed with case and make final order under S. 137.

An order under S. 142 is intended to meet an immediate danger or injury and its object is to prevent that injury pending the determination of the case under S. 133 or S. 137. A Magistrate passing an order under S. 142 is not only not 10. Prag Narain v. Collector of Agra, 1932 P O 102=136 I O 449=59 I A 155=54 All 286 (P C).

11. Rohan Lal v. Collector of Etah, 1929 All 525=117 I O 612=51 All 765=1929 A L J 522.

precluded from making a final order under S. 137, but Ss. 133, 137 and 142 taken together clearly mean that the Magistrate, in spite of making an order under S. 142, is entitled to proceed with the case and make a final order under S. 137. [P 693 C 1, 2]

S. C. Taluqdar and Jatis Chandra Guha—for Petitioner.

Lort. Williams, J.—In this case, a rule was issued calling upon the District Magistrate and the opposite party to show cause why a certain order should not be set aside. It appears that an order was made under S. 133, Criminal P. C., directing the petitioner to remove certain obstruction in a Khal which was claimed to be a public Khal belonging to the Municipality. The petitioner proceeded under S. 135 and appeared in accordance with the order to show cause why the obstruction should not be removed. Subsequently and before hearing either the evidence or arguments, the Magistrate made an order under S. 142 and directed the petitioner immediately to remove the obstruction. Subsequently, he proceeded with the hearing and made a final order under S. 137 against the petitioner.

The petitioner's present contention and the contention which he made before the learned Sessions Judge at Chittagong, is that owing to the fact that the Magistrate made an order under S. 142 which was complied with, he was precluded from continuing with the case and from making a final order under S. 137. This contention is based upon the argument that an order under S. 137 can only be made, where there is an existing obstruction or nuisance and cannot be made in respect of some future nuisance. That contention, no doubt, is correct. But that is not what the Magistrate has done in this case. His order under S. 137 was not made in respect of some future nuisance. It was made in respect of the nuisance which existed when the proceedings under S. 133 commenced. S. 142 provides merely for issue of injunctions pending inquiry and the Magistrate made an order under this section to obviate or prevent imminent danger or injury pending the determination of the matter. It is clear that the section intends the order to meet an immediate danger or injury and its object is to prevent that injury pending the determination of the case under S. 133 or S. 137. In my opinion therefore the Magistrate not only is not precluded from making a final order under S. 137, but Ss. 133, 137 and 142 taken together clearly mean that the Magistrate in spite of making an order under S. 142 is intended to proceed with the case and make a final order under S. 137. For these reasons the rule is discharged.

Cunliffe, J.—I agree.

R.M./R.K.

Rule discharged.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 693

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Amitava Ghose—Appellant.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 371 of 1936, Decided on 29th July 1936.

Criminal Trial—Conspiracy case—Charge should not be introduced before proper appraisement of preliminary prosecution evidence has been adopted by prosecuting authorities.

It is waste of public time that charges of conspiracy, which always mean a long trial, however convenient the prosecution may think it to be to the success of its case, should be introduced when no sort of proper appraisement of the preliminary prosecution evidence has apparently been adopted by the prosecuting authorities before the case comes to its actual trial. [P 694 C 2]

In a case the accused was originally prosecuted for cheating and criminal breach of trust but subsequently the prosecution authorities to make themselves safe and to let in certain evidence, added the charge of conspiracy to the charges of cheating and criminal breach of trust. In addition to these charges 14 other charges were alleged. The trial Judge tried all these charges and without considering whether there was any real evidence in support of conspiracy convicted the accused of cheating and criminal breach of trust together with conspiracy:

Held: that the trial Judge ought to have insisted on the prosecuting authorities to produce evidence in support of the charge of conspiracy. The result, apart from multiplicity of charges, was that the accused was convicted of conspiracy without consideration of evidence and hence the case should be retried. [P 694 C 2]

D. N. Bhattacharjee and Santosh Kumar Basu—for Appellant.

Khundkar and Anil Chandra Roy—for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—The appellant Amitava Ghose, an undischarged insolvent, was tried before Mr. H. K. De, 4th Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta, on 14 charges comprising both cheating and criminal breach of trust as a banker, together with allegations of conspiracy in relation to these two types of charges with two named persons, one, Kalimuddin and the other Banerjee, with certain other unnamed conspirators. He was convicted and sentenced to four years' rigorous imprisonment in all, such sentence comprising separate convictions under both criminal breach of trust with conspiracy and cheating with conspiracy, the sentences to run concurrently. Now, the sole ground on which this appeal has been argued before us is a technical one. The learned Advocate for the appellant has confined himself to a criticism of the manner in which this man was tried in law. The complaint is that there was no evidence before the Court whatever to support the charges of conspiracy to which I have already referred. It appears that originally the appellant was not charged with conspiracy. He was prosecuted for criminal breach of trust as a banker only and it was not until the case apparently got into the hands of a pleader and as we are told, the Court Inspector, that these charges of conspiracy were superadded. There seems to be a kind of mania in the Province for introducing charges of conspiracy into criminal cases. It is, I suppose, based upon an idea at the back of the minds of those conducting the prosecution that by introducing the conspiracy element into a charge of crime, you thereby let in, to use a colloquialism, certain evidence which otherwise it might be difficult to bring before the Court.

This is a very peculiar case, because there is only one accused person and there is very little evidence that there was any intention to bring any other accused persons before the Court with any resolution. We have been told that one of the named conspirators was at one time the subject of a charge, but he was never charged, and he was not placed before the Magistrate in the capacity of an accused standing his trial. Why, indeed, in addition to the conspiracy charge, there were so many as 14 different charges alleged, it is also difficult to see, with no evidence worth the name of conspiracy—certainly no evidence which would interconnect these various offences of cheating and misappropriation. I suppose the prosecution also thought that they would be on the safe side by introducing these numerous charges. As a matter of fact, if we had been unable to accept the argument that the conspiracy charge was not supported by the evidence before the Court, we should have been faced with another argument based upon a misapplication or infringement of S. 234, Criminal P. C. That is the section which sets out an exception to the ordinary rule laid down in S. 233 which deals with separate charges and provides that in some cases not more than three charges might be lumped together in one prosecution. As I have already said, there are 14 here. I am surprised that the learned Magistrate should not have appreciated firstly that there was no real evidence of conspiracy, and secondly that there was an illegal multiplicity of charges against the accused in the trial Court. He has convicted the appellant upon the conspiracy basis, and when we find that that was done without any evidence, it is our bounden duty to set aside the convictions and sentences.

In this particular case we shall order a new trial. But I should like to say that it is a sickening waste of public time that charges of conspiracy which always mean a long trial, however convenient the prosecution may think it is to the success of their case, should be introduced when no sort of proper appraisal of the preliminary prosecution evidence has apparently been adopted by the prosecuting authorities before the case comes to its actual trial. There is no blame attached here to the police authorities, as I have endeavoured to show; but there does lie a blame somewhere that we should have to set aside this case which ought by now to have been disposed of. It is, without expressing an opinion about it, a very serious case indeed from the prosecution's point of view of swindling, and we are now forced to start all over again. The order of the Court is that the convictions and sentences are set aside and there will be a new trial before the Additional Chief Presidency Magistrate.

Henderson, J.—I agree. It should be obvious to anybody that the police officers who sent up this case were alive to the realities of it. In my opinion, it is deplorable that the learned Magistrate did not put a stop to the transparent manoeuvre made by the gentleman in charge of the actual prosecution with the object of evading the provisions of the law with regard to a joint trial. It should have struck him as strange that when it was never suggested that anybody but the appellant was responsible for these offences, he should possibly have been charged with conspiracy. If he thought that the officers in charge of the prosecution before him had received subsequent information which would justify him in making an entirely new case, he should have, at any rate, insisted upon their producing evidence in support of it. He says not a word in his judgment to show in what way the appellant conspired with Kalimuddin, Banerjea and other unknown persons. The simple explanation of this is that there was no evidence that he conspired with any of them. The witnesses who referred to Kalimuddin are P. W. 24, P. W. 25, P. W. 26 and P. W. 30. There is nothing in any of their depositions to suggest that he had anything to do with the swindling of the appellant. The case with regard to Banerjea is even more ridiculous. This is to be found in the deposition of P. W. 14. All the evidence amounts to, if true, is this: that the witness had been caught by an advertisement issued by Banerjea and that the appellant successfully took him away from Banerjea and persuaded him to make the money over to him. It should have been transparent to the learned Magistrate that there is nothing here to support the imaginary charge of conspiracy.

One unfortunate result was that the learned Magistrate's mind was entirely diverted from his real duty which was to decide whether certain specific charges had been established. He was so busy with this imaginary conspiracy that he does not say a single word in his judgment which would enlighten us as to the way in which he thinks that the specific charges were established. I entirely agree with my learned brother as to what the result of the manoeuvre is. But the whole trial has been rendered abortive and the only course open to us, however harassing it may be to both parties and the witnesses, is to order a re-trial and we sincerely trust that we shall not have any other cases of this sort.

D.S./R.K.

*Retrial ordered.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 695

EDGLEY, J.

Sudhansu Sekhor Banerjee—Defendant
—Appellant.

v.

Rai Kiron Chandra Roy Bahadur and others—Respondents.Appeals Nos. 167, 168, 169 and 170 of 1935, Decided on 9th June 1936.(a) Bengal Cess Act (9 of 1880), Preamble —Cess must be paid whether property is rent free or not.According to the general scheme of the Cess Act, subject to certain statutory exceptions, cess must be paid on all immovable property situate within any district whether rent is paid in respect of such immovable property or such property is rent free. P 696 C 1 Bengal Cess Act (9 of 1880), Ss. 16 and 14
—Act is taxing Act to be strictly construed —Form of return—Annual value of land must be included in return.The annual value of the land is one of the most important details required to be furnished in the returns under S. 16 read with S. 14 in the prescribed form as it is upon the basis of these returns that the valuation roll is prepared by the Collector under S. 34. The Cess Act is a taxing statute and should therefore be strictly construed. P 697 C 2 Bengal Cess Act (9 of 1880), S. 66—Rent free lands omitted from landlord's return—Valuation under S. 21—Notice under S. 66 must be given—Procedure in Ch. 4 should be followed before proceeding under Ch. 2.The general scheme of the Cess Act demands that as regards rent free lands, the special conditions prescribed by Ch. 4 should be observed before the procedure laid down in Ch. 2 can be brought into operation and, in this view, the issue of a notice under S. 66 is a condition precedent to the valuation under S. 21 of rent free lands which had been omitted from the landlord's cess returns. P 698 C 1 Bengal Cess Act (9 of 1880), Ss. 16, 14 —Liability of holders of rent free land to pay cess—There must be inclusion of those lands in landlord's return.The inclusion of the rent free land in the landlord's return under Ss. 14 and 16 of the Act is a condition precedent to any liability which is imposed upon the holder of rent free land to pay cess in respect thereof. [P 698 C 1]Prakash Chandra Pakrasi and Susil Ranjan Ghose—for Appellant.Hemendra Chandra Sen and Surendra Nath Basu (Sr.)—for Respondents.

Judgment.—These appeals arise with reference to certain suits brought by the plaintiffs for the recovery of cess from the defendant. Both the Courts below held that the defendant was liable in respect of the major part of the cess which had been claimed. The facts of the case appear to be briefly as follows: The lands in respect of which cess has been claimed by the plaintiffs are admittedly nishkar or rent free lands. Notices were issued in due course under Ss. 14 and 16, Cess Act (Bengal Act 9 of 1880). After the issue of the notices under S. 16 of the Act, the landlords did not submit returns in the form prescribed in Sch. A to the Act, but, instead of doing so, sent some petitions to the Collector, in which they referred to the entries contained in the record of rights and suggested that the valuation for the purposes of the Cess Act should be made in accordance with those entries. The Collector thereupon proceeded to make a summary valuation of the rent free land under Ss. 21 and 28, Cess Act. Subsequently the valuation roll was duly published and notices were duly issued under Ss. 52 and 54 of the Act. It is admitted that the landlords have actually paid to the Collector the cess for which they are liable and they now seek to recover from the holders of the rent free lands that portion of the cess which according to their allegation, is payable to them under S. 56 of the Act. The main point which has been urged by the learned Advocate for the appellant in this case is that the landlords are not entitled to recover any cess from the holders of rent free lands, because the nishkardars' liability to pay cess to them depends upon the observance by the landlords of the procedure prescribed in Ch. 4, Cess Act, and, as this procedure has not been observed, they are under no liability whatsoever in respect of the cess which has been claimed.

According to the general scheme of the Cess Act, subject to certain statutory exceptions, cess must be paid on all immovable property situate within any district, whether rent is paid in respect of such immovable property or such property is rent free. Ch. 2, Cess Act, lays down the procedure to be observed generally in connection with the valuation of lands for the purposes of the Cess Act, and, under S. 16 of the Act read with S. 14, certain returns have to be submitted to the Collector by the holders of estates or tenures the gross annual rental of which exceeds one hundred rupees in the form prescribed in Sch. A to the Act. The Act further lays down that, if no return is lodged in accordance with the requirements of S. 16, the Collector may proceed to make a summary valuation under S. 21. Further, under S. 28 the Collector has summary powers of valuation in connection with small estates, but it appears that, in the present case, this section has no application as the gross rental of the estate with which we are concerned exceeds Rs. 100. S. 34 of the Act provides that:

Whenever any valuation or revaluation is made under this Part, the Collector shall cause to be prepared from the returns furnished to him and from the valuation made by him in accordance with this Act a valuation roll of each estate.

And there follow certain provisions with regard to the publication of the valuation roll. Ch. 3 contains certain provisions with regard to the mode of the amount of cess which has been assessed under the valuation roll. In the cases out of which these appeals arise the valuation of the lands in suit purports to have been made under Ss. 21 and 28 of the Act although, as pointed out above, S. 28 is not applicable in view of the circumstances of the cases out of which these appeals arise. It is, however, contended by the learned Advocate for the appellant that even if it be admitted that any valuation was made by the Collector under S. 21 of the Act such valuation alone cannot be held to impose any liability on the defendant as regards the payment of cess because, when it is a question of valuing and assessing rent-free land, the procedure laid down under Ch. 4 of the Act must be followed, and the procedure prescribed by that Chapter is exhaustive as regards the valuation and assessment of rent free land.

Chapter 4 is headed: "Valuation and Assessment of Lands held rent free and Payment and Recovery of Cess in respect thereof." It is then provided under Ss. 50 and 51, that in submitting their returns in the form prescribed in Sch. A, holders of estates or tenures must include all rent free lands contained within the boundaries of their estates or tenures in the returns relating to those estates or tenures as the case may be. It is then laid down that the holder of an estate or tenure shall be bound to pay road cess and public works cess on the annual value of such lands at one half of the rates fixed under this Act for the levy of such cesses respectively in the district generally for the year.

It would therefore appear to have been the intention of the legislature that ordinarily cess due from rent free lands should be collected through the agency of the holders of estates or tenures within which such lands are situate and, provided such land had been included in their returns, they would then be entitled to realize cess from the owners of the rent free lands concerned under Ss. 56 and 58 of the Act. It was however necessary to provide that rent free lands which had been omitted from the landlords' returns should not escape liability to pay cess. It is therefore laid down in S. 66, Ch. 4, that:

Notwithstanding anything in this Chapter contained, the Collector may at any time cause a notice as mentioned in S. 16 to be served on the holder of any rent free land which he shall consider not to have been entered in the return of any estate or tenure in which such land ought to have been included under the provisions of S. 51.

This section goes on to state:

And on service of such notice, the provisions of this Chapter shall no longer apply to such lands; but the same consequences shall ensue and the same liabilities shall attach to the holder of such land as would have ensued and would have attached if such lands had constituted a revenue free estate.

In this connexion therefore it is to be noted that, after service of a notice under S. 66, one of the consequences would be that, if no cess return were lodged by the nishkardar, the Collector would be empowered to value rent free lands summarily in accordance with procedure laid down in S. 21 of the Act, and further, a valuation roll of such lands would be prepared and published in the manner provided by S. 34 and the following sections of the Act. In S. 70 provision is made for the liabilities of holders of rent free lands after the issue of notices under S. 66 and it is further provided in S. 71 that:

No owner or holder of rent free land on whom a notice has been served by the Collector under S. 66 or in respect of whose land an order has been made by the Collector under S. 68, shall be liable to have the land to which such notice or order refers included in any return of an estate of tenure, or to pay any amount as road cess or public works cess otherwise than to the Collector or to some person appointed by him in that behalf.

It follows from what I have already stated that, if Ch. 4 of the Act cannot be exactly described as containing a Code of exhaustive procedure relating to the valuation and assessment of rent free lands for the purposes of the Cess Act, it nevertheless prescribes certain essential conditions which must be observed as regards such lands before the general procedure prescribed in Chs. 2 and 3 can be brought into operation with reference thereto. In particular the provisions of Ch. 4 indicate that the valuation roll which is published by the Collector under S. 52 can only be prepared under S. 34 as regards rent free lands which such lands have been included in the landlords' cess returns, that, unless they have been so included the owner or holder of rent free land is not bound to pay cess to the holder of the estate or tenure: see S. 56 and, if the Collector wishes to realize cess from rent free lands omitted from the returns and value such lands under the provisions of Ch. 2, he should issue a notice under S. 66.

It is however argued by the learned advocate for the respondents that the petitions Exs. 23-A to 23-E should be regarded as valid returns under S. 14 read with S. 16, Cess Act. I am not prepared however to hold that these petitions can possibly be regarded as return as required by the law. They merely refer to certain particulars contained in the record of rights and suggest that the assessment should be made on the basis of these particulars. Admittedly they are not in the form required by Sch. A to the Act and, in any event, they furnish no particulars relating to the annual value of the land. This is one of the most important details required to be furnished in the returns in the prescribed form as it is upon the basis of these returns that the valuation roll is prepared by the Collector under S. 34. The Cess Act is a taxing statute and should therefore be strictly construed and, this being the case, I must hold that in no event, can the petitions Exs. 23-A to 23-E be regarded as returns under S. 16 read with S. 14 of the Act. It is said that the Collector treated these petitions as returns for the purposes of the Act. In that case it is curious that he should have proceeded to ascertain the annual value of the nishkar lands partly, at any rate, under S. 21 of the Act which can only be brought into operation, if no return has been made. It is however clear that, in view of the mandatory requirements of the Act as to the form of the returns and the particulars that they should contain, the Collector had no jurisdiction to treat these petitions as valid cess returns under Ss. 14 and 16 of the Act.

It is then urged on behalf of the respondents that the Collector was competent to ascertain the annual value of the rent free lands under S. 21 even without issuing a notice under S. 66 of the Act. This part of the argument of the learned advocate assumes that no return was actually made, and it is therefore somewhat inconsistent with his contention to the effect that the petitions Exs. 23-A to 23-E should be deemed to be valid returns. I have already indicated that in my view the general scheme of the Act demands that as regards rent free lands, the special conditions prescribed by Ch. 4 should be observed before the procedure laid down in Ch. 2 can be brought into operation and, in this view of the case, the issue of a notice under S. 66 would be a condition precedent to the valuation under S. 21 of rent free lands which had been omitted from the landlord's cess returns. If however it be assumed that the Collector was competent to make the valuation under S. 21 without issuing a notice under S. 66 such valuation would not enable the landlords to realize cess from the defendants in view of my finding that the rent free lands had not been included in their cess return. If such valuation were intended as a preliminary step to enable the landlord to collect cess in respect of rent free lands it would be merely a work of supererogation on the part of the Collector. It would not give him jurisdiction to issue the notice required by S. 52 nor would it render the nishkardar liable to pay cess to the landlord under S. 56 as these sections expressly require that the rent free lands should have been included in the landlord's cess returns. It would appear therefore that the inclusion of the rent free land in the landlord's return under Ss. 14 and 16 of the Act is a condition precedent to any liability which is imposed upon the holder of rent free land to pay cess in respect thereof.

In the case out of which these appeals arise I have already said that the petitions Exs. 23-A to 23-E cannot be regarded as returns which comply with the requirements of the Cess Act. This being the case, as the landlords must be deemed to have failed to include the nishkar lands in suit in their returns in the form in Sch. A as required by S. 51 of the Act, the defendant does not appear to be under any liability to pay cess to the landlords. In this view of the case these appeals must be allowed with costs throughout. The judgments and decrees of the lower appellate Courts are set aside and the plaintiffs' suit will stand dismissed. Permission to file an appeal under S. 15, Letters Patent, is granted.

B.D./R.K. G. N. Appellate allowed.

Advocate High Court

Jammu & Kashmir

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 698

MUKERJI, AG. C. J. AND
S. K. GHOSE, J.

Jonab Ali Khan and another—Defendants 2 and 3—Appellants.

v.

Satis Chandra Ray — Plaintiff and others—Respondents

Appeal No. 201 of 1932, Decided on 26th November 1935, from original decree of Sub-Judge, Bankura, D/- 9th May 1932.

(a) Mortgage—Mortgagor dead at date of final decree and no substitution of heirs—Final decree is nullity.

Where the final decree on the mortgage is passed at a date when the mortgagor was dead without any substitution made of his heir in his place, the final decree is a nullity. [P 699 C 2]

(b) Minor—Court guardian unable to get instructions to defend suit—Not contesting suit is not wrongful.

If after taking steps, the Court guardian is unable to get any instructions to defend the suit it is not at all wrong on his part not to contest it. [P 700 C 1]

(c) Mortgage—Separate and distinct suits on successive mortgages to same person of same property —Whether maintainable.

It is highly debatable whether separate and distinct suits for successive mortgages to same person on the same properties can be held to be not maintainable: 1921 Cal 321, Ref. [But see S. 67-A, T. P. Act.] [P 700 C 1]

Hiralal Chakravarty, Shyama Das Bhattacharji and Rabindra Nath Bhattacharjee—for Appellants.

Bijan Kumar Mukherji and Santosh Kumar Ghosal—for Respondents.

Judgment.—One Nadiar Chand Roy was the owner of six properties which are plots Nos. 1 to 6 of schedule to the plaint. He mortgaged plots Nos. 1 to 4 to one Upendra Dutt in 1904 and again in 1906, and in 1913 he made a gift of the said properties in favour of one Chintamani Roy. Upendra Dutt obtained a preliminary decree on the basis of the first mortgage against Chintamani and others; and thereafter on 15th November 1920 he also obtained a final decree against them; but in the meantime on 23rd September 1919 which was a date after the preliminary decree and before the final decree, Chintamani had died leaving his widow Nanibala and a minor son namely the plaintiff. On the second mortgage Upendra Dutt instituted a suit after Chintamani's death against the plaintiff and some other persons, impleading the plaintiff as a minor represented by his mother as his guardian. The mother did not appear in the suit and on that one Munshi Obeidur Rahim, a pleader of the Court was appointed Court guardian for the said minor. In April 1920 a preliminary decree was passed in the said suit, and thereafter in November 1920 a final decree was also passed therein. In pursuance of this final decree the mortgaged properties were put up to sale. Upendra purchased the said properties for Rs. 1,600 and having got his decree on the second mortgage satisfied attached the surplus sale-proceeds and credited the same in part satisfaction of his decree on the first mortgage. On 2nd March 1925 Upendra sold the properties to Jonab Ali Khan who made the purchase for himself and his brother Rayen Khan for Rs. 2,200. The plaintiff as a minor represented by his maternal uncle Behari Roy as his next friend, then commenced this suit on 27th July 1928.

He applied for permission to sue in forma pauperis but the application was disallowed. Court-fees were then paid on the plaint and the suit thereafter proceeded in the ordinary way. Of the six items of properties which were included in the plaintiff's claim in this suit, two namely plots Nos. 5 and 6 need no longer be considered because the Judge has held that the plaintiff had no cause of action as regards them and this conclusion has not been challenged before us. As regards the other four items, namely plots Nos. 1 to 4, put quite shortly the plaintiff claimed to recover possession of the properties on a declaration of his title thereto. The decrees and the sale by which he purported to have lost his title to the properties were attached under the following broad heads: (1) That the final decree on the first mortgage was a nullity as it had been passed with Chintamani as a party when he was dead; (2) that the decrees on the second mortgage were nullities inasmuch as the Court guardian was appointed in direct contravention of O. 32, R. 3 (4) of the Code no notice having been served on the minor or on his mother with whom as his guardian he had been impleaded in the suit, or on his maternal uncle Behari Lal Roy through whom as his next friend the present suit has been instituted and who was really his natural guardian and with whom he was living at that time; (3) that the Court guardian did not communicate with the minor's mother or maternal uncle and neglected his duties as such by not entering any defence when as a matter of fact several substantial defences were open; (4) that the proceedings held in pursuance of the decree which culminated in the sale were vitiated by fraud, illegalities and material irregularities. The contesting defendant was defendant 2 who averred that there was no fraud, that every thing was legally done and all the proceedings were regularly taken and that the minor's maternal uncle with whom it is alleged that the minor was living at the relevant period, had full knowledge, at the time, of all that was happening about the suits and the other proceedings.

The Subordinate Judge having decreed the suit, defendants 2 and 3 have preferred this appeal. It would be convenient to deal with the case under the four items of objection noted above on which the plaintiff rested his claim.

1. It is conceded on behalf of the appellant that the final decree on first mortgage was passed at a date when Chintamani was dead and without any substitution made of his heir in his place. That decree therefore was a nullity.

2. In the plaint in the suit on the second mortgage Chintamani, as the original defendant 1 was described as resident of Bhaluka. On his death on 23rd September 1919, his name was struck out and the following endorsement was made in the place: "Defendant 1 having died his heir son No. 1 Satis Chandra Roy, minor through his guardian his mother, Nani Mayrani, is made a party." (After examining the evidence his lordship proceeded.) The plaintiff's contention was that O. 32, R. 3 (4), Civil P. C., has been contravened and that contention had two branches: 1st that Nanibala was not the natural guardian but Behari Roy was; and 2nd that there was no service at Bhaluka as was alleged. That contention in our opinion, has failed in both its branches. The learned Judge has recorded as his conclusion that Upendra Dutt, in order to avoid the difficulties which would be raised if the suit was defended, intentionally gave a wrong address of the minor and caused a false return to be submitted by the peon. We are unable to hold that any such conclusion is justified.

3. As regards neglect on the part of the Court guardian to obtain instructions, the materials, such as there are on the record and such as we have already referred to lead us to a very different conclusion from what the learned Judge has arrived at. We think the Court guardian's evidence, supported as it is by the contemporaneous statements made by him as contained in the two petitions to which we have already referred, must be accepted as true. The report no doubt is missing, but if either of the two parties are at all responsible therefor, no suspicion certainly can fall on the defendants; for it is obvious that the report must have been in consonance with what was stated in the petitions. If after taking the steps which the Court guardian alleged he took he was unable to get any instructions to defend the suit, it was not at all wrong on his part not to contest it. The substantial defences that are said to have been open to the minor to take are three: 1st that nothing was due to the mortgagee upon any of the two mortgages; 2nd that the stipulation to pay interest on the second mortgage was penal; and 3rd that separate and distinct suits for successive mortgages on the same properties were not maintainable. As regards the first of these defences, even now there is nothing reliable on which such a defence can be said to be true.

On the second point it may be pointed out that the rates of interest was 16½ per cent per annum compound with yearly rest. As regards the third ground, it would be sufficient to say that it is highly debatable whether in any Court subordinate to the Calcutta High Court such a suit could be held to be not maintainable in view of the decision in 33 C L J 232 (1) to which the learned Judge has himself referred in his judgment. Moreover, we have perused the judgment in the suit on the second mortgage which apparently the learned Judge has not read. It appears defendant 2 in the suit, who was a puisne incumbrancer, contested the mortgagee's claim on all possible grounds and that at his instance various issues were framed: question of execution and attestation of the mortgage bond; question of consideration; question of interest; question of maintainability of the suit, etc. And it appears also that after evidence of several witnesses was recorded on behalf of the mortgagee all the issues were specifically and elaborately considered.

1. Nilu v. Asirbad Mandal, 1921 Cal 321=60
I O 809=25 C W N 129=33 C L J 232.

4. There is no substance in this ground and the plaintiff's claim has not been pressed before us on its basis. In our opinion, therefore, the view which the learned Judge has taken of the second mortgage decree and the sale cannot be supported. The result is that this appeal should be allowed, and the decree of the Court below should be modified. The plaintiff should get a declaration that the decree in the suit on the first mortgage is void, and will be entitled to recover from defendant 1 the surplus sale proceeds, namely Rs. 90-15-9 (which was appropriated by the mortgagee against that decree) with interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum from the date of the sale namely 15th July 1921, until realisation. Defendant 2 who was the contesting defendant in the Court below will be entitled to his costs in that Court from the plaintiff; and in this Court the appellants (i. e. defendants 2 and 3) will get their costs from the plaintiff, but the plaintiff will get his costs of the appeal from defendant 1, hearing fee being assessed at 5 gold mohurs.

A.L./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 700

JACK, J.

Uddab Nath—Defendant 1 and others
—Appellants.

v.

Gokul Chandra Deb Nath and others
—Respondents.

Appeal No. 436 of 1932, Decided on 21st November 1935, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, Second Court, Sylhet, D/- 15th July 1931.

Registration Act (1908), S. 17—Butwara Chitta—Mere list of shares—Registration not necessary for admissibility.

A Butwara Chitta is a mere list of the shares which each of the parties has in the property concerned and which is signed by the parties but it is not in itself a deed of partition but is merely a note upon which the parties have to proceed at the partition. As such it does not require registration for being admissible in evidence. [P 701 C 1, 2]

Priya Nath Dutta—for Appellants.

Paresh Lal Shome—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal has arisen out of a suit for declaration of the plaintiffs' 3 annas and 3 pies maliki right in the land described in the plaint, and for recovery of joint khas possession in the trial Court the plaintiffs' title to 1½ pies share in the holding was declared. In the lower appellate Court, in addition to the $1\frac{1}{2}$ pies share awarded by the trial Court the plaintiffs were declared to be entitled to another 1 anna 2 pies share in the property in suit, as being the share originally held by Moiram Chand Banu, the predecessor of the plaintiffs. This appeal is with regard to 1 anna 2 pies share. The plaintiffs are claiming by purchase from defendants 14 and 15. These defendants purchased the share which they held in a revenue paying estate. The whole question is whether their predecessor had the share which they purported to have sold to the plaintiffs. This again depends upon the question whether Moiram Banu had inherited this share of 1 anna 2 pies. The defendants claim that there was a partition and that Moiram gave up her claim to a share in the property in suit and that she got in exchange some other specified land and that, thereafter she has no share in the land of this estate. The trial Court decided in favour of the defendants that there had been a partition and that Moiram gave up her share in the land in suit in exchange of other specified lands. The learned Judge in the Court of appeal below, on the other hand, held that the partition paper or Saham list or Butwara Chitta was signed by the father of defendants 5 and 6, defendant 8, father of defendant 7, mother of defendants 9 and 10, defendants 9 and 10 and defendant 12, and that that being an unregistered deed of family partition is inadmissible in evidence under Ss. 17 and 19, Registration Act, and that the document could not be used in evidence against the plaintiffs.

For the appellants it has been urged that the Court of appeal below ought to have held that Ex. B was a Butwara Chitta and that it having been duly proved was admissible in evidence to show that there was a partition; and it was further urged that the Court of appeal below ought to have held that the fact of partition could be proved even by oral evidence although Ex. B was inadmissible for want of registration. In fact, on considering the document Ex. B it appears that the learned Judge could not himself decide whether he should describe it as a partition paper or Saham list or Butwara Chitta. It appears to be a list for giving shares to various parties after the partition of the suit lands. It does not appear to be a regular deed of partition. As I have said, it was simply a list for giving shares. It does not mention under what circumstances Moiram had been excluded from the list and that again shows that it was not a regular deed of partition. I am therefore inclined to think that this list did not require registration. But apart from that the other contention of the appellant must prevail. There was ample evidence which was relied on by the trial Court but was not considered by the Court of appeal below which shows that in fact there was a partition between the heirs of Watir, the original holder of the estate. P. W. 2, brother of Watir, is an old man of 77. He says that there was a partition between the said heirs. He also admits that the husband of Moiram Banu was present at the time of the partition. D. W. 2 states that he asked at the time why Moiram's name was left out and that her husband said that she had got some specified lands in her share. There was another circumstance going to show that the whole of the original property held by the heirs of Watir was purchased by defendant 1 by two kobalas—8 anna share by each kobala making up the 16 anna share of the whole property. There is no reason whatever to disbelieve P. W. 2 who states that there was in fact a partition between the heirs of Watir or D. W. 2 who stated that when he asked the husband of Moiram Banu why her name was left out from the list which was a memorandum of shares to be given to the parties at the partition, her husband said that she had got some specified lands in her share. This portion of the evidence was not discussed at all in the lower appellate Court. The only portion of the evidence that was considered in the lower appellate Court appears to be Ex. C which was filed by the defendants in order to show that in lieu of the shares in this property defendants 14 and 15 got the whole of another piece of land. The learned Judge finds that this evidence was not sufficient to destroy the title of the plaintiffs' vendors; he says that there was no other documentary evidence in the case. But he has failed to consider the oral evidence referred to by the trial Court. I have been referred to the case in 37 C W N 112 (1), in which it was decided that where on a partition of certain bonds having been effected a list of bonds allotted to each of the parties was prepared and the list was signed by the parties that the list was not an instrument of partition which required registration. Similarly, in the present case, the list of the shares which each of the parties had in the property concerned, and which was signed by the parties, is not in itself a deed of partition but merely a note on which the parties had to proceed at the partition. That there was unquestionably a partition seems also clear from the finding of the trial Court that the plaintiffs had purchased $1\frac{1}{2}$ pies share in the property from defendants 14 and 15, that the plaintiffs could not remember the price they paid and that only Rs. 10 was paid in cash and the rest of the consideration of Rs. 50 was contained in a bond for Rs. 40 executed by them.

1. Kshetro Mohan Pal v. Tufani Talukdar, 1933 Cal 474=144 I O 868=37 C W N 112.

On these grounds I think that the decree of the lower appellate Court should be set aside and that the decree of the trial Court should be restored and that the plaintiffs' claim to 1 anna 6 pies share in the property in suit cannot be allowed. As regards the $1\frac{1}{2}$ pies share which Abdul Bari, husband of Moiram Banu, had inherited from Golam Hossein's widow and which was again inherited by the plaintiff's vendors from Abdul Bari, the plaintiffs claimed only $\frac{7}{8}$ pie share but the trial Court gave them a decree for $1\frac{1}{2}$ pies share. But as there was no cross-appeal by the defendants against the decree of the trial Court, the plaintiff should be given a decree for the whole of $1\frac{1}{2}$ pies share. The result is that this appeal is allowed and the decree of the trial Court is restored with costs in this appeal and proportionate costs in the Courts below.

B.D./R.K.

*Appeal allowed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 702

NASIM ALI, J.

Jagat Kishore Acharya Choudhury—Plaintiff—Petitioner.

v.

Badan Mandal and others—Defendants
—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 650 of 1936, Decided on 28th July 1936, from order of 2nd Court, Munsif, Mymensingh, D/- 6th May 1936.

Bengal Tenancy Act (1885), S. 148 (b)— Natural guardian of minor is person entitled to custody of minor under minor's personal law in absence of testamentary or appointed guardian.

The mere fact that an infant is in the care of a person does not make that person the natural guardian of the person of the infant. S. 148 (b) contemplates guardians who are entitled to the custody of the infant under the personal law by which the infant is governed, in the absence of a testamentary guardian or a guardian appointed. An elder brother was entitled to the custody of the minor under the Muslim law. He did not appear and object to be appointed guardian of the minor when served with a notice under S. 148 (b):

Held: that he must be deemed to be duly appointed guardian of the minor for the suit: Remington v. Holby, (1880) 14 Ch 630, Rel. on.

[P 703 C 1]

Jatindra Nath Sanyal and Tarapada Mukherjee—for Petitioner.

A. Quasem—for Deputy Registrar.

Order.—This rule is directed against an order of the Second Sadar Munsif, Mymensingh, dated 6th May 1936, in rent Suit No. 34 of 1936 now pending before him. The petitioner is the plaintiff in that suit. He applied to the learned Munsif under S. 148 (b), Ben. Ten. Act, to serve on defendant 1 the elder brother of minor defendant 6, a notice informing him that he will be treated as the guardian of the minor defendant in respect of the suit. That prayer was allowed and the notice was served. He, however, did not appear and object to his being treated as guardian for the suit within the time prescribed by that section. On 21st April 1936, the learned Munsif directed the petitioner to deposit requisite fees for the appointment of a Court guardian. The petitioner thereafter prayed for reconsideration of that order on the ground that defendant 1 who was the natural guardian of defendant 6 did not object to his being appointed guardian and consequently must be deemed to be the duly appointed guardian of the minor defendant under the provisions of S. 148 (b), Ben. Ten. Act. The learned Munsif however rejected his prayer on 6th May 1936, on the ground that defendant 1 was not the "natural guardian of the minor" within the meaning of S. 148 (b) of the Act. The petitioner thereupon obtained this rule.

The expression "natural guardian" has not been defined in the Bengal Tenancy Act or in the Civil Procedure Code. The word "guardian" standing alone generally means guardian of the person. "Guar.

dian of an infant means guardian of the person" per Jessel M. R. in 14 Ch D 630 (1) at p. 632. A "natural guardian" therefore is a natural guardian of the person of the infant. A person is a natural guardian when he is neither the testamentary guardian nor a guardian appointed. The mere fact that an infant is in the care of a person does not make that person the natural guardian of the person of the infant. The section contemplates guardians who are entitled to the custody of the infant under the personal law by which the infant is governed, in the absence of a testamentary guardian or a guardian appointed. It is not disputed that defendant 1 is now entitled to the custody of defendant 6 under the Muslim law. He did not appear and object to be appointed guardian of defendant 6 for the suit. He must therefore be deemed to be the duly appointed guardian of defendant 6 for the purposes of the rent suit. The learned Munsif was therefore wrong in directing the petitioner to deposit fees for the appointment of a Court guardian.

The result therefore is that this rule is made absolute. The orders of the Munsif directing the petitioner to deposit fees for the appointment of a Court guardian are set aside. Defendant 1 must be deemed to be the duly appointed guardian of defendant 6 for the purposes of the suit. There will be no order for costs in the rule.

D.S./R.K. Rule made absolute.

1. Remington v. Holby, (1880) 14 Ch D 630.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 703

MCNAIR, J.

Sagoremull Khaitan—Applicant.

v.

Gajadhar Mansinghka and others—Opposite Parties.

O. O. C. J. Suit No. 309 of 1933, Decided on 18th November 1935.

Execution Sale—Condition of sale requiring purchaser to assume certain facts owing to inability of vendor to obtain necessary title deeds or documents—Condition is neither misleading nor does it amount to misstatement.

A condition of sale requiring the purchaser to assume certain facts, specifically added owing to the inability of the vendor to obtain particular title deeds or documents, is not misleading if the vendor believes the facts to be true, even though the condition is intended to cover a flaw which goes to the root of the title. Consequently, where the conditions of sale settled under R. 15 are in the form set out in rules and orders so far as condition 14, and a condition 15 is specifically added to the effect that the purchaser shall accept the recitals in the abstract of title, owing to the inability of the decree-holder to obtain the necessary title deeds and documents, and the formalities of Rr. 15 and 20, Ch. 27, of the Calcutta High Court Original Side Rules, are complied with, and the purchaser signs the bidding paper and purchases the property, he cannot subsequently be allowed to impeach the sale on the ground of want of defect in title: In re Evans and Bettell's Contract, (1910) 2 Ch 438, Disting.; In re Sandbach and Edmondson's Contract, (1891) 1 Ch 99 and Blairberg v. Keeves, (1906) 2 Ch 175, Ref. [P 705 C 2]

Sarat C. Bose and H. N. Sanyal—for Applicant.

Sudhis C. Ray and J. N. Majumdar—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—This is an application on the part of the purchaser of premises No 1, Jugmohan Mullick Street, for an order that the sale held by the Registrar on 26th July 1935 be set aside and the money paid by the applicant refunded. There is an alternative prayer that a reference be directed to the Registrar to enquire and report on the title of the premises. On behalf of the respondent to this motion Mr. Mazumdar has stated that he is agreeable to an enquiry as to title, but the applicant preferred to proceed with his application to set aside the sale. The sale was held pursuant to a final mortgage decree, and the petitioner was declared the highest bidder and purchaser for a sum of Rs. 34,500. The petitioner paid the sum of Rs. 8,625 to the Registrar being twenty-five per cent of the purchase money. The petitioner contends that the vendor was unable to give him a good title, and he seeks to have the sale set aside. It appears that the property was purchased in 1887 by one Hanuman Das, a Hindu governed by the Mitakshara School of law. By his will, dated 20th October 1901, Hanuman Das directed that his charities at Nawalgarh and Barua should for ever be continued and the expenses thereof met out of the income of his estate and should form a charge on his estate. The expenses at Barua were stated to be Rs. 750 yearly. The expenses at Nawalgarh were Rs. 400 yearly.

On 18th February 1916 the executors of Hanuman's will conveyed the estate including the property No. 1, Jugmohan Mullick, Street to Gajadhar, the defendant in this suit, subject to the charge of

Rs. 750 yearly for the carrying out of the religious trust to which I have referred. On 7th September 1917 Gajadhar purported to release the property from the charge, and created a charge for the payment of that sum of Rs. 750 on certain other properties at Siliguri. On 13th March 1931 Gajadhar mortgaged No. 1, Jugmohan Mullick Street, in favour of the plaintiff who instituted this suit on his mortgage on 9th February 1933. There was the usual final decree and the sale by the Registrar took place on 25th July 1935. In support of the application Mr. Bose for the petitioner complains that neither the will nor the probate, which, he says, are two of the most material documents, was abstracted. It is true that this was not done, but in the affidavit on behalf of the plaintiff Seary Lal explains that neither the will nor the probate was in the plaintiff's possession, and that they were unable to procure them from the defendants. A copy of the will has now been produced and it is on the record of this application. The material part to which I have referred has been set out in the petition. The second line of argument on behalf of the petitioner is that the action of Gajadhar purporting to release the property from the charge in favour of the charity was illegal and improper.

It is further contended that even if the shifting of that charge from the properties on which a charge was placed by the testator was in order, the further charge of Rs. 400 on Nawalgarh remained, and this was an incumbrance which should have been mentioned in the notification of sale. Reference is made to Ch. 27, R. 9 of the Rules and Orders of this Court, Original Side, which states:

Where the property or any portion of it is to be sold subject to an incumbrance the nature and the amount of such incumbrance shall, as far as practicable, be also stated.

No incumbrance has been mentioned, and it is argued therefore that the property must have been sold free from incumbrances, and inasmuch as an incumbrance is now disclosed no good title can be given by the vendor. Reference has also been made to S. 55, T. P. Act, which in effect states that the seller is bound to disclose any defect in title and that it is his duty to discharge incumbrances unless the property is sold subject to incumbrances. Reliance has been placed on the case (1910) 2 Ch 438 (1). In that case it was held that not even the Court had jurisdiction to set apart a fund to answer annuities and legacies and distribute the rest of the property released from the charge, and notwithstanding the setting apart of the fund it was held that a purchaser of part of the distributed property may validly object to the title in the absence of any release from the annuities and legacies, and an order under S. 5, Conveyancing and Law of Property Act. On behalf of the vendor reference has been made to the abstract and to the sale, more particularly, the abstract of the indenture of release made by Gajadhar Agarwalla on 17th September 1917, where the whole history of the property and of the dealings with it have been set out. In that document there is a recital of the will of Hanuman Das which states that in giving certain legacies he directed that the charities at Nawalgarh and Barua should for ever be continued and the expenses thereof should be met out of the income of his estate and should form a charge on his estate and that the expenses at Nawalgarh should be Rs. 400 per annum and at Barua Rs. 750 per annum. There is a recital that the will was duly proved and that after obtaining probate the executors administered the estate.

Clearly those recitals give the substance of the will so far as it is material to this application and mention the probate. There is therefore no substance in the contention that the will and probate have not been abstracted. Under Ch. 27, R. 15 of the Original Side Rules, it is provided, that on the notification and conditions being settled a fair copy thereof and of the abstract should be filed in the Accounts Department of the Registrar's Office, and it is stated that in accordance with the rule a copy of this document was filed in the Registrar's Office. Under R. 20 of the same chapter the notifications and conditions of sale are to be read out and the name of each bidder is to be entered in the Registrar's note-book and each bid offered by him entered opposite his name. In the affidavit of Pearilal it is stated that the purchaser and his attorney inspected the abstract of title. In the affidavit in reply it is stated that the abstract of title was not inspected.

1. In re, Evans and Bettell's Contract, (1910) 2 Ch 438=103 L T 181=79 L J Ch 669=54 S J 680.

At any rate, it was there for inspection and any failure to inspect it was the fault of the purchaser. The conditions of sale are in the form set out in the Rules and Orders as far as condition 14. Condition 15 is added and is as follows :

The plaintiff has not in his possession any title deeds or documents other than those disclosed in the abstract of title and the purchaser shall not be entitled to make any objection or requisition in respect of such title deeds or documents and shall accept the recitals in the documents mentioned in the abstract of title as correct.

It is stated that this condition was specifically added owing to the inability of the vendor to obtain the will and the probate which he states were not in his possession. The purchase was subject to the conditions of sale including condition 15 to which I have just referred, which states that the purchaser shall accept the recitals; and the purchaser has signed the bidding paper on the understanding that the purchase is subject to the conditions of sale. In my opinion the recital which I have already referred to in the document of 17th September 1917 gives the purport of the will and probate and the other recitals which set out the history of the property state the facts from which the purchaser is able to form his own conclusion as to whether a good title can be obtained or not.

There is a recital of a conveyance by the executor to Gajadhar and that Gajadhar was advised that the executors could not in any way modify the effect of the terms in the will nor select any specific property for the operation of the charges created by the will. There are further recitals that Gajadhar had since 18th February 1916 been maintaining the trust of Barua out of the income of the general estate and not out of the rents and profits of No. 1 Jagmohan Mullick Lane which were said to have been charged with the payment of the Rs. 750 per month. There is a further recital of the release by Gajadhar of the premises from the charge and the transfer of that charge on to the properties at Siliguri which were paying an annual rent of Rs. 7-0-3. In fact, as I have already stated, the whole history of the property is set out and it is for the purchaser to decide whether on the facts which are contained in that abstract he can or cannot obtain a good title. I have been referred to the case in (1891) 1 Ch 99 (2), the head-note of which is as follows :

1936 C/39 & 90

A condition of sale requiring the purchaser to assume certain facts is not misleading, if the vendor believes the facts to be true, even though the condition is intended to cover a flaw which goes to the root of the title. In such a case it is not necessary to explain in the condition the specific defect in the title which the condition is intended to cover.

In his judgment Lord Halsbury says :

If there were an actual misstatement or such an imperfect statement of the facts as in the result makes what is stated untrue, the condition would be so tainted by falsehood that it could not be insisted on as against the purchaser misled by such taint or falsehood. But now that the facts are all known the condition appears to have been aptly and properly framed to prevent the purchaser insisting on proof of what was then and is now believed to be the fact but which the vendor is not in a position to establish by legal proof.

In my opinion the facts here are very similar. The vendor has set out in the abstract of title the facts so far as he is able to state them, but owing to his inability to get possession of the will and probate he has inserted Cl. 15 of the conditions of sale to prevent the purchaser insisting on proof of what was believed to be a fact but which the vendor is not in a position to establish by legal proof. I can find no misstatement or such imperfect statement of facts as in the result makes what is stated untrue. The same principle is laid down in (1906) 2 Ch 175 (3). The property there was described as freehold, and in one of the conditions of sale it was stated that the property was formerly held on a lease for 500 years at an yearly rent of one shilling but the property had been assigned many years previously free from the said rent, and the purchaser should assume that the rent had been released and was no longer charged on the property. By a deed poll in 1902 the property was expressed to be enlarged into a fee simple and the condition stated that it should be assumed that the deed poll operated as an effectual enlargement. It was there held that the vendor might reasonably believe the property was freehold and was therefore justified in so describing it in the particulars, and then, by the conditions, requiring the purchaser to assume the facts establishing the freehold title, which the vendor knew he would have a difficulty in proving. There again it is doubtful whether legally the property was in fact freehold as it was described; but it was being sold as such and the vendor in the conditions of sale put the purchaser on notice by stating the facts. Warrington, J. at p. 183 says as follows:

2. In re Sandbach & Edmondson's Contract, (1891) 1 Ch 99=60 L J Ch 60=63 L T 797=39 W R 193.

3. Blaiberg v. Keeves, (1906) 2 Ch 175=75 L J Ch 464=95 L T 412=54 W R 451.

All that the vendor has done is to describe the property as being held upon a particular tenure, which he believed, and reasonably believed, on sufficient grounds, might be the true tenure on which it was held. Then, knowing that he might have a difficulty in proving the fact of freehold tenure, in the proper part of the document, i. e., the conditions, which shew how he is going to establish his title, he throws upon the purchaser the burden of assuming the facts the proof of which might have been difficult.

The principles involved in these cases seem to me to be a complete answer to the contention of the petitioner that the property with which we are now concerned was sold free from incumbrance. The facts were all set out and it was the duty of the purchaser to assume the burden of finding out from those facts whether or not he could obtain a good title. In my opinion no good reasons have been advanced as to why the sale should be set aside and the application is dismissed with costs.

V.B./R.K. Application dismissed.

 A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 706

M. C. GHOSE, J.

Majaharali and another—Petitioners.

v.

Mafijaddi Sardar and another—Decree-holder and others—Judgment debtors—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 390 of 1936, Decided on 28th July 1936, from order of Special Sub-Judge, Barisal (Bakargunj), D/- 8th January 1936.

* (a) Limitation Act (1908), S. 18—Execution sale fraudulently conducted by decree-holder—Application to set aside sale beyond time—S. 18 cannot apply when property is purchased bona fide by third party.

Where in execution sale which was conducted fraudulently by the decree-holder, the property was purchased bona fide by a third party and an application to set aside the sale was made by the mortgagee of the property beyond 30 days:

Held: that S. 18 did not apply as the section applied only against a person claiming through another otherwise than in good faith and for valuable consideration: 44 C L J 565, Rel. on.

[P 707 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 115—Error of law is not sufficient ground for interference.

In a case under S. 115 even an error of law is not a sufficient ground for interference by the High Court: 11 Cal 6, Rel. on. [P 707 C 1]

Jitendra Nath Guha—for Petitioner.

Radhika Ranjan Guha—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—In this case the petitioners were mortgagees of certain tenure. Opposite party No. 1, the landlord, instituted a rent suit, got a decree and in execution of that decree put up the tenure to sale. It was sold at auction and purchased by another person, opposite party No. 2, wife of opposite No. 3, and not the decree-holder. After about six months the petitioners applied to set aside the sale on the grounds that sale processes had been fraudulently suppressed by the decree-holder and that by such sale the petitioners had suffered substantial loss. The trial Court set aside the sale. In appeal the findings were reversed and the petition was dismissed.

It is urged in this Court that the learned Munsif, carefully considered all the evidence on the issue of the service of the sale proclamation. He noticed that the witnesses named in the peon's report were not examined but other persons were brought in to prove the service of the sale proclamation and that a person was brought in who stated that he had beaten the drum whereas his name was not in the peon's report. The Court of appeal considered that the defect might have been due to the mistakes of the peon. The appellate Court did not believe that the processes had been suppressed. On the matter of the valuation the Munsif found that the value of the property would be Rs. 1,200 as it appeared that this particular property had been sold in 1928 for Rs. 1,300. The Court of appeal below considered that since 1928 there had been fall in prices of staple food-crops; there was correspondingly fall in prices of land and the prices in 1935 could not be as in the year 1928. But that as in his opinion there was no suppression of notices, the question of valuation was not important. On this point the Court of appeal below upon consideration of the evidence has come to its finding and in an application under S. 115, Civil P. C., his findings cannot be attacked on the ground of error in appreciating the evidence. The last point taken is that the Court of appeal below recorded a finding that even if there was a finding of fraud on the part of the decree-holder the petitioner would not succeed against the auction purchaser who was a third party and against whom there was no allegation of fraud. On this point the case in 44 C L J 565 (1) is quoted. Upon perusal of the judgment and upon consideration of S. 18, Lim Act, it cannot be said that the Court of appeal below was wrong. S. 18 of the Act runs as follows:

Where any person having a right to institute a suit or make an application, has, by means of fraud, been kept from the knowledge of such right of or the title on which it is founded, the time limited for instituting a suit or making an application (a) against the person guilty of the fraud or accessory thereto, or (b) against any person claiming through him otherwise than in good faith and for a valuable consideration shall be computed from the time when the fraud first became known to the person injuriously affected thereby ...

On a plain reading of the section the extended time can only be claimed against a person guilty of the fraud and against a person accessory thereto and against a person who claims through the person who committed the fraud. From this it would appear that it cannot be claimed against an innocent third party against whom ordinary limitation would apply. In a case under S 115, Civil P. C., even an error of law is not a sufficient ground for interference by the High Court. See the case in 11 Cal 6 (2). The Rule is discharged with costs, hearing fee being assessed at one gold mohur.

D.S./R.K. Rule discharged.

1. Kedar Hura v. Asutosh Roy, (1927) 44 C L J 565=99 I O 946.
2. Amir Hassan Khan v. Sheo Baksh Singh, (1885) 11 Cal 6=11 I A 237 (P C).

A. I. R 1936 Calcutta 707

R. C. MITTER, J.

Nirmal Chandra Sanyal and another —Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

Municipal Commissioners, Pabna — Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No 969 of 1935, Decided on 17th July 1936, from appellate decree of Dist. Judge, Pabna, D/- 5th March 1935.

(a) Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act (1 of 1919), S 60—Authority to appoint hackney carriage stand is absolute — Statute not merely permits but directs person or body authorized to do so — Persons would be exempt from liability of causing nuisance to neighbours provided they have statutory authority — Pabna Municipality held had no such authority.

Under S. 60 the authority to appoint stands for hackney carriages is absolute. The statute does not merely permit the appointment of such reserved places for hackney carriages but directs the person or body authorized to do so. Persons having such authority to appoint places to be used as public stand for hackney carriages would not be liable even if the said public stand is a source of nuisance to the neighbours. Since 1919 and a fortiori in July 1933, the Commissioners of the Pabna Municipality had no statutory authority to appoint or reserve any place as a hackney carriage stand and hence there was no statutory indemnity from actions for nuisance. (The principles of exemption of liability for acts done under statutory authority summarised): Geddis v. Proprietors of Bann Reservoir, (1878) 3 A C 430; Vaughan v. Taff Vale Ry Co., (1860) 5 H & N 679; Managers of Metropolitan District Asylum v. Hill, (1881) 6 A C 193 and Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v Parke, (1899) A C 585 Rel. on. [P 709 C 2; P 710 C 1]

(b) Tort—Continuing nuisance—Injunction is usual remedy unless injury is trivial.

Injunction is the usual and proper remedy in the case of continuing nuisance. It ought to be granted in some form unless the injury complained of is trivial. [P 710 C 2]

The construction of hackney carriage stand with no suitable contrivance for drainage caused discomfort to the plaintiff in that it was the cause of his house being vacated by tenant and not being re-occupied :

Held: that the injury was not trivial and that injunction was proper relief. [P 710 C 2]

(c) Bengal Municipal Act (3 of 1884), S. 5 (35)—Applicability — Erection of defective hackney carriage stand with no suitable contrivance for drainage—Suit for injunction for removal of same is not governed by S. 5 (35).

Section 5 (35), Bengal Municipal Act, applies when the act complained of is purported to be done under the Municipal Act or any rule or bye-law made thereunder. But the erection of a defective hackney carriage stand with no suitable contrivance for drainage does not come within this section, for the Bengal Municipal Act has no provision for the erection of such stands, nor are there any statutory rules or bye-laws made under the said Act. Hence a suit for mandatory injunction for removal of same is not governed by S. 5 (35). [P 711 C 1]

Jatindra Nath Sanyal and Bijali Bhusan Sanyal—for Appellants.

Surajit Chandra Lahiry and Amaresh Chandra Roy—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal has been preferred by the plaintiff against the judgment and decree of the learned District Judge of Pabna who has partly reversed the judgment and decree of the Second Court of the Munsif of that place. The defendants, the Commissioners of the Municipality of Pabna, have referred cross-objections and as the cross-objections go to the root of the matter, I have heard the respondent's advocate first in support of his cross-objections. In 1918 the Commissioners of the Pabna Municipality had reserved a part of the Strand Road, in front of the plaintiffs' land, as a hackney carriage stand. At that time the Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act of 1891 (2 of 1891, B. C.) was in force. The said Act had been extended to the Municipal limits of the town of Pabna by Notification No. 1008 T. M., dated 4th November 1913. The said notification is in the following terms:

In exercise of the power conferred by S. (1), Cl. (3), Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act 2 of 1891, the Governor in Council is pleased to extend the provisions of the said Act to the Pabna Municipality in the District of Pabna.

2. The Governor in Council is also pleased, in exercise of the power conferred by S. 61, subsection (1) of the same Act, to appoint the Commissioners of the Pabna Municipality and their Chairman, respectively, to perform the duties imposed and to exercise the powers conferred by the Act on the Corporation of Calcutta and the Chairman of the Corporation, respectively.

By the Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act 1 of 1919 (B. C.) Act 2 of 1891 (B. C.) was repealed and no notification by the Local Government has been issued under S. 2, Cl. (a) of Act 1 of 1919 extending the said Act of 1919 to the town of Pabna. In July 1933 the Commissioners of the Pabna Municipality paved the portion of the Strand Road reserved in the year 1918 as a hackney carriage stand. The said place is still being used as a hackney carriage stand.

The plaintiff filed his suit on 11th December 1933 against the Commissioners of the Pabna Municipality for a mandatory injunction for removal of the said hackney carriage stand, for a permanent injunction restraining them from allowing the said place to be used as a hackney carriage stand, for a permanent injunction for restraining them from obstructing the passage to his land from the Strand Road and for damages. The basis of these reliefs is the statement made in para. 4 of the plaint. The substance of that paragraph is that the hackney carriage stand is kept in a dirty condition; there is no flushing arrangement and the bad smell has caused and is causing great discomfort with the result that some of the plaintiffs' tenants occupying huts on his land had already left and the carriages standing in a long row caused obstruction to the ingress and egress to and from his land to the Strand Road.

The first Court dismissed the suit, and an appeal was taken by the plaintiff to the learned District Judge. The learned District Judge, apparently with the consent of both parties, inspected the locality and thereafter heard arguments and decreed the suit in part. He held that no case for an injunction has been made out by the plaintiff, but that he was entitled to damages which he assessed at Rs. 50. I will have to examine this part of his judgment in some detail hereafter. The plaintiff has preferred this appeal in which he maintains that an injunction ought to be granted. The defendants have preferred cross-objections in which they maintain that the decree for damages ought to be discharged and the plaintiff's suit dismissed in its entirety.

The learned advocate for the defendants-respondents raises in his cross-objection a point which goes to the root of the matter and if it be a sound one, the plaintiff's suit will have to be dismissed, even if the hackney carriage stand constitutes a nuisance. He contends that if the Commissioners have the statutory power to appoint a place as a hackney carriage stand, and if in the exercise of that power they do something which is necessary for the exercise of the same, no action can lie against them even if their said acts constitute nuisance. The proposition so stated and in such a broad form is in my judgment now the law. The principles of exemption of liability coming within this head, in my judgment, can be summarised in the following manner: (i) Whenever an act otherwise unlawful and actionable is expressly authorised by the legislature, no action would lie against the person who has the statutory authority to do the act, provided it is done without negligence. The statutory authority is to be regarded as statutory indemnity: (1878) 3 A C 430 (1) per Lord Blackburn at p. 455. (ii) The statutory authority and the consequent statutory indemnity extends not only to the act itself, but to all its necessary consequences. When the legislature has authorised an act, it must be deemed also to have authorised by necessary implication all inevitable results of that act. As has been put in some of the cases, the test of the necessity of a consequence is the impossibility of avoiding it by the exercise of due care and skill. No consequence which can be so avoided is within the scope of the statutory indemnity. It is on this principle that in 5 H & N 679 (2) no damages were awarded against the Railway Company for fire caused by a spark escaping from one of their locomotive engines, it being proved that the engine had been constructed with due care and skill and escapes of sparks were inevitable. It is not necessary to multiply cases, many of which can be found in the reports which illustrate this principle. (iii) The aforesaid two principles of exemption from liability are only applicable when the statutory authority is absolute and conditional. Whether the authority is absolute or conditional has often to be implied from the general provisions of the statute. A good working test is that where the authority to do an act is imperative, that is, where the statute imperatively directs the acts to be done, and not permissive, i. e. merely allows to be done, it is to be considered as absolute; if it is merely permissive, the authority is prima facie conditional and does not absolve the authorised person doing the act from liability, if nuisance results from the act: (1881) 6 A C 193 (3) and (1899) A C 535 (4).

1. Geddis v. Proprietors of Bann Reservoir, (1878) 3 A C 430.

It is on this principle that Metropolitan District Asylum, a statutory Corporation having statutory authority to build a smallpox hospital, was restrained from building it at Hampstead in London, as the erection of such a hospital there would be a source of danger to the neighbourhood: (1881) 6 A C 193 (3). On the same principle the case (1893) 2 Ch 588 (5) was decided. There the Tramway Company was authorised by an Act of Parliament to use horse traction for their tramcars. That power by necessary implication authorised building stables for the horses to be used for drawing the tramcars. But the company was restrained from maintaining a large stable which by reason of the noise and smell was a nuisance to the adjoining residents. Having regard to the provisions of S. 60, Hackney Carriage Act of 1919 (1 of 1919), which corresponds to S. 45, Act 2 of 1891, however, I hold that the authority to appoint stands for hackney carriages is absolute. The statute does not merely permit the appointment of such reserved places for hackney carriages but directs the person or body authorised to do so. If therefore the Commissioners of the Pabna Municipality had, in July 1933, the statutory authority to appoint places to be used as public stand for hackney carriages they would not be liable even if the said public stand erected on a part of the Strand Road is a source of nuisance to the neighbours.

This leads me to the question as to whether they had the statutory authority. This depends upon the question whether the Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act either of 1891 or 1919 was in force at Pabna in July 1933. There cannot be any question that the Act of 1891 was not in force because that Act being wholly repealed by Act 1 of 1919 is no longer on the statute book. The question is whether Act 1 of 1919 was in force then. It is admitted that no notification has been issued by the Local Government under S. 2, Cl. (a) of this Act, extending its operation to the town of Pabna. The only notification that has been issued is the notification No. 1008 T. M. dated 4th November 1913, which I have quoted above. That notification extended to the town of Pabna the Act then in force, namely the Hackney Carriage Act of 1891. The word 'said' used in para. 1 of the notification implies that it was a notification issued under S. 1, Cl. (3) of the Act of 1891. S. 25, Bengal General Clauses Act (1 of 1899 B. C.) is of no assistance to the Municipal Commissioners of Pabna. The only effect of that section is to make the notification No. 1008 T. M., dated 4th November 1913, as if issued under Act 1 of 1919. By the application of S. 25, General Clauses Act, the said notification would read in the following manner:

"In the exercise of the powers conferred by S. 2, Cl. (a), Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act 1 of 1919, the Governor in Council is to be pleased to extend the provisions of Act 2 of 1891 to the Pabna Municipality in the District of Pabna." But this means to the Commissioners

2. Vaughan v. Taff Vale Ry. Co., (1860) 5 H & N 679=29 L J Ex 247=6 Jur (N S) 899=2 L T 394=8 W R 549.

3. Managers of the Metropolitan District Asylum v. Hill, (1881) 6 A C 193=50 L J Q B 353=44 L T 653=29 W R 617=45 J P 664.

4. Canadian Pacific Ry. Co. v. Parke, (1899) A C 535=68 L J P C 89=81 L T 127=48 W R 118=15 T L R 427.

5. Napier v. London Tramways Co., (1893) 2 Ch 588.

nothing as Act 2 of 1891 is not in existence since 1919. The view I am taking is supported by the decision in 36 C W N 11 (6). I hold that since 1919 and a fortiori in July 1933, the Commissioners of the Pabna Municipality had no statutory authority to appoint or reserve any place as a hackney carriage stand, and hence there is no statutory indemnity from actions for nuisance. I do not consider that S. 3, Cl. (2), Hackney Carriage Act of 1919, which preserves intact "the validity of anything done or suffered or any right, title obligation or liability which may have accrued under" the Hackney Carriage Act of 1891, protects the Commissioners from this action, if their act done in July 1933 amounted to nuisance. The liability sought to be enforced in the suit is a liability which arose in July 1933 when the Hackney Carriage Act of 1891 was no longer in force.

The question now to be considered is whether the plaintiff has succeeded in proving that the construction of the pucca hackney stand in front of his property has caused and is causing nuisance. In the plaint he stated that by reason of the bad smell, his tenants have left. He also complained of obstruction to free access to his land from the public road caused by the hackney carriages standing in a row. The learned District Judge who inspected the locality has found that there is no extra accumulation of filth on the stand itself. The smell emitting from the stand itself is not more noxious or disagreeable than the smell emitting from the streets of Pabna generally. If this was the only finding no action for nuisance would lie, for a person living in that town must put up with its usual and ordinary discomforts. But he finds something more. He finds that there is no proper drain or channel to drain off the urine of the horses with the result that offensive matter drains into and accumulates in a long strip of land in between the pucca stand and the plaintiff's land. This finding in my judgment supports the plaintiff's action. I do not attach much importance to the respondents' contention that this fact is not specifically mentioned in the plaint. The plaintiff complained of nuisance and gave some instances of discomfort he and his tenants were feeling, and I do think it would be giving a too strict interpretation to the plaintiff's pleading if I am to accept the respondents' contention. I do hold that the plaintiff is entitled to relief on the basis of this finding.

The learned District Judge refused the prayer for injunction but awarded the plaintiff Rs. 50 as damages. He was, it seems to me, by reading his judgment influenced to some extent in refusing the prayer for injunction by the promise made before him that the Municipality will in a short time provide proper drains. This promise was made in March 1935, but has not yet been redeemed. Injunction is the usual and proper remedy in the case of continuing nuisance. It ought to be granted in some form unless the injury complained of is trivial. I do not consider that the discomfort caused to the plaintiff is trivial. One of his tenants has left the land. The plaintiff has no doubt failed to prove that the pucca hackney carriage stand was the cause of his departure. But the fact is established that no tenant has come in his place since then and the hut that he occupied is now owing to long and continued vacancy in a dilapidated state. I hold that injunction is the proper relief. Having taken all the circumstances into consideration I think that Commissioners of the Municipality should not be directed to remove the stand elsewhere, but that they should be directed to take proper care in the matter of keeping the stand and the adjoining places reasonably clean and for that purpose they are directed to clean and to keep in a reasonably clean state the strip of land in between the hackney carriage stand and the plaintiff's land by providing a suitable pucca drain. They are accordingly directed to construct a suitable pucca drain on that piece of land within six months from this date. If they fail to do so the plaintiff will have such a drain constructed and recover the costs thereof from the Commissioners of the Municipality. As I am giving the plaintiff an injunction in this limited form, I discharge decree for damages.

A point was taken that the suit not being instituted within the time limited by S. 5 (35), Bengal Municipal Act, is barred by time. I do not accept that contention. The said section applies when the act complained of is purported to be done under the Municipal Act or any rule or bye law made thereunder. The act complained of, namely, the erection of a defective hackney carriage stand with no suitable contrivance for drainage does not come within this section, for the Bengal Municipal Act has no provision for the erection of such stands, nor are there any statutory rules or bye-laws made under the said Act. The appeal and the cross-objections are thus partially allowed. Each party to bear their costs of this Court.

6. Chairman of the commissioners of the Howrah Municipality v. Haripada Roy Choudhury, 1932 Cal 315=138 I C 28=59 Cal 1007=36 C W N 11.

R.W./R.K. Appeal partly allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 711

R. C. MITTER, J.

Abdul Kader Chaudhury — Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Upendra Lal Barua and others — Respondents.

Appeal No. 811 of 1935, Decided on 23rd July 1936, against decree of Sub-Judge, Second Court, Chittagong, D/- 13th December 1934.

Acquiescence—Mere silence is no acquiescence — Silence is acquiescence only when there is duty to speak and silence amounts to fraud — Trespasser spending money on property of another — True owner silent — To amount to fraud, he must know that property is his at that time and that trespasser is acting under mistaken belief that land is his (trespasser's) — Where he does not know any of these there is no acquiescence.

The doctrines of estoppel and acquiescence both require for their foundation a representation made by one party to another. Such representation in case of acquiescence is to be inferred from silence. But mere silence does not amount to acquiescence. In order that silence may amount to acquiescence there must be duty to speak and silence means fraud. For silence to amount to fraud, the chief elements are that the possessor of legal right must know of the existence of his own right which is inconsistent with the right claimed by the trespasser, and secondly he must know of the trespasser's mistaken belief of his rights.

[P 713 C 1]

If in a suit for possession of land the possessor of legal right does not know at the time when the trespasser is spending money upon his property that the land is his, and if he does not know in addition that the trespasser is acting under a mistaken belief that the property is his, there is nothing wrong if he remains silent. His silence is not fraudulent and hence it cannot amount to acquiescence. A.C.L.J. 23 (P.C.) and Willmetts v. Barber, 15 C.D. 202 Rel. on.

[P 713 C 2]

Advocate High Court

Jammu & Kashmir

Narendra Kumar Das and Durgesh Prosad Das—for Appellant.

Amritalal Mukherjee and Rohinibinod Rakshit—for Respondents.

Judgment—The subject matter of the suit is a strip of land being the Western portion of the Southern Bank of a certain tank. The Eastern portion of the Southern Bank admittedly is the property of the Aryya Mitra Institution, a school of which the defendants are the members of the committee. The suit lands are described in schedule Ka of the plaint. The plaintiff's case is that the Western portion and the Eastern portion of the Southern as well as the other banks of the tank were at some time ejmali properties of the plaintiff's and the defendants' predecessors in title. There was a partition and the Western portion of the Southern Bank was allotted exclusively to the share of the plaintiff's predecessor. The plaintiff has instituted this suit on the ground that the property described in Sch. Ka falls within his exclusive property but he was dispossessed from it in the year 1928 when there was an encroachment made and some huts of the school were built upon a portion of it. He claims therefore recovery of possession on declaration of his exclusive title. The defendants denied the title of the plaintiff and in one paragraph of their written statement they said that the plaintiff's suit was barred by estoppel, acquiescence and waiver.

They did not plead facts which would support the said plea of estoppel, acquiescence and waiver. In another paragraph of the written statement they stated that at the time when those huts were raised on behalf of the school authorities, the plaintiff's son was the secretary of the school and those huts were raised with the knowledge of the plaintiff's son and of the plaintiff. They did not say in the written statement that either the plaintiff or the plaintiff's son on behalf of his father gave his consent to the school authorities to raise those buildings nor did they plead an alternative case that even if the land belonged to the plaintiff the school authorities were given a license to build upon it. Both the Courts below have found that the land in suit belonged to the plaintiff and he was dispossessed in the year 1928, well within the period of limitation. The Court of first instance made a decree in favour of the plaintiff on those findings. The lower appellate Court, although maintaining those findings which I have noticed above, has dismissed the suit on the ground that the plaintiff must be taken to have given his consent to the school authorities enclosing the disputed land within his compound and raising structures on some portion thereof.

The lower appellate Court deals with this question in dealing with point No. 4 formulated by it, namely "To what relief is the plaintiff entitled." First of all it states that the plaintiff's son was the secretary at the time when the school authorities took possession of this plot of land and from that he says "there can be no manner of doubt" that he (the plaintiff's son) was fully aware of the fact that the school authorities were enclosing the said portion and were raising structures on it. That is a finding which I take to be a good finding based on evidence. It was open to the lower appellate Court to draw the inference from the fact that the plaintiff's son was the secretary, at the time that the plaintiff's son had knowledge of the fact that on this particular plot rooms of the school were being built and this particular plot was being enclosed within the school compound. Then the lower appellate Court says the plaintiff's son is a dutiful and obedient son and is in the same mess with his father. From that he concludes that the plaintiff's father must have known of these operations on the part of the school authorities well, although there is some element of speculation here, and I would take it for the purpose of my decision that this is a good finding also. Then the learned Judge says that 'I am inclined to think that the school was removed to the suit land with the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff.' He is a little inaccurate there in the statement of the facts because the school was not removed from its old site to its present site but there was only an extension over the suit land. However that may be, that is a misstatement which is immaterial for the purpose of this appeal. Then he says that, inasmuch as the plaintiff by his own conduct must have led the school authorities to believe that he would not object to any hut being erected there and the remaining land being used for the purpose of the school he cannot now turn round to take khas possession of the land by the removal of the mud-walled hut or huts thereon which are no doubt substantial structures.

On these three findings which I have enumerated above the learned Judge modified the decree of the Court of first instance and gave to the plaintiff possession of only the vacant portion of schedule Ka land. He did not give him khas possession of the portion of schedule Ka where the huts stand nor did he direct the removal of the said huts but only gave the plaintiff a decree for damages for use and occupation of the lands whereon the school huts stand. I have great difficulty in following the conclusion of the learned Judge on the aforesaid findings. As I have indicated above I consider some of these to be no findings at all but mere speculations. But assuming them to be good findings, there are serious objections to the decree which the learned Subordinate Judge has made in this case. In the first place, as I have pointed out, defendants did not plead an alternative case that the school authorities were there with the license of the plaintiff. They did not plead that the plaintiff had given consent to the extension of the school over this ground. All that they pleaded was that the plaintiff knew of these extensions and they said that the plaintiff's claim for possession was barred by estoppel and acquiescence and waiver. The point about waiver has not been developed before me and therefore in dealing with the above mentioned sentence in the written statement I leave aside the word "waiver." The finding therefore that the plaintiff gave consent to the school authorities to enclose his land is a finding on a new case made by the lower appellate Court for the defence and that finding therefore must be disregarded. What remains then is the finding that the plaintiff knew that the school authorities were enclosing the land which is now described as Sch. Ka of the plaintiff and which is now claimed as the plaintiff's land.

There is no suggestion that the plaintiff either himself or through his son made an active representation to the school authorities in the year 1928, that this land was the land belonging to the school. Therefore there is no foundation for the application of the doctrine of estoppel. The question is whether the doctrine of acquiescence can be invoked for the purpose of defeating the plaintiff's claim for khas possession. Now, as I understand it, the doctrine of acquiescence is only another phase of estoppel. The foundation of the doctrine of estoppel and acquiescence is that the representations have been made to the other side—representations which were intended to be acted upon by the other side, and were in fact acted upon by the other side spending money or doing some act which he would not have otherwise done which involved expenditure or a change of position. In the case of estoppel the material representations are active in form while in the case of acquiescence the representations are to be inferred from silence. The doctrine of acquiescence has gone by different names—the doctrine of standing by—but all the elements must be there. If an owner finds another person trespassing upon his land and building upon his land, mere silence or inaction on his part at the time of the building operations is not sufficient to support a case of acquiescence. He need not prevent the act at the time when it was begun. He need not say to the other side to stop. Mere silence, mere inaction cannot be construed to be a representation. In order to support a case of acquiescence there must be something more than mere silence or inaction. Inaction or silence in circumstances which require a duty to speak is the foundation of the doctrine. When inaction or silence would amount to fraud or deception then and then only would the doctrine of standing by or acquiescence be applied. This is the position which is made quite clear in the judgment of Sir Asutosh Mookerji in 1 C L J 23 (1). The passage is at p. 27 and runs as follows :

It cannot be doubted that there may be cases in which there is deception by omission, but silence may be treated as deception only when there is a duty to speak ; in other words, as Bigelow points out, ' a duty to speak, which is the ground of liability, arises wherever and only where silence can be considered as having an active property, that of misleading.'

In 15 Ch D 96 (2) Fry, J. has defined the elements in a lucid manner. There he was considering the case whether the defendant was bound by the doctrine of acquiescence from asserting his legal rights. First of all he points out that omission or inaction on the part of the defendant would support a case of acquiescence if his omission or inaction amounted to fraud. Then he makes this observation : 15 Ch D 96 (2). The passage is at pp. 105 and 106 :

What, then, are the elements or requisites necessary to constitute fraud of that description? In the first place the plaintiff must have made a mistake as to his legal rights. Secondly, the plaintiff must have expended some money or must have done some act (not necessarily upon the defendant's land) on the faith of his mistaken belief. Thirdly, the defendant, the possessor of the legal right, must know of the existence of his own right which is inconsistent with the right claimed by the plaintiff. If he does not know of it he is in the same position as the plaintiff and the doctrine of acquiescence is founded upon conduct with a knowledge of your legal rights. Fourthly, the defendant, the possessor of the legal right, must know of the plaintiff's mistaken belief of his rights. If he does not, there is nothing which calls upon him to assert his own rights. Lastly, the defendant, the possessor of the legal right, must have encouraged the plaintiff in his expenditure of money or in the other acts which he has done, either directly or by abstaining from asserting his legal right. Where all these elements exist, there is fraud of such a nature as will entitle the Court to restrain the possessor of the legal right from exercising it but, in my judgment, nothing short of this will do.

It is the third and the fourth element in the passage which is material for this case. If the possessor of the legal right does not know at the time when the trespasser is spending money upon his property that the land is his, and if he does not know in addition that the trespasser is acting under a mistaken belief that the property is his, there is nothing wrong if he remains silent. His conscience is not affected. There is nothing fraudulent in his conduct. Even if he knows that the property is his he might not disclose at that time to the trespasser that the property is his unless he also knows that the trespasser is spending money upon a mistaken view of his rights. In the present case there is no evidence whatsoever that in the year 1928 either the plaintiff or the plaintiff's son knew that the portion which was being enclosed by the school authorities was the property of the plaintiff and/or that they knew that the school authorities were under the mistaken belief that the property that was being enclosed was the property of the school. The onus is on the defendants who want to deprive the plaintiff of his legal rights by taking the said plea. They must prove all the elements, specially the 3rd and 4th which are important for the present case noticed in the Judgment of Fry, J. It may very well be that in the year 1928, when the plaintiff's son was the Secretary of the school, the plaintiff's son believed that the portion which was being enclosed then was a part of the property of the school. If that was so, there would be no foundation for the doctrine of acquiescence. In this view of the matter I do hold that the defendants have not made out a case of acquiescence. The lower appellate Court having found title to the whole of schedule Ka in the plaintiff and the suit having been instituted within six years of the dispossession of the plaintiff by the school authorities, the plaintiff must have a decree for possession in respect of the property in suit. The result is that I allow this appeal, set aside the decree of the lower appellate Court and restore the decree of the Court of first instance. Having taken into consideration the history behind this litigation I think both parties should bear their respective costs of this Court and of the lower appellate Court.

1. Joy Chandra Bandopadhyaya v. Srinath Chattopadhyaya, (1905) 32 Cal 357=1 C L J 23 (P C).

2. Willmott v. Barber, (1880) 15 Ch D 96 = 43 L T 95=28 W R 911=49 L J Ch 792.

D.S./R.K.

*Appeal allowed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 714

EDGLEY, J.

Radha Sundar Roy and another — Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Saktipada Roy — Plaintiff — Respondent.

Appeal No. 73 of 1935, Decided on 10th June 1936, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, Murshidabad, D/- 23rd June 1934.

Specific Relief Act (1877), S. 39—Cancellation of instrument — Person transferring interest to another—Suit by such person is still maintainable—Test is apprehension of injury.

A person sued another for cancellation of an instrument which was alleged to be a forged document. The instrument purported to transfer lands of the plaintiff to the defendant. Before the suit the plaintiff had transferred his interests in the land to a third person. It was contended that the plaintiff's suit was not maintainable under such circumstances, because he had no interest left in the property:

Held: that a man who has parted with the property in respect of which a void or voidable instrument exists can sue to get the instrument cancelled, the test for the maintainability of the suit being reasonable apprehension of serious injury: 23 Bom 375, Foll.; 13 Mad 549, Disapproved. [P 715 C 3]

*Rajendra Chandra Guha and Mahendra Kumar Ghose—*for Appellants.

*Panchanan Ghose and Bhupendra Narayan Bera—*for Respondent.

Judgment.—In the suit out of which this appeal arises the plaintiff sued the defendants for the cancellation of an Ekrarnama which, according to his case, had been forged by the principal defendants. This document is said to have been executed on 3rd August 1931 and was presented for registration on 9th September 1931. The land covered by the Ekrarnama originally belonged to the maternal grandfather of the plaintiff and subsequently it devolved upon Nagendrabala Dasi, his maternal grandmother from whom he inherited it. On 29th August 1931 he sold this property to Rajendrabala. The contention of the defendants was to the effect that the Ekrarnama was a genuine one and that, in any event, the plaintiff's suit was not maintainable having regard to the provisions of S. 39, Specific Relief Act. Both the Courts below found that the Ekrarnama was a forged document and, this being the case, they decreed the plaintiff's suit. It has been faintly argued by the learned advocate for the appellants in this case that the findings of fact with regard to the genuineness of the Ekrarnama have been reached by the Courts below after insufficient consideration of the evidence. From a reference to the judgment of the learned Munsif and that of the learned Subordinate Judge it appears, however, that the evidence was very carefully discussed in all its bearings and I am of opinion that the findings of fact at which the Courts below have arrived with regard to the genuineness of the Ekrarnama cannot be challenged in second appeal. It is, however, urged that, in any event, the plaintiff's suit was not maintainable in view of the provisions of S. 39, Specific Relief Act. This section provides that:

Any person against whom a written instrument is void or voidable, who has reasonable apprehension that such instrument, if left outstanding, may cause him serious injury, may sue to have it adjudged void or voidable.

In the case out of which this appeal arises it is admitted that the plaintiff has parted with his interest in the property by reason of the kobala executed in favour of Rajendrabala on 29th August 1931 and it has been argued that, in these circumstances and having regard to the decision of the Madras High Court in 13 Mad 549 (1) no suit would lie under S. 39, Specific Relief Act. The learned Judges, in the case cited above, stated that they were of opinion that the bare possibility of the plaintiff being sued in an action for damages would not entitle the plaintiff who had divested herself of all interest in the property to maintain the suit. This case was considered by the Bombay High Court in 23 Bom 375 (2). In the latter case a suit had been brought by the Swami of a mutt to avoid a Jimmapatra whereby he had made over the management of the mutt properties to a certain person. It was alleged that the conditions contained in the Jimmapatra had not been carried out and after this deed had been executed, the Swami transferred the property covered by the Jimmapatra to a third person. In the judgment of the Court in the case last cited above Farran, C. J. made the following observations:

It appears to us that, if the document is not cancelled . . . the purchaser may sue the original plaintiff for a return of his purchase money, if he cannot get possession of the lands by reason of the defendant holding them under the Jimmapatra, and that thus the original plaintiff may have had reasonable apprehension of permanent injury. He was also in danger of the defendant suing him in respect of the lands of which the defendant had not detained possession, for it does not appear that the defendant has detained possession of all the lands; and there is lastly the suggested risk that the added plaintiff may not act fully up to the terms of his purchase and that the original plaintiff may be in a position to resume the lands.

In the case out of which the present appeal arises it is alleged in the plaint that Rajendrabala is in possession of the property covered by the Ekrarnama, whereas in the written statement it is alleged that the defendants are in possession of this property. This being the case the possibilities of injury to the plaintiff are almost precisely similar to those to which reference has been made in Farran, C. J.'s judgment in 23 Bom 375 (2), the case cited above, and it would follow that as far as the plaintiff is concerned, there exists a reasonable apprehension of serious injury. In discussing the decision of the Madras High Court in 13 Mad 549 (1) the learned Chief Justice of the Bombay High Court further stated that:

We are not prepared to follow it if it was intended to lay it down, as a rule of law, that in no case can a man, who has parted with the property in respect of which a void or voidable instrument exists, sue to have such instrument cancelled, and his Lordship went on to point out that:

The true test in a case of this sort is reasonable apprehension of serious injury.

I am entirely in agreement with the line of reasoning which has been adopted in the Bombay case cited above and, in these circumstances, I am of opinion that the decision of the lower appellate Court is correct. The judgment and decree of the learned Subordinate Judge will therefore be affirmed and this appeal is dismissed with costs. Leave to appeal under S. 15, Letters Patent is refused.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 715

MUKERJI AND JACK, JJ.

Sadhiram Atoi—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Kunja Behari Banerjee—Defendant—Respondent.

Appeal No. 113 of 1934, Decided on 10th July 1936, against decree of Special Sub-Judge, Assam Valley, D/- 14th August 1933.

(a) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), S. 82 (2) — "Or" means "and" — Both conditions must be fulfilled to maintain a suit to set aside sale.

The word "or" in the sub-section must be regarded, having been used in the sense of "and" and the sub-section means that unless both the conditions are specified the suit would not be maintainable. [P 717 C 2]

(b) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), Ss. 82 (2) and 80 — Suit to set aside sale is governed by S. 82 (2) and not by Art. 12 (c), Limitation Act.

When there is a special provision contained in the regulation itself as to limitation for instituting a suit to set aside a sale under it, it would not be right to travel beyond the regulation and to go to the Limitation Act for the purpose of finding out an article to be applied to a suit for setting aside the sale. Hence such a suit is governed by S. 82 (2) of the Regulation and not by Art. 12 (c), Limitation Act. [P 718 C 1]

(c) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), Ss. 91 (1) and 146 — Scope of S. 146 — All conditions in S. 91 (1) are not to be fulfilled before ordering sale of surety's property.

Section 146 of the Regulation merely lays down the procedure under which sale would take place, and though certain conditions are

1. Iyyappa v. Ramalakshamma, (1890) 18 Mad 549.

2. Kotrabassappaya v. Chenvirappaya, (1899) 23 Bom 375.

laid down in sub-s. (1), S. 91, which have to be fulfilled in order to bring to sale the estate of the defaulter other than the defaulting estate, it was not intended by S. 146 that these provisions would have to be complied with before the properties of the surety are put up to sale. The practice of proceeding against the moveables of the defaulter before proceeding against the surety is a procedure which is fair and reasonable. [P 719 C 1, 2]

(d) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), S. 82 (2) — Surety's properties sold for defaulter's arrears of revenue—Civil suit for declaration that sale is void ab initio is not barred though such plea is not taken in application before Commissioner.

A suit for declaration that the sale was void ab initio as being outside the powers of the revenue authorities to bring the property to sale because the surety was under no liability under his surety bond can be maintained in a civil Court even though it was not raised in application before the Commissioner. [P 720 C 1, 2]

Bijan Kumar Mukherjee, Sanat Kumar Chatterjee and Biswa Nath Naskar—for Appellant.

Prakash Chandra Majumdar and Manmatha Nath Roy (Jr.)—for Respondent.

Mukerji, J. — The plaintiff is the appellant in this appeal. The facts of the case, shortly stated, are the following: One Sarat Chandra Chowdhury was appointed Sarbarakar in respect of a mouza Bara Khetri in the month of September 1928. The plaintiff stood surety on behalf of the said Sarat Chandra Chowdhury in respect of the said appointment by executing a security bond whereby he hypothecated certain immoveable properties. The revenue payable for the said mouza was Rs 26,500 and the plaintiff's properties were taken as being valued at Rs. 28,000 which was the valuation which the plaintiff had put upon the properties.

Thereafter, there was a proposal to split up mouza Bara Khetri into two parts, one of which was to go by the name of Uttar Bara Khetri and the other Dakhin Bara Khetri. This proposal of the Commissioner was accepted by the Government on 9th November 1928. Thereafter sureties were called for an aggregate amount of Rs. 13,000 for an appointment which was to be made of the said Sarat Chandra Choudhury as Sarbarakar in respect of mouza Uttar Bara Khetri; and one Protap Narayan Dutta having offered himself as a surety he was accepted as such the property offered by him as security being taken as being valued at Rs. 4,600 and the plaintiff was accepted as a surety in respect of the balance of Rs. 8,400. On 29th May 1929 the Sarbarakar defaulted in the payment of the instalment then due. Upon that his moveables were attached, the said moveables being valued at Rs. 3,000; but they were never sold. In the meantime, proclamation being issued for the sale of the hypothecated properties which were covered by the plaintiff's surety-bond, the said properties were sold at auction on 13th August 1929 and were purchased by the defendants at a price of Rs. 6,200. The plaintiff's case further was that he would have taken steps to prevent his hypothecated properties being put up to sale, but he was misled; because he came to know on inquiry that the Sarbarakar had made over the amount for which he was in default to the surety Protap Narayan Dutta, and also because he was under the impression that the moveable of the Sarbarakar which had been already attached would be first put up to sale and that only if such sale failed to fetch the requisite amount that the immoveable properties hypothecated were to be sold. Upon this statement of facts, the plaintiff instituted the suit for a declaration that the sale was improper, and not in accordance with law and that the defendant by his purchase had acquired no title to the properties. In some of the paragraphs of the plaint he complained of several irregularities and illegalities in connexion with the sale and also alleged that the price fetched at it was grossly inadequate. The defendant in his written statement denied that there was any irregularity in connexion with the sale and also pleaded that if there was any irregularity in the conduct of the sale it was the Government which was responsible, and inasmuch as the Government was highly interested in the result of the suit, the Government should be made a party thereto. So far as this last-mentioned plea was concerned, it was overruled by the Subordinate Judge. The learned Judge, on dealing with the merits of the case, held that the suit should be dismissed and he ordered accordingly. From this decree dismissing the suit, the plaintiff has preferred this appeal.

It would be convenient to deal in the first place with some of the illegalities or irregularities complained of on behalf of the plaintiff and to leave out for the present for separate consideration here. after one question of irregularity or rather of jurisdiction as the plaintiff desires to make it out to be. Now, those irregularities were of the following description. It was said that there was no attachment in respect of the properties that were sold; and on this point the learned Subordinate Judge held that no attachment was necessary because the properties had already been hypothecated. It was also urged that no notice under O. 21, R. 66, Civil P. C., was issued and that there was no valuation of the properties mentioned in the sale proclamation. The learned Subordinate Judge found that these two irregularities had been made out and he also found that there had been no beating of drum in connexion with the proclamation. Our attention has also been drawn on behalf of the appellant to another irregularity of which he had made a grievance in his petition of appeal to the Commissioner, and also in his petition to the Local Government, namely, that in the sale proclamation the place where the properties were to be sold was not mentioned. We find that this complaint also is well founded. But the learned Subordinate Judge having found these facts in favour of the plaintiff went on to consider the value of the properties, and after a careful consideration of the materials that are on the record on that question he has come to the conclusion that the price fetched at the sale cannot be regarded as inadequate having regard to the fact that at auction sales anything approaching the market value of property is hardly realized. He has also come to the conclusion that at the sale that took place, a number of bidders were present and that there was nothing to show that any insufficiency in the price, even if there was any, was due to any of the irregularities or even to the cumulative effect of all. We are of opinion that in view of the finding last mentioned, which we find is amply borne out by the materials on the record, it is not possible to say that the plaintiff was entitled to succeed on the ground of any of these irregularities. Furthermore, the learned Subordinate Judge has found that the suit regarded as one of setting aside the sale, was barred under the provisions of S. 80, sub-s. (2) of the Assam Land and Revenue Regulation 1886. It may be mentioned here that the sale took place on 13th August 1929; that thereafter an application was made by the plaintiff to the Commissioner, who by an order passed on 3rd January 1930 declined to set aside the sale; and that thereafter the plaintiff preferred a further appeal to His Excellency the Governor in Council and that appeal was also dismissed. S. 82, sub-s. (2) says:

A suit to annul such a sale shall not be entertained upon any ground, unless that ground has been specified in an application made to the Commissioner or Chief Commissioner under S. 79, or unless it is instituted within one year from the date of the sale becoming final under S. 80.

On behalf of the appellant it has been contended in the first place that the two conditions specified in this sub-section are disjoined by the word "or" and that in this respect the provision contained in this sub-section is materially different from the analogous provision contained in the revenue sale law. On the strength of the appearance of the word "or" in this sub-section, it has been argued that upon a true construction of it, it should be held that if one of these conditions is satisfied, an appeal would be competent. We are of opinion that this contention is not well founded. The two conditions are so different in their nature that it is impossible to maintain that if only one of the conditions is fulfilled an appeal would be competent. One of these conditions is that the ground to be taken in the appeal must be one which has been specified in the application made to the Commissioner or Chief Commissioner under S. 79 and the other is that the suit is to be instituted within one year from the date of the sale becoming final under S. 80. The word "or," as it appears in this sub-section, must, in our opinion, be regarded having been used in the sense of "and" and in our opinion, the sub-section means that unless both the conditions are specified, the suit would not be maintainable.

Nextly, it has been argued on behalf of the appellant that the suit was not barred by limitation because of an order which was passed by the Deputy Commissioner on 24th January 1930 in which it was stated that the sale was confirmed. It has been argued that inasmuch as the sale took place under the provisions of the Civil Procedure Code, the provisions of the Code as regards confirmation of the sale are applicable, and it was therefore that the Deputy Commissioner on 24th January 1930 recorded the aforesaid order. Our attention has also been drawn to the sale certificate that was issued in this case and in it was said that the purchase took effect on 24th January 1930. Relying upon this date, that is, 24th January 1930, as the date of the confirmation of the sale, it has been argued that Art. 12, Cl. (c), Lim. Act, applies, and that therefore the plaintiff has got one year from the date when the sale is confirmed to institute a suit for the purpose of setting aside the sale. In our judgment this contention also is not well founded. The Regulation does not speak of any confirmation of the sale. It is quite true that the procedure that is prescribed for the sale is the procedure that is to be followed under the Civil Procedure Code. But that does not make all the provisions of that Code applicable, specially when it is not expressly stated in the Regulation that after a sale has become final it is necessary to have another order from the authority holding the sale for the purpose of getting the sale confirmed. Furthermore, on a question of limitation, with regard to which there is special provision contained in the Regulation itself, it would not, in our opinion, be right to travel beyond the Regulation and go to the Limitation Act for the purpose of finding out an article to be applied to a suit for setting aside the sale. S. 82, sub-s. (2) clearly lays down the time by which the suit will have to be instituted and reading that sub-section with the provisions of S. 80 it is perfectly clear that the sale became final in the present case when the appeal to the Commissioner was dismissed, namely, the 3rd January 1930. The suit, inasmuch as it was laid beyond a year from that date, was barred by limitation.

As already stated there was another complaint urged on behalf of the plaintiff as against the sale and the plaintiff relied upon it as giving rise to a question of jurisdiction. Now, that complaint is this. It was urged that under S. 146 of the Regulation which is a section appearing in Ch. 8 thereof headed "procedure," any person who has become liable for any amount as surety for a defaulter or Revenue Officer may be proceeded against in the manner prescribed in Ch. 5 as if he were a defaulter for such amount. It has been argued that having regard to the provisions of this section, the procedure to be followed for the purpose of enforcing the security as against the plaintiff is the procedure contained in Ch. 5. The only section of Ch. 5 which may be taken to apply to a case where property other than the property in arrears is to be put up to sale is S. 91 of the Regulation. It may be stated here that there are certain papers on the record which show that different views used to be taken by different authorities on this question. For instance, there is an order of Mr. Bentick, Commissioner of Assam Valley Districts dated 3rd January 1930, in which he expressed the view that a sale of this kind is not governed by the provisions of Chap. 5 of the Regulation. On the other hand there are other documents specially an order of the Governor in Council dated 20th October 1931 in which it has been held that Chap. 5 is applicable and that the sale of the present description in circumstances such as there are in the present case is to be regulated by the provisions of S. 91 of the Regulation. It appears also that in the Assam Land and Revenue Manual a note has been inserted whereby it has been made clear that when a Mauzadar defaults and the estate pledged by his surety is sold in consequence under the Regulation, the sale, being of an estate for arrears other than its own, is governed by the provisions of S. 91. So, at the present moment there is hardly any dispute that the sale of the present nature has to be held under the provision of S. 91 of the Regulation. That being the position it has been argued on behalf of the appellant that the conditions laid down in sub-s (1), S. 91 have got to be complied with before the properties could be legally put up to sale. Now, sub-s. (1), S. 91 says:

If an arrear cannot be recovered by any of the foregoing processes, and the defaulter is in possession of any immoveable property other than the estate in respect of which the arrear has accrued, the Deputy Commissioner may proceed against any of that other property situated within his district according to the law for the time being in force for the attachment and sale of immoveable property under the decree of a civil Court.

The argument is that S. 146 of the Regulation by making S. 91, sub-s. (1) applicable to a sale of this kind requires that before the sale can take place, the conditions laid down in that sub-section have been fulfilled. One of the conditions of that sub-section is that the arrears could not be recovered by any of the foregoing processes and on reference to the previous section, it would appear that two of the foregoing processes were contained in S. 69 and S. 70, S. 69 relating to attachment and sale of moveables of the defaulter and S. 70 providing for the sale of the defaulting estate. It is clear, however, that when the hypothecated property of a surety is put up to sale one of these foregoing provisions, namely, that contained in S. 70, cannot apply. But the argument is that the provisions, in so far as they are applicable, should be applied; and that, therefore, the moveables of the defaulter for seizure of which processes had already issued should have been put up to sale and the result of that sale should have awaited in order to see whether the arrears could be realized or not and it was only when it would be found after the sale of the moveables that the arrears could not be realized that it would be open to the authorities to put the plaintiff's properties to sale.

As a matter of construction of S. 146 of the Regulation, my own view is that that section merely lays down the procedure under which the sale would take place. It says, any person may be proceeded against in the manner prescribed in Chap. 5; and though certain conditions are laid down in sub-s. (1), S. 91 which have to be fulfilled in order to bring to sale the estate of the defaulter other than the defaulting estate, in my opinion, it was not intended by S. 146 that those provisions would have to be complied with before the properties of the surety are put up to sale. Indeed, the view that I take seems to receive support from the fact that with regard to a sale to be held in respect of properties belonging to a surety one of the provisions foregoing that contained in S. 91, namely, provisions contained in S. 70 of the Regulation, is admittedly inapplicable. At the same time I am of opinion that the procedure which has hitherto obtained in the province with regard to the sales of immovable properties belonging to the sureties, that is to say of proceeding against the moveables of the defaulter before proceeding against the surety and which as far as we are able to see from the papers before us was the procedure that was attempted to be resorted to in the first instance in the present case is a procedure which is fair and reasonable. It appears from the order of the Governor-in Council dated 20th October 1931 to which reference has already been made that the Government took the view that the opening words of S. 91 show that before the defaulter's immovable property can be sold thereunder the other processes mentioned in Chap. 5 must be exhausted and that the same procedure should be adopted with regard to sales of properties hypothecated by sureties. Apparently, the Government have adopted what textbook writers and Judges have characterised as a humane construction and inasmuch as that construction is fair and reasonable it is open to the Courts to adopt it.

But, however that may be, what has happened in the present case is that although steps were taken first of all to have the moveables of the defaulter sold, those steps proved infructuous and while the moveable which had been attached remained in the custody of the other surety, Protap Narayan Dutta, the Revenue authorities, finding that the said Protap Narayan Dutta was not going to produce the moveables before the Court, proceeded to put up the plaintiff's properties to sale for the purpose of enforcing the surety bond which he had executed. It may be stated here that according to the terms of the surety bond it was not necessary that the remedies as against the defaulter should have been exhausted. The surety bond distinctly states that if the revenue due is not paid in due time the surety would remain liable for the amount mentioned in the schedule. As a matter of strict construction of S. 146, I am inclined to take the view that the course which was adopted in the present case was one which was open to Revenue authorities to take for the purpose of realizing the amount. There is, however, another objection and that is, in my opinion, a fatal objection to the plaintiff succeeding on this ground. The suit, even though it may be taken as a suit to set aside the sale on the aforesaid ground, was a suit which would come within the provisions of S. 82, sub-s. (2) of the Act. However much it may be said that the Revenue authorities would have no jurisdiction to proceed to realise the arrears from the properties of the surety, the plaintiff in order to get over this bar of limitation will have to show that the proceedings that were taken were ab initio void. That cannot be said of the proceedings that were taken in the present case. All the different steps in the procedure have been laid down in the Regulation itself and if some of the steps have not been taken by the Revenue authorities which they should have taken, still it was a sale held under the provisions of the Regulation and the plaintiff in order to succeed will have to get that sale set aside. And once it is stated that it is a suit for the purpose of setting aside the sale held under the Regulation, the suit will have to comply with the provisions of sub-s. (2), S. 80. In that view of the matter the suit as laid must be held to be barred. This disposes of the objections on which the plaintiff took his stand for the purpose of getting the sale set aside on the grounds of irregularity or illegality. But there is one other part of the case which was put forward before the Court below and which has been disposed of by the learned Subordinate Judge in these words:

A new question of law had been introduced by the plaintiff's pleader during the later stage of the hearing of the suit, and which had been protested to by the defence. It is contended that the splitting up of the Barkhetri Mouza into two Mouzas made the security bond of plaintiff null and void and that his property was not legally liable to be sold for the default of Sarat Chandra, who actually became the Sarbarahakar of the newly created Barkhetri Mouza. I hold that plaintiff is barred not only by waiver but also by estoppel to take up such a plea now. He submitted to the changed order of things and continued as surety for Sarat Chandra (whatever might have been the area of his jurisdiction) to the extent of Rs. 8,400. Further, this ground was not especially urged in his appeal to the Commissioner under the provisions of S. 82 (2) of the Regulation and so the plaintiff is debarred from raising such a new plea in the civil Court.

It seems to us that the learned Judge has been in error in disposing of this matter in the way that he has done. It must be stated here that if the suit is based upon this ground it is not a suit for setting aside the sale but only for a declaration that the sale was void ab initio. A suit of this character would not be a suit for setting aside the sale nor a suit under the general law for a similar purpose. It would be a suit for a declaration that it was outside the powers of the Revenue authorities to bring the properties to sale because the plaintiff was under no liability under his surety bond. The learned Subordinate Judge was also in error in supposing that it was necessary that the ground should have been taken in the application to the Commissioner. In the application to the Commissioner the facts relevant to this question were stated and in the appeal which the plaintiff preferred to the Local Government the facts were similarly stated. But the ground itself not being a ground either of mere irregularity and illegality, and for the purposes of an application of that nature irregularity and illegality stand on one and same footing, this question can very well be agitated in a civil Court even though it was not raised in that application. It is difficult to make out what the learned Subordinate Judge means by saying that there was waiver or estoppel on the part of the plaintiff. There are no materials whatsoever upon which such a conclusion could be come to.

The facts upon which this ground is based are set out in para. 2 of the plaint. It does not appear that any issue with regard to this matter was framed because as a matter of fact the statement contained in this paragraph was not attempted to be refuted in the written statement of the defendant. It appears also that the plaintiff went into evidence with regard to this matter and examined certain witnesses from the revenue department and made out a prima facie case to the effect that he never entered into a fresh surety bond and did not continue to act as a surety after the mouza had been split up. The original offer he had made was with regard to a very different contract, as has been stated above and that offer could not hold good, unless there was consent on the part of the offeror in respect of an appointment of the Sarbarakar, which in its essence was a different appointment. The mouza for which the appointment was made was only a part of the other mouza and the amounts of revenue and of the surety were also different. But it appears that although the facts were set out in the plaint, no special point of this matter was made in the paragraph of the plaint where the irregularities and illegalities upon which the plaintiff was relying for relief in the plaint were set out. And it also appears that the defendant went into evidence first and it was after the defendant's evidence had been closed that the plaintiff called witnesses and attempted to get it established that he was not liable under the original surety bond having regard to the altered circumstances. In these circumstances, we think we should accede to the prayer which the defendant has made, namely, that now the plaintiff is relying upon this case he should be given proper opportunity to rebut it. It appears that when evidence was being given on behalf of the plaintiff with regard to this matter, an application was put in on behalf of the defendant objecting to that course. The Subordinate Judge apparently did not take any notice of this objection then and although the judgment was not delivered till after three months had expired from the date on which evidence had closed, the question of affording the defendant an opportunity to adduce rebutting evidence was not thought of by the Court or the parties.

Having regard to the fact that although the case had been made in the plaint, there was no distinct prayer for relief on the basis of it, that there was no issue framed and that the defendant has given evidence before any evidence on this question was led by the plaintiff we think it right that the case should be sent back to the Court below in order that this part of it may be re-tried. The questions which we have dealt with already in this judgment will not be allowed to be re-opened.

The result is that the appeal will succeed and no question which has already been dealt with in this judgment being allowed to be re-opened, the case will be tried only on the question of the plaintiff's liability on the basis of the surety bond. It is only this matter which the Court below will investigate further and having done so the said Court will dispose of the case in accordance with law. Costs of this appeal will abide the result.

Jack, J.—I agree.

A.L./R.K.

Case remanded.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 721

D. N. MITTER AND S. K. GHOSE, JJ.

Khatejan Bibi—Plaintiff—Appellant.
v.

Haji Mahomed Yusuf and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1091 of 1933, Decided on 6th July 1936, from decree of Addl. Dist. Judge, 2nd Court, 24-Parganas, D/- 26th January 1933.

1936 C/91 & 92

(a) Pardanashin Lady—Execution of deed by illiterate young pardanashin lady in favour of relation—Rule that persons relying on document should satisfy Court as to her understanding the same should apply with greater force.

Where at the time of execution of an Ammukhtarnama by a Pardanashin lady in favour of her relative, the pardanashin lady was illiterate and young and her relative was of immoral character:

Held: that the rule that in the case of deeds and powers executed by pardanashin ladies, those who rely on them should satisfy the Court that they had been explained to and understood by those who execute them, should apply with greater force: 7 Cal 245 and 29 Cal 749, Rel. on. [P 722 C 2]

(b) Pardanashin Lady—Deed executed by pardanashin lady—Question as to binding nature—Facts existing on date of execution and not on date of suit should be considered.

In a suit brought many years after the execution of an Ammukhtarnama by a pardanashin lady, the question at issue was whether the deed was binding on her. The Judge issued a commission for enquiring whether she was illiterate and came to the conclusion that she was not illiterate on the date of the report of the commission:

Held: the matter had to be considered with reference to the material date, i. e., the date of execution of the Ammukhtarnama and not the date of her deposing before the commission. [P 723 C 1]

Harendra Kumar Sarbadhikary and Subodh Chandra Dutt—for Appellant.

Bijan Kumar Mukherjee, Kanaidhan Dutt and Jogneswar Mazumdar—for Respondents.

Ramendra Mohan Majumdar — for Deputy Registrar.

D. N. Mitter, J.—This is an appeal by the plaintiff from the decision of the Additional District Judge of 24-Parganas dated 26th January 1933 reversing the decision of the Subordinate Judge of the same district dated 27th March 1931 by which he decreed plaintiff's suit for declaration of title and recovery of possession of the properties mentioned in the schedule to the plaint. The case stated in the plaint is that the land in suit belonged to one Pecheruddi Mistri who died leaving him surviving him his son Belatali, his daughter Khatijan Bibi, (plaintiff) and his wife Abujan Bibi. Belatali died leaving behind him two wives, Nakjan and Kossiman, his sister Khatijan (the plaintiff) and his mother Abujan. Abujan is dead and plaintiff claims 6 annas 13 gandas 1 kara share of the property which she inherited from Pecheruddi and his heirs. It is further stated in the plaint that plain-tiff's brother got an Ammukhtarnama executed by her and her mother and Nekjan Bibi, alleging that the execution of the Ammukhtarnama was necessary for the purposes of the management of their property, but the contents of the said Ammukhtarnama were never read over or explained to her, and that she never authorised Belatali to sell or mortgage any land of hers by this Ammukhtarnama and that she is an illiterate pardanashin, woman and that her husband and brother were both men of dissolute habits and that on the strength of this Ammukhtarnama Belatali executed a mortgage by way of conditional sale in the year 1324 B. S. in respect of 53 bighas odd (of which 35 bighas odd are the lands in suit and the remaining 17 bighas odd belonged to Nekjan Bibi) in favour of Haji Abdulla for Rs. 1,000 whereas the value of the property would be about three thousand rupees. As regards the 17½ bighas land Nekjan brought a suit against Abdulla to set aside the kobala and was successful. The plaintiff further alleged that the document of 1324 B. S. really constituted a mortgage and has prayed for redemption of the same if the Court holds that the document binds her. Haji Abdulla is now dead and defendants 1 to 8 are his heirs and legal representatives. To this suit to avoid the document or in the alternative to redeem, plaintiff joined the prayer for declaration of title and recovery of possession. The defence of the defendant is that there was no fraud or undue influence and that the deed in question was an out and out sale and not a mortgage by way of conditional sale. On these pleadings several issues were joined and they are set forth at p. 2 of the paper-book. Substantially three questions arose for determination before the Subordinate Judge: (1) Was the Ammukhtarnama executed by plaintiff and her mother after fully understanding the purport of the same? (2) If not was the conveyance in favour of Abdulla binding on the plaintiff? and (3) Was there any agreement between Belatali and the defendant's predecessor Haji Abdulla that defendant will reconvey the property in suit on the repayment of Rs. 1,000?

The Subordinate Judge found (1) that there is no evidence that the Ammukhtarnama (of which only a certified copy was produced in Court) was read over and explained to plaintiff and her mother;

(2) that the power of attorney was executed under undue influence; (3) that the sale on the strength of this power of attorney or Ammukhtarnama was not binding on the plaintiff or her mother and that the plaintiff was entitled to a declaration of title to the share claimed less the share which she inherited from her brother Belatali after his death; and (4) that the deed in question was an out and out sale and not a mortgage by way of conditional sale. The Subordinate Judge accordingly declared plaintiff's title to 5/12ths share in the property in suit and directed that she do get possession of the same.

Against this decree an appeal was taken to the Additional District Judge of 24. Parganas. The learned District Judge states rightly enough that the question to be decided is whether Abujan and Khatijan did understand the nature of the transaction when they executed their Ammukhtarnama but does not come to a definite finding on the question. The Subordinate Judge whose finding the learned District Judge was reversing, came to the distinct finding that there was no evidence that the Ammukhtarnama was read or explained either to plaintiff or her mother. The learned District Judge finds that "it may well be true, as was alleged, that at the time the Ammukhtarnama was executed plaintiff was a young and inexperienced girl" and one would have expected that the lower appellate Court should have held that the rule laid down by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in a number of cases that in the case of deeds and powers executed by Pardanashin ladies it is requisite that those who rely on them should satisfy the Court that they have been explained to and understood by those who execute them, should apply with greater force having regard to the illiteracy, youth and inexperience of plaintiff and her mother and their liability to be influenced or imposed on by near relations like her brother or son who are alleged to be men of weak character and immoral habits: See 8 I A 39=7 Cal 245 (1) and 29 I A 127=29 Cal 749 (2).

1. Sudhist Lal v. Sheobarat Koer, (1881) 7 Cal 245=8 I A 39 (P C).

2. Shambati Koeri v. Jago Bibi, (1902) 29 Cal 749=29 I A 127 (P C).

These strict rules regarding the burden of proof of persons dealing with Pardana-shin ladies have been laid down as Lord Sumner pointed out in a recent case "for the protection of the defenceless in India, and it is a matter of obligation upon their Lordships to be strict and unwavering about it:" 52 I A 342 (3). In arriving at the conclusion that the Ammukhtarnama is valid what are the considerations that have weighed with the lower appellate Court? They are: that the suit is brought eleven years after the execution of the kobala, in 1324, during which period it was not disputed by either Abujan or Khatijan. This reasoning of the learned Judge assumes that the plaintiff or her mother knew of the kobala as from the date of its execution. The learned Judge does not refer to such evidence or discuss the same. The next consideration of the learned Judge is "but a perusal of her examination and cross-examination taken on commission shows that she is far from being a helpless or uneducated woman now." The fallacy in this reasoning is that the matter has to be considered with reference to the material date, viz., the date of execution of the Ammukhtarnama which is many many years prior to the date she was deposing on commission when she may be more experienced in the world's affairs and less entitled to the protection given to illiterate Pardana-shin women. The learned Judge in appeal proceeds to observe:

The fact that so long a time did elapse before the suit was instituted raises considerable doubts in my mind as to the good faith in which it is now brought, and the law is not to be twisted to protect actions which are not brought in good faith.

This reasoning seems to me to be again vitiated by the assumption that the plaintiff knew of the execution of the deed of sale from the year 1324 B. S.: Then the learned Judge proceeds to find that the fact that she had knowledge regarding a mortgage executed by her husband along with Belatali in 1913 and her acquiescence during subsequent years now estops her from calling it into question. The learned Judge does not find that this mortgage was with reference to the property now in suit; on the other hand the finding of the Subordinate Judge is that there was a forced acquiescence on the part of Khatijan Bibi in regard to the sale on the basis of mortgage executed by her husband and Belatali: see page 4 lines 20-30 of the Subordinate Judge's judgment in the paper book. We are of opinion that there has not been a definite finding of the lower appellate Court on the main issue as to whether the Ammukhtarnama was read over and explained to Khatijan or her mother after an analysis of the relevant evidence on the point. We accordingly set aside the judgment of the learned District Judge and direct him to rehear the appeal on two questions: (1) Whether the Ammukhtarnama was read over and explained to both plaintiff and her mother and whether they executed the document after fully understanding its purport and not being under undue influence; and (2) what is the extent of the share of the plaintiff in the disputed property? If the learned Judge finds that the burden of proving the affirmative of Question No. 1 has been discharged by the defendants he will dismiss plaintiff's suit and it will not be necessary to determine point No. 2. If the appellate Court answers Question No. 1 in the negative it will determine plaintiff's share and give her a decree for such share. Both Courts have concurrently found that the document which is sought to be avoided is an out and out sale and we do not disturb the finding which will not be re-opened again. Costs are to abide the result. We express the hope, however, that instead of prolonging this litigation parties will reach a settlement.

S. K. Ghose, J.—I agree.

D.S./R K.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 723

R. C. MITTER, J.

Surendra Kumar Guha—Petitioner.
v.

Jamini Kumar Guha and others—
Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 157 of 1936, Decided on 7th July 1936, from order of 2nd Court Munsif, Feni, D/- 28th November 1935.

Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 63 and 73—Different Courts attaching same property of same judgment-debtor at instance of different decree-holders—Applications for execution to respective Courts—One Court realizing sale proceeds—Rateable distribution held is to be made by superior Court or in case Courts are of same grade by Court which first attached property.

3. Faridunessa v. Mukhtar Ahmad, 1925 P O 204=89 I C 649=52 I A 342=47 All 703=28 O O 338 (P O).

Section 63 contemplates the case where attachments of the same property have been made by different Courts at the instance of the different decree-holders of the common judgment-debtor and provides for the distribution among them of the proceeds of the attached property by one of such Courts only. The principle underlying it is the principle of convenience, the principle of avoiding multiplicity of proceedings, the principle of fair distribution, and not the principle of exclusion. The distribution is to be made by the superior Court, and if all the Courts be of the same grade, the distribution is to be made by the Court which first attached the property. For this purpose, it is the duty of the Court of inferior grade or the Court of same grade which had attached last of all to send the sale proceeds to the superior Court, or if all the Courts be of the same grade to the Court which first attached the property, and the proceeds so received shall be deemed to have been received on behalf of all the Courts in which there have been attachments in execution of money decrees prior to the actual receipt of assets. The decree-holders in all such Courts will be entitled to rateable distribution under S. 73: Case law referred. [P 726 C 1, 2]

Nani Gopal Dass—for Petitioner.

Rajendra Chandra Guha and Amiya K. Sen—for Opposite Parties.

A. Quasem—for Deputy Registrar.

Order.—The petitioner instituted a suit for recovery of money against opposite parties Nos. 2 to 8 in the Second Court of the Munsif at Feni, being Money Suit No. 501 of 1934. Some immoveable property of the said opposite parties was attached before judgment on 19th March 1934, on his application. He obtained his decree on 4th September 1934, and on 4th February 1935, applied for execution of his decree in that Court (Money Execution Case No. 32 of 1935). The opposite party No. 1 also obtained a money decree against the said opposite parties Nos. 2 to 8 in a suit instituted by him in the first Court of the Munsif at Feni and on 19th November 1934, applied in that Court for execution (Money Execution Case No. 445 of 1934). The properties which had been attached before judgment by the petitioner were attached by the First Court of the Munsif at Feni on 20th December 1934. In the sale proclamation issued by that Court, 11th March 1935 was the date fixed for sale. On 8th March 1935, the petitioner made an application to the Second Court of the Munsif at Feni, in which Court his application for execution was pending. In that application he stated that the opposite party No. 1 was executing his decree for money against the same judgment-debtors in the first Court and that 11th March 1935 had been fixed for sale. He prayed for rateable distribution. On that application the Second Court passed an order on the same date requiring petitioner "to show papers" that the judgment-debtors were the same." The next day the petitioner satisfied the Court that the judgment-debtors were the same and on that the Court (Second Court of the Munsif at Feni) passed order No. 5 dated 9th March 1935, in these terms:

Heard pleader. Prayer for rateable distribution of the assets to be fetched at the sale of the above Money Execution Case No. 445 of 1934 is allowed. Send a copy of this order to the local first Court for favour of passing necessary orders for rateable distribution. The claim of this case is Rs. 270-4-0.

On 18th March 1935, the Second Court passed the following order: "(Order No. 6) Put up on 27th April 1935 for rateable distribution with the Money Execution Case No. 445 of 1934 of the local First Court." The first mentioned order (No. 5) reached the First Court on 11th March 1935, but before its arrival that Court had allowed by its order No. 6, dated 11th March 1935, the decree-holder (opposite party No. 1) to bid at the sale, but on receipt of the said order, it passed on the same date order No. 7 which is in these terms:

Received the copy of O. 5 dated 9th March 1935, passed in Money Execution Case No. 32 of 1935 of the local Second Court. It appears that the decree-holder of the above execution case prayed for rateable distribution of the assets to be fetched at the sale of immoveables. The Nazir is accordingly directed to realise the purchase money in cash, so as to have the same rateably distributed between the decree-holders of both the cases.

Opposite party No. 1 did not proceed with the sale of lot No. 1. The sale of the other lots by the First Court could not be held on the 11th or 12th March, but it was held on 13th March 1935. Opposite Party No. 1 purchased one lot and the rest were purchased by a stranger, Sudhir Kumar Bhowmik. Earnest money of 25 per cent was deposited on that date, and the balance in April, within 30 days of the sale. An application to set aside the sale was made but was dismissed on 23rd September 1935. Thereafter the purchaser failed to deposit the landlord's transfer fee in respect of lot No. 5 with the result that the sales of lots Nos. 2 to 4, 6, 7 and 8 were confirmed and the first Court passed an order on 26th September 1935 stating that the petitioner would get by way of rateable distribution the sum of Rs. 131-5-9. The said sum of money was placed to his credit and the second Court was informed by the first Court. Opposite Party No. 1 thereafter filed on 26th September 1935 in the second Court an objection to the claim for rateable distribution which had been made by the petitioner in the Court and had already been allowed. On 28th November 1935, the Second Court allowed this objection and recalled its order No. 5 dated 9th March 1935. It held that (a) it had no jurisdiction to order rateable distribution as the assets were held not by it, but by the First Court and (b) that the petitioner had no right to rateable distribution as he had not made an application for execution of his decree to the first Court which held the assets. It is against this order that the petitioner has moved this Court. He maintains that Order No. 5 dated 9th March 1935, is the correct order and prayed for its restoration.

The question involved depends upon the interpretation of Ss. 63 and 73, Civil P. C. There is a mass of case law on the subject and the High Courts have taken divergent views, and as I read the case law, there is sharp conflict of opinion in the decisions of the Madras and Bombay High Courts, but so far as this Court is concerned except for one or two decisions, a well-marked, definite and consistent course has been taken. Before reviewing the important decisions of the different High Courts, it is necessary that the precise scope of Ss. 63 and 73 should be examined. At the outset one fundamental identity and one fundamental distinction are apparent. The scope of both the sections is the fair distribution of the proceeds of sale among the judgment-creditors of the common judgment-debtors, certain conditions being fulfilled by the former. That is the common feature. But the fundamental distinction is that the fund available for distribution under S. 73 among those creditors is the entire fund realized or received by the executing Court. (I am not considering the proviso which may be left out of consideration for the present purpose.) The funds available for distribution under S. 63 are the proceeds of common property attached by the judgment-creditors. It is the fact of attachment and attachment of the identical properties by the several judgment-creditors that bring into operation S. 63. To make the point clear, the following two illustrations are helpful: (1) A, who has a decree for payment of money against J, executes his decree in the Court of a particular Subordinate Judge and sells the judgment-debtor's properties, X, Y and Z. If other persons B, C and D who have decrees for payment of money against the same judgment-debtor apply for execution of their decrees in the Court of the said Subordinate Judge before the receipt of the proceeds of the sale of X, Y and Z, the whole of the proceeds of the sale will have to be rateably distributed amongst A, B, C and D under S. 73. B, C, and D need not have proceeded further beyond making their application for execution in that Court. A, who has a decree for payment of money against J, executes his decree in the Court of a particular Subordinate Judge and attaches and sells properties X, Y and Z the proceeds of which are received by that Court. B, C and D, who have decrees for payment of money against J, proceed to execute their respective decrees in other Courts, say the first, second and third Court of the Munsif of a particular place, and attach respectively X, Y and Z. These attachments are effected before the sale proceeds are received by the Subordinate Judge. They do not apply for execution of their decrees in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, nor are their executions transferred to that Court before the receipt of assets by that Court, but they bring the fact of the attachments to the notice of the Subordinate Judge. The entire proceeds of the sale of X, Y and Z cannot be distributed by the Subordinate Judge amongst A, B, C and D rateably under S. 63, but the proceeds of the sale of X has to be distributed rateably between A and B, those of Y between A and C and those of Z between A and D. This view which I am taking of the scope of S. 63 has been advanced by Abdur Rahim, J. in 35 Mad 588 (1). The relevant passage in the judgment is at p. 590 and runs as follows:

What the decree-holder of the Munsif's Court is entitled to, when there is no transfer of his decree to the District Court, is not a general execution of his decree by the District Court or rateable distribution in all the assets of the judgment-debtor received by the District Court but only to share by virtue of his attachment in the proceeds of the attached property realized. To a relief, so limited, it appears to me to be not essential that the decree of the Munsif's Court shall have been previously transferred to the District Court, though this view runs counter to the observations in 6 Mad 357 (2) as to the need of transfer.

1. Arimuthu Chetti v. Vyapuripandaram, (1912) 35 Mad 588=8 I O 852=21 M L J 505.

Section 63 contemplates the case where attachments of the same property have been made by different Courts at the instance of the different decree-holders of the common judgment-debtor and provides for the distribution among them of the proceeds of the attached property by one of Courts only. The principle underlying it is the principle of convenience, the principle of avoiding multiplicity of proceedings, the principle of fair distribution and not the principle of exclusion. The distribution is to be made by the superior Court, and if all the Courts be of the same grade, the distribution is to be made by the Court which first attached the property. Any other view of S. 63 would make the position manifestly unjust. A person obtains a decree for money over Rs. 5,000 in the Court of the Subordinate Judge, applies for execution there and attaches a property. Another person obtains a decree for money against the same judgment-debtor for Rs. 500 in a Munsif's Court, applies for execution there and attaches the same property. The Munsif being unaware of the attachment effected by the Subordinate Judge, sells the property before the Subordinate Judge could put it up for sale. The sale by the Munsif would be a valid one. If S. 73 is to be regarded as the only section for rateable distribution, the person who obtained the decree for over Rs. 5,000 in the Subordinate Judge's Court would not be able to claim rateable distribution, if the terms of S. 73 be strictly construed and S. 63 be not looked into, because he would not, as has been pointed out in 46 Cal 64 (3) and 49 Bom 655 (4), be able to apply for execution of his decree in the Munsif Court, by reason of the limited pecuniary jurisdiction of the Munsif.

Cases of such sales by Courts of inferior grades, where the property was under attachment effected by a Court of superior grade or where the Courts are of the same grade by the Court which attached later in point of time, had come before the Courts when the Code of 1882 was in force. A provision corresponding to sub-s. (2), S. 63 was not in S. 285 of the Code of 1882. So far as this High Court is concerned, it has consistently held that such sales are valid, but this Court has pointed out that in such cases it is the duty of the Court of inferior grade or the Court of same grade which had attached last of all, as the case may be, to send the sale proceeds to the Court of superior grade for distribution, or if all the Courts be of the same grade, to the Court which first attached the property. This was pointed out first by Pontifex, J., in 7 Cal 410 (5) at p. 413 and this principle has been almost consistently followed in this Court, which has held that the Court of superior grade or of the same grade which had first attached the property, as the case may be, is to distribute the sale proceeds amongst all the attaching decree-holders: 12 Cal 333 (6); 21 Cal 200 (7); 2 C W N 126 (8); 29 Cal 773 (9) and 46 Cal 64 (3). The Bombay and Madras High Courts, which in the matter of distribution of sale proceeds in such cases had taken different views, ultimately veered round to the same position: 55 Bom 473 (10); 35 Mad 588 (1); 26 M L J 406 (11); see also 55 All 622 (12), where most of the earlier cases are noticed. When such assets are not sent by the Court holding the sale to the Court which is given the right to distribute the same under the provisions of S. 63, there is a difference of opinion in the matter of procedure only.

This Court and the Bombay High Court have held that the District Judge is to be moved for asking the Court holding the sale to send the sale proceeds to the proper Court, but some of the other, High Courts have held that the Court of superior grade or the Court which first attached the property, as the case may be, can of its own motion make the requisition. So far as the case before me is 5. Obhoy Churn Kundu v. Golam Ali, (1891) 7 Cal 410=9 C L R 361.

6. Bykanta Nath Shaha v. Rajendra Narayan Roy, (1886) 12 Cal 333.

7. Clark v. Alexander, (1894) 21 Cal 200.

8. Har Bhagat v. Annadaram, (1898) 2 O W N 126.

9. Bhugwan Chandra v. Chandra Malla, (1902) 29 Cal 773=1 C L J 97=6 C W N 67.

10. Shidappa v. Guru Gumsangya, 1931 Bom 350=133 I C 817=33 B L R 537=55 Bom 473.

11. Narasimachariar v. Krishnamachariar, 1914 Mad 454=23 I C 909=26 M L J 406.

12. Sarju Ram v. Pratap Narain, 1933 All 563=146 I C 575=55 All 622=1933 A L J 921.

2. Muttalagiri v. Muttayyar, (1883) 6 Mad 357.

3. Nilkanta Rai v. Gosta Behary 1919 Cal 545=44 I C 249=46 Cal 64=27 C L J 145.

4. Deckappa v. Chanbasappa, 1925 Bom 420=89 I C 980=49 Bom 655=27 Bom L R 917.

concerned it makes no difference because I can direct, as was done in 46 Cal 64 (3), the sale proceeds to be sent by the first Court of the Munsif at Feni to the second Court of the Munsif of that place and direct the last mentioned Court to distribute the sale proceeds rateably among the petitioner and the opposite party No. 1. In my judgment the correct principle in such cases has been formulated by Wallis, J. in 26 M L J 406 (11) in the following passage:

What however where the attachments are in different Courts and the property is received or realised by the Court of the highest grade under S. 63? In such a case there is no receipt at all by the other Courts unless the receipt by the Court of highest grade can be deemed to be a receipt by the other creditors as well. (The word 'creditors' in the report is obviously a slip for the word 'Courts'). In my opinion this is the correct view and it is only for the purposes of convenience that the highest Court is made the collecting Court, and the Court to adjudicate on claims and objections and the property received or realised must be deemed to have been received or realised by or on behalf of all the Courts in which there have been attachments in execution of money decrees prior to the actual receipt of assets. If this be so, then the decree holders in the other Courts are entitled to rateable distribution under the very terms of S. 73.

It is in this view that it can be said, as has been said in 6 Rang 131 (13) and 61 Cal 240 (14), that S. 73 must be read in conjunction with S. 63. I accordingly make the rule absolute, set aside the order complained of and restore the order No. 5 of the Munsif, Second Court, Feni, dated 9th March 1935. The sale proceeds to be sent by the first Court of the Munsif at Feni to second Court of the Munsif of that place, in order that the last mentioned Court may make the rateable distribution among the petitioner and opposite party No. 1. The petitioner will have his costs of this Court and of the Court below from opposite party No. 1. Hearing fee 1 gold mohur.

D.S./R.K. Rule made absolute.

13. Kwai Tong Kee v. Lim Chaung Ghee, 1928 Rang 157=110 I C 744=6 Rang 131.

14. Gourgopal De Sarkar v. Kamal Kalika Datta, 1934 Cal 559=152 I C 69=61 Cal 240.

* A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 727

D. N. MITTER AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Mati Lal Daga and others—Appellants.

v.

(Sri Sri) Iswar Radha Damodar Chandra Jew Thakur—Respondents.

Appeal No. 305 of 1932, Decided on 6th May 1936.

* (a) Lease—Liability of sub-lessee—Plaintiff granting lease of coal mines to lessee—Agreement to work mines on certain lines—Lessee sub leasing his leasehold rights—Sub-lessee having constructive notice of agreement with lessee—Sub-lessee working mines contrary to agreement—Suit by plaintiff against sub-lessee for damages—Defendant contending want of privity to agreement with original lessee—Want of privity in spite of constructive notice held good defence only in affirmative covenants—In case of restrictive covenants in agreement, constructive notice makes sub-lessee liable.

Plaintiff was a head-lessor who granted lease of his coal mines to another under an agreement that the mines would be worked on certain lines. The lessee transferred his leasehold rights to the defendant who worked the mines contrary to the agreement with the first lessee. The transfer to defendant did neither cover the entire period nor the entire property of the original lease granted by the head lessor the plaintiff. The defendant had constructive notice of the agreement between the head-lessor and the original lessee. In a suit between the plaintiff and defendant for damages due to working of mines against the agreement it was contended that the defendant was not liable and constructive notice would not affect the defendant, because the basis of the principle is not whether the sub-lessee had notice of the covenants or not but want of privity of contract or estate as between the lessor and sub-lessee:

Held: that that might be so with reference to affirmative covenants but not so with restrictive covenants where the question of notice became very material even if there was want of privity of contract or estate as between lessor and sub-lessee: Hornoy v. Cardwell, (1881) 8 Q B D 329; Tulk v. Mawhay, (1848) 2 Ph 774; Haywood v. Brunswick Permanent Benefit Building Society, (1881) 8 Q B D 403 and Lord Strantheona Ltd. v. Dominion Coal Co. Ltd., (1926) A C 108, Ref. [P 733 C 1]

(b) Restrictive covenant—Essentials of—Vendor must retain some benefit in ascertainable land—Property need not be outside demised premises.

It is essential for a covenant to be restrictive that the covenantee must retain some interest in the land for the benefit of which the covenant is entered into. The property for the benefit of which restrictive covenant is entered into need not be independent of or outside the demised premises. In order that a covenant may be a restrictive covenant all that is necessary is that the covenant must be for the benefit of some ascertainable property retained by the vendor: Formby R. v. Barker, (1903) 2 Ch 539, Rel. on. [P 733 C 2; P 734 C 2]

(c) Lease—Reversion—Lease for long term—Lessor retains right of reversion—Conveyance in fee simple differs from perpetual lease.

Where a person grants a lease of his property for a very long term, for example of four hundred and ninety-nine years, the lessor still retains a right of reversion as against the lessee. There is always a distinction between a conveyance in fee simple and a lease in perpetuity: 1934 Bom 184 (F B), Dissent.; 24 Cal 440 and 36 Cal 1003 (P C), Rel. on. [P 734 C 1]

(d) Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 40—Restrictive covenant—Immoveable property—Property leased out—Lessee retaining right of reversion—Such right amounts to immoveable property—Negative stipulation for beneficial enjoyment of that right—Provisions of S. 40 are applicable.

The words 'immoveable property' are not defined in the Transfer of Property Act. One has to look for its definition to the General Clauses Act which again is not exhaustive. A benefit to arise out of land is interest in land and is therefore immoveable property. A person in whom there is reversion in property leased after the expiration of the term of 499 years is said to possess his own immoveable property and where for the more beneficial enjoyment of the reversion a negative stipulation is made, the principle of S. 40, T. P. Act, should be applied: 36 Cal 675; Dyson v. Forster, (1909) 4 C 98 and Rogers v. Hosegood, (1900) 2 Ch 388, Rel. on. [P 736 C 2]

(e) Mines Act (4 of 1923), S. 35—Presumption—Correctness of map.

As under S. 35, Mines Act, that Act prescribes a punishment for not preparing a plan, it is very unlikely that in such circumstances an incorrect plan would be submitted. [P 739 C 2]

(f) Mines and Minerals—Lease—Lessee working colliery after notice to quit—Suit for damages by lessor—Lessee is entitled to deduction for severing coal and bringing it to pit's mouth.

Where a person working a colliery under a legal title does so even after receipt of notice to quit, and the lessor sues for damages, he is entitled to the price of the coal removed but the lessee is entitled to deduction for severing the coal and bringing it to the pit's mouth: 1933 P C 29, Rel. on.; Bulli Coal Mining Co. v. Osborne, (1899) 4 C 351, Disting.

[P 740 C 2; P 741 C 1]

P. R. Das, S. C. Roy, G. K. Banerjee and Gopendra Krishna Banerjee—for Appellants.

Brojo Lal Chakravarti, Durga Charan Roy Choudhury, Panchanan Ghosal, Purusottam Chatterjee, Amiya Prosad Moitra and Amiruddin Ahmed (for Deputy Registrar)—for Respondents.

D. N. Mitter, J.—This is an appeal by defendants 5 to 9 against a preliminary judgment of the Subordinate Judge of Asansol dated 28th September 1932 by which he directed certain enquiry as to damages as also against the final decree passed by another Subordinate Judge on 5th October 1934, by which he directed the payment by the said defendants to the plaintiff of the sum of Rs. 1,80,747 for damages and for rents and royalties. The Hazra respondents describing themselves as Shobaites of a deity Sri Sri Radha Damodar Chandra Jiu Thakur brought the suit in which this appeal arises: (1) to recover khas possession of a colliery known as Kajora Colliery, which belongs to the deity in Putni right, (2) to recover one lakh twenty thousand from the defendants on account of the commission and royalties in arrears and for damages, and (3) for other reliefs. The suit was directed against (1) defendant 1 Narendra Chaudhury, in whose name a lease of the underground rights was taken from the plaintiff for a period of 499 years by Sudhansu Bhusan (defendant 11), (2) Defendants 2 and 3 (the Sarkars), transferees from the real lessee defendant 11; (3) Defendant 4, the Official Assignee, the Sarkars having been adjudged insolvent; (4) the Dagas, defendants 5 to 9, who advanced money to the Sarkars on mortgage of their leasehold rights in the Colliery; and (5) Defendant 10, Vithal Das, purchaser at the sale by the Official Assignee who are to sell the mortgaged property and to pay off the mortgage; and (6) defendant 11, the real lessee under the plaintiff.

The plaintiff deity founds its claim on the pottah executed in favour of defendant 1 on 31st Chaitra 1327, B. S.=13th April 1921 and filed the Kabuliyat which is the counterpart of the said pottah along with the plaint. It is common ground that defendants 2 and 3 took a transfer of the leasehold interest under the lease of 13th April 1921 from defendants 1 and 11, the real lessee. The plaintiff next alleges that defendants 5 to 9 (now appellants) took an English mortgage of the property in suit from defendants 2 and 3 on the basis of two registered deeds executed on 26th February 1923 and 17th December 1926 and that defendants 5 to 9 have become liable for the money sought to be recovered in the suit. The plaintiffs' case is that there have been breaches of several covenants contained in the kabuliat. One of such breaches is mentioned in para. 7 of the plaint which is reproduced below :

7. That the defendants did not keep square pillars at least 12 cubits in dimensions at a distance of eight cubits as mentioned in para. 6 of the said pottah and kabuliat and are cutting coal by making much wider galleries. In consequence of this there is likelihood of great damage being done to the coal mine. Moreover, in spite of repeated requests, the officers of this plaintiff were not allowed to go underground into the pits for inspection of the work of the mine, as stated in the said paragraph. Under the circumstances, the plaintiff had not been able to know the actual state of things in the mine.

The plaint further alleges that daily accounts of the coal raised from the mine have not been filed with the Shebait of the plaintiff in accordance with para. 16 of the pottah and kabuliati. The plaint further alleges that minimum and excess royalty have not been paid. The plaintiff after enumerating the breaches of covenant as aforesaid states that it has become entitled to get khas possession of the property in suit in accordance with the terms of pottah and kabuliati. The plaint alleges that a notice was sent by the deity plaintiff to the defendants on 14th September 1928 by registered post asking them to give up possession to the plaintiff, but the defendants have not given up khas possession, that the defendants are liable to be regarded as trespassers after the said notice and are bound to pay damages. In para. 10 of the plaint it is stated that as the defendants did not submit accounts regularly the plaintiff assessed the money claim at Rs. 84,000 approximately and the plaintiff was willing to pay deficit court-fees in case his claim is ultimately determined to be larger on final accounting. On this state of the pleading khas possession was asked for and there was a prayer for recovery of the damages and royalties, etc.

Defendants 5 to 9 (the Dagas) filed a written defence: see p. 122, Book A. They alleged that they did not violate any covenants contained in the lease in question; they deny that they have kept wider galleries; they allege that the statement in para. 7 of the plaint quoted above is false; they pleaded that the rule as to keeping of galleries of certain dimensions was not an inflexible rule and that the working of the mine was done with the full knowledge of plaintiffs and there was waiver and that the plaintiff's officers frequently used to come and inspect the mines, that the plaintiffs are estopped from claiming damages; that the claim for damages are excessive; that they are not trespassers and they did no injury to the colliery. On this state of the pleadings several issues were framed and decided, but it is not necessary to refer to them all as the question in controversy before us in appeal has been limited to certain issues. The material issues are: Issue 2 which is in these terms:

Whether the mortgages dated 26th February 1923 and 17th December 1926 were English mortgages as defined in the Transfer of Property Act. If so, are the mortgagees liable for the rents and royalties?

Issue 4 is to the following effect:

Are the defendants 5 to 9 liable to any portion of the claim. If so for what period and for how much?

Issue 5 raised the question of estoppel and waiver on the ground raised by the defence that the alleged breaches of the covenant were done with the knowledge and consent of the plaintiff. The Subordinate Judge who tried the suit in the first instance found: (1) that the mortgages in favour of the Dagas (defendants 5 to 9) are not English mortgages; (2) that there is no absolute assignment to the Dagas the mortgages being for 1 bigha less and the term being two days less; (3) the mortgage loan and security did not constitute an out and out transfer; (4) the Sarkars (mortgagors) remain tenants of the lessor (the plaintiff) all the time and they are liable for the rents although the Dagas were in possession; (5) the Dagas were really sub-lessees and he held that the Dagas were not liable for the rents and royalties as there was no privity of estate between the Dagas and the plaintiff; (6) that the Dagas are bound by breaches of covenants contained in the head lease of 13th April 1931; and (7) that the Dagas should be held liable for damages for two different periods on two different basis, i. e., they would be liable after notice for breach of contract for the sale of the coal and before notice for actual breaches only.

On this basis the first Subordinate Judge passed the preliminary judgment on 28th September 1932, directing an inquiry as to damages and referring the question to a Commissioner. The matter was referred to two Commissioners who submitted two reports. The matter of the passing of the final decree came before another Subordinate Judge who after considering the two reports of the Commissioners, as also a report passed before the preliminary decree, has granted a decree to the plaintiff for Rs. 1,80,747 by his judgment dated 5th October 1934. The present appeal was directed against the preliminary decree originally, but after the final decree was passed the memorandum of appeal was allowed to be amended so as to include the grounds of appeal against the final decree.

The first question of law which has been taken in the appeal is really an attack on the preliminary judgment which has made the Daga defendants (Nos. 5 to 9) liable for damages for breach of covenants contained in the head lease. It is argued that the Subordinate Judge below has committed an error in law in making the appellants liable for breach of covenants, for keeping proper pillars of coal for supporting the roof contained in the head lease Ex. 1 dated 13th April 1921 (Book B, p. 1) as they were no parties to the head lease and as they were not assignees of the head lease, but the mortgages in their favour being by way of sub-lease they were merely lessees under the Sarkars (defendants 2 and 3), the transferees from defendants 1 and 11, the head lessees. The argument of the appellant has been put in this way :

It is unarguable on the authorities that there being no privity between Dagas (sub-lessees) and the plaintiff the Dagas are liable for breach of covenants contained in the head lease, assuming that the breach was committed by the Dagas and that the view of the Subordinate Judge, that this rule does not apply as the Dagas had notice of the covenants contained in the head lease, is erroneous as the basis of the principle is not whether the sub-lessee had notice of the covenants, but that there is neither privity of contract nor estate as between the lessor and the sub-lessee, and the following authorities were cited in support of this contention: 1 Doug 183 (1) at p. 186 and 20 C L J 551 (2) at p. 554, Halsbury's Laws of England, Vol. 18, Art. 865.

In order to consider the soundness or otherwise of this contention it would be convenient at this stage to set forth the relevant parts of the lease containing the covenant for the breach of which this suit has been brought and then to narrate the circumstances under which defendants 5 to 9 were put in possession of the Colliery in question, and the subsequent events that followed up to the date of the institution of the suit. The plaintiff deity granted a lease to Narendra Kumar Chaudhury, defendant 1, on 13th April 1921 of the underground mineral rights in 181 bighas of land for 499 years on terms and conditions which are contained in the kabuliat (counterpart of the lease) printed at pp. 1 to 12 of Book B (Part 2). The relevant covenant is contained in para. 6 which is as follows :

In the pits which I shall make in the land settled I shall keep proper pillars of coal for supporting the roof, etc. I shall keep square pillars of coal at least 12 cubits in dimensions at an interval of every eight cubits and shall keep the mine clean. For inspection of the said work and other works, you or your officer or the surveyor appointed by you shall be entitled to go under the mine, and I shall be bound to show you or them all the places under-ground in the mine. If any sort of damage be caused to your property on account of not keeping such coal pillars or for not keeping the mine clean, I shall be liable for the loss at the rate of Rs. 2,000 (two thousand) per bigha for such extent of the property as would be damaged. Whenever any of you or your officers will inspect mine, he will note his remarks in my books. I shall keep intact the limits and boundaries of the land settled. I shall properly close the mouth of the exhausted pits by making pucca masonry structures approved of by you. If I do not do so, I shall be bound to pay the amount of loss sustained by you or the costs may be incurred by you for closing the same.

On 28th September 1921 there was a declaration of trust by defendant 1, Narendra, in favour of defendant 11 in respect of the leasehold property and it is common ground that defendant 11 Sudhangshu Bhusan Mukherjee is the real lessee under the lease of 13th April 1921 (Ex. 1). It is also common ground that the interest of Sudhangshu Mukherjee in the leasehold devolved by several intermediate transactions on 8th November 1922 on Bolai Sarkkar, defendant 2 ; and the said defendant along with his brother Sailendra, defendant 3, mortgaged the leasehold in the colliery along with other properties to the Dagas (defendants 5 to 9) on 17th December 1926 : see Ex. A (1) p. 47, Book B. This mortgage was by way of sub-lease for the residue of the terms less two days as the habendum clause at p. 51, line 20 would show.

The mortgage by way of sub-demise was for a consideration of over a lakh of rupees. And it provides that the Dagas were to take possession but the Sarkars were to pay rent and royalty. There was some discussion at the Bar as to the real nature of this mortgage. On the one hand it is argued for the respondent that this mortgage was an English mortgage and it was contended on the other hand by the appellants that this was really a mortgage by way of sub-lease within the meaning of S. 108 (J), T. P. Act. We have no doubt that it is not an English mortgage which would have vested the whole legal interest in the mortgagees and created privity of estate between the mortgagee of the lessee and the lessor. It is an assignment of a lesser term and therefore it created no privity of estate between the lessor and the sub lessee. We are not unmindful of the recent decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee that even if the sub-lease is for the whole of the residue of the term, it would not operate otherwise than as a sub-lease: see 57 I A 110 (3). We may have to revert to the construction of the document later. To complete the narrative of events leading to the institution of the suit the following facts should be stated.

1. Holford v. Hatch, (1779) 1 Doug 183=99 R R 119.

2. Akshoy Kumar Chatterjee v. Akman Molla, 1915 Cal 154=27 I C 397=20 C L J 551=19 C W N 1197.

On 19th December 1926 the Dagas (defendants 5 to 9) took possession of the colliery and started working the same. On 8th March 1927 the firm of Balai and Sailendra (defendants 2 and 3) was adjudged insolvent. After a great deal of correspondence between the Dagas and the Sarkars about rent, on 7th September 1927, the Dagas proved their claim through their Agent Sakti Pada Bhattacharjee and the claim having been accepted on 5th June 1928 there was an order of discharge. On 14th September 1928 the plaintiff through the Shebait wrote to the Dagas (Messrs Harsook Das Balkissen Das & Co), a letter through their pleader marked Ex. 2 (d) complaining that they had broken many of the terms of the lease of 13th April 1921:

(2) in that you have not kept proper pillars and that your galleries are not kept in accordance with the terms of the kabuliyat; (4) in that you are not allowing my clients men to have access to the Colliery and pits to examine your works: see Book B, p. 207.

To this letter the Dagas replied refusing to make over khas possession: see Ex. 2 (e) Book B, p. 210. On 22nd January 1929 on the application of the Dagas to the insolvency Court there was an enquiry. On 29th January 1929 it was found that the Dagas had a valid and subsisting mortgage. On 7th February 1929 there was an order by the Insolvency Court to take accounts; on 22nd March 1929 the Registrar found that Rupees 1,24,629-9-9 was due to the Dagas under the mortgage. On 21st May 1929 the Official Assignee sold the mortgaged property to Vithal Das, defendant 10. On 24th May 1929 the present suit was filed.

Two other material events after suit should be stated. On 14th June 1929 Vithal Das, defendant 10, took possession of the Colliery in question. On 25th October the receiver who was appointed took possession of the Colliery. In support of the ground that as there is no privity of contract between the sub-lessees (Dagas) and the head lessor (the plaintiff) the latter cannot sue the sub-lessee on any of the covenants in the head lease: reliance has been placed in (1779) (1) Doug 183 (1) and on the decision of this Court in 20 C L J 551 (2), at p. 554; reliance has also been placed on the following passage from Woodfall's Law of Landlord and Tenant, 23rd Edn. 334.

Where there is a contract to perform all the contracts of the head lease or to perform substantially the same covenants in substantially the same terms and both the contracts of the head lease and the sub-lease are broken the head landlord (although he can eject) cannot sue the sub-tenant for damages, there being no privity of contract between them; but the head landlord may sue the mesne landlord who, in his turn, may sue the sub-tenant, or pursue what seems to be the more convenient course of bringing him in as third party under S. 39, Supreme Court of Judicature (Consolidation) Act, 1925 (re-enacting S. 24, sub-s. 3, Judicature Act, 1873), and replacing O. 16 a, Rr. 48 to 55 of the Rules of the Supreme Court. If this be done, the High Court has a discretion under O. 65 to order the sub-tenant so made third party to pay the costs of an action by the head landlord against the mesne landlord reasonably defended.

The respondent points out that this question hardly arises, for in the Court below Dagas (defendants 5 to 9) admitted liability during their occupation from 26th December to 14th September 1928 and we were referred to O. 89, Vol. A, p. 18 which supports their case. The order is important and is reproduced below:

The pleader for defendants 5 to 9 states that their clients admit that after 30th December 1923 up to the time of delivery of possession to the receiver none but themselves did any work in the mine. They take upon themselves the responsibility for all the works done after 30th December 1926 up to commencement of possession of the receiver such as would be found by the expert in the locality on verification.

This no doubt simplified the position and the only question for determination would be whether damage was done during their occupation. But it is argued that the appellants are not bound by the admission of their pleader on a point of law and as the question was debated before us we proceed to deal with it. The case in 20 C L J 551 (2) is obviously distinguishable. In that case a tenure holder undertook in a lease not to excavate tanks in the property. He granted to a raiyat lease of some lands within the tenure but there was no restrictive covenant as to the excavation of the tank. The raiyat was unaware of any restrictive covenant in the lease of the tenure holder. In such circumstances it was held that the tenure holder and not the raiyat was liable in damages to his lessor for excavation of the tank by the raiyat. In the present case it is conceded that the Dagas had constructive notice (if not actual notice) of the covenants contained in the head lease, Ex. 1. It is argued however by Mr. P. R. Das, the learned counsel who has appeared for the appellant, that the basis of the principle is not whether the sub-lessee had notice of the covenants or not, but want of privity of contract or estate as between the lessor and sub-lessee. That may be so with reference to affirmative covenants, but not so with restrictive covenants where, as the authorities, presently to be noticed show, the question of notice becomes very material even if there is want of privity of contract or estate as between lessor and sub-lessee.

3. Hansraj v. Bejoy Lal, 1930 P C 59=122 I C 20=57 I A 110=57 Cal 1176 (P C).

Indeed in support of the view taken in Woodfall's Landlord and Tenant in the passage referred to above the learned author refers to the case in (1881) 8 Q B D 329 (4) which was the case of an affirmative covenant—covenant by the defendant being "to repair and paint and leave in repairs" the demised premises. The equitable doctrine of restrictive covenants has been brought to a focus in the leading case of (1848) 2 Ph 774 (5). That doctrine has been affirmed in later decisions: see (1881) 8 Q B D 403 (6), and has more recently been approved by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in (1926) A C 108 (7), a case to which I drew the attention of Mr. P. R. Das, in the course of his argument. If therefore the covenant to keep pillars of a certain width, which it is conceded is a negative covenant although affirmative in form be also a restrictive covenant, the authorities to which we have just referred and other authorities to be referred hereafter, and which will be discussed presently, lay down that it will be binding not only on assignees (absolute assignees) of the leasehold but also on sub-lessees and there can be no question that the head lessor has a remedy by injunction against the sub-lessee, for it is a covenant which "runs with the land" as also for damages against him. The case in (1926) A C 108 (7), before the Judicial Committee, to which I drew the attention of learned Counsel for appellant, contains a lucid statement of the principle as laid down in (1848) 2 Ph 774 (5) in the following illuminating passage. Lord Shaw said:

The general character of the principle on which a Court of Equity acts was explained in (1848) 2 Ph 774 (5), at pp. 776, 779. The plaintiff there was owner in fee of Leicester Square and several houses forming the Square. He sold the property to one Elms in fee, and the deed of Conveyance contained a Covenant obliging Elms his heirs and assigns, to "keep and maintain the said piece of ground and Square Garden . . . in its then form . . . in an open state, uncovered with any buildings." Elms sold to others, and the property came into the hands of the defendant, who admitted that he had purchased with notice of the covenant. The defendant, "having manifested an intention to alter the character of the Square Garden, and asserted a right, if he thought fit, to build upon it," the plaintiff who still remained owner of several houses in the Square filed a bill for an injunction. All this is familiar knowledge, but it appears to have been sometimes forgotten what was the nature of the argument for the defendant. He contended that the covenant did not run with the land so as to be binding upon him as a purchaser, and Sir Roundell Palmer, on his behalf, relied on the dictum of Brougham, L. C. (1834) 2 My & K 517 (8), at p. 547, to the effect that "notice of such a covenant did not give a Court of Equity jurisdiction to enforce it by injunction against such purchaser, inasmuch as the knowledge by an assignee of an estate, that his assignor had assumed to bind others than the law authorised him to affect by his contract, had attempted to create a burden upon property which was inconsistent with the nature of that property and unknown to the principles of the law and could not bind such assignee by affecting his conscience." No reply was called for to this argument and the Lord Chancellor said that Lord Brougham never could have meant to lay down the doctrine "that this Court would not enforce an equity

4. Hornoy v. Cardwell, (1881) 8 Q B D 329.

5. Tulk v. Moxhay, (1848) 2 Ph 774=41 E R 1143=1 Ha & Tw 105=18 L J Ch 83=12 L T (O S) 469.

6. Haywood v. Brunswick Permanent Benefit Building Society, (1881) 8 Q B D 403=51 L J Q B 73=45 L T 699=30 W R 299.

7. Lord Strathcona Ltd. v. Dominion Coal Co. Ltd., (1926) A C 108=95 L J P C 71=134 L T 227=81 Com Case 80=16 Asp M C 585=42 T L R 86.

8. Keppell v. Bailey, (1834) 2 My & K 517.

attached to land by the owner, unless under such circumstances as would maintain an action at law." "If that be the result of these observations" added the Lord Chancellor, "I can only say that I cannot coincide with it."

and again Lord Shaw remarks

But (1848) 2 Ph 774 (5) is important for a further and vital consideration, namely that it analyses the true situation of a purchaser who having bought upon the terms of the restriction upon free contract existing, thereafter when vested in the lands attempts to divest himself of the condition under which he had bought: 'it is said that the covenant being one which does not run with the land, this Court cannot enforce it; but the question is not whether the covenant runs with the land, but whether a party shall be permitted to use the land in a manner inconsistent with the contract entered into by his vendor, and with notice of which he purchased. Of course, the price would be affected by the covenant and nothing could be more inequitable than that the original purchaser should be able to sell the property the next day for a greater price, in consideration of the assignee being allowed to escape from the liability which he had himself undertaken.' In the opinion of the Board these views, much expressive of the justice and good faith of the situation, are still part of English equity jurisprudence, and an injunction can still be granted thereunder to compel, as in a Court of conscience, one who obtains a conveyance or grant sub-conditions from violating the condition of his purchase to the prejudice of the original contractor. Honesty forbids this; and a Court of equity will grant an injunction against it.

That constructive notice might before the Law of Property Act 1925 bind the lessee by the restrictive covenants of his lessor although he had no actual knowledge of them was laid down in (1869) 7 Eq 523 (9) and in one case Jessel, M. R. went so far as to say that even an express representation that there were no restrictive covenants affecting the demised property would not do away with the effect of constructive notice: see (1881) 17 Ch D 353 (10) and (1882) 19 Ch D 258 (11). That was also a case before the Law of Property Act 1925, which by S. 8 has altered in England the rule of "constructive notice" as laid down in these cases: see Woodfall's Landlord and Tenant, Edn. 23, p. 855. In (1902) 2 Ch 612 (12) it was held that the lessee of a person bound by a restrictive covenant can be sued whether assigns are mentioned in the covenant or not.

The case in (1888) 37 Ch D 74 (13) cited for the respondent would show that remedy by way of injunction would lie at the instance of the head lessor against the sub-lessee if there has been a violation of a restrictive covenant. In this case the action was dismissed against the lessor as the lessor did not encourage the violation of the restrictive covenant in the lease by the sub-lessee, and the action was maintained against the sub-lessee. The appellant has, in view of the decisions just referred to, concentrated all efforts towards showing that Cl. (6) of the lease does not contain a restrictive covenant as it is argued that it is essential for a covenant to be restrictive that the covenantee must retain some interest in the land for the benefit of which the covenant is entered into. That this is an essential requirement of a restrictive covenant appears plain on the authorities as has been pointed out by Lord Shaw in (1926) A C 108 (7), at p. 121, in the following passage:

A perusal of the numerous decisions on this branch of the law shows that much difficulty has been caused by the attempt to extend these principles to cases to which they could not by the nature of the case have been meant to apply. It has been forgotten that to put the point very simply the person seeking to enforce such a restriction must, of course, have and continue to have an interest in the subject matter of the contract: for instance, in the case of land he must continue to hold the land in whose favour the restrictive covenant was meant to apply. That was clearly the state of matters in (1848) 2 Ph 774 (5) applicable to the possession of real estate in Leicester Square. It was also clearly the case in (1858) 4 De G & J 276 (14) in which the person seeking to enforce the injunction had an interest in the user of the ship. In short, in regard to the user of land or of any chattel, an interest must remain in the subject matter of the covenant before a right can be conceded to an injunction against the violation by another of the covenant in question. This proposition seems so elementary as not to require to be stated. And it is only mentioned because in numerous decisions as is clearly brought out in the judgment of Lord Wrenbury, then Buckley, L. J. in (1914) 3 K B 642 (15), at pp. 656 to 658, it was necessary to shear

9. Fielden v. Slater, (1869) 7 Eq 523=38 L J Ch 379=20 L T 112=17 W R 485.

10. Patman v. Harland, (1881) 17 Ch D 353=50 L J Ch 642=44 L T 728=29 W R 707.

11. Nicol v. Fenning, (1882) 19 Ch D 258=51 L J Ch 166=45 L T 738=30 W R 95.

12. Holloway v. Hill, (1902) 2 Ch 612=71 L J Ch 818=87 L T 201=18 T L R 745.

13. Hall v. Ewin, (1888) 37 Ch D 74=57 L J Ch 95=57 L T 831=36 W R 84.

14. De Mattos v. Gibson, (1858) 4 De G & J 276.

15. London County Council v. Allen, (1914) 3 K B 642=83 L J K B 1695=111 L T 610=12 L G R 1003.

away this misapplication or improper extension of the equitable principle. As Romer, L. J. said in (1903) 2 Ch 539 (16) at p. 554, if restrictive covenants are entered into with a covenantee, not in respect of or concerning any ascertainable property belonging to him or in which he is interested, then the covenant must be regarded so far as he is concerned as a personal covenant, that is, as one obtained by him for some personal purpose or object.

The argument for the appellants is that by the grant of the 499 years' lease (Ex. 1) there remained no reversion in the plaintiff head lessor concerning the demised premises. There can be no question that the clause as to maintaining pillars of a certain width was for the benefit of the plaintiff's reversion in the land demised. Mr. Das has been driven to argue that the lease of 499 years which must be taken to be for all intents and purposes a permanent lease left no reversion in the plaintiff. But this argument generally speaking is contrary to all authority. The distinction between a conveyance in fee simple and a lease in perpetuity was pointed out by Sir Lawrence Jenkins in 24 Cal 440 (17) at p. 447, a distinction which was recognised by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 36 Cal 1003 = 36 I A 148 (18) where their Lordships expressed themselves thus:

Sir Robert Finlay in his able argument for the respondents contended that a mokarari lease is tantamount to a conveyance in fee simple, and that the lessee must therefore be treated as a purchaser within the meaning of the Limitation Act. But the distinction between the two transactions had been well pointed out by Jenkins, J. in his judgment in 24 Cal 440 (17) at p. 447: 'Because at the present day,' says the learned Judge, 'a conveyance in fee simple leaves nothing in the grantor, it does not follow that a lease in perpetuity here has any such result. . . . The law of this country does undoubtedly allow of a lease in perpetuity. . . a man who being owner of land, grants a lease in perpetuity carves a subordinate interest out of his own, and does not annihilate his own interest. This result is to be inferred by the use of the word lease, which implies an interest still remaining in the lessor.' He held, therefore, that whether the Transfer of Property Act applied or not, such a lease is forfeitable, notwithstanding that it is permanent. In this opinion their Lordships concur, and it follows that they are unable to give to the Limitation Act wider interpretation adopted by the High Court and to treat the lessee as a purchaser under Art. 134 of the Act. The purchaser must be the purchaser of an absolute title.

The reversion in the Kajora Colliery still remained in the plaintiff and to protect that, the covenant that the galleries and pillars of certain width must be kept was entered into. The only case which supports the contention of the appellant, that there is no reversion in the plaintiff, is the decision of Beaumont, C. J. in 58 Bom 327 (19), but we are not prepared to follow it as it is contrary to the decision of Sir Lawrence Jenkins in 24 Cal 440 (17), which was approved by the Privy Council in 36 I A 148 (18). It was argued that the property for the benefit of which restrictive covenant was entered into must be independent of and outside the demised premises. But the fallacy in this argument is that it disregards the true legal position, viz. that what passes by the lease is not the entire property, for a lease is not an out and out sale so that nothing remains in the lessor. All that is necessary is, in order that a covenant may be a restrictive covenant, that the covenant must be for the benefit of some ascertainable property retained by the vendor. As was pointed out by Romer, L. J. in (1903) 2 Ch 539 (16) at p. 554:

If restrictive covenants are entered into with a covenantee, not in respect of or concerning any ascertainable property belonging to him or in which he is interested, then the covenant must be regarded, so far as he is concerned, as a personal covenant—that is as one obtained by him for some personal purpose or object.

Here the covenant was made for protecting the reversion in the lessor. If for instance, there was a forfeiture by reason, say of breach of the covenant for rent, the lease was liable to forfeiture and leasehold property may in such circumstances revert to the lessor (the plaintiff). It was not the intention that the pillars and galleries should be worked except in the manner specified without the consent of the plaintiff. In this connection reference may be made to para. 17 of the lease (p. 8, Book B) about the official translation of which there was some dispute and which correctly translated would be in these terms:

When the cutting of the coal in all the land settled, on keeping pillars regularly is finished I shall be able to cut the pillars after informing you and presenting a petition to you and after making arrangements for the support of the roof.

16. Formby v. Barker, (1903) 2 Ch 539 = 72 L J Ch 716 = 89 L T 249 = 51 W R 646.

17. Kalli Das Ahiri v. Mon Mohini Dassee, (1897) 24 Cal 440 = 1 C W N 321.

18. Abhiram Goswami v. Sham Charan Nandi, (1909) 36 Cal 1003 = 4 I C 449 = 36 I A 148 (P C).!

19. Keshav Lal v. Magan Lal, 1934 Bom 134 = 148 I C 993 = 58 Bom 327 = 36 Bom L R 197 (F B).

It has been argued for the respondent that apart from the reversion being in the plaintiff for the protection of which the covenant was entered into it was also entered into for the protection of the surface which belongs to the plaintiff and the covenant is for that reason also a restrictive covenant in the sense stated by the authorities previously referred to. In reply the appellant has argued that the covenant was for the protection of the roof which is distinct from the surface and as the roof is a part of the demised premises the covenant is not a restrictive one. The argument of the respondent, however, seems to be plausible one and apart from the question of the protection of the reversion, the protection of the surface which belongs to the respondent might have been intended when the covenant to keep pillars of certain width was entered into. For the aforesaid reasons we are of opinion that the defendants 5 to 9 treating them as sub-lessees, i. e., treating their mortgage being by way of sub-demise are bound by the covenant and remedy by injunction was undoubtedly available against them apart from the principle of restrictive covenant on the principle laid down in the following passage in the judgment of Knight Bruce, L. J. in (1858) 4 De G & J 276 (14) :

Reason and justice seem to prescribe that at least as a general rule where a man by gift or purchase, acquires property from another, with knowledge of a previous contract, lawfully and for valuable consideration made by him with a third person to use and employ the property for a particular purpose in a specified manner, the acquirer shall not to the material damage of the third person, in opposition to the contract and inconsistently with it, use and employ the property in a manner not allowable to the giver or seller.

A principle, not without analogy, had previously been laid down in reference to the user of land. This principle enunciated as aforesaid in De Mattos v. Gibson (14) has been approved by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in (1926) A C 108 (7) at p. 117. The question is that if the remedy by injunction was available as laid down in Lord Strathcona's case (7), even where the covenant broken was not a restrictive one, whether in the absence of a breach of restrictive covenant, remedy by way of damages would be available against a purchaser with notice of the covenants. It would seem that remedy by way of damages would be available against the contracting party only and not his assigns : see Lord Strathcona's case (7). But in the case of breach of restrictive covenant remedy by way of injunction as well as damages would be available against the assignee. In the present case if there was secret working of the mine and the respondent was not allowed access to the working as by the terms of the lease they were entitled to till a year and a half after the institution of the suit and if these circumstances are established as to which we shall revert later, a Court of equity can surely award damages in lieu of injunction and in addition to an injunction : see (1924) A C 851 (20).

There is another point of view from which the covenant regarding the keeping of pillars may have to be approached. It would seem from a possible construction of the provisions of Cl. 6 read with Cl. 17 of the lease that it was not intended to pass the property in the pillars of the dimensions implied from Cl. 6. The vernacular of Cl. 17 was read to us and its correct translation has been given before. It would seem that square pillars of certain dimensions were intended to be kept for the protection of the roof. The words "your property" in Cl. 6 read with correct translation of Cl. 17 indicate that property in pillars did not pass and was excepted from the demise. It is a possible construction in any event. The clause that permission was intended to be taken (although not definitely expressed) in cutting pillars after "all the land on regularly keeping pillars is worked out" would suggest that property in the pillars remained in the lessor. As against this construction it is pointed out for the appellants that the pillars were not exempted from the demise and that what passed were the underground rights in the entire 181 bighas which included the pillars, and the lease in this case was sought to be distinguished from the lease in (1883) 23 Ch D 583 (21) to which I drew the attention of learned counsel for the appellant. According to Cl. 6, the pillars of certain width had to be kept for the protection of the roof and then follows Cl. 17 which according to the correct translation agreed to by the learned advocates on both sides is in these terms:

20. Leeds Industrial Co-operative Society v. Slack, (1924) A C 851=93 L J Ch 436=10 T L R 745=63 S J 715.

21. Taylor v. Mostyn, (1883) 23 Ch D 583=53 L J Ch 818=48 L T 715=31 W R 686.

When the cutting of ail coal in all the land settled on keeping proper pillars regularly is finished I will be able to cut the pillars after informing you and presenting a petition to you and after making arrangements for the support of the roof.

It is argued that the pillars are demised but that the lessee was prevented from cutting it without satisfying a condition precedent, viz., without informing the lessor and without presenting a written petition and without making proper arrangement for the protection of the roof. Although it is not so expressly mentioned the object of presenting a petition was to obtain the consent of the plaintiff (the lessor) of Ex. 1. It is true that in (1883) 23 Ch D 583 (21) the covenant on the part of the lessees was to the effect that they shall and will at the end of or sooner determination of this demise leave sufficient walls or pillars for the support of the roof and for preventing of thrusts and creeps and not remove the same without the consent in writing of the said Sir Thomas Mostyn, his heirs and assigns for that purpose had and obtained; and this clause was treated as an exception and it was held both by Bacon V. C. and the Court of appeal that the pillars were exempted from the demise: see pp. 599 and 624 of 23 Ch D 583 (21) respectively. As the construction which we put on the words of Cls. 6 and 17 as indicated above is one of a doubtful character we do not propose to rest our decision on the ground that pillars were exempted from demise; but this in no way affects our view that the covenant in Cl. 6 is a restrictive one and binds the mortgagee sub-lessees (defendants 5 to 9) and that action for damages lie against them. It is next argued on this part of the case that the doctrine of restrictive covenants is embodied in S. 40, T. P. Act, and as the essence of a Code is to be exhaustive and whole law on the subject must be taken to be crystallized in S. 40 and any covenant that does not fall within S. 40 is not a restrictive covenant so as to bind sub lessees.

For the respondent it has been contended that S. 40 has no application to lessor and lessee as the rights of lessor and lessee occur in a different Chapters and are governed by different provisions: perhaps the broad contention of the respondent cannot be sustained. As I understand it the law in India closely follows the law in England with regard to restrictive covenants. In 36 Cal 675 (22) reference was made to the case in (1909) A C 98 (23) and it was held that a covenant is annexed to land if it binds the land in its inception or affects the nature, value and quality of the land. In the same case it was said that the principle of restrictive covenants as enunciated in (1900) 2 Ch 388 (24) as between vendor and purchaser was equally applicable to the case of lessor and lessee. The Rt. Hon'ble late Sir Dinshaw Mulla in his commentary on the Transfer of Property notices under his notes to S. 40 that the case law in India as to restrictive covenants is meagre and it has not yet been decided whether a restrictive covenant would be binding on trespasser as in (1906) 1 Ch 386 (25) or a mere occupier as in (1891) 2 Ch 554 (26). The words "immovable property" are not defined in the Transfer of Property Act. They are said to include timber, standing crops. We have to look for its definition to the General Clauses Act which again is not exhaustive. The definition is as follows:

Immovable property shall include land, benefits to arise out of land and things attached to earth.

A benefit to arise out of land is interest in land and is, therefore, immovable property. The question is whether plaintiff in whom there is reversion in the colliery after the expiration of the term of 499 years or treating the lease (Ex. 1) as permanent lease in whom there is a reversion is said to possess his own immovable property and if for the more beneficial enjoyment of the reversion a negative stipulation is made, I do not see any reason why the principle of S. 40 should not be applied to the present case. We have given longer time to the consideration of this question of law although this point was never sifted in the Court below in view of the admission made by the appellant's pleader undertaking all liability in damages for the breach if such 22. Mathewson v. Ram Kanai Singh, (1909) 36 Cal 675=1 I C 626=9 C L J 523.

23. Dyson v. Forster, (1909) A C 98=78 L J K B 246=99 L T 942=25 T L R 166.

24. Rogers v. Hosegood, (1900) 2 Ch 388=69 L J Ch 652=83 L T 186=48 W R 659=16 T L R 489.

25. In re Nisbet & Potta's Contract, (1906) 1 Ch 386=75 L J Ch 238=94 L T 297=54 W R 286.

26. Mandor v. Fakke, (1891) 2 Ch 554=65 L T 203.

breach was established. The first contention of the appellants that in law damages are not recoverable from the appellants (Dagas) for breach of covenants regarding the keeping of pillars on the ground that there is no privity of contract between them and the plaintiff must for the reasons aforesaid fail.

The second ground taken on behalf of the appellants is that the plaintiff claimed no damages for breach of covenant regarding keeping of pillars and galleries and the decree awarded by the Subordinate Judge on this head is contrary to the pleadings in this case. In support of this we were referred to the plaint (Vol. A), p. 107. Paras 5 to 8 refer to various breaches of covenants. Para. 7 refers to the particular breach of covenant regarding keeping of pillars and galleries. Reference is made in particular to the following sentence in para. 7 of the plaint:

In consequence of this there is a likelihood of great damage being done to the coal mine, and it is argued that damages claimed by plaintiff would be damages which would be sustained by them in future. It is to be noticed however that the plaintiff states in the said para. 7 that plaintiff was not allowed to go underground and has not been able to know the actual state of things in the mine. The plaintiffs claim damages both for breach of covenants and trespass. An issue was joined on the question of liability of defendants 5 to 9 regarding damages for breach of covenants (see issue 5) on the question as to whether the alleged breaches of covenants on the part of defendants 5 to 9 were done with the knowledge and consent of the plaintiffs and if so whether there was waiver or acquiescence and there was no issue on the question of liability of defendants 5 to 9 as to damages which was admitted. See, p. 36, Vol. A, order sheet. See also the written statement of the defendants para. 17, p. 124, Vol. A, the question of waiver by the plaintiff is suggested. There is no substance in this ground, which must fail. It is also to be mentioned in fairness to learned counsel for the appellant that although this point was taken in the opening it was not eventually persisted in.

The third ground taken is that the evidence does not show that there has been any breach of covenants by the appellants (Dagas, defendants 5 to 9). It is argued with great force that there is no evidence that breaches of covenants regarding pillars and galleries took place after the Dagas entered into possession in December 1926. On the other hand it is submitted that the plan Ex. 4 (i), which was adduced in evidence on behalf of the plaintiff, is conclusive on the point that all the breaches of covenant regarding pillars and galleries took place before the Dagas (appellants) took possession. Ex. 4 (i) is map No. 5 in the book of maps. It is pointed out that the dotted red lines show the workings before the Dagas took possession and all breaches are on the eastern side. It is argued that by the preliminary judgment which determined the liability of the appellants this plan was apparently accepted by the Subordinate Judge, for there is nothing in the preliminary judgment to show that the plan Ex. 4 (i) was not a correct plan and the Subordinate Judge passing the final decree had no authority to reject this plan from evidence.

In order to decide on the soundness of this contention a few facts and dates have to be kept in view. Sometime in July 1930 the plaintiff applied for a direction on the defendants to dewater the mine. On 8th July 1930 the Subordinate Judge appointed a receiver to dewater the mine. Either on 25th or 31st October 1930, the receiver obtained possession of the mine. On 21st November 1930, the receiver applied for directions on the defendants to make over plans and papers relating to the property. On 10th December 1930, defendant 10 produced the working plan Ex. 4 (i). Then a very important event happened. On 29th January 1931 plaintiff applied for directions on the receiver to work the mine. Defendant 10, Vithal Das, objected; on 11th April 1931, the appellants applied for appointment of experts to examine the mine. On 22nd June 1931 two experts, Mr. Samson and Mr. Ram Gopal Chatterjee, were appointed to examine the mine; on 30th June 1931 a writ was issued to the commissioner: see Vol. A, p. 200. The commissioners submitted a report by which they challenged the accuracy of the plan Ex. 4 (i). The commissioners' report has been subjected to considerable criticism by the learned counsel for appellants and it is broadly contended that the commissioners' report should be brushed aside as they never conducted an underground survey.

The scope of the commissioners' enquiry was extended by an order dated 6th July 1931 (Vol. A, p. 26). The commissioners commenced work on 3rd August 1931 and continued the work till 21st September 1931 and they attached two sketch maps 1 and 2 to their report. It is said that the commissioners never made an underground survey but as they had the map Ex. 4 (i) with them they merely examined the roof-falls and it is submitted that the defendants plan Ex. 4 (i) could not be verified at all without drawing a map to scale and all that the commissioners did was to note the roof-falls in the enlarged plan [enlargement of plan Ex. 4 (i)]. Here a little correction must be made in the printed map 5, Ex. 4 (i). The printed map shows working up to 1929—in the original it is up to 27th June 1928. It is to be noticed that during the hearing plaintiff produced Ex. 4 (b) which was filed by the defendants to the Chief Inspector of Mines under the Mines Regulation, Ch. (i). Rr. 10, and 12 of the Regulation and the commissioner relied on the same. The appellants strongly object to the reception of this map in evidence as it was made for another purpose. The first exception taken to the Commissioners' report, viz. that Ex. 4 (i) plan could not be verified as the Commissioners never made an underground survey must fail seeing that the Commissioners in para. 5 of their report, Vol. A, p. 213 say:

We held an investigation after giving due notice to the parties and made a thorough inspection of all the underground working accompanied by the representatives of the parties.

The Commissioners were never examined on this point although there were ample opportunities of examining them as we shall show hereafter. It is said that it was physically impossible for the commissioners to measure the galleries in the affected area of 15 bighas within 16 hours and 45 minutes which was the time occupied according to the time noted in inspection book of the commissioners regarding the real Kajora Colliery (see pp. 208 210 Book A). In these sittings they examined some witnesses. It is difficult to give effect to this objection seeing that neither of the commissioners were asked about it and learned counsel was consequently driven to argue that the Court did not give the appellants any opportunity to examine the commissioners. If this point is made out there may be necessity for a remand, but the following facts will make it abundantly clear that the appellants are themselves to blame for not availing themselves of the opportunity to examine the commissioners. The report of the commissioners was filed on 20th September 1931. The appellants filed an application on 22nd April 1932, (p. 244), Book A, stating that the matter of the commission need not be pursued specially at that stage. On this the Court passed order No. 162, (see p. 35, Book A) postponing at the instance of the appellants the considerations of the objections to the commissioners' report. On 30th April 1934 Mr. Samson was in India and no attempt was made to get his evidence. On 5th July 1934 the appellants applied for issue of a summons on the other commissioner (Book A, p. 469) Mr. R. G. Chatterjee, and on 10th August 1934 the defendants put in a petition to examine the other commissioner after Mr. Samson had left for England: see p. 470, Book A, and we agree with the opinion of the Subordinate Judge that defendants 5 to 9 did not really want to examine either of the commissioners and with the reasons on which the said opinion was founded. The appellant argues that it was the duty of the Court to tell Mr. Chatterjee on 19th July 1934 that he was to attend on 9th August 1934. We do not agree with him. It was the duty of the appellants to take steps under the Code to enforce attendance of Mr. Chatterjee when he did not turn up on the 9th August.

The second exception to the commissioners' report is that they should not have relied on Ex. 4 (b), a plan submitted by the defendants-appellants to the Inspector of Mines under the Mines Regulation as it was prepared for a different purpose and its accuracy cannot be presumed and in support of this view reliance is placed on the case 2 W R 28 (27) at p. 29, and the case in 14 C L J 578 (28) at p. 582. It is said that for the purpose of Mines Regulation R. 12, Ch. (i), it was not necessary to show the correct working on the eastern side. The mine authorities were not concerned with the question as to whether there was depillaring or not or whether the galleries were driven wide. The report of the commissioners, it may be stated in passing, was not attacked on the ground that it was a dishonest report. So far as the statements of fact were concerned learned counsel for the appellants said he was prepared to accept them, e. g., the fact that roof stones have been exposed and collapsed, but what is challenged is the findings of the commissioners that these devastating acts were committed after the appellants came on the scene. The respondents wanted to prove depillaring and for that purpose they would rely on Ex. 4 (i) but they are not prepared to accept the date of depillaring as given in Ex. 4 (i), viz. all the depillaring was done before 30th December 1926, the crucial date as the defendants came on the scene after that date. It is argued that it is not permissible to dissect the admission in plan Ex. (4) (i) in that way. From this digression we proceed to deal with the objection as to the admissibility of Ex. 4 (h) on the ground that it was made for a different purpose. We are not impressed by the reasoning on which the objection is founded. Surely the Mining Regulations (Reg. 4 of 1923) require that the galleries would be of a certain width and the pillars must be of certain dimensions. It must follow that the plan should show all the galleries and pillars. In this connexion the evidence of Golokeswar p. 286, (Book A) is important. He states this:

27. John Kerr v. Nuzzur Mahomed, (1865) 2 W R 28 (P O).

28. Preet Nath Mozumdar v. Durga Tarini Ghose, (1911) 14 C L J 578=10 I O 376=16 C W N 317.

I know the real Kajora Colliery. A letter for permission to work the mine underground under a Local Board Road together with a plan thereof was sent from the real Kajora Colliery to the Mines Board at Dhanbad. Aswini Kumar Banerjee was at the time the surveyor in the colliery. He signed the plan in my presence. This was traced in my presence by Aswini Babu from the original plan.

Then follows a note by the Subordinate Judge showing how the copy produced from the Mining Office was marked as Ex. (4) (h). The note is as follows: [The original plan was called for from defendants 5 to 9 but not produced. The copy produced from the Mining Office on being called for by the plaintiffs is marked as an exhibit against defendants 2 to 10 only as Ex. 4 (h) and not against others after objection]. The witness adds:

The plan from which this was copied was the working plan of the company; and the deposition of Narendra, the surveyor of defendant 10, would show that there was a working plan of the real Kajora Colliery when I worked (in September 1927). In the plan the galleries shown by me were duly shown (p. 282, Book A); and again at p. 283, Book A, this witness states at line 26:

This plan produced from the office of the Chief Inspector of Mines (shown) is a tracing from the original working plan referred to by me; only some additional work done after September 1927 has been shown in it.

The deposition of these two witnesses can leave no doubt that the mine office plan was a true representation of the workings to January 1928 and it is difficult to understand how Ex. 4 (h) can be rejected from evidence on the ground that it was made for a different purpose. In our opinion the map Ex. 4 (h) would be a perfectly relevant document on the workings of the mine up to January 1928 and has been properly admitted in evidence. The admission of this map in evidence has this important effect that it discredits Ex. (4) (i), the map No. 5, to a large extent and justified the view of the Subordinate Judge that if not a fabrication it does not correctly represent the working of the mine with reference to the dates of the workings in particular. It is a matter of very great significance that Aswini under whose supervision the working plan, of which Ex. 4 (h) is a tracing, was prepared was not examined to prove that Ex. 4 (h) was incorrect although he was cited as a witness by the defendants and was present in Court: see p. 248 (Book A). For the reason given, we must overrule the objection to the reports of the Commissioners on the ground that the Commissioners should not have compared their own plan with Ex. 4 (h) as the same was inadmissible. It may also be mentioned in this connexion that under S. 35 of the Mines Act 4 of 1923, that Act prescribes a punishment for not preparing a plan. It is very unlikely that in such circumstances an incorrect plan would be submitted. We agree therefore with the Subordinate Judge in the preliminary judgment that it is clear from a comparison of Ex. 4 (h) and Ex. 4 (i) that almost all the breaches complained of happened after the date of the mine office plan Ex. 4 (h), i. e. January 1928, and before the last date of working as shown in second plan Ex. 4 (i), i. e. November 1928, i. e. at the time of the occupation of the mine by defendants 5 to 9.

The second report of the Commissioner dated 7th July 1933 on the question of damages in so far as it has been adopted in the final judgment of the Subordinate Judge dated 5th October 1934 has been attacked in this appeal. It appears that out of the damaged area of 15 bighas referred to in the first report of the Commissioners 5-1/4 bighas have been sealed by the receiver. The Commissioners found that the plaintiff sustained a loss of 8,800 tons of steam coal and 2,200 tons of Slack Coal for permanently isolating 5 1/4 bighas which was found unworkable. For the appellants it has been argued that the Subordinate Judge should have exonerated defendants 5 to 9 from liability in damages in respect of the loss of the 5 1/4 bighas as the sealing of 5 1/4 bighas was not due to any breach of covenant by defendants 5 to 9 but was an act of God and an inevitable accident. No foundation has been laid for sustaining this ground. The report (second) of the Commissioners dated 7th July 1933 point out that an area has been sealed off to prevent fire and indicated the loss which the plaintiff had to sustain by the sealing of the 5 1/4 bighas: see Book A, p. 404. On 24th July 1933 the defendants-appellants took as many as 21 exceptions to the report, and none of the exceptions refers to exemption from liability for loss due to sealing off of the 5 1/4 bighas on the ground that the loss was due to inevitable accident, and in the grounds of appeal to this Court we find no such ground. We do not think it would be right to allow this objection to be taken at this stage as the matter depends on evidence. On the other hand we are rather inclined to think that the risk of a fire was due to depillaring by defendants 5 to 9.

The next ground urged on behalf of the appellant is one of substance. If the plaintiff is entitled to price of coal the defendants are entitled to deduction of Rs. 2 per cent per ton for severing the coal and bringing it to the pit's mouth, and the commissioners have recommended a deduction of Rs. 2 per ton. The Subordinate Judge, while conceding that in assessing damages all expenses incurred by defendants for raising coal should be deducted from the whole value of the coal, felt himself bound by the preliminary judgment and held that he could not allow any deduction on account of costs for bringing it to the pit's mouth and for severing the coal. The learned counsel for the appellant has contended that this view is opposed to a recent decision of the Judicial Committee in 60 I A 297 (29) and as the present appeal is directed both against the preliminary and final judgment there is nothing to prevent us in giving the relief on this head asked for by the defendant. The rule laid down in 60 I A 297 (29), is this :

As against the gross value of the coal there will be charged all expenses properly incurred by the defendants in getting the coal, bringing it to Bank and marketing it, including any rents or royalties so incurred ; if these are not ascertainable the Court will fix a proper rate to be deducted from the gross value in respect of these matters. A deduction from the gross value will also be allowed, to be leased on a reasonable rate of depreciation on any capital expenditure by the defendants in respect of development of the mines, structures above and below ground, boilers and machinery properly incurred for colliery purposes.

The commissioners have taken all this into account but have not allowed development cost or interest on capital, but have allowed 6 annas per ton for depreciation and Calcutta charges. We think that a deduction of Rs. 2 per ton should be made from the price of coal as recommended by the Commissioners. Mr. Brojo Lal Chakravarti appearing for the respondents has contended that this rule of making allowances for bringing the coal to bank and severing the coal, etc., was made in Currimbhoy's case (29) for there the party made liable was working under a colour of title and in the bona fide belief in the exercise of a right ; but if a man causes damage without a right, in that case he is allowed only a deduction for bringing coal up to the pit's mouth.

It is complained that in the present case the defendants acted in a very high-handed and fraudulent manner and their acts have been described as acts of vandalism by the Subordinate Judge below and in these circumstances no deductions should be allowed, and we were referred to the decision of the Judicial Committee in (1899) A C 351 (30), where the facts were that the appellants had furtively, for a series of years, taken the respondents' coal by means of a wilful and secret underground trespass and no laches

29. Currimbhoy v. L. A. Creet, 1933 P C 29=141 I C 209=60 I A 297=60 Cal 980 (P C).

30. Bulli Coal Mining Co. v. Osborne, (1899) A C 351=68 L J P C 49=80 L T 480 = 47 W R 545=15 T L R 257.

was attributable to the respondents in not discovering the existence of wrongful workings by the appellants, and it was held in those circumstances that the respondents were entitled to recover from the appellants the market value of all the coal worked and gotten by them from the respondents' land, no allowance being made for the cost of working. The present is not a case of that kind for defendants 5 to 9 were, at least for a period before the notice to quit on the ground of forfeiture, working the colliery on a legal title as mortgagees from the lessees. There were covenants that inspection would be allowed and although the correspondence shows that defendants 5 to 9 had refused the plaintiff proper facilities for inspection, the present case does not stand on the same footing as the Bulli Coal Mining case (30) cited above. As the commissioners have proceeded on the evidence of Sakti Pada Bhattacharya, plaintiff's agent, see Book A, p. 394, line 10 et seq, we think a deduction should be made on the basis of Rs. 2 per ton. It has been conceded by Mr. Chakravarti that from the quantity of 25,338 tons, there would be a deduction of 6,490 tons upon which royalty was allowed so that the profit must be calculated on the basis of the steam coal and dust coal being in the proportion of 80 per cent and 20 per cent. To this extent the decree must be varied on this head. The result is that the decree of the Subordinate Judge on this head of damages must be varied in this way. On the head of damages, for 25,338 tons of coal raised after December 1927 up to the date of suit the Subordinate Judge has awarded a decree to plaintiff for Rs. 80,449-8-0 (see p. 487, Book-A). This figure was arrived at on the basis indicated in the 2nd and 3rd report of the commissioners (see pp. 405 and 458, Book-A). For 20,271 tons steam coal at Rs. 3-10-0 per ton. ... Rs. 73,482-6-0 5,067 tons Slack coal at

Rs. 1-6-0 per ton. 6,967-2-0

Rs. 80,449-8-0

According to the concession made by Mr. Brojo Lal Chakravarty the price of 6,490 tons of steam and slack coal in the proportion of 80 to 20 per cent must be deducted, i. e. the price of 5,192 tons of steam at Rs. 3-10-0 per ton and of 1,298 tons of slack coal at Rs. 1-6-0 per ton will have to be deducted. The aggregate of the price comes to Rs. 20,606-6-0 deducting that from Rs. 80,449-8-0

.. 20,606-6-0

The price of coal comes to Rs. 59,843-2-0

From this sum of Rs. 59,843-2-0 according to the commissioners a sum of Rs. 2 per ton must be deducted for the cost of cutting, hauling, etc. on (25,338—6,490 tons) 19,048 tons which amount comes to Rs. 38,096. For the reasons already given disagreeing with the Subordinate Judge we are of opinion in view of the decision of the Judicial Committee in 60 I A 297 (29) that the defendants are entitled so far as the price of coal is concerned to a deduction of Rs. 38,096, i. e. their liability on this head of damages would be Rs. 59,843-2-0 less Rs. 38,096, i. e. Rs. 21,747-2-0. At p. 487 of the judgment at Book-A for the figure Rs. 80,449-8-0 under the head of account of damages on account of coal raised after December 1927 up to date of suit, the figure Rs. 21,747-2-0 will have to be substituted. The liability of the Daga defendants under this head is reduced from Rs. 80,449 to Rs. 21,747-2-0. Although the principle in (1899) A C 351 (30), does not apply to the taking of coal after December 1927 a distinction will have to be drawn when we are considering the question of damages for breach of covenant which has been assessed by the Commissioner and the Subordinate Judge to Rs. 50,001-4-0, a damage which has been the result of secret working of the pillars contrary to the covenant. No laches is attributable to the respondent in not discovering the secret working and in such circumstances we think that no deduction on the head of severing the coal etc. should be allowed.

The whole series of correspondence beginning on 13th August 1928 Ex. 2 (b), (p. 200, Book B), and ending with 19th September 1928, Ex. 2 (e), (p. 210, Book B), viz. letters Exs. 2 (b), 3 (e), 3 (d), 3 (f), 2 (e), 2 (d), 3 (j) and 2 (c) reveal the fact that the Daga defendants were putting off the inspection of the mine from day to day on some pretext and other and in the meantime were secretly working underground and unlawfully working the pillars with the result that 15½ bighas of mine has become unworkable and has caused great loss to the plaintiff. With reference to such state of facts, the following observations of Lord Hatherby in (1880) 5 A C 25 (31) at p. 34, quoted in the Bulli Mining Co. case (30) ought to be usefully reproduced here in order to clear the ground as to the extent of the legal liability of the defendants-appellants on this head. There is no doubt, said his Lordships:

That if a man furtively and in bad faith robs his neighbour of property and, because it is underground, is probably not for some time detected the Court of Equity in this country will struggle or I would rather say will assert its authority to punish fraud by fixing the person with the value of the whole of the property which he has so furtively taken, and making him no allowance in respect of what he has done as would have been justly made to him if the parties had been working by agreement or if as in the present case they had been the one working and the other permitting the working through a mistake. The Courts have already made a wide distinction between that which is done by the common error of both parties, and that which is done by fraud.

In the case before us the pillars were being worked out secretly contrary to the covenants. No one can deny that it is a fraud to rob the owner of the colliery of the pillars of coal contrary to the covenant resulting in portions of the mine being sealed. The respondent made several attempts to find out what the Dagas were doing and they were prevented from doing so. The shebait, the earthly representatives of the plaintiff, who was the party defrauded by the robbing of the pillars remained in ignorance of the fraud without any fault of their own. As appears from the first report, Vol. A, p. 214, of the Commissioners, as also from the second report, see Vol. A, p. 483, the result of the depillaring has been that an area of 15 bighas has been damaged out of which 5½ bighas have been sealed off altogether and the basis of the damages of Rs. 50,000 has been given at p. 483, Book A.

In (1880) 13 Ch D 574 (32), there is an exhaustive discussion on the question as to what allowances are to be made to the defendant in taking the account. Accounts in actions of this character in the Court of Chancery have been directed on two footings; sometimes an allowance for the costs of severance or getting the coal has been made and sometimes it has not. In all cases an allowance has been made for the costs of bringing the coal to the bank. In (1880) 13 Ch D 574 (32), there is an enumeration of cases which decide whether the milder or the harsher rule should be applied. The harsher rule has been applied where the Courts have found fraud: see (1877) 4 Ch D 845 (33). It has been applied where the Court has said that the defendant has acted in a manner wholly unauthorized and unlawful: see 11 Equity 188 (34). We find in this case the Act of the Daga defendants in depillaring contrary to covenant was wholly unauthorized and fraudulent and we think the harsher rule should be applied. The defendant would only be entitled to a deduction of bringing the coal to the Bank from the price of coal. There is hardly any evidence on this head and we have to proceed to some extent on guess. Sakti Pada Chakravarty at Book A, p. 394, was asked the question: "What is the cost of hauling up the cost to the surface?" Answer: "Cannot give the exact figure without calculation." A deduction might be made at the rate of 4 annas per ton for steam coal and slack coal for the cost of carriage of the coal to the Bank. In place of Rs. 50,001 on this head there will be a deduction of 4 annas per ton. So at p. 483, Vol. A in place of 45,675—42,525 will have to be substituted on the basis of 12,600 tons at Rs. 3-10-0 less 4 annas per ton, and in lieu of Rs. 4,331-4-0 the figures Rs. 3,544-2-0 will have to be substituted, and in lieu of Rs. 50,001-4-0 the sum of Rs. 46,044-2-0 will have to be substituted. The respondent contended that on the evidence 1 anna 4½ pies per ton might be allowed for bringing coal to pit's mouth. Although there is some evidence to that effect it is not decisive. We think 4 annas per ton might be allowed.

It has next been argued that the report of the Commissioners as to the amount of coal worked is wrong as the Commissioners have not acted on the raising reports which would show that the raisings during the material period were much below 25,538 tons. The Subordinate 31. Livingstones v. Raw Yards Coal Co., (1880) 5 A C 25=42 L T 234=28 W R 357=44 J P 392.

32. Trotter v. Maclean, (1880) 13 Ch D 574=49 L J Ch 256=42 L T 118=28 W R 244.

33. Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England v. N. E. Ry. Co., (1877) 4 Ch D 845=47 L J Ch 20=36 L T 174.

34. Llynvi Co. v. Brogden, (1871) 11 Equity 188=40 L J Ch 46=23 L T 518=19 W R 196.

Judge has held that the defendants did not produce the real raising reports which were contained in a bound book and we agree with the Subordinate Judge that Ex. 7 was not the original despatch book of the colliery as is testified to by the witness of the plaintiff. Both the witnesses of the plaintiff state that the original despatch book of the colliery was a big bound book and had printed heading on each page. We have looked into Ex. 7 and we are not satisfied that the conclusion of the Subordinate Judge on this part of the case is wrong. Besides the raising book does not show local sales. It is argued by the appellant that it is idle to talk of forgery of Ex. 7 when forgery could be demonstrated in this case with reference to the railway books and mining books. It is said that the Court should have undertaken the duty of believing or not believing documentary evidence instead of leaving the same to the Commissioner and our attention has been drawn to the decision of the Judicial Committee in 58 I A 173 (35). The facts of the case, however, were very different. There an order was made by the High Court appointing a Commissioner to examine the books of business and report whether it was of a gambling nature and this was disapproved by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee and it was held that it was not a question which could safely be left to be so determined. Besides, the Subordinate Judge in the present case has considered the evidence, and after considering them he has concurred with the findings of the commissioners: see Book A, p. 484 (1).

This ground appears, when closely examined to be of no substance and must fail. It is next argued that the plaintiff is not entitled to any damage for trespass after notice to quit had been given as under Cl. (24) of the Kabuliyat, see p. 9, Vol. B, the plaintiff was not entitled to re-enter until the settlement was cancelled with the help of the Court and much argument was spent on the provision of S. 111, T. P. Act. In the first place this point was not taken in the Court below, no issue was joined on it, defendants 5 to 9 admitted liability in damages provided that the damages occurred during their occupation were established. This point was not taken in the grounds of appeal. We do not think in these circumstances we should allow this point to be taken. This argument was not submitted to the Court below and it would not be right to allow this point to be raised for the first time in appeal. The next point taken is that the Subordinate Judge should have awarded no interest on damages. The definition of "mesne profits" in the Civil Procedure Code includes interest on such profits and we see no reason why interest on such profits should not be given. The preliminary decree directed that the plaintiffs will get a decree against defendants 5 to 9 for the price of all coal raised by them during the period and interest thereon after date of notice (14th September 1928) up to the date of suit for which period they are trespassers: see p. 341, Book A. In the final judgment at p. 484, Book A, the Judge expresses himself thus:

I again quote the following from the judgment of the Court to show what the intention of the Court was if it were not possible to ascertain separately the quality of coal mined after the date of notice and that raised after January 1928. If however it cannot be ascertained how much coal was raised after January 1928 and the date of notice (14th September 1928) then the price of coal raised after January 1928 will have to be allowed: see p. 333 of the preliminary judgment.

In passing the final decree the Subordinate Judge said: "The plaintiffs are entitled to interest on price of coal as directed in the said judgment and decree." Interest has therefore been rightly allowed from date of suit up to the date of final judgment. Another point has been taken that the Court both by preliminary decree and final decree has awarded the costs of dewatering the mines, viz., Rs. 16,834-14-3 as against defendants 5 to 9: see Vol. A, p. 344; also Vol. A, p. 490. It is contended that this direction is wrong as it has not been established that mines have been flooded as the result of depillaring. This ground has been specifically taken at p. 359 ground 43. We think the Court is wrong in giving the direction in the preliminary judgment and final judgment regarding Rs. 16,834-14-3 which must be deleted as there is no evidence that the flooding of the mines was the result of depillaring by the defendants. The result is that the final decree of the Subordinate Judge as against defendants 5 to 9, appellants, must be varied in this way : The plaintiffs will have a decree against the Daga defendants for

35 Ram Krishna Muraji v. Ratan Chand, 1931 P O 136=132 I C 613=58 I A 173=53 All 190 (P O).

Rs. 21,747-2-0 On account of coal raised after December 1927 up to date of suit after allowing for deduction of severing coal, etc.

Rs. 46,044-2-0 On account of the loss of coal from the damaged area of 15 bighas after allowing deductions.

Rs. 67,791-4-0

To this will have to be added interest at 6 per cent per annum from date of suit up to the date of final decree, i. e. 5th October 1934, and to this will have to be added the cost of logs and timberings, Rs. 6,100 + Rs. 1,800 = Rs. 7,900. This aggregate sum will be the decretal amount against defendants 5 to 9. The decretal amount will bear interest at 6 per cent per annum until realisation from date of final decree. A decree will be drawn up on the lines indicated in the judgment. The appeal is partly allowed. Costs will be costs in proportion throughout.

Patterson, J.—I agree.

B.D./R.K. Appeal partly allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 744

D. N. MITTER AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Prasanna Deb Raikat — Plaintiff — Appellant.

v.

Bengal Duars Bank, Ltd.—Defendant —Respondent.

Appeals Nos. 121 to 125 of 1933, Decided on 16th June 1936, from original decree of Sub-Judge, Jalpaiguri, D/- 23rd December 1932.

(a) Hindu Law — Religious endowment — Shebaitship — Presumption is that it vests in the heirs of founder till proved to be disposed of otherwise — "De facto shebait" — Person founding the deity and becoming responsible for its worship is a de facto shebait — Foundation of worship is not necessarily associated with dedication of property for carrying on worship.

Where a worship of a Thakur is founded the shebaitship is held to be vested in the heirs of the founder in default of evidence that he has disposed of it otherwise. It is the worship that is founded and the rights of worship have to be considered in determining the question as to who is to be regarded the shebait. The consecration of a deity is conceived as a living image regaled with the necessaries and luxuries of life even to the changing of clothes, the offering of cooked and uncooked food, and the retirement to rest. The person founding a deity and becoming responsible for these duties is a de facto and in common parlance called shebait. The idea of the foundation of a worship must not necessarily be associated with the dedication of properties for the carrying on of worship. Hence merely because a person has gifted certain property for the worship of the idol, he or his successor cannot claim any right to shebaitship unless he has imposed any condition regarding it : 17 Cal 3 (P C), Rel. on; 1925 P C 139, Expl. [P 747 C 2 ; P 748 C 1, 2]

(b) Hindu Law — Religious endowment — Transfer of right of management—Surrender of shebaitship in consideration of satisfying debts owed by shebait — Surrender amounts to sale—Sale is void in the absence of custom —Vendee cannot maintain suits even on behalf of deity to eject lessees under lease granted by shebait even though in actual possession of debuttar property.

Where by a deed of surrender, the shebait transfers his right of management in consideration of debts owed by him being satisfied by the transferee, the deed though mentioned as a deed of surrender, amounts to a sale and the sale therefore of the right of management by the shebait for consideration is absolutely void in the absence of custom and transferee though in actual possession of the debutter properties by virtue of the deed of sale, cannot maintain suits even on behalf of the deity to eject lessee under a lease from the shebait: 1 Mad 235 (PC) and 23 Mad 271 (PC), Rel. on; 1933 P C 75 and 1935 P C 44, Disting. [P 749 C 2; P 750 C 1]

Braja Lal Chakravarty, Bankim Chandra Mukherjee, Girija P. Sanyal, Rajendra Bhusan Bakshi and Nalini Ranjan Ghose—for Appellant.

Atul Chandra Gupta, Biraj M. Roy and Santosh K. Basu—for Respondent.

D. N. Mitter, J.—These are five appeals by the plaintiffs against as many decrees of the Subordinate Judge of Jalpaiguri dated 23rd December 1932, by which he dismissed the plaintiff's suits in ejectment. The nature of the reliefs claimed in these five suits might be divided into two heads. The suits in which appeals Nos. 121, 122 and 125 arise were for the setting aside of permanent leases created by the previous shebait of the deity Sree Sree Iswar Ram Chandra Bigrha, the appellant before us represented by Prasanna Deb Rakshit who claims to be the present shebait of the said deity. The other two appeals Nos. 123 and 124, arise out of suits in ejectment which have been brought on the ground that the defendants are temporary tenants of the deity on whom proper notices to quit have been served. All these suits having been dismissed by the Subordinate Judge the present appeals have been brought by the plaintiffs.

In order to understand the controversy raised by these appeals it is necessary to set forth the precise case made by the plaintiffs in these plaints on which they found their title. The case made in the plaints is that there was an idol of the name of Sree Sree Iswar Ram Chandra Bigraba which was installed at a very distant time, and it is said that the origin of this foundation is lost in obscurity; but the allegation is that some predecessor of Prasanna Deb Rakshit, who also figures as plaintiff 2 in these suits, in his own personal capacity apart from his capacity as the shebait of the deity installed—the deity of the name of Sree Sree Iswar Ram Chandra Bigraba, dedicated some land of taluk Bahadur and Lantari Nawabgunj for defraying the expenses of the Sheba and Puja of the deity; that for the purpose of carrying out the Sheba the ancestor of plaintiff 2 appointed a certain pious person as Pujari or Pujak, and on the death of the said person it was the plaintiff's ancestor who was entrusted with the appointment of the succeeding Pujari. The plaint after reciting this proceeds to narrate certain events which happened in 1290 B. S. corresponding to 1883. In that year while the charge of the Sheba and Puja of the said deity were entrusted with Sita Ram Bairagi the said Sita Ram Bairagi became negligent in the performance of the Sheba on account of his bad character and Jagadindra Deb Rakshit, the predecessor of plaintiff 2, removed him from the said work of shebaitship by a parwana which is dated 10th Agrahayan, 1290 B. S., and brought the property in his own management in the first instance and subsequently by another parwana the said Jagadindra passed an order appointing Buddhu Baishnavi, step mother of the said Sita Ram, as pujarini for taking over the charge of Sheba and Puja of the said deity.

It is further stated in the plaint that Buddhu Baishnavi carried on the worship of the deity till the time of her death. It appears that in 1909 when there was a proceeding for record of rights the lands of Schs. Ka and Kha of the plaint were recorded in the name of the said Buddhu Baishnavi as shebait of the said deity. Buddhu Baishnavi died on 25th Aswin, 1316 B. S. during the pendency of the settlement operations and the lands which are the subject matter of these five suits came to be recorded as khas lands of plaintiff 2. At the time of the death of Buddhu Baishnavi it is alleged the estate of plaintiff 2 came into the management of the Court of Wards; and the Court of Wards wanted to bring the deity and the property set apart for the sheba of the deity into the khas possession of the plaintiff. But it is stated that Sita Ram made an application to the Deputy Commissioner of Jalpaiguri who was in charge of the Court of Wards and obtained the charge of the worship of the deity and the management and preservation of the property set apart for the sheba of the deity along with it in order to carry on the work of sheba and puja. On the death of Sita Ram which happened on 17th Ashar 1331 B. S. the charge of sheba and puja of the deity under his management was with the consent of plaintiff 2 entrusted to his son Khagendra Nath Bairagi. Then comes the important allegations in paras. 8 and 9 of the plaint which are the foundation of the plaintiff's title suit in the present case.

It is alleged that Khagendra having expressed to plaintiff 2 his inability to carry on the sheba and puja of the said deity with the income of the property described in Sch. Ka to the plaint and other properties set apart for the purpose, proposed to restore the said deity and the property so set apart to the possession of the plaintiff, and the plaintiff having consented thereto, the said Khagendra executed and delivered a registered document in favour of the plaintiff on 29th Kartick 1332 B. S. and restored the said deity and the property set apart for the sheba and puja of the deity to the possession of the plaintiff. It is alleged that the said bigraha at the time of filing the plaint was in the residential house of plaintiff 2 in Jalpaiguri and plaintiff 2 as shebait of the said deity was carrying on the sheba and puja. Para. 9 of the plaint, in the suit out of which Appeal from Original Decree No. 121 of 1933 arises, contains allegations regarding the cause of action for the suit, and must be reproduced here. Para. 9 commences as follows:

The plaintiff has come to learn on enquiry that Sita Ram Bairagi, the predecessor of Khagendra Nath Bairagi, had misused in various ways the said debuttar property.

One of the acts of such misuse or breaches of duty is alleged to have been committed in settling with the defendant in mukarari mourashi right, the land of Sch. (Ka) to the plaint in this suit, without any right and for the purpose of securing his own interest, and improperly and without any reason, executing a registered potta in favour of the defendant to the suit, namely Bengal Duars Bank, Ltd., on 22nd February 1918. The defendant is said to have been possessing the said lands. It is further said that there was no legal necessity for this mukarari, mourashi lease and consequently the plaintiff who has succeeded to the office of the shebaitship is entitled to challenge the said transactions. Alternatively the plaintiff stated in the plaint that if the Court holds that the property in suit be not debuttar property but is property which appertains to the zemindary of plaintiff 2 the reliefs which are asked for may also be given as Sita Ram Bairagi had in those circumstances no right to grant a lease which would be binding on the plaintiff. The cause of action is said to date from 22nd February 1918, the date on which the permanent mukarari lease was granted of the lands which form the subject matter of Appeal No. 121. The plaintiffs on these allegations prayed for a declaration: (1) That the disputed land is the debuttar property of Sree Sree Iswar Ram Chandra Bigrha Thakur; (2) that plaintiff 2 as the representative of the original grantor is the present shebait of the deity; (3) that the defendant may be ejected from possession of the disputed land by removing the house, etc., therefrom and the plaintiff as shebait may be put in possession thereof. Then there is an alternative prayer Gha to which it is not necessary to refer; for this prayer is not now insisted on and nothing more need be said about the alternative prayer which proceeded on the footing that if the Court held that the land be not debutter then the zamindary right of plaintiff 2 may be declared and possession may be given to him. The plaints in the two appeals Nos. 122 and 125 follow the same line as the plaint in the suit out of which appeal No. 121 arises. The permanent Mekarari lease which was sought to be avoided in the suit in which Appeal No. 122 arises was dated 1st December 1919 and it has been marked as Ex. 22 in the suit: see p. 108, Part 2 of the paper book.

With regard to appeal No. 125 the Mourashi Mekarari lease which is sought to be avoided is dated 8th Falgun 1330 B.S. corresponding to 20th February 1924 and it has been marked as Ex. Z (4) in the suit: see p. 141, Part 2 of the paper book. In the case to which Appeal No. 121 relates the date of the lease has already been given. The lease has been marked as Ex. 23 and is printed at p. 104, Part 2 of the paper book. The other two appeals, F. A. Nos. 122 and 123, relate to suits which, as have already been stated are suits for ejectment on the ground that the defendants are non-permanent tenants on whom notices to quit had been served. The title of the plaintiff, however, as set forth in the plaints to these suits, is the same as the title in the suit out of which Appeal No. 121 arises, which have been set forth with sufficient fullness before. The cause of action is only different. The defences to the suits fall under several heads: (1) that the deity was not installed by the ancestor of plaintiff 2 who may be described as the Raikats; (2) that the properties were not debuttar but were lakheraj Baishnabottar properties belonging to the ancestor of Sita Ram Bhairagi and therefore the leases were valid; and (3) that in case of ejectment the defendant was entitled to compensation for the substantial structures which have been erected on the land by the defendant.

On these pleadings the Subordinate Judge framed a number of issues and it is necessary only to refer to issues 2, 5, 6, 8 and 9 which are issues which have been debated before us in these appeals. On this state of pleadings after taking evidence both oral and documentary the Subordinate Judge has reached the following conclusions: (1) that the deity was not installed by the ancestor of Prasanna Deb Raikat and that the work of Sheba was not entrusted to Sita Ram by any ancestor of the Raikats; (2) that the properties in suit were debuttar properties in the sense that they were made gift of by the ancestor of the Raikats, who was the owner of the estate of Baikunthapur on the footing that although the deity was installed by the Bairagi there was a grant for carrying on the Sheba by the Raikats out of the estate; (3) with regard to the Mekarari Mourashi leases the Subordinate Judge came to the conclusion that these being Mekarari leases which were executed without legal necessity and consequently these leases were not valid against the endowment. But the Subordinate Judge comes to the conclusion that as a Raikat was not a shebait he was not competent to institute the suits in which these appeals arise for avoiding the leases; (4) that Raikat's claim to shebaitship is barred by limitation; and (5) defendant is not entitled to compensation as the lease was taken with the knowledge that it was debuttar. On these findings the Subordinate Judge has dismissed these five suits out of which these five appeals arise.

In these appeals the plaintiffs have raised several contentions (1) that the learned Subordinate Judge is not correct in his finding that the deity was not installed by some ancestor of Raikat, (2) he should have held that the plaintiff as descendant of the founder would be entitled to cancel the alienations which were in breach of duty of shebait and would be entitled by reason of the misconduct of the shebait for the time being to assume shebaitship and to see to the restoration of the properties endowed after setting aside the invalid alienations. (3) That even on the findings of the Court below that the properties in suit were not debuttar properties and were only made a gift of by the ancestor of plaintiff 2, the plaintiff, as descendant of the donor, has the right to have the lands restored to endowment upon recovery of the same from a trespasser. (4) In any view of the matter the learned Judge having found that the property was debuttar and that there was a loss in the income of the deity the suit on behalf of the deity is maintainable, and assuming that the plaintiff has no right the Court can take possession of it by appointing Raikat as the next friend, for it is common ground that since Kartic 1332 B. S. Raikat, plaintiff, was carrying on the work of the shebait; and (5) that the finding of the Court below that the rights of the plaintiff Raikat as Shebait had become barred by limitation is wrong. We will deal with the points which have been raised in these appeals on behalf of the appellants in the order in which we have stated them.

With regard to the first point the contention of the appellants is that there is no evidence on the side of the defendants that the installation of the deity was by the ancestor of Sita Ram. (His Lordship then examined the evidence on the point and held that the Idol was installed by Sita Ram Bairagi and the judgment proceeded.) This disposes of the first point taken in this appeal on behalf of the appellant. We proceed now to deal with the second point that plaintiff as a descendant of the founder would be entitled to cancel the permanent and Mokarari leases which were tantamount to breaches of duty in the Shebait owing to the misconduct of the Shebait and to assume Shebaitship for the time being and to restore the properties endowed after letting the invalid alienation to be set aside. In this part of the case considerable time has been spent on the question as to whether the predecessor of Prasanna Deb Raikat could be regarded as the founder of the worship. It is argued by Mr. Chakravarty on the one hand that as it is admitted that Baikunthapur Raj Estate dedicated certain properties for carrying on the worship of the idol the predecessor of Raikat must be regarded as the founder of the worship notwithstanding the finding of the lower Court which has now been affirmed that the deity was installed by Sitaram. The argument of the appellant is that there can be no foundation of the worship until properties were dedicated for carrying on the worship. In other words it is said that the idea of the foundation of a worship must necessarily be associated with the dedication of properties for the carrying on of the worship. This contention seems to be opposed to the two decisions of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council which have been referred to in the course of the argument, namely the decisions in 16 I A 137=17 Cal 3 (1), and 52 I A 245 (2).

It appears the facts in the first mentioned case were that a picture was consecrated. The picture had a peculiar sanctity attached to it by the Ballav Acherjee sect or community of Vishnuvites and as incident thereto offerings made to the idol, and subsequently a temple was built in Calcutta where the Idol was located. In 1825 one Dowji, the grandfather of the plaintiff, in that case, paid a visit to Calcutta and presented to his disciples there a consecrated portrait of himself which was worshipped and which was the subject of contention in that case. It appears that a lady of the name of Mune Bibi was moved to provide for a better habitation

1. Gossamee Sri Gridharjee v. Romonlaljee Gossami, (1890) 17 Cal 3 = 16 I A 137 = 5 Sar 350 (P O).

2. Pramatha Nath v. Pradumnya Kumar Mallick, 1925 P C 139=87 I C 305 = 52 I A 245=52 Cal 809 (P O).

of the consecrated picture. She was a disciple of Purushottum and to him she addressed a deed of gift conveying a new house to Dowjee and to her family Thakur Beharyjee who is another presentment of Krishna. This gift was burdened with a certain condition and it was held that the founder or founders of the worship had accepted the condition imposed by the donor, he was bound by the same, he might or might not have accepted it but having accepted it that condition must prevail. It appears that a temple had been erected for the idol on condition that the defendant in that case would be the shebait. It was held by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee that the plaintiff in that suit could not recover possession of such temples though it had in part been created after the grant by the subscription of the worshippers, no evidence having been given that the subscribers did not know of the condition, or had paid their money with any reference to the question of shebaitship. This case is authority for the proposition that where a worship of a Thakur is founded the shebaitship is held to be vested in the heirs of the founder in default of evidence that he has disposed of it otherwise.

The question as to who is the founder of worship is considered also in the decision of the case in 52 I A 245 (2). There are passages in the judgment of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council which throw light on the question in controversy in the present case. It appears that one Mutty Lal Mullick, a wealthy inhabitant of Calcutta, established the idol in question in that case and he subsequently dedicated properties for the worship of the idol. In this state of facts their Lordships of the Judicial Committee observe :

It seems accordingly clear that in Mutty Lal Mullick's lifetime the idol was, as already stated, established as household god ; and the pious founder narrating his own upkeep and maintenance of the deity gave funds in order that these should be continued ; and he prescribed the duty of continuance to the widow during the adopted son's minority.

In this case it is true that worship was being carried on by the mother but there was a dedication of properties after the worship was founded. And according to the passage which has already been quoted it seems that Mutty Lal Mullick was regarded as the founder. It is the worship that is founded and the rights of worship have to be considered in determining the question as to who is to be regarded as the shebait. The consecration of a deity is conceived as living image regaled with the necessities and luxuries of life even to the changing of clothes, the offering of cooked and uncooked food, and the retirement to rest. The person founding a deity and becoming responsible for these duties is de facto and in common parlance called shebait. This responsibility is, of course, maintained by a pious Hindu, either by the personal performance of the religious rites or as in the case of Sudras, to which caste the parties belonged, by employment of a Brahmin priest to do so on his behalf. That there is no distinction between the founder of a worship and the person who makes a subsequent grant of property for carrying on the worship has been sought to be supported by a passage which was cited to us by Mr. Braja Lal Chakravarty from the decision in 30 C L J 177 (3) which was affirmed by the Privy Council in 48 I A 187 (4) at p. 188 of the said report. Mookerjee, J. applied to Debuttar Estates the rule established in England with regard to charitable foundations established by a private person that he and his heirs are the visitors and it is only when the line of the heirs of a private founder has become extinct or cannot be found or are incompetent to act, (1750) 1 Ves Sen 462 (5) at p. 472, that the visitatorial power devolves on the Crown. In support of this well-recognized principle of English law Mookerjee, J. cited a passage from (1750) 1 Ves Sen 462 (5) at p. 472 which is as follows :

This right, according to Lord Hardwicke, has its origin in the property of the donor and the power which every one has to dispose, direct and regulate his own property.

On the other hand Mr. Gupta who appears for the respondent contends that the passage just quoted is merely a truncated portion of Lord Hardwicke's judgment and that when the whole passage is looked at it would appear that Lord Hardwicke is drawing a distinction between the donor of properties for a chari-

3. Monohar Mukherjee v. Peary Mohan Mukherjee, 1920 Cal 210=54 I O 6=24 C W N 478=30 C L J 177.

4. G. H. Hook v. Administrator General of Bengal, 1921 P O 11 = 60 I O 631 = 48 I A 187=48 Cal 499 (P O).

5. Green v. Rutherford, (1750) 1 Ves Sen 462.

table institution and the person who subsequently adds properties to the charitable institution. At p. 471 of the report the following passage occurs :

This leads to the second and main point, on the merits of the plea. I agree, that the presentation set forth by plea, is not a proper subject of visitatorial power. To argue this clearly, the original and visitatorial power must be considered. The original of all such power is the property of donor, and the power every one has to dispose, direct, and regulate his own property, like the case of patronage; cujus est dare, etc., therefore, if either the Crown or the subject creates an eleemosynary foundation, and vests the charity in the persons who are to receive the benefit of it, since a contest might arise about the government of it, the law allows the founder or his heirs, or the person especially appointed by him to be visitor, to determine concerning his own creature. If the charity is not vested in the persons who are to partake, but in trustees for their benefit, no visitor can arise by implication, but the trustees have that power; from which account it appears, the nature of this power is forum domesticum, the private jurisdiction of the founder, and cannot extend further, unless some other person grafts upon it and by express words or necessary implication subjects the estate or emolument given by him, to the same visitatorial power and to be governed by the same rules.

If the whole of this passage is taken into account it would appear that a charitable foundation so far as it is formed to give effect to a charitable purpose in reference to property provided by the founder is the creature of the founder who has the power to direct or regulate his own property or he or his heirs have the same power with reference to the other properties that may be given in support of the same charitable institution unless the second donor grafts a condition that the estate given by him is subject to some other visitatorial power. In the present case it does not appear that when the Baikunthapur estate made a gift of the properties in suit for the worship of the idol it imposed any condition regarding shebaitship. The second ground fails and so does the third which is practically the same as the second, for the second ground is that the gift of the properties was that of the predecessors of plaintiff 2, Raikat, and, therefore, the lands ought to be restored to him upon recovery from the trespassers.

The fourth ground is, as already stated, that as the property is debuttar and as there is a loss in the income of the deity, the suit on behalf of the deity is maintainable; and assuming that the plaintiff has got no right the Court is competent to appoint the plaintiff as shebait in the sense of his being the next friend of the perpetual infant, the idol and thus allow him to continue the suits on behalf of the deity. It is argued for the respondent that the plaintiff really rested his case of getting the Shebaitship on the basis of the sale of the shebaitship to the plaintiff by Khagendra on 29th Kartic 1332 B. S. which has been described in the deed of surrender, Ex. 2 : see p. 155 of the paper book (Part 2). It seems to us that this deed although described as a deed of surrender is really a deed of sale of the shebaitship by Khagendra. The consideration of Rs. 7,500 is mentioned as being paid out of kindness of Khagendra. The material passage of this document is this :

So at present I have no other alternative than to surrender the post of the said shebait and to return the said deity to you together with the debuttar property of the said deity described in the schedule hereunder. In connexion with the sheba of the said deity of you from the time of my predecessors I am at present indebted to the extent of Rs. 7,500 and I have no other means of being released from the debt. I, in succession to my predecessors, have been performing the work of shebait of the deity under you and your predecessors and have become indebted; so, out of kindness, and with a view to relieve me from the indebtedness, you have given me Rs. 7,500 and I, without any objection, and out of my free will, return the said deity to you and give up possession of the debuttar property described in the schedule hereunder in your possession.

Looking carefully into the document and whatever has been described in it, one has no hesitation in coming to the conclusion that it was really a deed of sale of the shebaitship to plaintiff 2 by Khagendra. If that is so then on the authorities to which we shall refer presently this transfer of the shebaitship is absolutely void in the absence of any custom sanctioning such transfer. No custom as to the transfer of the shebaitship has been alleged or proved in these cases. In these circumstances according to the decisions in 4 I A 76 (6) and 27 I A 69 (7) the sale is void. Their Lordships of the Judicial Committee expressed themselves on this point in the following language in the last mentioned case:

6. Raja Vurmah Valia v. Ravi Vurmah Kunshi Kutti, (1876) 1 Mad 235=4 I A 76=3 Sar 687 (P O).

7. Gnanasambanda Pandara Sannadhi v. Velu Pandaram, (1900) 23 Mad 271=27 I A 69=7 Sar 671 (P O).

In 4 I A 76 (6) this committee held that an assignment by the Urallars (managers) of a pagoda of the right of management thereof was beyond their legal competence under the common law of India, and that no custom to do so had been established. There is no proof of any custom in this case, and consequently these deeds of sale are void and did not give any title to the purchaser. The title remained in Chockalinga and Nataraj and the possession which was taken by the purchasers was adverse to them: see p. 76 of the report 27 I A 69 (7).

The deed of sale evidenced by Ex. 2 being void the title to shebaitship still remains in Khagendra. It is true that possession has been taken by plaintiff 2 from Khagendra both of the idol and endowed properties, at least some, and at the expiration of 12 years from the date of execution of Ex. 2 the question might arise whether plaintiff 2 has acquired the right of shebaitship by adverse possession for more than the statutory period of 12 years. Such circumstances occurring it may be open to the plaintiff to raise new contentions with regard to the matters now in controversy on different grounds. We are not concerned with them at present. The question at present is whether on the issue as framed and in the circumstances which we are now dealing with the plaintiff is entitled to maintain these suits. We are of opinion that this deed of sale is void and we agree with the Subordinate Judge on this point. We do not think that in these circumstances plaintiffs had any right to maintain the suits. Another point which was raised in the final reply by the appellants does not seem to have been taken in the Court below. It is based on the actual possession of the properties in question by the plaintiff as de facto shebait and our attention has been drawn to two recent decisions of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in 60 I A 124 (8) and 62 I A 47 (9), and Mr. Chakravarty in his final reply stressed the importance of the decisions of these cases on the question that his client being in actual possession is entitled to succeed in these suits both to set aside the leases as also for ejecting the temporary tenants. At the first blush there are passages which if read divorced from the context might support the contention that the shebait who is in de facto possession of the debuttar properties, might maintain suits of the kind we are dealing with. It is said that as de facto shebait plaintiff 2 is entitled to maintain the suit for recovering debuttar properties from trespassers. But it is to be noticed that these observations of their Lordships to which we shall refer presently have to be read with reference to the facts of the particular case in which these observations were made. While dealing with the transfer by the previous Mohant by sale in the first case Lord Russell of Killowen expressed himself thus:

Their Lordships however are not now concerned with any question of title, because both the Courts below have found that the plaintiff is the person in actual possession of the Pilgunj Math and as such entitled to maintain a suit to recover property not for his own benefit but for the benefit of the Math.

It would appear from the original judgment of the Patna High Court as the case is reported in 9 Pat 885 (10) that in that case the plaintiff was claiming the property as the property of the math or the idols installed in the math and that he was in actual possession of the math his possession having been recognized all round as the possession of the mohant of the math. The learned Judges of the High Court remarked :

The learned Subordinate Judge obviously refers to this fact when he styles him as the de facto mohant of Paliganj, an expression which has been severely criticized by the learned advocate for the appellants.

In that case an appeal was taken to the Privy Council by the mohant, 60 I A 124 (8), and in those circumstances their Lordships of the Judicial Committee held that the plaintiff, who was in actual possession of the math, was entitled to recover for the benefit of the math the property which belonged to the math. Reliance has been placed on the passage in the case cited, 62 I A 47 (9), where Sir Shadi Lal in delivering the judgment of the Judicial Committee said as follows:

As observed by this Board in 60 I A 124 (8) a person in actual possession of the math is entitled to maintain a suit to recover property appertaining to it not for his own benefit but for the benefit of the math.

Also previous to this part of the judgment after stating the facts of the case, their Lordships observed as follows :

There can be little doubt that Karia has been managing the affairs of the institution since

8. Ram Charan Das v. Naurangi Lal, 1933 P C 75=142 I C 214=60 I A 124=12 Pat 251 (P C).

9. Mahadeo Prosad Singh v. Karia Bharti, 1935 P C 44=153 I C 1100=62 I A 47=57 All 159 (P C).

10. Naurangi Lal v. Ram Charan Das, 1930 Pat 455=127 I C 817=9 Pat 885=11 P L T 403.

1904, and has since the death of Rajbans been treated as its mohant by all the persons interested therein. The property entered in the revenue records in the name of Rajbans was, on his death, mutated to Karia, and it is not suggested that there is any person who disputes his title to the office of the mohant. In these circumstances their Lordships agree with the High Court that Karia was entitled to recover for the benefit of the math the property which belonged to math and is now wrongly held by the appellant.

The facts of the present case are distinguishable. In the first place the cases cited are cases of mohantship of a math whereas the present case is one of shebaitship of an endowment. We have already held that Khagendra's transfer is void. Even if plaintiff 2 had purchased from the shebait Khagendra, as his heirs were all living, these heirs according to our view would have been the next shebait. In the circumstances it cannot be said that there is no person who is capable of disputing the title of the present plaintiff to the office of the shebaitship. Besides, it is also an important circumstance to note that this was not the point of view which has been presented in this case. The plaint is not based on the possession of the present plaintiff 2 as de facto shebait but on the other facts which we have already stated. We think that these two Privy Council cases do not assist the appellants. It is not necessary in view of these considerations to deal with the last question about limitation of the plaintiff's right as shebait. It is just sufficient for our purposes to say that the present suits are not maintainable on the state of facts which have been pleaded in the plaint and raised by the pleadings. The result is that these appeals are dismissed with costs. Full hearing fees are allowed in Appeal No. 121 and half hearing fees are allowed in the remaining appeals.

Patterson, J.—I agree.

A.L./R.K. Appeals dismissed.

* A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 751

D. N. MITTER AND S. K. GHOSE, JJ.

Sm. Annabati Dassi and others—Appellants.

v.

Parmeswar Mullick and others — Respondents.

Appeal No. 172 of 1935, Decided on 7th August 1936.

* Civil P. C. (1908), S. 151, O. 41, R. 1—Decree in suit for partition making no provision for maintenance of some members of family—Appeal directed to question of maintenance only — Certified copy of portion of decree relating to allotment of property need not be filed—Appeal filed without such copy is in proper form — Court can also admit appeal in exercise of its inherent powers.

Where a decree in a suit for partition is divisible in the sense, that it contains a part with regard to allotment to different parties, and makes no provision for maintenance for some of the members of the family, it is not necessary to file a certified copy of that portion of the decree which relates to allotment, along with the memorandum of the appeal, if the appeal is directed to the question of maintenance only. At any rate the appellate Court can, under such circumstances, exercise its inherent powers under S. 151, in admitting the appeal as being in proper form. [P 752 C 1]

Prokash Chandra Ghose — for Appellants.

Bankim Ch. Banerjee, Panna Lal Chatterjee (Deputy Registrar) and Radhika Ranjan Guha—for Respondents.

D. N. Mitter, J.—It appears that the appellants filed an appeal against the final decree in a suit for partition. The main grounds on which this appeal has been rested relate to an omission of the provision for maintenance of the appellants in the final decree for partition and although there are three grounds which possibly might lend colour to the contention of the respondents that the appeal is directed against the allotment made by the final decree, the learned advocate for the appellants is now prepared to delete those three grounds and to confine his case only to the question of maintenance. It appears that the memorandum of appeal was presented on 28th June 1935, and on 17th July 1935 the Registrar passed this order. "Let the part of the decree be accepted at present subject to objection by the respondents, when they appear." The report of the commissioner which included a large number of maps was made a part of the decree. The portion of the certified copy of the decree which was filed with the memorandum of appeal included the commissioner's report but not the maps which form a part of the report of the commissioner. The question is whether the memorandum of appeal conforms to the provisions of O. 41, R. 1, Civil P. C., which enacts that :

Every appeal shall be preferred in the form of a memorandum signed by the appellant or his pleader and presented to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf. The memorandum shall be accompanied by a copy of the decree appealed from and (unless the appellate Court dispenses therewith) of the judgment on which it is founded.

It is contended on behalf of the respondents that the memorandum of appeal does not conform to the provisions of O. 41, R. 1, seeing that the appellants have not filed a copy of the entire decree. Question arises, where the decree is divisible in the sense that it contains a part with regard to allotments to different parties in a partition suit and makes no provisions for maintenance for some of the members of the family, whether in such circumstances that portion of the decree which relates to allotment need also be filed along with the memorandum of appeal if the appeal is directed to the question of maintenance only. One should take a sensible view of the statute. There does not seem any sense in filing the unnecessary and expensive certified copy of the Commissioner's Report including the map where no objection is taken to the allotment made by the commissioner and the appeal is only confined to that portion of the decree which does not direct or make any provision for maintenance of the appellants. It is possible to read the language of the statute to mean that the memorandum shall be accompanied by a copy of that part of the decree appealed from and against which the grounds of appeal were all directed. But even if we have any doubt with regard to strict and literal interpretation of O. 41, R. 1, we can exercise in the circumstances like the present our inherent powers under S. 151, Civil P. C., which says that:

Nothing in this Code shall be deemed to limit or otherwise affect the inherent power of the Court to make such orders as may be necessary for the ends of justice or to prevent abuse of the process of the Court.

In our opinion there does not seem to be any sense in asking the appellants to file the maps forming part of the decree although the appellants' grounds of appeal are only limited to the question of maintenance. The cost for taking a certified copy of the maps is considerable for it appears that their printing cost is about Rs. 694. In these circumstances we overrule the objection of the respondents and hold that the part of the decree which has already been filed will be sufficient and the memorandum of appeal is in order. In our opinion the appeal in the circumstances is in order. This application of the appellants to exclude the maps from the list of papers to be printed is granted subject to the condition that the appellants delete the grounds other than the grounds which they want to take for making a provision for grant of maintenance.

S. K. Ghose, J.—I agree.

R.M./R.K.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 752

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Serajgunj Co-operative Urban Bank, Ltd. and another—Petitioners.

v.

Bindhubashini Dassya and others — Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Case No. 221 of 1936, Decided on 3rd August 1936, from order of Second Court, Sub-Judge, Pabna, D/- 13th January 1936.

Civil P. C. (1908), O. 44, R. 1 — Appeal in forma pauperis — Review application from judgment on it is maintainable without payment of court-fees.

It cannot be the intention of legislature that when a suit or an appeal is allowed to be presented by any party as a pauper and exemption in the matter of payment of court-fees is granted under the law, any application for review of judgment arising out of the same proceedings would require payment of court-fees.

[P 753 C 1]

An application for review of judgment passed on appeal, must under the law, be considered to be in continuation of the appeal itself which was in forma pauperis and therefore on grounds both of sound reason and obvious justice, such application must be held to be maintainable without payment of court-fees: 20 All 410, Rel. on.

[P 753 C 1]

Gopal Chandra Das and Jnanendra Kumar Roy—for Petitioners.

Bijan Kumar Mukerji and Jatindra Mohan Lahiri—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—This Rule is directed against the order passed by the learned Subordinate Judge, Second Court, Pabna, on 13th January 1936, holding that an application for review of judgment by a party who has been allowed to appeal as a pauper was maintainable, without payment of court-fees. The question raised in the case, namely whether an application for review of judgment passed on appeal which was allowed to be prosecuted by the party concerned as a pauper, under O. 44, R. 1, Civil P. C., attracted the provisions of the Court-fees Act, relating to an application for review of judgment, is an important one; but in our judgment, there is no difficulty in answering the same in the negative in view of the clear provisions of the law contained in the Code of Civil Procedure, relating to suits and appeals by paupers. As was pointed out by the Allahabad High Court in 20 All 410 (1), the word "suit" meant the suit instituted on permission to sue as a pauper being given.

That suit is then to proceed as an ordinary suit under the Code of Civil Procedure. One of the incidents of such a suit is that a party aggrieved by a decree or order in that suit may under certain circumstances present an application for review. The presentation of such an application is a proceeding connected with the suit. It follows therefore that when an application for review of judgment is presented in the course of the proceedings in a suit in forma pauperis, that application like the plaint in the suit, is not liable to any court-fee. The observations of the learned Judges of the Allahabad High Court referred to above with which we entirely agree, apply with equal force to the case of an application for review of judgment passed on appeal by a pauper, regard being had to the specific provisions contained in O. 44, R. 1, Civil P. C., allowing a person to appeal as a pauper, subject in all matters to the provisions relating to suits by paupers, in so far as those provisions are applicable. There can be no question that an application for review of judgment passed on appeal, must under the law, be considered to be in continuation of the appeal itself which was in forma pauperis; and both sound reason and obvious justice in a case of this description demand, that such an application must be held to be maintainable without payment of court-fees, at the time of filing the same, as in the case of the memorandum of appeal allowed to be presented without payment of adequate court-fees.

It may be stated that it cannot possibly be presumed that the legislature intended that when a suit or an appeal is allowed to be presented by any party as a pauper and exemption in the matter of payment of court-fees is granted under the law; any application for review of judgment arising out of the same proceeding would require payment of court-fees. The rule is discharged; the order of the Court below, rejecting the preliminary objection raised by the petitioner in this Court on the question of court fees is affirmed. The opposite party is entitled to her costs in the Rule. The hearing-fee in this Court is assessed as two gold mohurs.

D.S./R.K.

Rule discharged.

 A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 753

DERBYSHIRE, C. J. AND COSTELLO, J.

Rash Behari Shaw (Handa) and others
—Appellants.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeals Nos. 446, 461 to 466 of 1935, Decided on 10th July 1936.

 (a) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 235 and 239—It is discretionary with Court to try accused jointly or separately—High Court has power to hold that joint trial was not proper and to set aside convictions—Joint trial should not be held where there is risk of embarrassment to defence.

Under S. 239, a discretion is given to a Court to try certain persons either jointly or separately. The manner in which this discretion is to be exercised must depend upon the facts of each case and the High Court, on a consideration of the circumstances of the case, has power to hold that the accused should not have been tried jointly and can set aside the conviction and sentences without directing a retrial should it think fit. Even where Ss. 235 and 239 justify a joinder it should not be resorted to, if there is a risk of embarrassment to the defence: 1915 Cal 743 and 1925 Cal 341, Rel. on. [P 759 C 2]

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 235—Conspiracy having one or more objects in view—Offence of conspiracy and acts committed in pursuance of it come under one transaction—Transaction continues so long as conspiracy continues.

Where there is a conspiracy having one or more objects in view and certain offences are committed in pursuance of such conspiracy, the several offences generally form part of the same transaction within the meaning of that expression as used in S. 235. The principle will also apply where the several offences are by different persons. The offence of conspiracy and the acts done in pursuance of the conspiracy can rightly be said to come under one transaction and transaction continues so long as the conspiracy continues. [P 759 C 2; P 760 C 1]

Where, therefore, there is a conspiracy and specific offences are committed in pursuance of such conspiracy, persons who are parties to that conspiracy and concerned in the specific offences can lawfully be tried under one and the same trial: 1922 Cal 107; 1925 Rang 296; 1930 Rang 114 and 1915 Cal 719, Ref. [P 760 C 1]

 (c) Penal Code (1860), S. 120-A—Each of accused not in agreement to do same illegal act or cause same illegal act to be done—They are not parties to one and same conspiracy.

In order to constitute the offence of conspiracy as defined in S. 120-A, it is only necessary for the prosecution to show that the persons concerned had agreed to do or cause to be done an illegal act or an act which is not illegal by illegal means, and it is immaterial whether the illegal act is the ultimate object of such agreement or is merely incidental to the object. Where it cannot be said, except by straining language, that every one of the accused was in agreement to do the same illegal act or cause the same illegal act to be done, they cannot be held to have been parties to one and the same conspiracy within the meaning of S. 120-A.

[P 760 C 1, 2]

Certain persons were charged under S. 120-A read with S. 39, Electricity Act, and S. 379, Penal Code, with having been parties to a criminal conspiracy to commit theft by dishonest consumption and user of electric energy belonging to a certain company. It was the case of the prosecution that there were two classes of operators, namely (1) those who did the actual tampering and their adherents, and (2) the consumers and their servants who allowed the tampering to be done. It appeared that the first class of the operators were in an agreement with each other and had in view one object, namely to obtain unlawful money by tampering with meters wherever possible and the other class had in view the object of wrongful gain to themselves by allowing tampering of those meters and the making of a false record of the amount of electric energy consumed by them with consequent reduction in the amount of their bills to be paid to the electric Company and it also appeared that each of the consumers abetted by his employees or servants was acting in conjunction with some of the tamperers but not in agreement with other consumers:

Held: that the accused could not be said to have been parties to one and the same extensive conspiracy, nor could the acts complained of be said to have been done in pursuance of any conspiracy and therefore did not arise out of the same transaction. The tendency on part of prosecution of joining several persons in one trial under the general charge of conspiracy along with charges for other substantive offences which could be tried separately, commented upon and deprecated.

[P 760 C 2]

(d) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 239—Accused jointly tried under S. 239—Validity of trial—In judging validity, test to be applied is accusation made and not result of trial—Matter must be looked at as it appeared to Magistrate when framing charges.

The test to be applied, in judging the validity of a trial, which purports to have taken place under the provisions of S. 239, is the accusation made and not the result of the trial provided the accusation is a real one, and not a mere excuse for the joinder of charges which cannot be otherwise joined. In order to decide, whether several persons can be tried jointly with having committed offences forming part of the same transaction the Court has to look to the accusation, i. e. the prosecution case as set forth in the charges and if according to that case the offences are such as could be regarded as parts of the same transaction, it will be justified in holding a joint trial.

[P 761 C 1]

The matter must be looked at, as it appeared to the Magistrate at the time when he framed the charges against the accused before him and not to the state of affairs existing long after the trial has proceeded on its way leading to the conviction of the accused.

Where having regard to all the facts which were before the Magistrate when he framed the charges against the accused it appears that the Magistrate was acting judicially and properly exercising his discretion given to him under S. 239, there is no illegality in the joint trial of the accused as to warrant quashing of the proceedings: Case law reviewed.

[P 764 C 2; P 765 C 1]

(e) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 239—Several persons jointly tried in same trial—Irregularity, if any, not causing prejudice to accused—Proceedings cannot be questioned, more so when no protest has been made on behalf of accused.

Where the irregularity, if any, in the joint trial of several persons at one and the same trial, is not such which, on the actual facts of the case, caused any prejudice to the accused or by itself entailed any failure of justice, it is no ground for quashing the proceedings, more so when no protest or complaint is made by or on behalf of the accused against the course adopted by the Magistrate.

[P 765 C 1]

*(f) Electricity Act (1910), S. 39—Meaning of—S. 39 only means that offender is to be treated in same way as if he had committed offence of theft.

Section 39 does not say that dishonest abstraction or consumption or use of energy is theft. S. 39 means no more than that the offender is to be tried in the same way as if he had committed the offence of theft: 1929 Rang 203, Ref.

[P 765 C 2; P 766 C 1]

(g) Sale of Goods Act (1930)—Applicability of—Whether Act applies to electricity—(Quaere).

Quaere:—It is doubtful whether the Sale of Goods Act is applicable to electricity.

[P 766 C 1]

(b) Electricity Act (1910), S. 39—Abstraction is not always necessary ingredient—Consuming of energy and regular causing of record of that use to be altered amounts to dishonest user.

Abstraction is not always a necessary ingredient for an offence under S. 29. The consuming of electricity and the regular causing of the record of that use in the shape of the figures on the dials in the meters to be altered, amounts to a dishonest user within the meaning of S. 39; and the persons causing or allowing the alteration of the figures on the dial must be deemed to have committed theft within the meaning of S. 379, Penal Code: Reg. v. White, (1852) 6 Cox's C C 213, Disting.

[P 766 C 2; P 767 C 1, 2]

(i) Electricity Act (1910), Ss. 39 and 44—Scope of.

Sections 39 and 44, Electricity Act, are to be considered as separate enactments for purposes of S. 26, General Clauses Act.

[P 768 C 1]

Birbhusan Dutt, Jyotish Chandra Guha, Hiralal Ganguli, Carden Noad, S. K. Sen, Debi Prosad Khaitan, Satindra

Nath Mukherji and N. K. Basu—for Appellants.

Page, J. K. Mukherji, Bholanath Dutt and Srish Chundra Roy Choudhury—for the Crown.

Judgment. — The appellants in these appeals are Rash Behari Shaw, Sushil Kumar Ghose, Patal Chandra Santra, Jagadish Singh, Manindra Nath Dey, Babulal Chowkhani, Ganesh Bahadur and Sailendra Nath Mukherji. They together with four other persons, Panchkari Bannerji, Kumud Nath Nandy, Sailendra Nath Sanyal, and Harnarian Chatterji were jointly tried before the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, and as a result of the trial the present appellants were convicted and sentenced on various charges, and the other four persons were acquitted. All the accused persons were charged with having been parties to a criminal conspiracy to commit theft by dishonest consumption and user of electrical energy belonging to the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation between the month of January 1934 and 20th January 1935, and in consequence of such conspiracy theft was committed at the Bharat Laxmi Cinema, at the Jupiter Cinema and at other places. They were charged with being parties to this conspiracy together with, amongst others, three persons, Krishna Chandra Shome, Bholanath Chatterji and Hardwar Singh, who were originally in the position of being accused persons but later were discharged and called as witnesses on behalf of the prosecution. Certain other persons were alleged to be parties to the conspiracy, namely Aswini Kumar Panja, Nanilal Ghose, Md. Abdul Azim and Bhudeb Chandra Seth, all of whom were stated to be absconders at the time of the trial out of which these appeals arise, and they were subsequently arrested, tried and convicted, and the first three of them are the appellants in the supplementary case.

Against Babulal Chowkhani, who is the proprietor of the Bharat Laxmi Cinema which is situate at No. 2, Chittaranjan Avenue, there was a further charge that between April 1934, at the time when the Cinema was started, and 16th January 1935, he committed theft by dishonest consumption or user of electrical energy belonging to the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. Against Sailendra Nath Mukherji, Kumud Nath Nandy and Ganesh Bahadur there was a charge of aiding and abetting Babulal Chowkhani in the commission of the offence of theft of electrical energy belonging to the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. Sailendra Nath Mukherji, Rash Behari Shaw, Sushil Kumar Ghose and Jagadish Singh were charged with having aided and abetted Md. Abdul Azim, proprietor of the Jupiter Cinema, in the commission of theft of electrical energy at that Cinema between the month, of February 1934 and 23rd December 1934.

Put shortly therefore all the 12 persons who were tried together before the Chief Presidency Magistrate were charged with an offence punishable under S. 120.B, I. P. C., read with S. 39, Electricity Act, 1910, and S. 379, I. P. C. Babulal Chowkhani was charged with an offence punishable under S. 39, Electricity Act, 1910, read with S. 379, I. P. C. Sailendra Nath Mukherji, Kumud Nath Nandy and Ganesh Bahadur were charged with an offence punishable under S. 109, I. P. C., read with S. 39, Electricity Act, 1910, read with S. 379, I. P. C. Sailendra Nath Mukherji, Rash Behari Shaw, Sushil Kumar Ghose and Jagadish Singh were charged with an offence punishable under S. 109, I. P. C., read with S. 39, Electricity Act, 1910, read with S. 379, I. P. C.

The learned Magistrate in his elaborate and exhaustive judgment first of all gave a survey of the circumstances leading to the institution by the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation of the proceedings against the present appellants and the other accused persons who were tried, and the Magistrate refers to certain evidence which was given for the purpose of showing that prior to the investigation which led to the arrest of the present appellants and other persons there had been an abnormal loss of electricity which could not be accounted for. As a consequence of this three special meter readers, Khambata, (P. W. 30), W. J. Hutchison (P. W. 31) and M. C. Hart (P. W. 32), were appointed on 7th July 1934. As a result of the readings taken by these three persons proof was obtained that in three places meters had been tampered with as they showed reverse readings, i. e., lower readings taken on certain dates than the readings taken on previous dates. The next step taken by the Corporation was to instruct a meter reader named N. K.

Chatterji, (P. W. 6), to take daily readings at the Bharat Laxmi Cinema. When giving evidence on 30th January 1935 N. K. Chatterji stated that for the previous nine months he had, under orders, been taking weekly readings of the Cinemas and Theatres which he had been entering in two books, one for Central Calcutta and one for North Calcutta. He began to take weekly readings at the Bharat Laxmi Cinema and at the Jupiter Cinema on 4th June 1934, (Exs. 20 and 21). At the Bharat Laxmi Cinema he noticed a decrease in consumption which he reported to his superior officer, one Augustin, who thereupon ordered him to take daily readings at the Bharat Laxmi Cinema. This he did from 20th August 1934 to 4th September 1934 entering readings in a special note-book (Ex. 22). As a result he noted that there were reverse readings on two Mondays on two light and fan meters and also on one electric motor meter.

The next event, says the learned Magistrate, which led to the institution of this case, was a matter which was really put before the Court by the defence. This was a letter (Ex. D), dated the 21st September 1934, which purported to have been written by one Chandi Charan Mukherji to the Agent of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation, who sent it to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, for investigation by the police. In that letter Chandi Charan Mukherji stated that for the previous five or six months the teashop known as Chhaya Cabin, opposite Mukherji's house, and run by one Krishna Chandra Shome, had been used as the rendezvous of certain persons engaged in tampering with electric meters. He mentioned five persons and offered to assist in the arrest of the culprits. Inspector Sukrul Hossein (P. W. 11-A) of the Detective Department was deputed to investigate the matter. He made arrangements for a watch to be kept on the Bharat Laxmi Cinema from the third week of September 1934 and that watch continued till the latter part of December 1934. During the period from the 1st to the 12th November two officers of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation, Mr. M. S. Thacker (P. W. 8) and N. S. Rau (P. W. 9), took readings at the Bharat Laxmi Cinema. The prosecution case was that the readings taken by these two officers showed that the meters at that Cinema had been tampered with. On the 17th November a formal complaint was made to the Court of the Chief Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, by M. S. Thacker on behalf of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation, that complaint being in compliance with the requirements of S. 50, Electricity Act.

Subsequently, a large number of persons were arrested, some of whom were discharged, and the others tried on charges out of which these appeals arise. Inspector Sukrul Hossein (P. W. 11-A) and Sub-Inspector P. K. Dutt (P. W. 44) kept watch on the Jupiter Cinema on the 23rd December 1934. At about 5-30 a. m. on that date Krishna Chandra Shome arrived at the Cinema on a bicycle and went to an office room in a building beside the Cinema. Five or ten minutes later the police officers entered and arrested him there and also the Darwan of the Cinema, Jagadish Singh. They subsequently searched the house of Krishna Chandra Shome and there took possession of certain articles, namely, a brass die marked M-11 and another marked C. E. S. C. Ltd., certain lead seals, and wires etc., and also a letter addressed to one Aswini Kumar Panja, and another letter to Krishna Shome by one N. K. Chatterji (Ex. 36). While the search at Krishna's house was taking place, the police officers went out and saw a Baby Austin Saloon Car No. 36683 which was pursued and stopped near Jagannath Ghat. Sailendra Nath Mukherji who was in the car was then arrested. On the same day, that is, the 23rd December 1934, four other persons, Sushil Kumar Ghose, Manindra Nath Dey, Bholanath Chatterji and Rash Behari Shaw were arrested making a total of the persons arrested up to that time 7. On the 26th December two persons, Hardwar Singh and Panchkori Banerji were arrested. On the 29th December 1934 Kumud Nath Nandy and Saliendra Nath Sanyal were arrested: on 7th January 1935 Harnarain Chatterji was arrested; on the 8th January 1935 Patal Chandra Santra was arrested; and on the 10th January 1935 Ganesh Bahadur, the Darwan at the Bharat Laxmi Cinema. On that same day, that is, the 10th January 1935, the Bharat Laxmi Studio at Tollygunge owned by Babulal Chowkhani was searched by Sub-Inspector Jiban Chandra Chatterji and among the papers seized were six files of vouchers (Exs. 54/1 to 54/6), inside of which were two pay orders (Exs. 12 and 14) with vouchers attached (Exs. 12/2 and 14/2). These pay orders bore the signature of Babulal Chowkhani and he was arrested on the 16th January 1935, and on the 20th January 1935 his Studio was searched for the second time and another pay order bearing his signature was discovered; that is Ex. 16.

Of the persons arrested the following made confessions which were recorded by an Honorary Magistrate Rai Bahadur Ashutosh Ghose as follows: Krishna Chandra Shome on the 28th December 1934; Bholanath Chatterji on 29th December 1934; Hardwar Singh on the 30th December 1934; Rash Behari Shaw and Manindra Nath Dey on the 31st December 1934; Panchkori Banerji and Sushil Ghose on the 1st January 1935; and Jagadish Singh on the 2nd January 1935. At the beginning of the trial before the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate, on the application of the prosecution, Krishna Chandra Shome, Bholanath Chatterji and Hardwar Singh were discharged under S. 494, Criminal P. C., and they were examined as witnesses for the prosecution, and the other five, they all retracted the confessions that they made. Three other persons were arrested and put on trial, namely Somrath Chowbey, Krishna Swamy Ghaneshyam, but they were discharged before the charges were framed. That was on the 2nd February 1935. The order recorded by the learned Magistrate runs as follows:

6 P. Ws. more examined. The accused Somrath Chowbey, Krishna Swamy Ghaneshyam, Sristidhar Bhattacharji, are discharged under S. 253, Criminal P. C. Charges framed against the rest and their plea recorded.

The enquiry before the Magistrate really commenced on the 21st January 1935. Between that date and the 2nd February the Magistrate had taken the evidence in chief of no less than 36 witnesses called on behalf of the prosecution. That is an important fact to be borne in mind in considering whether or not there was any illegality in connection with the joinder of the charges made against these appellants. The charges were framed clearly on the basis of the evidence given by these 36 witnesses prior to the time on 2nd February when the charges were framed by the learned Magistrate including such evidence as was given as to the events leading up to the investigation and the sending up to trial of the accused persons. The Magistrate thought fit to charge the appellants with the other four persons who were tried with an offence under S. 120-B, I. P. C. The learned Magistrate in his judgment having referred to the charges framed against the 12 persons whom he was trying says this:

All the accused persons have pleaded not guilty and most of them have filed written statements explaining their position. Amongst them only one, Kumud Nath Nandy was in the service of C. E. S. C. at the time of his arrest. Sailen Mukerji, Sushil Ghosh, Sailen Sanyal, Hara Narayan Chatterji are ex-employees of the Electric Supply Corporation: accomplice witnesses Krishna Chandra Shome and Hardwar Singh are also ex-employees of the Electric Supply Corporation. Those accused persons who do not fall in that category are accused Rash Behari Shaw and Manindra Nath Dey, the accomplice witness Bholanath Chatterji P. W. 2 and the accused Aswini Kumar Panja and Nanilal Ghosh who are awaiting trial after disposal of this case. Babulal Chowkhani is proprietor of the Bharat Lakshmi Cinema and Ganesh Bahadur is durwan of that place. The accused Ganesh Bahadur is durwan of the Jupiter Cinema the proprietor of which Abdul Azim and his servant Bhudeb Chandra Sett are awaiting trial hereafter. . . .

The learned Magistrate then proceeded to set out the evidence tendered by the prosecution regarding the association of the accused persons, evidence to show that there was one general conspiracy between all the accused. According to the prosecution case, there were two groups of persons operating: (1) the consumers of the electrical energy and their servants who allowed meter tampering to be done and (2) those who did the actual tampering. The latter were either employees or ex-employees of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation or they were outsiders. Of the latter some had mechanical knowledge and had made or supplied articles required in connection with the tampering operations. The operators who were employees or ex-employees of the Electric Supply Corporation were Sailen Mukherji, Kumud Nandy, Sushil Ghosh, Sailen Sanyal, Harnarayan Chatterji and Hardwar Singh, and those who were not in the services of the Supply Corporation either before or at the time of their arrest were Rash Behari Shaw, Manindra Nath Dey, Bholanath Chatterji, Aswini Kumar Panja, and Nanilal Ghosh.

It was further the case of the prosecution that Nanilal Ghosh was the originator of the plan and he it was said, got the idea from one B. N. Dey, a former employee of the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. It was said that Nanilal Ghosh brought in Sailen Mukerji who in his turn recruited Kumud Nandy, Harnarayan Chatterji and Sailendra Sanyal, his colleagues in the Supply Corporation. The other persons recruited by Sailen Mukherji were Sushil Ghosh, Panchkori Banerji, Hardwar Singh, Aswini Kumar Panja and Bholanath Chatterji. Sailen and Krishna had been brought in by Nanilal Ghosh. Hardwar Singh introduced them to Babulal Chowkhani and his servants. Rash Behary was recruited by Sushil Ghosh and Bhudeb Chandra Sett was recruited by Rash Behary. Bhudeb secured his employer Md. Abdul Azim, the proprietor of the Jupiter Cinema, and finally the durwan Jagadish Singh. Patal Chandra Santra was the servant of Aswini Kumar Panja. The defence at the trial set up the contention that if there was any conspiracy it was not one conspiracy but two distinct separate conspiracies. The learned Magistrate was, however of opinion that the evidence which was put before him indicated that there was only one conspiracy and with regard to this he says in his judgment:

The whole thing after it had been implanted in the brain of Sailen Mukherji develops from him. He is alleged to have secured no less than 22 of the 45 places where tampering is alleged to have been done and of the 12 accused persons no less than five namely, Sushil Ghosh, Manindra Nath Dey, Panch Kari Banerji, Kumud Nandy and Patal Chandra Santra worked with or for Sailen Mukherji; also the three accomplice witnesses Krishna Shome, Bholanath Chatterji and Hardwar Singh.

Having dealt with the question as to whether or not there was one extensive conspiracy as alleged by the prosecution the learned Magistrate proceeded to deal with the evidence against each of the persons on trial before him separately and in detail and as a result of his careful survey of the evidence his findings and orders were as follows: 1. The accused Babulal Chowkhani, was found guilty of theft and conspiracy; he was sentenced under S. 39, Electricity Act read with S. 380, I. P. C. to one year's rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 1,000; in default, six months' rigorous imprisonment. The whole of the fine if realised, would be paid to the Electric Supply Corporation as compensation. There was no separate sentence on the charge of conspiracy. 2. Ganesh Babadur, his durwan, was sentenced for abetment under S. 39, Electricity Act read with S. 109, I. P. C.

to three months' rigorous imprisonment. 3. Jagadish Singh, Durwan of the Jupiter Cinema, was found guilty of conspiracy and abetment of theft; he took a far more prominent part than the durwan of the Bharat Laxmi Cinema. He was therefore sentenced under S. 39, Electricity Act, read with S. 109, I. P. C., to six months' rigorous imprisonment. No separate sentence was passed for conspiracy. 4. Sailendra Nath Mukherji, the leader of the gang, was found guilty of conspiracy and abetment of theft at the Bharat Laxmi Cinema. He was sentenced under S. 39, Electricity Act, read with S. 120-B, I. P. C. to two years' rigorous imprisonment. There was no separate sentence for abetment. On the charge of abetment at the Jupiter Cinema he was acquitted for want of evidence. 5. Sushil Kumar Ghose, Manindra Nath Dey and Rash Behary Shaw who played subordinate parts in the conspiracy were sentenced to one year's rigorous imprisonment each under S. 39, Electricity Act read with S. 120-B, I. P. C. 6. Patal Chandra Santra, servant of Aswini Kumar Panja, who also played a minor part was sentenced to six months' rigorous imprisonment under S. 39, Electricity Act, read with S. 120-B, I. P. C. 7. Panch Cowri Banerji, Kumud Nath Nundy, Sailendra Sanyal and Hara Narayan Chatterji were given the benefit of the doubt and acquitted of the charges framed against them.

The convicted persons have all appealed against these findings and sentences both on the ground that the findings of the learned Magistrate were not warranted on the facts adduced by the prosecution and that the convictions were wrong on legal grounds. As regards the facts Mr. Carden Noad appearing on behalf of Babulal Chowkhani put forward the contention that the arrest of Krishna Chandra Shome at the Jupiter Cinema at 5.30 a.m., on 23rd December 1934 was in reality the outcome of a plot engineered by one Mukerji, the writer of the letter a copy of which was enclosed with the Electric Supply Corporation's letter of 23rd September 1934, acting possibly in conjunction with N. K. Chatterji, a meter reader, or even acting in conjunction with the Police and/or the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. Mr. Carden Noad suggested that the whole prosecution was the result of a desire on the part of Mukerji to curry favour with the Calcutta

Electric Supply Corporation by arranging that somebody should be secured who could be made an example of in order to put a stop to the unlawful interference with electric meters which was presumed to be going on. Mr. Carden Noad further argued that the evidence given by Krishna Chandra Shome and Hardwar Singh being tainted evidence, was not such as ought to be relied upon for the purpose of establishing the case against his client. It is to be observed in this connection, however, that the learned Magistrate himself said (at p. 240 of the paper book, part 1) that he agreed with Mr. Carden Noad's statement on behalf of the defence that in the absence of certain vouchers it would not have been possible to place Babulal Chowkhani in the dock. Mr. Carden Noad as regards the evidence given at the trial further contended that even if there was any such conspiracy as alleged by the prosecution it could not be rightly said that Babulal Chowkhani was in any sense a party to that particular conspiracy.

Before dealing further with the evidence in the case, it is desirable that we should discuss and state our views upon the "legal grounds." These "legal grounds," or, in other words, the points of law which were raised and very fully and ably argued by Mr. Carden Noad, were these: Firstly that there was a misjoinder of charges and that the trial of all the accused persons in one trial was a violation of the principles laid down in Ss. 233, 234 and 235, Criminal P. C., and that the form of the trial was not justified by the exception provisions contained in S. 239 of the Code. Consequently, the whole trial was illegal and the misjoinder was of such a nature as to make it incumbent upon this Court to quash all the convictions. Other points of law raised by Mr. Carden Noad were that S. 39, Electricity Act, 1910, has no application to the facts of the present case and that even if there had been any tampering with the meter at the Bharat Laxmi Cinema resulting in a diminution in the payments made by Babulal Chowkhani to the Supply Corporation for the supply of electricity, still there had been no theft within the meaning of S. 39 and if any offence at all had been committed it was of no more serious a nature than that constituted by the provisions of S. 44, Electricity Act, 1910. Consequently, it would follow from this that if S. 44 (c) was the appropriate section no charge of a general conspiracy could be laid against Babulal Chowkhani and/or the other accused without the sanction contemplated by S. 196 (a), Criminal P. C. These questions of law are no doubt matters of some complexity, and we have given them our anxious and careful consideration. With regard to the first point it is necessary to bear in mind the precise wording of the relevant parts of S. 239, Criminal P. C. which read as follows:

The following persons may be charged and tried together, namely,

(d) Persons accused of different offences committed in the course of the same transaction and the provisions contained in the former part of this Chapter shall, so far as may be, apply to all such charges.

The general principle laid down in S. 233, Criminal P. C., is that:

For every distinct offence of which any person is accused there shall be a separate charge, and every such charge shall be tried separately except in the cases mentioned in Ss. 234, 235, 236 and 239.

Under S. 239 (d) discretion is given to a Court to try certain persons either jointly or separately. The manner in which this discretion should be exercised must depend on the facts of each case, and no doubt the High Court on a consideration of the circumstances of the case has power to hold that the accused should not have been tried jointly, and can set aside the convictions and sentences with or without directing a re-trial should it think fit: See 19 C W N 121 (1). Mukerji, J. held in 52 Cal 253 (2) that:

Even where Ss. 235 and 239 of the Code justify a joinder it should not be resorted to if there is a risk of embarrassment to the defence.

That is a sound principle which should be borne in mind when charges are framed or indictments preferred against accused persons. It is to be observed at the outset that where there is a conspiracy having one or more objects in view and certain offences are committed in pursuance of such conspiracy, the several offences generally form part of the same transaction within the meaning of that expression as used in S. 235. The principle that where there is a conspiracy and certain offences are committed in pursuance of such conspiracy those several

1. Dwarka Singh v. Emperor, 1915 Cal 748=28 I C 732=16 Cr L J 348=19 C W N 121.

2. Alimuddin Naskar v. Emperor, 1925 Cal 341=85 I C 231=26 Cr L J 487=52 Cal 253=29 C W N 173.

offences will generally form part of the same transaction will also apply where the several offences are by different persons: See 49 Cal 573 (3). That case was followed in 3 Rang 95 (4). The offence of conspiracy and acts done in pursuance of the conspiracy can rightly be said to come under one transaction, see 7 Rang 821 (5), and it has been held that the transaction continues so long as the conspiracy continues: See 42 Cal 1153 (6). It follows therefore that where there is a conspiracy and specific offences are committed in pursuance of such conspiracy, persons who are parties to that conspiracy and concerned in the specific offences can lawfully be tried in one and the same trial.

In the present instance, as already mentioned, it was argued by Mr. Carden Noad that there never was a conspiracy of the nature alleged by the prosecution. The learned Magistrate refers to this in the passage in his judgment (p. 227) to which reference has already been made. In order therefore to elucidate and determine the main point of law raised by Mr. Carden Noad, it is necessary first to decide whether or not there was a general conspiracy of the nature and extent alleged by the prosecution. The learned Magistrate is definitely of opinion that "there was one conspiracy," and having considered all the evidence relating to the association and operations of all the accused persons, he found that the present appellants were all parties to that conspiracy. Upon a review of the evidence given at the trial, all of which has been fully placed before us and after a close and careful examination of that evidence, we have however come to the conclusion that the learned Magistrate was wrong in finding that all the accused persons were parties to one and the same extensive conspiracy. In order to constitute the offence of conspiracy as defined in S. 120-A (which is the section under which the present appellants and the other persons said to be parties were charged) it is only necessary for the prosecution to show that the persons concerned had agreed to do or cause to be done an illegal act, or an act which is not illegal, by illegal means, and the "explanation" given in S. 120-A states that it is immaterial whether the illegal act is the ultimate object of such agreement, or is merely incidental to that object.

In the present instance it is in our opinion not possible at any rate except by straining language to say that every one of the accused was in agreement to do the same illegal act or cause the same illegal act to be done. It was the prosecution's own case that there were two classes of conspirators or, at any rate, two classes of operators, namely (1) those who did the actual tampering and their adherents and (2) the consumers and their servants who allowed the tampering to be done, or as Mr. Carden Noad put it, that there were "tamperers and tamperees." In our opinion the circumstances and facts of the case do not warrant the conclusion that—to use the words of the principal charge—the accused and the other persons named in the charge were all parties to a criminal conspiracy to commit theft (by dishonest consumption or user) of electric energy belonging to the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation Limited. It seems to us that the first class of operators were in agreement with each other and had in view one object, namely to obtain money unlawfully by tampering with meters whenever possible and the other class had in view the object of wrongful gain to themselves by allowing tampering of their meters and the making of a false record of the amount of electric energy consumed by them with consequent reduction in the amount of the bills they would have to pay to the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation. In our opinion upon the evidence there is very little doubt that all the tamperers were actually acting in conjunction in close contact with one another and were giving to each other instruction, advice, and assistance in their unlawful avocation. It seems quite probable that they were all operating in concert in such a manner as to constitute a criminal conspiracy within the meaning of S. 120-B, I. P. C. We are however unable to accept the contention that the

3. Abdul Salim v. Emperor, 1922 Cal 107=69 I C 145=23 Cr L J 657=49 Cal 573=26 C W N 680.

4. V. M. Abdul Rahman v. Emperor, 1925 Rang 296=89 I C 305=26 Cr L J 1329=3 Rang 95.

5. Maung Ba Chit v. Emperor, 1930 Rang 114=1930 Cr C 402=122 I C 273=31 Cr L J 387=7 Rang 821.

6. Harsha Nath Chatterjee v. Emperor, 1915 Cal 719=26 I C 313=16 Cr L J 9=42 Cal 1153=19 C W N 706.

consumers for example, Babulal Chowkhani and Md. Abdul Azim as proprietors of the Bharat Lakshmi Picture House and the Jupiter Cinema respectively, were acting in concert and/or in agreement with all the persons constituting the tamperer class or with each other. In our opinion the real position was that each of the consumers, abetted by his employees or servants was acting in conjunction with some of the tamperers but was not acting in agreement with other consumers. This was the position as disclosed at the end of the trial and therefore as a result of the trial it had become apparent that the offences charged against the accused were not in fact offences committed in the course of the same conspiracy. If therefore the question was whether or not there had been a misjoinder or a joint trial of several persons unlawfully the determination of which was solely dependent upon the right construction of the provisions of S. 239 (d), Criminal P. C. it might have been successfully urged that we should come to the conclusion that the whole trial was vitiated, because the acts complained of were not done in pursuance of any conspiracy and therefore not arising out of the same transaction. The subsection however says "persons accused of different offences committed in the course of the same transaction" which in itself implies that the criterion whether there is a defect in the trial of persons jointly, is to be the case alleged and not the case established against them. Most of the High Courts in India have held that the test to be applied for judging of the validity of a trial which purports to have taken place under the provisions of S. 239, Criminal P. C. is the accusation made and not the result of the trial. In order to decide therefore whether several persons can be lawfully tried jointly with having committed offences forming parts of the same transaction, the Court has to look to the accusation, that is to say, the prosecution case as set forth in the charges and if according to that case the offences are such as could be regarded as parts of the same transaction, it will be justified in holding a joint trial. One of the earliest cases on this point is 30 Bom 49 (7), where the meaning of the word 'transaction' was discussed and Batty, J. at p. 54 said :

According to its etymological and dictionary meaning the word 'transaction' means 'carrying through' and suggests, we think, not necessarily proximity in time, so much as continuity of action and purpose. The same metaphor implied by that word is continued in the illustrations where the phrase used is 'in the course of the same transaction.' In S. 235, the phrase is used in a connection which implies that there may be a series of acts. Illus. (f) to that section indicates that the successive acts may be separated by an interval of time and that the essential is the progressive action, all pointing to the same object. In S. 239 therefore a series of acts separated by intervals of time are not, we think excluded provided that those jointly tried have throughout been directed to one and the same objective. If the accused started together for the same goal this suffices to justify the joint trial even if incidentally one of those jointly tried has done an act for which the other may not be responsible [vide S. 239, Illus. (b)].

The learned Judge previously stated at p. 54 :

Section 239 admits of the trial when more persons than one are accused of different offences committed in the same transaction. It suffices for the purpose of justifying a joint trial that the accusation alleges the offences committed by each accused to have been committed in the same transaction, within the meaning of S. 239. It is not necessary that the charge should contain the statement as to the transaction being one and the same. It is the tenor of the accusation and not the wording of the charge that must be considered as the test.

The next case in order of time is that in 49 Cal 573 (3). In that case it was pointed out by Newbould, J. and Subhawardy, J., that the law was not the same then as it was when the case in 25 Mad 61 (8) was decided. At p. 501 the learned Judges said :

It was also contended that the trial was bad for the misjoinder of this charge of conspiracy with the other charges framed against the accused individually. Separate charge sheets with two, three or four heads have been drawn up against each of the accused.

Having set forth what the charges were the learned Judge proceeded thus at p. 594 :

It is urged on behalf of the appellants that each of these ten sets of charges relate to entirely separate transactions for which the appellants could not be tried jointly. It is also urged that the charges of abetment of cheating and abetment of forgery under one head of charges are also separate transactions since in the cheating charges the person abetted is named while in the forgery charges he is described as a person unknown. There can be no doubt that these ten accused could not have been tried at one trial on the charges framed against them individually, if there had not been also the charge against them all of conspiracy punishable under S. 120-B read with S. 420, I. P. C. It is contended on behalf of the prosecution that once a charge of conspiracy is framed, anything done in pursuance of the conspiracy can be tried at the trial for conspiracy. This contention is supported by authority of decisions of this Court. In 19 C W N 672 (9), it was held that the offence of conspiracy and offences committed in pursuance of that conspiracy formed one and the same transaction, and could be jointly tried. It was also so held in 42 Cal 1153 (6) and both these cases were cited and approved in 42 Cal 957 (10). These decisions fully support the contention raised on behalf of the Crown, and we hold that there was no misjoinder of charges in the present case that would render the trial illegal.

7. Emperor v. Datto Hanmant Shahpurkar, (1906) 30 Bom 49=2 Cr L J 578=7 Bom L R 633.

8. Subrahmaniam Ayyar v. Emperor, (1902) 25 Mad 61=28 I A 257=8 Sar 160 (P O).

It is also urged that, even if this misjoinder did not render the trial illegal, the Court had discretion, under S. 239, Criminal P. C. to try the accused separately, and this discretion was improperly exercised. But even if this be regarded as an irregularity it cannot be held to have occasioned a failure of justice.

There is not the same objection to the joinder of a number of charges in a conspiracy trial that there might be in other cases, since, even if they had not been charged, the offences alleged to have been committed in pursuance of the conspiracy could have been proved to support the charge of conspiracy. This being so, we do not think that there was even an irregularity or an improper exercise of discretion in putting in the form of charge the specific acts specifically relied on as against each individual accused to show that they joined in the conspiracy.

Later (at p. 596) the learned Judges said:

Another objection on the ground of misjoinder was based on the acquittal of the appellant, Ahamad Mia, on the conspiracy charge. It is urged that this shows that the other offences with which he was charged were not part of the same transaction with the other offences charged at the trial. The answer to this objection is to be found in the wording of S. 239, Criminal P. C. It begins 'when more persons than one are accused.' That is to say the legality of the joint trial depends on the accusation and not on the result of the trial. The charge of conspiracy against this appellant was a real accusation and not a mere excuse for trying him with the others. The learned Sessions Judge has recorded that he cannot account for the verdict of not guilty against this accused under Ss. 120-B and 420, I. P. C.

This decision was considered and quoted with "approval" by the learned Chief Justice of this Court, Sir George Rankin, with the concurrence of Chotzner, J. in 55 Cal 858 (11), where the learned Chief Justice put the matter of the test thus (at p. 867):

The indictment may be good or bad, but it cannot depend upon the facts which will ultimately be found by the jury, and it must be good or bad at the beginning of the trial.

In the meantime there had been a very important decision in the High Court at Allahabad in 1924 All 233 (12), where a very large number of persons had been tried jointly on charges of conspiracy and other offences said to have been committed in pursuance of the conspiracy. It had been contended on behalf of the convicted persons who were then appellants before the Court that there had been a misjoinder of charges sufficient to invalidate the entire trial in the Court below, and Mears, C. J. and Piggott, J., at p. 236, said:

When the learned Sessions Judge entered upon the trial of this case and was faced with the question whether the provisions of S. 239, Criminal P. C., did or did not authorize him, not merely to try the 225 accused persons before him at one and the same trial, but to try them on each and all of the charges set forth against them under the order of the committing Magistrate, he could not possibly know what conclusion he would arrive at after hearing the whole of the evidence. He had to look to the case for the prosecution as set forth in the charges themselves. He was therefore for the reasons which we have already indicated warranted by law in entering upon this trial of the 225 accused on the charges as framed. The convictions which he has recorded are warranted by the conclusions at which he arrived on the evidence. As he had to regard merely the "charges" it was not necessary for him to consider what the position would be, if he had eventually come to the conclusion, either that no offence punishable under S. 120-B, I. P. C. was committed by any persons at Dumri Khurd on the forenoon of 4th February 1922, or that if any offence was so committed it was one excluded from his cognizance by S. 196-A, Criminal P. C. In any event, the acquittal of all the accused persons on the conspiracy charge would have removed any possible objection to the validity of the trial.

In 49 Mad 74 (13), Krishnan, J., at p. 93 of the report put the matter thus:

The question of the legality of a joint trial, in my opinion, really depends upon the accusation made and not upon the result of the trial; provided, of course, that the accusation is a real one and not a mere excuse for a joinder of charges which cannot be otherwise charged. It

9. Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs, Bengal v. Mon Mohan Roy, 1915 Cal 688=26 I C 307=16 Cr L J 3=19 C W N 672.

10. Amrita Lal Hazra v. Emperor, 1916 Cal 188=29 I C 513=16 Cr L J 497=42 Cal 957=19 C W N 676.

11. Satyanarain Mohata v. Emperor, 1928 Cal 675=112 I C 350=29 Cr L J 1022=32 C W N 319=55 Cal 858.

12. Abdullah v. Emperor, 1924 All 233=92 I C 145=27 Cr L J 193.

13. Gam Mallu Doraj v. Emperor, 1925 Mad 690=90 I C 297=26 Cr L 1513=48 M L J 308=49 Mad 74.

was held in 49 Cal 573 (3) and I am prepared to follow it. Is it not pretended here that there was any conscious attempt to join charges which could not otherwise be joined or that the charge as framed under count 1 was so framed for that purpose. The legality of the joint trial in this case has to be judged on the accusation and not on what was subsequently proved.

There is in the present case, in our opinion, no reason whatever for supposing that the charge under S. 120-B, I. P. C., was made for any evil purpose. We must take it, as we have already observed, that the learned Magistrate acting in his judicial discretion was of opinion that prima facie the evidence given in chief by the prosecution witnesses had come to a stage in the proceedings warranting a finding of the conspiracy charge. In the course of his judgment Krishnan, J. commenting on the expression "the same transaction" observed thus (p. 94):

After all it cannot be said that any very satisfactory definition of the words has been given. Each case must be judged in my opinion on the facts of that particular case. Generally speaking I am prepared to follow the observations of the learned Judges in 33 Mad 502 (14), in which the effect of the previous decisions has also been considered as to the meaning of the expression. Abdur Rahim, J. says that the usual tests applied to decide whether different acts are parts of the same transaction are proximity of time, unity of place, unity of purpose or design and continuity of action. It is not necessary that all of them should be present to make the several incidents parts of the same transaction. Unity of place and proximity of time are not important tests at all; but the main test, so far as I can see, is the unity of purpose. Continuity of action goes with unity of purpose.

Those observations are relevant to the question whether in the present case there was any conspiracy. The case in the Madras High Court was decided in October 1924. A few months later, namely in December 1924, the same point came before the High Court of Rangoon in 3 Rang 95 (4), where it was again held that the legality of a joint trial depends on the accusation and not on the result of the trial. The Chief Justice also added on the authority of the case in 49 Cal 573 (3), that the discretion of the Court to try accused persons separately is not improperly exercised by holding a joint trial in conspiracy cases (p. 105).

The point under discussion again came before this Court in the year 1928 when 14. Choragudi Venkatadri v. Emperor, (1910) 33 Mad 502=5 I C 847=11 Cr L J 258.

in 30 Cr L J 619 (15), it was held by Cuming and Lort-Williams, JJ. that:

Section 239, sub-s. (d), Criminal P. C., contemplates all the offences committed by the accused persons, whether substantive offences or abetment of those offences, being tried together provided they were committed by the accused in the course of the same transaction. Therefore two persons can be jointly tried on three substantive charges and one of them of abetting those three offences. The legality of a joint trial depends upon the accusation and not on the result of the trial.

The curious feature of this case was as was pointed out by Cuming, J. in his judgment (p. 621) that it was contended not only by the vakil for complainant, but also by the vakil who appeared for the petitioner (i. e., the convicted person) that the legality of a joint trial depended on the accusation and not on the result of the trial. It was, in fact, conceded on both sides that that is the law. In the same year a case came before the Bombay High Court in which one Gopal and two others, Mhalrasa and Dada, had been charged under Ss. 489-A, 489-B and 489-D, read with S. 120, I. P. C., with conspiracy to collect and possess materials for counterfeiting currency notes, and with using such notes as genuine. In the alternative they were all charged under S. 489-D with having in their possession materials for counterfeiting currency notes. The two other persons Mhalrasa and Dada were further charged under S. 489-A with having counterfeited currency notes and the accused were charged under S. 489-B with having used as genuine a counterfeit currency note. The trial resulted in the acquittal of the two persons Mhalrasa and Dada on all the charges and in the conviction of the accused Gopal for an offence under S. 489-B. Gopal appealed and contended that his trial jointly with the two other persons was contrary to law. It was held that the trial of the accused Gopal was not vitiated and was covered by S. 239 (d), Criminal P. C., as no prejudice was shown to the accused Gopal, and as the act of which the accused was convicted was so connected with the subject-matter of the other charges as to form a single transaction: 53 Bom 344 (16). At p. 346 Madgavkar, J. said this:

15. Kali Kumar Das v. Nawab Ali Dhali, 1929 Cal 160=116 I C 369=30 Cr L J 619.

16. Gopal Raghunath v. Emperor, 1929 Bom 128=116 I C 243=30 Cr L J 588=53 Bom 344=31 Bom L R 148.

It is argued for the appellant that the joinder was illegal, the offences charged numbering more than three, and in any case they caused serious prejudice to the appellant by letting in evidence which would not have been admissible, had the present charge under appeal, under which alone he was convicted, been tried separately. For the Crown it is contended these charges form part of the same transaction, and are therefore covered by S. 239, Cl. (d), Criminal P. C., as well as by S. 235.

As is often the case with a number of elaborate charges, it is difficult to lay down any single test or criterion. The cases, in my opinion, divide themselves into three. First, a case such as the one in 25 Mad 61 (8), not covered by S. 235 or S. 239, in which case, prejudice or no prejudice, the illegality entitles the appellant to an acquittal. The second case is where without such illegality, prejudice might nevertheless be caused to the accused so that even though the Crown may have the power of joinder, it might be fairer not to exercise that power. The third class of cases is where there is such a common thread or purpose underlying the alleged offences of the accused, even though separated by time and space, that they form part of the same transaction, and are difficult to present separately, in which case the law permits, and the Crown usually adopts, a joint trial with numerous accused and numerous charges. The question in each particular instance is as to which of these three classes of cases covers the particular case for decision. In the present instance the question turns upon whether the offence now under appeal is part of the same transaction as the offences in the other charges. The only transaction, if any, is the alleged conspiracy. True, the prosecution in the result failed to prove it, but that of itself does not necessarily make the trial illegal, the test being not what the prosecution has proved in the end but what they alleged at the beginning in the charges.

In a case, which came before the Allahabad High Court in 1931 : 33 Cr L J 373 (17), it was again affirmed that the illegality of a joint trial depends on the accusation and not on the result of a trial. Sulaiman, J., at p. 375, says :

It may further be pointed out that the illegality of a joint trial depends on the accusation and not on the result of a trial, and that even if the charge of conspiracy were to fail ultimately, there would be nothing illegal in convicting the accused of the offence of being found in possession of cocaine under S. 60 (a).

Many of the cases dealing with joinder of charges and joint trials were reviewed in a case which came before the Madras High Court, the case in 1933 M W N 528 (18). The accused in the case had been charged with conspiracy as punishable under S. 120-B, I. P. C., read with S. 409, I. P. C., and with various acts of criminal breach of trust and forgery in pursuance of the conspiracy between the dates 30th November 1929 and 19th September 1931. An objection was taken that the whole trial was vitiated as offending against S. 234 (1), Criminal P. C., relying on 25 Mad 61 (8). It was held by Sir Owen Beasley, C. J., that Subramania's case (8) had no application to a case of this kind where there was a charge of conspiracy under S. 120-B, I. P. C., which was an addition subsequent to that decision. The learned Judges also held that the offence of conspiracy and the offences committed in pursuance of that conspiracy formed one and the same transaction. The learned Judges adopted the view taken by Krishnan, J. in 49 Mad 74 (13), and reaffirmed the proposition that the legality of a joint trial in such a case depends on the accusation and not on the result of the trial ; provided of course that the accusation is a real one and not a mere excuse for a joinder of charges which cannot be otherwise charged. The same view was taken by the Allahabad High Court in 35 Cr L J 1349 (19) where Rachpal Singh, J. said at p. 1353 :

Here at one trial the accused persons were charged with conspiracy and some other offences said to have been committed in the furtherance of the object of the conspiracy. The charge was perfectly correct. Accused persons may be charged at one trial with the offence of conspiracy and also with the offence alleged to have been committed in pursuance of the conspiracy because substantively the offence of conspiracy and the offences committed in pursuance thereof form one and the same transaction. Such a joint trial is permissible under the provisions of S. 239, Criminal P. C.

Finally, in a recent case before this Court, the case in 39 C W N 741 (20), Lort-Williams, J., sitting with Jack, J. said at p. 743 :

It is to be observed that the provisions of S. 239, Cls. (a) and (c), refer to persons accused, that is to say, charged. The provisions are intended to deal therefore with the position as it exists at the time of charge and not with the result of the trial.

In view of this long line of authorities it is impossible for us to do otherwise than act on the principle therein laid down. We must therefore look to this

17. Emperor v. Mohammad Yakub, 1932 All 73 = 1932 Cr C 93 = 137 I C 73 = 33 Cr L J 373.

18. U. Satyanarayana v. Emperor, 1933 M W N 528 = 1933 M Cr C 316.

19. Ramdas v. Emperor, 1934 All 61 = 1934 Cr C 130 = 151 I C 442 = 35 Cr L J 1849 = 1934 A L J 852.

20. The Superintendent and Remembrancer of Legal Affairs v. Raghulal Brahman, (1935) 62 Cal 946 = 162 I C 943 = 37 Cr L J 728 = 39 C W N 741.

matter as it appeared to the learned Magistrate at the time when he framed the charges against the appellants and the other persons accused before him and not to the state of affairs as we see them long after the trial had proceeded on its way leading to the convictions of the appellants. We must therefore hold that having regard to all the facts before the Magistrate at the time when he was framing the charges against the accused as directed by S. 254, Criminal P. C., he was acting judicially and properly exercising the discretion given him by S. 239. Therefore, as regards the procedure adopted there was no such illegality as to compel us to quash the convictions on that ground. Moreover, if there was any irregularity at all, there was none which on the actual facts of the case caused any prejudice to the accused or by itself entailed any failure of justice. It is to be noted that no protest was made by or on behalf of any of the accused against the course adopted by the learned Magistrate in trying all the present appellants at one and the same trial, nor was any complaint made as regards the joinder either of the charges or of the persons charged. Moreover the learned Magistrate was careful to treat the case of each of the accused persons separately and upon the evidence properly directed against each. We hold, therefore, that there was no illegality in the joint trial of the accused persons.

The second point of law urged by Mr. Carden Noad was to the effect that in any event, even if the case for the prosecution was established, there had been no theft by his client of electrical energy under the provisions of S. 39, Electricity Act, 1910, by reason of the wrongful loss sustained by the Electric Supply Corporation consequent upon the consumer having procured an alteration and/or setting back of the figures of the dials of the meters. It is of importance to observe the exact language of S. 39. The section reads as follows:

Whoever dishonestly abstracts, consumes or uses any energy shall be deemed to have committed theft within the meaning of the Penal Code, and the existence of artificial means for such abstraction shall be prima facie evidence of such dishonest abstraction.

This section is no doubt based on an analogous provision in the English Electric Lighting Act of 1882 (45 and 46, Vict. Ch. 56), S. 23 which reads as follows:

Any person who maliciously or fraudulently abstracts, causes to be wasted or diverted, consumes, or uses any electricity shall be guilty of simple larceny and punishable accordingly.

In the Indian Act wasting or diverting energy is dealt with in S. 40. That section is in these terms:

Whoever maliciously causes energy to be wasted or diverted or, with intent to cut off the supply of energy, cuts or injures, or attempts to cut or injure, any electric supply line or works, shall be punishable with imprisonment for a term which may extend to two years, or with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, or with both.

In England the provisions which were formerly contained in S. 23 of the Act of 1882 are now to be found in the Larceny Act, 1916, S. 10 which runs as follows:

Every person who maliciously or fraudulently abstracts, causes to be wasted or diverted, consumes or uses any electricity shall be guilty of felony, and on conviction thereof liable to be punished as in the case of simple larceny.

Mr. Carden Noad argued that the expression "energy" as used in S. 39 can only mean "energy belonging to the licensee," that is to say, in the present case, the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation, and in this connexion he referred to S. 19 (a), Electricity Act, 1910, which was added to that Act by the Electricity (Amendment) Act of 1922. That section declares that:

For the purposes of this Act, the point at which the supply of energy by a licensee to a consumer shall be deemed to commence shall be determined in such manner as may be prescribed.

That has, in fact, been "prescribed" in R. 31, Electricity Rules, 1922, which reads as follows:

The point at which the supply of energy by a licensee to a consumer shall be deemed to commence shall:

(a) Where the amount of energy supplied to a consumer or the electrical quantity contained in the supply is ascertained by meter, be in respect of a conductor from the service-line which passes through the meter the point at which such conductor enters the meter and in respect of a conductor from the service-line which does not pass through the meter on such conductor nearest to the meter;

(b) Where the amount of energy supplied to a consumer or the electrical quantity contained in the supply is not ascertained by meter, be the point at which the cut-out is inserted in the service-line by the licensee in accordance with R. 38.

Mr. Carden Noad argued that as by S. 39 the dishonest abstraction, consumption or use of energy is made theft, it must have been contemplated by the legislature that all the elements of "theft" as defined in S. 378, I. P. C., must be present. In dealing with this line of argument one must bear in mind that the words of S. 39 are "shall be deemed to have committed theft," not shall have committed theft or shall be guilty of theft. Therefore, the section means no more than that the offender is to be treated in the same way as if he had committed the offence of theft. In this connexion we would refer to the case in 7 Rang 329 (21), per Heald, J. at p. 336.

Mr. Noad conceded that the element of taking possession of another's property might not be essentially present, but he did try to argue that what he called the root idea was a change in the possession of the property. Mr. Carden Noad said that S. 19 (a), Electricity Act, and R. 31 were necessitated by the fact that there can be no actual property in electrical energy. At the same time, he argued that as a man cannot steal what is his own there cannot be any "theft" of electrical energy once it passes through the meter installed on the consumer's premises, because in effect S. 19 (a) and R. 31 in law operated to transfer some sort of property in the electrical current supplied. Mr. Carden Noad sought to fortify his argument by reference to S. 78, Contract Act (Act 9 of 1872), which, he said, governed the contract for the supply of the electrical energy as between the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation and Babulal Chowkhani. S. 78, Contract Act, 1872 is now reproduced in S. 5, Sale of Goods Act, 1913. Sir Frederick Pollock and Sir Dinshaw Mulla in their commentary on that Act express the view that it is doubtful whether the Act is applicable to such things as gas, water and electricity. In our opinion, that view is correct, certainly as regards electricity. It is, therefore, not possible for Mr. Carden Noad to derive any support by reference to the law relating to the sale of goods. It is to be observed that S. 39 does not say that dishonest abstraction or consumption or use of energy is theft, but merely that if a person dishonestly abstracts, consumes, or uses such energy, he shall be deemed to have committed theft and so be liable to punishment under the provisions of the I. P. C.

Mr. Carden Noad further argued that there could be no offence under S. 39, Electricity Act, 1910, unless there was, first of all, an "abstraction" of energy, and he invited us to read the section as if it read "whoever dishonestly abstracts and consumes or uses any electrical energy." In other words, Mr. Carden Noad invited us to take the view that the section only had reference to abstraction plus consumption or use and, therefore, could have no application to a case of mere user without abstraction. But for the close juxtaposition of the words "abstracts, consumes or uses" in the Indian section however, Mr. Carden Noad could not even have begun to put forward the argument with which we are now dealing. In the corresponding English Act the words "causes to be wasted or diverted" are interposed between the word "abstracts" and the word "consumes." As has been already pointed out, in the Indian Act "wasting or diverting energy" are dealt with in S. 40. But in our opinion their absence from S. 39 in no way militates against interpreting the section as if it read "dishonestly abstracts or consumes or uses." The absence of the word "or" between the words "abstracts" and "consumes" indicates nothing more than that the drafting of the section follows an ordinary literary form under which where there is a running series of words or expressions, a disjunctive or conjunctive word is placed only between the last two words or expressions. In our opinion, therefore, there is no substance whatever in Mr. Carden Noad's contention that abstraction must always be a necessary ingredient for an offence under S. 39. In our view what was here alleged against the consumers, if proved, amounted to dishonestly using and so comes within the purview of S. 39. One must bear in mind the definition of "dishonestly" as contained in S. 24, I. P. C., which runs thus:

Whoever does anything with the intention of causing wrongful gain to one person or wrongful loss to another person, is said to do that thing "dishonestly."

"Wrongful gain" is defined in S. 23, I. P. C., as "gain by unlawful means of property to which the person gaining is not legally entitled." And "wrongful loss" is said to be loss by unlawful means "of property to which the person losing 21. Emperor v. Maung Pu Kai, 1929 Rang 203 = 1929 Cr C 177 = 118 I C 637 = 30 Cr L J 961 = 7 Rang 329 (F B).

it is legally entitled." In the present case upon the assumption that the allegations against Babulal are correct, he used electricity in such a way as to cause a wrongful loss of money to the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation and so, in effect, wrongful gain to himself. The consuming of the electricity and the regular causing of the record of that use in the shape of the figures on the dials in the meters to be altered was, therefore, a dishonest user. The argument that as the electrical energy was being supplied under a contract, the consumer was merely using the electricity in a manner contemplated by the contract and that the tampering with the meters was something altogether distinct and separate from user cannot hold good. It obviously was never contemplated by the contract between the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation and the Bharat Lakshmi Picture House, for example that there should be any supplying of electricity otherwise than in accordance with the provisions of Cl. 5 of that contract which says:

The supply of electrical energy shall be registered by a meter or meters upon the said premises to be provided, fixed and kept in order by the Company.

It follows that what was contemplated by the contract between the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation and the Bharat Lakshmi Picture House, dated 4th April 1934, was that all electricity to be supplied by the Corporation should pass through the meters installed in the consumer's premises in such a way that a record of the supply would be made on the dials of those meters and that such record would remain intact and would not be interfered with in any way by the consumer and would be available to the Corporation's meter readers on their periodical visits. Mr. Carden Noad in the course of his argument referred to the case in (1852) 6 Cox's C C 213 (22), in order to support his contention that there could be no theft of electricity within the meaning of S. 39, once the electricity passed through the meter on the consumer's premises. But that case does not indicate that there can be no theft by way of dishonest user of electricity after it passes through the meter. That was a case where a householder in Berwick-upon-Tweed contracted with a gas company to consume gas and pay according to meter, in order to avoid paying for the full quantity of gas consumed, introduced into the entrance pipe another pipe for the purpose of conveying the gas to the exit pipe of the meter, and so to the burners for consumption without passing through the meter itself. The entrance pipe was the property of the householder, but he had not by his contract any interest in the gas or right of control over it until it passed through the meter. He was convicted of larceny, and that conviction was affirmed upon appeal. The argument put forward by Sergeant Ballantine, who appeared for the convicted person, was that an evasion of the meter and an interference with it stand on the same ground. He argued that the meter was only the voucher of an account, and if there was a delivery according to contract on the one hand, and only a fraudulent dealing with a voucher on the other, there was no larceny. The conviction was however affirmed, Lord Campbell, C. J. having remarked in the course of the argument: "Is not this a taking invito domino?"

22. Reg. v. White, (1852) 6 Cox's C C 213.

In the present case it seems to us that consuming or using was invito domino in the sense that the Corporation never permitted or contemplated that electricity would be consumed or used save on the basis that the consumer would allow a correct and accurate record of the consumption and user to be made upon the meter and preserved until that record could be seen by the officer of the Electric Supply Corporation. There can be no doubt whatever in our opinion that the facts alleged against Babulal Chowkhani, if established, were sufficient to bring him within the words of S. 39 and that he must be deemed to have committed theft within the meaning of the Indian Penal Code. No doubt, they would also constitute an offence of cheating as defined in S. 415, I. P. C., and indeed Mr. Carden Noad did not dispute this. He merely took the same kind of line as was taken by Sergeant Ballantine in Reg v. White (22), ubi supra namely that the offence was one of cheating and not one of theft. As a final point of law, Mr. Carden Noad endeavoured to argue that the offence committed by his client if any fell within the ambit of the provisions of S. 44, Electricity Act, 1910. Sub.ss. (c) and (d) are as follows:

(c) Whoever maliciously injures any meter referred to in S. 26, sub-s. (1), or any meter, indicator or apparatus referred to in S. 26, sub-s. (7), or wilfully or fraudulently alters the index of any such meter, indicator, or apparatus, or prevents any such meter, indicator or apparatus from duly registering; (d) whoever improperly uses the energy of a licensee; shall be punishable with fine which may extend to Rs. 500 and, in the case of a continuing offence, with a daily fine which may extend to Rs. 50; and if it is proved that any artificial means exist for making such connexion as is referred to in Cl. (a) or such communication as is referred to in Cl. (b) or for causing such alteration or prevention as is referred to in Cl. (d), and that the meter, indicator or apparatus is under the custody or control of the consumer, whether it is his property or not, it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that such connexion, communication, alteration prevention or improper use, as the case may be, has been knowingly or wilfully caused by such consumer.

With regard to this last provision it was pointed out to Mr. Noad that to say that the behaviour of his client fell within sub-s. (d) is inconsistent with his previous argument that after the electrical energy had passed through the meter it in effect became the property or quasi property of the consumer. No doubt, the facts of this case bring all the tamperers within the purview of sub-s. (c), and possibly also Babulal Chowkhani, who it is alleged is a person who caused or allowed a fraudulent alteration of the index of the meters. But even if that were so, there can be no force in Mr. Carden Noad's argument that because a specific offence is provided for in S. 44, S. 44 should have been resorted to by the prosecution and not S. 39 or any other provision of the penal law. Mr. Carden Noad's argument on this point is entirely destroyed by the provisions of the General Clauses Act (Act 10 of 1897), S. 26, which says:

Where an act or omission constitutes an offence under two or more enactments, then the offender shall be liable to be prosecuted and punished under either or any of those enactments, but shall not be liable to be punished twice for the same.

We think that for the purpose of S. 26, General Clauses Act, it must be taken that Ss. 39 and 44, Electricity Act, are to be considered as separate enactments: see S. 3, sub-s. 17, General Clauses Act. There can therefore be no doubt that it was quite open to the prosecution to charge the accused Babu Lal Chowkhani with such offences as the facts and circumstances seem to warrant. All the points of law put forward and argued by Mr. Carden Noad on behalf of Babulal Chowkhani were adopted and relied upon but without further argument by the learned advocates appearing for the other appellants respectively. Having disposed of all the legal points put forward on behalf of the appellants, and having held that the trial was not illegal by reason of any misjoinder of charges or of the joint trial, it becomes necessary to be considered whether upon the facts all the convictions or some and which of them ought to be upheld. We have already expressed the opinion that it was not proved that the accused were all parties to one large conspiracy.

It now becomes necessary to consider the facts. We are not at all sure that Mr. Page (appearing on behalf of the Crown in support of the conviction) himself did not realise that he was confronted with considerable difficulty in seeking to argue that there was one conspiracy and one conspiracy only as between all the tamperers and each of the consumers, each of whom, as one would have thought, was merely concerned to secure a reduction of his own electricity bills without any interest in or knowledge of all the nefarious practices of other consumers. The conspiracy alleged was to commit theft. Mr. Page endeavoured to justify that allegation by saying that the agreement between the tamperers and the consumers, either taken together or in groups so intimately connected as to form an integral confederacy, was something like this: the consumer vis-a-vis the tamperer agreed to give access to his meter and to allow the tamperer to alter the index. The tamperer on his part vis-a-vis the consumer agreed, if rewarded, to come to the consumer's premises and to alter the index of the meter there. The consumer agreed to pay the tamperer as a reward for what he did so much per week or per month or agreed to pay to the tamperer as reward one-half of that amount of which it was the consumer's intention to avoid payment by means of what the consumer did. The agreement by the tamperer was the agreement to do an illegal act, namely to do the altering of the index of the meter. The agreement by the consumer was also an agreement to aid the tamperer in altering the index.

The intention of the tamperer by reason of which he entered into such an agreement was to make gain by way of a reward for aiding the consumer in destroying the evidence of dishonest consumption or user by the consumer of electrical energy, i. e., the evidence that the consumer had consumed or used energy which he had consumed or used with the intention of so doing without payment, i. e., to make gain as a reward for concealing evidence of theft by the consumer. It was the intention of the consumer, by reason of which he entered into the agreement, to make gain by dishonestly using electrical energy, i. e., to make gain by means of theft and to obtain the aid of the tamperer in destroying the evidence of that theft.

Mr. Page contended that the agreement constituted criminal conspiracy since it was an agreement to do illegal acts, forming one series of acts: dishonest user (theft); alteration of the index of a meter (to destroy the evidence of theft). The essential ingredient was theft by dishonest user. Without the common object of the parties, the making of gain, the agreement could not have come into existence. But that though the gain was the ultimate object, the subsidiary but necessary object was the commission of the theft by the consumer. In our view the situation, as now appears from a survey of the whole of the evidence in the case, is that in all probability there was a conspiracy or, at any rate, a close association between all the tamperers as such, and an agreement between each individual consumer and his assistants including members of his own staff and the particular tamperers who brought about all the tampering. Holding as we do that it was not established that there was any conspiracy of the kind mentioned in the charge laid under S. 120-B, I.P.C., it follows that the convictions on the conspiracy charge must be set aside.

It then becomes necessary to determine whether and to what extent the convictions of the appellants on the other charges can be maintained. At the outset it is to be borne in mind that although these appeals are upon questions of fact as well as upon questions of law, we are not in a position of retrying the accused and although we can alter the findings, these proceedings are not a rehearing of the case. Therefore due weight must be given to the conclusions arrived at by the learned Magistrate who had the advantage of seeing and hearing the witnesses. We are satisfied that in spite of the form of the charge the accused were at no disadvantage by reason of the existence of the conspiracy charge and the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate dealt with the evidence as against each individual accused carefully and conscientiously.

We now proceed to consider whether the conclusions arrived at by the learned Magistrate as against each of the appellants severally were justified by the evidence given in the case. We have given this part of the matter our close and careful consideration. We deal with the case of each of the appellants in the order in which they are dealt with in the judgment of the Court below. Babulal Chowkhani was found guilty of theft as well as conspiracy. He was sentenced under S. 39, Electricity Act, 1910, read with S. 380, Penal Code. There was no separate sentence on the charge of conspiracy. The evidence on which the learned Magistrate based his conviction may be summarized thus: (The judgment then discussed the evidence and proceeded.) Looking at the evidence as a whole, we are quite satisfied that Babulal Chowkhani did employ persons to alter the index of his meter with a view to evading payment of a considerable portion of the electrical energy supplied to his premises by the Calcutta Electric Supply Corporation, that over a lengthy period as alleged by the prosecution, week by week, he had the intention of using electrical energy with the intention of evading payment for the electric energy used by him. In those circumstances, we are satisfied that his conviction on the charge under S. 39, Electricity Act, was correct and that he was rightly found guilty of theft. We think however that the sentences should have been passed under the provisions of S. 379 and not S. 380, Penal Code. We, accordingly, dismiss the appeal of Babulal Chowkhani (Appeal No. 464) and direct that the sentences of one year's rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 1,000, in default six months' rigorous imprisonment, be recorded as being passed under S. 39, Electricity Act read with S. 379, Penal Code. Babulal Chowkhani must surrender to his bail and serve out the sentence imposed upon him. (The judgment then discussed the evidence with regard to the other accused and proceeded.) It is perhaps desirable that we should observe at this point that although we have held that there was no misjoinder of charges or mistrial of the appellants by reason of the framing of the conspiracy charge and combining that charge with certain other charges against certain of the accused persons, there is at the present time in this province too great a tendency to make charges against a number of persons that they were parties to a conspiracy and so guilty of an offence under S. 120-B, Penal Code, in circumstances where charges of ordinary substantive offences would be enough. The result is that what ought to be comparatively short and simple cases become long, complicated and unwieldy and instead of being disposed of quickly, drag on for a very long time. Moreover, there are, as we know, certain obvious advantages which the prosecution may derive and sometimes unfairly derive, from the existence of a charge of conspiracy covering a number of persons said to have committed several offences either of one and the same kind or of different kinds within the four corners of the dimensions of the conspiracy. In the present instance if we had the slightest reason to suppose that any of the convicted persons had been unfairly dealt with by reason of the whole body of them having been charged with conspiracy, we should have felt it our duty to quash the proceedings. It is fortunate for the prosecution that although we have given the closest attention and consideration to the points urged by the learned Advocates appearing for the appellants, we have not come to any such conclusion. The pieces of evidence which Mr. Carden Noad said would not have been admissible but for the existence of the charge of conspiracy, and also those pieces of evidence which Mr. Carden Noad declared would not be admitted in any event, none of these things have, in our opinion, had any influence adverse to the interests of the convicted persons or any of them. For the reasons given above, the appeal of Rash Behari Shaw (appellant in Appeal No. 446), Sushil Kumar Ghose (appellant in Appeal No. 461), Jagadish Singh (appellant in Appeal No. 462), Babulal Chowkhani (appellant in Appeal No. 464), Ganesh Bahadur (appellant in Appeal No. 465), and Sailendra Nath Mukherji (appellant in Appeal No. 466), are dismissed. These appellants will surrender to their bail bonds and will serve out the sentences imposed upon them. The appeal of Patal Chandra Santra (appellant in Appeal No. 461) and the appeal of Manindra Nath Dey (appellant in Appeal No. 453), are allowed. These two appellants will be discharged from their bail bonds and released forthwith.

R.M./R.K.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 770

R. C. MITTER, J.

Ali Hossain Shaikh and another—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Jonabali Mondal and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1622 of 1933, Decided on 12th December 1935, from appellate decree of Addl. Sub-Judge, Nadia, D/- 14th June 1933.

(a) Landlord and Tenant—Suit for arrears of rent—Determination of status of tenant is unnecessary.

In a suit for recovery of arrears of rent, it is not necessary to go into the question of status of the tenants. [P 771 C 1]

(b) Bengal Tenancy Act (8 of 1885), S. 23.—Pottah—Recitals in—Pottah executed after commencement of tenancy—Recitals not admissible against tenant.

Recitals, in favour of a landlord, contained in a Pottah, executed since the creation of tenancy cannot be used in evidence against the tenant. These recitals have an effect like those in a third party document. [P 771 C 2]

(c) Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 107.—Kabuliat—Applicability.

Section 107, T. P. Act, has no application to kabuliyat in respect of agricultural land [P 771 C 2]

(d) Tenancy—Agricultural land—Document if written must be registered—Unregistered document is inadmissible in evidence.

A tenancy in respect of agricultural land can be created by an oral agreement, but if an instrument is executed to that effect then it must be registered under S. 17 (1) (d), Registration Act; if not registered it becomes inadmissible under S. 49 of the same Act. [P 772 C 1]

(e) Registration Act (16 of 1908), S. 17 (1) (d)—Amalnama—Contract for sale of growing straw—Vendee acquiring interest in land—Document embodying such contract requires registration.

In contracts for sale of growing straw the vendees derive a benefit from the further growth of the thing sowed, from further vegetation and from the nutriment to be afforded by the land and thus acquire an interest in the land itself and hence an amalnama or a kabuliyat embodying such a contract requires registration: Marshall v. Green, 1 C P D 35, Ref. [P 772 C 1, 2]

A. C. Gupta and Shamsuddin Ahmed—for Appellants.

S. C. Choudhury, Abdul Ali and Ramendra Mohan Mazumdar (for Dy. Registrar)—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal is on behalf of defendants 1 and 2 and arises out of a suit for recovery of arrears of rent for the year 1336 B. S. and the Ashar kist of 1337. The plaintiffs came to Court with the case that the defendants were Ijaradars under them for five years commencing from 1335 B. S. and that the rent payable by them is Rs. 475 a year. The case of the defendants is that they are raiyats and the rent is not Rs. 475 but Rs. 234-13-0 a year. An issue was framed as to the status of the defendants. The lower appellate Court has come to a finding that the defendants are Ijaradars as alleged by the plaintiffs and that their right to remain on the property demised had ceased in the year 1339. Having regard to the fact that it is a suit for recovery of arrears of rent, I am of opinion that it is not necessary to go into the question of status and that question ought to have been left open by the lower appellate Court. Both Mr. Roy Choudhury and Mr. Gupta agree that the said question ought to have been left open. I accordingly expunge that portion of the judgment of the lower appellate Court which deals with the defendants' status and leave the question open to be litigated if and when occasion arises.

The other question involved in this appeal is as to the rate of rent. The lower appellate Court has come to the conclusion that the rent is Rs. 475 and on that finding he affirmed the decree of the first Court. Mr. Gupta appearing for the appellants urges that this finding is based on inadmissible evidence and ought to be set aside and the case remanded to the lower appellate Court in order that the said Court may come to a finding as to what is the amount of rent, after excluding such evidence as is inadmissible. For the purpose of arriving at his finding, the learned Subordinate Judge has found the Dakhilas produced by the defendants to be not genuine. That finding is based on evidence and must stand. But the lower appellate Court in coming to its finding as to the rate of rent relied principally upon Ex. 7 which is said to be an Amalnama, and the recitals in three Pottas Exs. 1, 2 and 8, the recitals being that the defendants are Ijaradars holding at the rent of Rs. 475 and that the term of their Ijara at the date of the pattas had not expired but was to run on for another four years. The question therefore raised in this appeal is whether Ex. 7 and the recitals in the three pottas are admissible in evidence against the defendants.

I shall first deal with the recitals contained in the pottas. In my judgment those recitals are not admissible in evidence. These pottas were executed in the year 1336 B. S. They are executed in favour of the plaintiffs by some of their co-sharers. I do not see under what provisions of the Indian Evidence Act those recitals could be in evidence against the defendants who had secured their interest from the plaintiffs and their co-sharers before the execution of these pottas. If the defendants' interest had been created after the execution of the pottas any recital therein would have been evidence against them, because they being undoubtedly evidence as against the plaintiffs would have been admissible in evidence against the defendants as their assigns. But having regard to the fact that the defendants had already acquired a right from the plaintiffs before the pottas were executed the recitals are like those in a third party document and are not admissible in evidence against them.

As regards Ex. 7, though it is no doubt described as an Amalnama in one part of the document and an ekrar in another part of it, it cannot be by any stretch of language an Amalnama or warrant for possession given by the landlords to the tenants because this document was not executed by or on behalf of the plaintiffs landlords but by the tenant defendants. I have gone through the terms of the document. The document is really a combination of a kabuliat and a bond promising payment of a portion of the selami which was paid then and there. By this document the defendants took Banda-bust or lease of the property for five years. The rent and all the terms of the settlement are given in detail. The land is described as kharban, that is to say, land covered by straw in its natural state. I am prepared to accept the contention of Mr. Roy Choudhury that it is a kabuliat in respect of agricultural land and the provisions of S. 107, T. P. Act, have no application whatsoever, that is to say for the purpose of creating a lease of such land, it is not necessary that the lease must be created by a registered document only. Settlement might as well have been made by means of oral agreement. But when an instrument has been executed the question is whether it is affected by the provisions of the Registration Act. In my judgment, if it is a lease of immoveable property, it is affected by the provisions of S. 17, sub-s. (1), Cl. (d), Registration Act, and it requires registration, and not being registered it is not admissible by reason of S. 49, Registration Act, and on that ground it ought not to have been admitted in evidence. In the previous paragraph I have assumed that Ex. 7 is a kabuliyat evidencing the terms of a lease of immoveable property. But Mr. Roy Choudhury has argued before me that by this document no interest in immoveable property has been created, and it is merely a contract for sale of straw growing on the land and therefore it is a contract for the sale of goods and so required no registration. I am unable to give effect to this contention. The principle in such cases has been formulated in the case of Duppa v. Mayo (1) cited by Lord Coleridge, Chief Justice, in (1876) 1 C P D 35 (2) at p. 39 and is in these words :

The principle of these decisions appears to be this : that wherever at the time of the contract it is contemplated that the purchaser should derive a benefit from the further growth of the thing sold, from further vegetation, and from the nutriment to be afforded by the land, the contract is to be considered as for an interest in land but where the process of vegetation is over, or the parties agree that the thing sold shall be immediately withdrawn from the land, the land is to be considered as a mere warehouse of the thing sold, and the contract is for goods. This doctrine has been materially qualified by later decisions, and it appears to be now settled, that with respect to implements or fructus industriales, etc., corn and other growth of the earth which are produced not spontaneously but by labour and industry, a contract for the sale of them while growing, whether they are in a state of maturity or whether they have still to derive nutriment from the land in order to bring them to that state, is not a contract for the sale of any interest in land but merely for the sale of goods.

It is the admitted case of both sides that the straw which was on the land was not fructus industriales; it grew on the land in a wild state. On the terms of the Amalnama it is quite clear that the defendants were to derive benefit from further vegetation and from the nutriment to be afforded by the land. I accordingly hold that the Amalnama created an interest in land in favour of the defendants and was not merely a contract for the sale of goods. In this view of the matter I do hold that Ex. 7 is not admissible in evidence because it is not a registered document. The judgment of the learned Subordinate Judge makes it quite clear that in arriving at his finding that the rate was Rs. 475 a year, he has relied greatly if not entirely upon the aforesaid four documents. Inasmuch as I have held that these four documents are not admissible in evidence, the decree of the learned Subordinate Judge must be set aside and the case remanded in order that the question as to the rate of rent payable by the defendant may be decided on the other evidence on the record. It must however be made clear that the finding of the learned Subordinate Judge on the genuineness of the Dakhilas produced by the defendants stands. The appeal is accordingly allowed and the case is remanded to the lower appellate Court to be disposed of in accordance with law. The costs of this appeal will abide the result.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 772

R. C. MITTER, J.

Ensup Mandal and another—Defendants—Appellants.

v.

Golapjan (Golapjannessa) Bibi and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1522 of 1933, Decided on 11th December 1935, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, 2nd Addl. Court, 24-Parganas, D/- 31st March 1933.

Res judicata—Incidental issue—Issue decided not necessary—Result of former suit unaffected by decision of such issue—Such decision is not res judicata in later suit.

In a former suit between the same parties if an issue was decided but the finding of the issue was not necessary or if the finding on the issue was the other way, the result of the suit would have been unaffected, then that was an incidental issue and a decision thereon is not res judicata between the parties in a later suit: Concha v. Concha, (1886) 11 A C 541, Ref.

[P 774 C 1]

Narendra Chandra Bose and Satyendra Nath Mitter—for Appellants.

Hira Lal Chakrabarty, Rabindra Nath Bhattacharji and Ramendra Mohan Mazumdar (for Dy. Registrar)—for Respondents.

Judgment.—This appeal is by the defendants in a suit instituted by the plain-

1. 1 Wms. Saunders notes, 394 (395).

2. Marshall v. Green, (1876) 1 C P D 35=45 L J C P 153=33 L T 404=24 W R 175.

tiffs for a declaration that the lands recorded in Khatians Nos. 228 and 314 of Mouza Mathurapur and in Khatian No. 69 of Mouza Akatpur, constitute one Jama bearing a rental of Rs. 15 per year and that the decree obtained by the landlords defendants in rent suit No. 499 of 1931 is a fraudulent one. In the record of rights which was finally published under Ch. 10, Ben. Ten. Act, the land recorded in Khatian 314 of Mouza Mathurapur has been shown to be one holding held at a rental of Rs. 15 a year, and the lands in Khatian 228 of Mouza Mathurapur, and in Khatian 69 of Mouza Akatpur have been shown as constituting another holding bearing a rental of Rs. 15. In 1931 the defendants instituted a suit to recover rent for the years 1334 to 1337 at the rate of Rs. 15 a year from the plaintiffs in the present suit and their co-sharers tenants. The plaintiffs in this suit did not enter appearance but their co-tenants did. The decree was an ex parte decree against the present plaintiffs and a contested decree against their co-sharers. In the plaint of that suit the defendants described the tenancy by reference to the khatian number. They said that the tenancy consisted of lands recorded in Khatian 314 of Mouza Mathurapur. The contesting defendants in that suit appeared and raised the defence that the tenancy which they and their co-sharers held at a rental of Rs. 15 a year under the landlords, comprised the lands not only of Khatian 314 but also the lands in Khatian 228 of Mathurapur and Khatian 69 of Akatpur.

On that the following issue was raised: "Have the plaintiffs included in the two suits (we are not concerned with the second suit) all the plots of land covered by the Jamas in question? If not can they get a decree?" As I read the judgment it appears that the Court decided the issue in favour of the landlords. It held that although the documents exhibited in the case would tend to support the tenants' case, the record of rights must be taken to be correct inasmuch as there was no certain evidence to rebut it. On that footing a decree was passed against the tenants. For the purpose of defeating this suit the landlords defendants have raised two points, first of all they state that the decision on the aforesaid issue in the rent suit of 1931, operates as res judicata and prevents the plaintiffs in the present suit from re-agitating the same question; and secondly, they say that in fact the record of rights is correct, there being really two Jamas each held at a rental of Rs. 15. On the merits the lower appellate Court has come to the conclusion that the plaintiff's case is true and the lands recorded in Khatians 314, 228 and 69 form one single holding at a rental of Rs. 15. On the question of res judicata the lower appellate Court has differed from the first Court. The first Court held in favour of the defendants, namely, the question is res judicata, but the lower appellate Court has taken a contrary view. In my judgment the view taken by the lower appellate Court is correct.

The rent suit was instituted after the amendment of the Bengal Tenancy Act. S. 148, Cl. (c) provides that when the record of rights is finally published the plaint in a rent suit shall contain a statement of the serial number or numbers borne by the tenancy in the record of rights and of the area and rental of the tenancy according to such record. Having regard to the proviso which is added to sub-s. (c), it is not necessary now that the plaint in a rent suit shall contain the statement of situation, designation, extent and boundaries of the land held by the tenant where a Record of Rights has been finally published, that is to say Cl. (b), S. 148, has no application.

The plaint in the rent suit filed after the amendment came into force, would be a good plaint if it contains the serial number or numbers of the tenancy in the Record of Rights and of the area and rental according to the Record of Rights. Such being the position the question is whether the issue which was raised in the rent suit of 1931 was a direct and substantial issue between the parties or was only an incidental issue. In my judgment even if that issue had been decided against the landlords the rent suit could not have been dismissed because the plaint had complied sufficiently with the requirements of law as indicated in S. 148, Cl. (c), Ben. Ten. Act, and there was no dispute as to the rate of rent. In (1886) 11 A C 541 (1) Lord Herschell at p. 550 has formulated a test for the purpose of deciding whether an issue raised and decided in a case, is a direct and substantial issue or only an incidental or collateral issue. The passage runs thus :

1. Concha v. Concha, (1886) 11 A C 541=56 L J Ch 257=55 L T 522=35 W R 477.

Now I do not think it can be disputed that that finding was not essential to the judgment in the cause. If there had been no such finding or if the finding had been the other way, it might equally well have been the case that the learned Judge was bound to decree probate of the will to the executors.

In that case the probate Court in deciding whether a probate should issue or not, had to decide the issue as to whether the testator had a domicile in England or in Chilli. The learned Judge of the Probate Court, Sir C. Cresswell, came to the conclusion that the testator had an English domicile at the date of the suit. Later on, in a Bill instituted by the daughter of the testator, a question arose whether the testator could dispose of effectively the whole of the property, it being her case that if the testator had a domicile at Chilli he had disposing power only over a fourth part of his estate and she was entitled to the remainder of the estate under the Chillian law. The decision of the Probate Court was put forward and it was stated that the said decision operated as res judicata on the question of domicile. The said objection was overruled.

The facts of this case are that even if a decision on issue 1 in the rent suit had been justly the other way, that is to say, even if that issue had been decided in favour of the defendants in the rent suit the Court was bound to decree the rent suit inasmuch as there was no dispute about the relationship of landlord and tenant and as to the rate of rent or of the period in arrears. The plaint had complied with the provisions of Cl. (c), S. 148. For these reasons I hold the decision in the rent suit on the point in controversy being a decision on an incidental, and collateral issue, is not res judicata between the parties in this suit. For these reasons I dismiss this appeal with costs. The prayer for leave to appeal under Cl. 15, Letters Patent, is refused.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

* * A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 774

D. N. MITTER AND PATTERSON, JJ.

Secy. of State—Defendant—Appellant.
v.

Krishna Prosad Roy Chaudhuri—Plaintiff 1 and another—Respondents.

Appeals Nos. 277 and 283 of 1931, Decided on 19th December 1935, from original decrees of Sub-Judge, 1st Addl. Court, Sylhet, D/- 31st July 1931.

(a) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), S. 8 (b)—Status of a land-holder—Acquisition of, dependent not on the length of possession but on the lessee's holding under the lease for 10 years.

Section 8 (b), Assam Land and Revenue Regulation, does not make it obligatory on the lessee to occupy the land for 10 years before he can acquire the status of a land-holder. All that it says is that he must hold, irrespective of the period of occupation under a lease given, for a term of not less than 10 years. The acquisition of the rights of a land-holder is not dependent on the length of possession under the lease but it is dependent on the lessee's holding under a lease which is given for a term of 10 years. [P 778 C 2]

(b) Assam Land and Revenue Regulation (1 of 1886), Ss. 12, 29 and 70—Scope of.

Section 70 was intended to cover only cases of such lands, that is waste land or lands which have been held on behalf of proprietor Government. [P 779 C 1]

* (c) Surrender—Rights acquired by party contracting himself out of rights in respect of property worth more than Rs 100—Registered document necessary—Besides some express declaration on the part of the party surrendering his rights is necessary.

In order to show that a party has contracted himself out of his rights and surrendered what he had already acquired with reference to property the value of which is more than Rs. 100, the transaction must be evidenced by a registered document under the Registration Act (1877). But apart from registration it is necessary to show some express declaration on the part of the party abandoning his rights. [P 779 C 2; P 780 C 1]

(d) Practice—Plea—Law point can be taken in appeal.

A plea that a particular deed requires registration is a pure question of law; and a pure question of law which is not dependent on any disputed facts can be allowed for the first time in appeal. [P 779 C 2]

* * (e) Lease—Forfeiture clause in lease was ultra vires of statute—Party can deny its binding nature—Deed void in part—Estoppel may arise from the part that is good—This is an exception to the general rule that there can be no estoppel against statute.

Where a forfeiture clause inserted in a lease deed is ultra vires of the statute and as there can be no estoppel against the statute it is permissible to a party to say that they are not bound by the term which is in contravention of the statute, but it is well established that if a deed is void in part only and the rest be separable, estoppel may arise from the part which is good. This latter proposition is an exception to the general rule that where a deed has been executed in contravention of the statute, the law of estoppel does not apply.

[P 780 C 1]

Brojolal Chakravarti, Gopal Chandra Das, Ananda Ch. Karkoon and Nripendra Ch. Das—for Appellant.

Basak and Mukerji—for Respondents.

D. N. Mitter, J.—The suit in which this appeal arises was brought by the plaintiffs, now appellants, for a declaration that the Government have no right to resume any portion of certain Ilam lands covered by pottas Nos. 3 and 9 in suit, that is to say, potta No. $\frac{24512}{9} \frac{24505}{3}$ present No. 1 or to settle the same after resumption with any other third person and for a further declaration that the plaintiffs have the status of "landholder" in respect of the lands of the pottas in suit within the meaning of Assam Land Revenue Regulation, Regulation 1 of 1886, as well as for confirmation of possession of the two plaintiffs of the lands of the patta in suit and for a perpetual injunction restraining the Secy. of State from disturbing the possession of the plaintiffs. The plaintiffs also asked in the suit for a declaration that they have exclusive right to take settlement from the Government at a proper jama of all the land of the Ilam Pottas in suit and they prayed for other reliefs also. The plaintiffs also asked for restoration of possession of such portion of the lands of the pottas in suit from which they might have been dispossessed in the meantime by the action of the Government and they prayed for mesne profits. The suit was resisted by the Secretary of State who filed a written statement in which they raised several defences to which reference will be made hereafter. The Additional Subordinate Judge of Sylhet decreed the suit of the plaintiffs in a modified form. He held that the plaintiffs have the interest of land-holders within the meaning of S. 8 of the Regulation, in respect of all lands of the Ilam potta No. 1 in suit, as described in the Ilam potta of the English year 1902, but the Subordinate Judge came to the conclusion that the defendant is entitled to make khas and to select for making khas the remainder after setting apart $\frac{1}{5}$ th out of the culturable waste land within the said property. He declared that the plaintiffs are entitled to get re-settlement of such portion of the mehal as is not included in the aforesaid resumption. The Subordinate Judge held further that the plaintiffs be confirmed in their possession of that portion of the land which the defendant is entitled to resume so long as the same is not resumed as well as of the remaining lands of the mehal. The plaintiffs have preferred an appeal against that portion of the decree which refuses to give the plaintiffs a declaration in terms of their prayer No. 1 in which they asked for a declaration that the Government have no right to resume any portion of the lands of the pottas in question. This appeal has been numbered as Appeal from Original Decree No. 283 of 1931 with which we will deal first. It may be mentioned that the Secretary of State has also preferred an appeal to this Court and that is against that portion of the decree of the Subordinate Judge which affirms the plaintiff's possession in that portion of the land which the Secretary of State is held to have been entitled to resume so long as the same is not resumed. That appeal has been numbered as Appeal from Original Decree No. 277 of 1931. It has been conceded by Dr. Mukherjee who appears for the Secretary of State that if the appeal of the plaintiffs, that is Appeal from Original Decree No. 283 of 1931, succeeds it would follow that the appeal of the Secretary of State, namely, Appeal from Original Decree No. 277 of 1931, must necessarily fail.

Appeal No. 283 of 1931.—We now proceed to deal with the appeal of the plaintiffs, namely, Appeal from Original Decree No. 283 of 1931. The facts which give rise to the contentions in this appeal are not many and are not substantially in dispute. The question really turns on the effect of certain provisions of the Assam Land Revenue Regulation as to the status of the plaintiffs as well as on the effect of the potta No. 1 which has been marked as Ex. Y in the suit and was executed on behalf of the Secretary of State in the year 1902. See p. 54 of Vol. No. 1, part 2 of the paper-book of Appeal from Original Decree No. 277 of 1931 which for the sake of convenience we shall hereafter refer to as Vol. "D." The plaintiffs case is this: that there was a settlement of two estates which will be described for the sake of brevity as estates Nos. 3 and 9 with the plaintiffs in 1888. Estate No. 3 was granted for a period of eight years commencing from 1298 to 1302 B. S., on 23rd July 1888. See p. 144, Vol. D of the paper book. This document has been marked as Ex. M. With regard to the Estate No. 9 there was a kabuliat, Ex. N (1), which evidenced an Ilam settlement. It appears that under both these documents the land which was settled was the land which belonged to the Government and was in possession of the Government and which was not in the possession of the plaintiffs; and this was the land over which none of the plaintiffs had the right of the proprietor, land-holder or settlement-holder under the Assam Regulation. This was apparently the land to which provisions of S. 12 of the Assam Regulation of 1886 apply. This may be regarded as the first stage in the relationship of landlord and tenant between the plaintiffs and the Secretary of State with reference to this tenancy. It appears that before the terms of the lease expired a re-settlement of the lands in the two estates were made for ten years, that is from the year 1894 to 1904 or 1300 to 1310 B. S. The two leases in respect of the two estates, estate No. 3 and estate No. 9, have been marked as Exs. E E and E E.1 respectively and printed at pp. 64 and 67 respectively in Vol. D of the paper book. These leases were for a term of ten years and as soon as these leases were executed the plaintiffs acquired according to their contention the status of land-holders within the meaning of S. 8, Cl. (b) of the Regulation. It may be stated here that the Secretary of State acceded to this position claimed by the plaintiffs in the Court below. The learned Senior Government Pleader has, however, raised a new contention and he argues that the plaintiffs did not acquire the status of land-holders because in the first stage of the settlement they entered into these lands as lessees to whom provisions of S. 12 apply. We shall consider the soundness or otherwise of this contention after we have finished the narrative of the facts of this case. This is the second stage in the relationship of landlord and tenant as between the Government on the one hand and the plaintiffs on the other.

We come now to the third stage and we will have to refer in chronological sequence to some of the events which led to the execution of potta No. 1 in 1902 which covered a period of 20 years and was to expire on 31st March 1922. (The judgment then describes the documentary evidence and the defences and then proceeds). After considering the oral and documentary evidence the Subordinate Judge has come to the conclusion that the pottas of 1894 conferred on the plaintiffs the status of landlord with a permanent heritable and transferable right for use and occupation of the lands comprising the two estates. The real issue which the Subordinate Judge had to determine in the matter of controversy before us is issue 8. That issue is to the following effect :

Is the order of the Governor in Council passed on 1st January 1926 for enforcing Cl. 7 of Potta resuming the waste and fallow lands valid and binding against the plaintiffs and can the plaintiffs claim re-settlement of the lands resumed by order of Government ?

The Subordinate Judge went into the history of the Ilam estates in great detail. It is not necessary to discuss the nature of these estates as they are stated with great fulness in the admirable introduction to the Assam Land Revenue Manual, Edn. 5, 1931, p. 93, by Sir E. Ward. The Subordinate Judge held the rules made under S. 29 cannot possibly take away substantive rights expressly granted, or arising out of the other provisions of the Regulation and not terminating with the term of a settlement. He also held that before 1902 a notification was issued inserting the resumption clause of the one-fifth rule. It shows that somebody has misread that important form prescribed by the notification which was intended to apply to all sets of the settlement-holders including land-holders. He held further that the Government is not entitled in the case of land-holders to impose any term it chooses at the re-settlement and that such terms as it may impose must be consistent with the status of a land-holder conferred by the statute. After coming to these findings which are favourable to the case of the plaintiffs the Subordinate Judge next rests his conclusion on the acceptance by the plaintiffs of this lease containing the forfeiture clause : Cl. (7). He says :

It is idle to contend that the plaintiffs had not accepted this Potta but accepted only the immunity from enhancement of the revenue for 20 years which the Potta secured.

The real basis of his decision to quote his own words is this :

When the 1894 leases were running, and the term of either was going to end in 1903 and the peril of a revision of revenue was almost in sight the plaintiffs applied for an extension of term for 20 years, that is for an immunity from further increase of the revenue for another 20 years. The Government offered a lease granting this immunity, but containing this special term that the lessee must reclaim the lands at his peril, or there would be a resumption of a proportion of the waste lands. I do not think that there was anything to prevent the plaintiffs from entering into such a contract, so that the question to which one is reduced is whether the plaintiffs had, in fact, entered into this contract.

The basis of the Subordinate Judge's judgment, as we read it, is that it is open to the plaintiffs to surrender their rights as landlords and the plaintiffs did surrender such rights when they agreed to the acceptance of Cl. (7) of the form in appendix E. He accordingly gave a modified decree in the light which has already been indicated. The plaintiffs have accordingly appealed and it is contended on their behalf that the basis on which the Subordinate Judge has rested his decision is wrong. It is argued that if one examines the correspondence which passed between the Chief Commissioner of Assam and the plaintiffs, and which eventually led to the execution of the pottas, it would show that there was really no necessity for introducing Cl. (7) of the potta which really takes away their rights as land-holders, and it is said that as land-holder they were entitled to re-settlement on the expiry of the term of 20 years on 31st March 1922, subject to the settlement of revenue as might be determined then. It is argued in the first place that the form in appendix E of the Regulation really refers to waste lands or such lands as could not be disposed of under S. 12 of the regulation ; and as the land now in question was not such land, because the plaintiffs have already been in possession of these lands as land-holders the form already inserted in the lease cannot affect the rights of the plaintiffs.

In the alternative it is argued that even if such form is sanctioned by the rules made by the Chief Commissioner such clause as Cl. (7) was not introduced in the execution of the powers given by the statute. In other words it was said that it was ultra vires of the statute and that the plaintiffs were not bound by any new term, a term which could not be enforced under the provisions of the statute. On the question of consideration for this new lease it is said that the conveyance made by the Secretary of State with regard to the consideration was the freedom from enhancement for the period of 20 years. It is not really borne out by the plaintiff's correspondence, for the correspondence from the two previous Commissioners makes no mention of such consideration. It is true that at the end of the term of 1904 it would have been open to the Chief Commissioner to enhance the revenue in respect of these lands. But as this was not made it must be taken for granted that the settlement was on terms which were already in force. He is really extending the terms of ten years' leases of 1894 to 31st March 1922. It becomes necessary therefore to consider some of the provisions of the Assam Regulation with reference to the several grounds taken.

It is first contended that under the lease of 1894 the plaintiffs have acquired the status of a land-holder having regard to the provisions of S. 8 (1) of the Regulations. The Subordinate Judge has found this contention correct and we would not have dealt with this question but for the fact that the learned Senior Government Pleader has challenged this finding of the Subordinate Judge and has contended for the first time before us that the status of the plaintiffs after they had obtained the leases of 1894 and up till 1904 was not that of a settlement-holder. The argument is based on this reasoning: It is said that it being admitted that when the plaintiffs or their predecessors entered into this land they entered as lessees to whom leases were granted under S. 12 of the Regulation, and the persons who hold such leases are exempted from the benefit of S. 15. It is said that under S. 15 it is enacted that no person shall acquire by length of possession or otherwise any right over lands disposed of or allotted under S. 12, S. 13 or S. 14 beyond that which is given by the rules made under the section, and it is contended that as the initial leases of 1888 were leases granted under S. 12 the plaintiffs could not at that time acquire the status by length of possession any rights higher than what are due under S. 12. It is impossible to accept this contention, for in our view the granting of second lease for ten years certainly entitles them to acquire the rights of the land-holders in view of what is said in S. 8, Cl. (b) which runs as follows:

Except as provided by S. 15, any person who has, whether before or after the commencement of this Regulation, acquired any such land under a lease granted by or on behalf of the Government, the term of which is not less than ten years shall be deemed to have acquired the status of a land holder in respect of the land.

The exception would refer to a case where the lessee was holding under a lease to which S. 12 applies. In the present case it can hardly be contended that at the time when the lease of 1902 was granted the present plaintiffs were holding lands under S. 12. We have therefore no hesitation in repelling this contention, which was for a very good reason not taken in the Court below. The learned Senior Government Pleader has also questioned the finding of the Subordinate Judge that the plaintiffs have acquired the status of a land-holder because he argues, under S. 9, a landholder shall have a permanent heritable and transferable right of use and occupancy in his land subject to the special conditions of any engagement into which the landholder may have entered with the Government. It is further argued that in this case as the plaintiff's rights were subject to the special incident in Cl. (7)—the forfeiture clause which lays down the one-fifth rule—the plaintiffs cannot be regarded as land-holders within the meaning of S. 8. We are unable to accept this contention either for Cl. (8) must be read in such a way as not to destroy the right of permanency, heritability and transferability and others, but at the same time impose some restrictions in the mode of user and these rights, viz., rights of easement, etc. This argument was not taken in the Court below and it seems to us not rightly taken. We must overrule this contention.

A further contention was raised that the plaintiffs have not acquired the status of a land-holder because they had not completed their possession under the lease of 1894 for a period of ten years. This contention also is of no substance if we consider the language of Cl. (b), S. 8. S. 8, Cl. (b) runs as follows:

Except as provided by S. 15, any person who has, whether before or after the commencement of this Regulation, acquired any such land under a lease granted by or on behalf of the Government, the term of which is not less than ten years, shall be deemed to have acquired the status of a land-holder in respect of the land.

This provision does not make it obligatory on the lessee to occupy the land for ten years before he can acquire the status of a land-holder. All that it says is that he must hold, irrespective of the period of occupation under a lease is given for a term of not less than ten years. There is nothing in this contention also having regard to the clear language of the statute. The acquisition of the rights of a landholder is not dependent on the length of possession under the lease, but it is dependent on the lessee's holding under a lease which is given for a term of ten years. We have just dealt with the objection which was really taken for the first time by Dr. Basak appearing on behalf of the Secretary of State.

Now we proceed to deal with the point raised by the appellant that this Cl. (7) of the patta Ex. 1 was really inserted in the lease apparently through some mistake and it is contended that the notification which added or inserted this clause to the terms of the patta really was with reference to an amendment made to the rules under Ss. 12 and 29 of the Regulations and it is said that the rules can only apply if the case is one which is covered by S. 12, and it is said that there is no point in confirming the clause as referring to both Ss. 12 and 29 unless it was intended that they must refer to such lands as are mentioned in S. 12. On the other hand it is contended on behalf of the Government that if one looks to Ss. 12 and 29 of the Regulations it would appear that they refer to rules regarding the different classes of duties, for instance it is said that under S. 12 the Chief Commissioner may make rules for the disposal by way of grant of lease, or otherwise, of any land over which no person has the rights of a proprietor, landholder or settlement-holder under the Regulation. Whereas under S. 29 the Chief Commissioner may make rules prescribing the principles on which the land revenue is to be assessed, the term for which and the condition on which, settlements are to be made, and the manner in which the Settlement Officer is to report for sanction of his rates and method of assesment. It is said on behalf of the Government that it is a general section, and our attention has been drawn on behalf of the Government to Rule No. 88 of the Rules to be found at page 97 of the Settlement Rules

Chapter I of the edition of the Assam Land Revenue Manual by Mr. Gait published in 1896 with an introduction by Sir William Erskine Ward, the then Chief Commissioner of Assam. It is said that Rule 88 refers to a case of re-settlement and not settlement of lands of which the Government is the proprietor nor settlement of waste lands. It appears to us, however, on examining Rule 70 to which reference was made and under which Appx. E is added to the statute, that it applies to all leases. Rule 70 runs as follows :

All annual leases shall be in the form given in Appx. D, in the form given in Appx. E.

This Rule, looking at the contents it would appear is put in that portion of S. 3 which deals with waste lands. S. 66 of the Rules gives the definition of waste land as used in this section. That refers to periodical leases and S. 70 deals with all annual leases. It is said and I think there is great force in what has been said on behalf of the plaintiffs that S. 70 was intended to cover only cases of such lands, that is the waste land or lands which have been held on behalf of the proprietor, Government. S. 80 expressly means the case of resettlement and it also appears to us that S. 29 was not really intended to apply to the provisions of any other case of settlement for it gives really a right of assessment of Government revenue in respect of which the Chief Commissioner framed rules. I think that this is the right view to take of the various rules under Ss. 12 and 29 published in the form printed at Appx. E. This form is to be found at page 281 of the same book. It appears that into this form in Appx. E by a notification dated 3rd July 1901, Cl. (7) which has been quoted in extenso above and which is to be found in the lease had been inserted; and it seems to us on reading the notice at the footnote to S. 70 that this was with reference to waste lands. That view is strengthened by the consideration that under S. 29 waste lands are not to be assessed. But if we are not right in the construction of rules it appears to us that Cl. (7) is made applicable to the rest of the lands which are not covered by S. 29, that is re-settlement of the lands of the persons who are already in possession and occupation of the lands of the lease is ultra vires under the statute for according to S. 9 of the Regulation the present plaintiffs have acquired the status of land-holder and acquired heritable right and the right of use and occupation.

That cannot be taken away by the insertion of the forfeiture clause which would really mean surrender at the end of the term of the lease of valuable rights which had been acquired by reason of the plaintiffs being the land-holders within the meaning of S. 8. The Subordinate Judge has also taken that view, and we think, rightly. In this view the question next arises which is the more difficult point in the case with which we have to disagree with the Subordinate Judge as to what is the effect of the acceptance of the lease. Some argument has been advanced on behalf of the appellants that there has not been acceptance of the potta Ex. I as is contemplated by the Regulation. We do not think that we need be troubled by these technicalities as to whether there has been acceptance in conformity with these regulations. The fact remains that as the lease patta Ex. I was in the possession of the plaintiffs it must be presumed that they had full knowledge of the contents of the potta including Cl. (7). It is true that they did not execute a corresponding kabuliati and that becomes a question of no materiality, seeing what we have to determine is whether the plaintiffs have surrendered the rights which they have already acquired as land-holder by the execution by Government of the potta Ex. Y which they accepted and which they treated as the foundation of their title. It has been argued on behalf of the plaintiffs that in order to effect such a surrender of their rights a registered document is necessary. This point was not taken in the Court below but it is said that this is a pure question of law which should be allowed to be raised for the first time in appeal to this Court. It is true that this argument suffers from infirmity which attaches to the belated plea taken for the first time in appeal, but at the same time as it is a pure question of law which is not dependent on any disputed facts we might allow this point to be taken. We think that in order to show that a party has contracted himself out of his rights and surrendered what he had already acquired with reference to the property the value of which exceeds Rs. 100 the transaction must be evidenced by a registered document having regard to the provisions of S. 17, Registration Act of 1877, which was the Registration Act prevailing at the time. But apart from the question of registration before one can hold that the party has contracted himself out of his rights some express declaration on the part of the party abandoning his rights must be forthcoming. In order to establish the fact that there was abandonment of their rights by the pottah there must be something to show in the most explicit terms that the parties understood when accepting the potta that they were giving up a very valuable right by reason of their being land-holders within the meaning of Ss. 8 and 9 of the Regulation. Besides it seems to us that this agreement, in so far as it incorporates Cl. 7, the forfeiture clause or the one-fifth rule being ultra vires of the statute to that extent is irregular, and as there can be no estoppel against the statute it is permissible for a party to say that they are not bound by a term which is in contravention of the statute. This term of the pottah is separable from the rest. It is well established that if a deed is void in part only and the rest be severable estoppels may arise from the part which is good. This is an exception to the general rule that where a deed had been executed in contravention of a statute the law of estoppel does not apply. We think therefore that the Subordinate Judge is not right in the view which he has taken that the acceptance of the potta which includes Cl. 7 is tantamount to surrendering their rights as "land-holders."

Advocate High Court

Jammu & Kashmir

It remains to consider the other points on which the Subordinate Judge rests his decision, namely, that there has been consideration for the potta, Ex. Y. It is said that it would appear from the passage which has been already quoted that the consideration for the Pottah was that they got immunity from further increase of revenue for 20 years and that in view of this consideration they accepted the clause about the resumption of a portion of waste land as will appear from the correspondence with the revenue authorities. There is nothing in that correspondence which would show that any such concession was given to the present plaintiffs which would induce them to surrender their very valuable rights. We think, therefore, that the decree of the Subordinate Judge must be modified and the plaintiffs must be declared entitled to a decree in terms of their plaint.

Appeal No. 277 of 1931.—As has already been stated that the learned Junior Government Pleader concedes that as a result of Appeal No. 283 of 1931 being allowed Appeal No. 277 of 1931 must be dismissed. In the circumstances of the present case we think that each party must bear its own costs throughout and this order as to costs must govern both the appeals.

Patterson J.—I agree.

A.L./R.K.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 780

M. C. GHOSE, J.

Dukhiram Madhu — Defendant 3—Appellant.

v.

Ramlakshmi Falia — Plaintiff and others—Defendants—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1661 of 1933, Decided on 12th November 1935, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, First Court, Faridpore, D/- 22nd April 1933.

Mortgage—Mortgagee agreeing to pay proportionate rent of land mortgaged—Mortgagor found to be possessed of more land in that holding—Rent actually paid by mortgagee corresponded to larger portion of mortgaged property—Mortgagee cannot claim more than what was mortgaged.

The mortgagor borrowed certain amount from mortgagee and executed a mortgage bond in respect of 12 bighas out of the mortgagor's holding of 15 bighas of land which he held at a rent of Rs. 10-9-3. It was stated in mortgage bond that the proportionate rent of the portion mortgaged would be Rs. 8-7-0. When afterwards the mortgagee sued on the mortgage bond, it was found that the mortgagor in fact owned a holding of 25 bighas and the rent of Rs. 10-9-3 was for that entire holding. The mortgagee on seeing that the proportionate area for which he paid rent was 18 bighas and not 12 bighas, claimed that he should get possession of 18 bighas and not of 12 bighas only as stated in the mortgage deed :

Held : that it was not correct as between a debtor and a creditor to give the creditor a larger portion than what was mortgaged to him just because of the proportion of the rent.

[P 781 C 2]

Rishindra Nath Sarcar and Subodh Chandra Dutta—for Appellant.

Bijoli Bhusan Sanyal — for Respondents.

Judgment.—The facts in short are that many years ago defendant 3 and another borrowed Rs. 100, from the plaintiff and executed a mortgage bond in respect of 12 bighas of the southern portion of the defendants' holding of 15 bighas of land which they held at a rent of Rs. 10-9-3. It was stated in the mortgage bond that the proportionate rent of the portion mortgaged would be Rs. 8-7-0. Many years afterwards the plaintiff sued on the mortgage bond. During the progress of the suit there was an agreement between the parties to compromise the litigation. The terms of the agreement were that the defendants would sell 10 bighas of the land to the plaintiff and mortgage 2 bighas in addition to that. But the defendants failed to carry out the agreement and thereafter the plaintiff got a mortgage decree for sale of the security. The mortgaged land was sold in auction and purchased by the plaintiff. His case is that he could keep possession of only 6 bighas of the land, but the defendants by force dispossessed him from the rest of the land. The plaintiff's claim is not only for 12 bighas as stated in the mortgage decree but for about 18 bighas on the basis that in a recent Cadastral Survey it was found that the defendants' holding consisted not of 15 bighas but of about 25 bighas, and inasmuch as the rent of the mortgaged portion was Rs. 8-7-0, while the rent of the whole portion was Rs. 10-9-3, the plaintiff is entitled to $\frac{4}{5}$ ths of the 25 bighas.

The first Court disallowed the plaintiff's claim for 18 bighas but gave a decree for the 12 bighas as stated in the mortgage bond. In appeal the learned Subordinate Judge has come to the conclusion on the reading of the relevant document that the plaintiff is entitled to $\frac{4}{5}$ ths of the total lands of the defendants as claimed by the plaintiff and has decreed the plaintiff's claim in full. Upon hearing the learned advocates on both sides, it is clear that the principle on which the learned Subordinate Judge has proceeded is entirely unjust and inequitable. In the bond only 12 bighas of land were mortgaged to the plaintiff. Even during the suit the plaintiff agreed to compromise the litigation on receipt of 12 bighas of land. That compromise failed by the negligence of the defendants. Thereafter the greed of the plaintiff increased and he claimed not only 12 bighas but 18 bighas and the only basis of it is that in the mortgage bond it was stated that the proportionate rent of the mortgaged land was Rs. 8-7-0 while the rent of the whole was Rs. 10-9-3. It is not correct as between a debtor and a creditor to give the creditor a larger portion than what was mortgaged to him just because of the proportion of the rent. The plaintiff is liable to pay Rs. 8-7-0 per annum from 12 bighas of land. If the defendants hold from the landlords 25 bighas of land instead of 15 bighas, as was originally settled with them, the question may be fought out between the landlord and his tenants, the defendants. That matter has no concern with the plaintiff who lent his money on the security of 12 bighas of land bearing rent of Rs. 8-7-0 and he is not entitled to get more than that on any account. In the result, the appeal is allowed. The decree of the lower appellate Court is set aside and that of the first Court restored with costs throughout. Leave to appeal under the Letters Patent is refused.

B.D./R.K.

*Appeal allowed.A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 781

EDGLEY, J.

Madan Mohan Das Mohanta Maharaj and another—Appellants.

v.

Jitendra Nath Roy—Respondent.

Appeal No. 303 of 1934, Decided on 24th January 1936, from appellate decree of Addl. Dist. Judge, Jessore, Khulna, D/- 31st July 1933.

(a) Bengal Cess Act (9 of 1880), Ss. 54, 58—Taxation statute—Strict interpretation—Notice under S. 54 must contain all details—Mistake in notice with regards dates and omission with regards specification of amounts constitute illegality—No suit maintainable under S. 58 under such circumstances.

Cess Act is a taxation statute and must be strictly interpreted and having regard to the mandatory nature of the language used in S. 54 read with S. 56, it would appear that unless the notices required by S. 54 have been properly published with all the details specified in S. 54, it is not legal for the holder of the estate to sue for cesses under S. 58 of the Act. Mistake with regard to the date fixed by the Board of Revenue which appears in the notices under S. 54, Cess Act, and the omission to specify the exact amounts payable, constitute not merely an irregularity but an illegality which vitiates the notices. Suit based on such incomplete notice is not maintainable. [P 783 C 1]

(b) Bengal Cess Act (9 of 1880), S. 58—Suit under three years' limitation applicable.

A suit for the recovery of a penal sum under S. 58, Cess Act, is not a suit for the recovery of an arrear of rent and the claim is only an ordinary money claim governed by the rule of three years' limitation: 1929 Pat 331, Foll.

[P 783 C 2]

Sarat Chandra Bose and Narendra Krishna Basu—for Appellants.

Hemendra Chandra Sen—for Respdt.

Judgment.—The defendants are the appellants in this case. The plaintiff in the suit, out of which this appeal arises, sought to recover cesses under S. 58, Cess Act, in respect of certain rent-free lands for the years 1333 to 1336 inclusive. The defendants were the holders as shebais of certain rent-free lands within the plaintiff's touzi No. 132. The plaintiff's case was that there had been a cess re-valuation and after due publication of the requisite notices, he had called upon the defendants to pay the cesses due from them but they had failed to do so. The defendants contended that their holding fell within touzi No. 203 and that they had already paid the cesses due from them to the patnidar under the touzi. It was further contended on their behalf that the plaintiff was not entitled to collect cesses from them as he had not observed the mandatory requirements of the Cess Act.

The learned Munsif dismissed the plaintiff's suit. In doing so he found that there was nothing to establish any connexion between the payments made by the defendants and the lands in respect of which cesses were claimed, but at the same time he held that it had not been proved that there was any publication of the notices required by S. 54, Cess Act. When the matter came before the learned Additional Judge on appeal on 31st July 1933, the lower appellate Court decreed the plaintiff's suit. In this connexion it may be noted that the learned Additional Judge accepted the finding of the Court of first instance with regard to the payments alleged to have been made by the defendants to the patnidar holding touzi No. 203. He held however that the notices required by the law had been duly served and that although the notices required under S. 54, Cess Act, did not strictly comply with certain provisions of that section he was nevertheless of opinion that the defendants should not be allowed to take advantage of this irregularity in order to repudiate their liability to pay the cesses. The first point which has been urged before me by the learned advocate for the appellants is that the lower appellate Court should have held that the defendants had actually paid the cesses due from them for the lands for which the claim was made. With regard to this contention there is a clear finding in the judgment of the lower appellate Court to the effect that there is nothing to connect the receipts filed by the defendants with the lands for which cesses are claimed by the plaintiff. There is a similar finding in the judgment of the Court of first instance and both the lower Courts appear to have based their conclusions on this point on satisfactory evidence. I see no reason for disagreeing with his finding.

The most important point however which has been urged in connexion with this appeal is that having regard to the language of the statute, the plaintiff cannot recover the amount of cesses claimed by him under S. 58, Cess Act, because there has been substantial non-compliance with the provisions of S. 54 of the Act. Admittedly the demand for cesses in this case is based upon a re-valuation and it is clearly provided by S. 54, Cess Act, that, whenever such re-valuation takes effect in any district or part of the district, the holder of the estate or tenure to whom cesses are payable in respect of the lands held free of rent shall cause a notice to be published. It appears from Cl. 3, S. 54 that the purposes for which this notice must be published are twofold: (1) to inform all concerned of the rate which has been fixed for the levy of the cesses and (2) to require the persons concerned to pay the amount of the specified cesses as it falls due. The section goes on to specify certain details which must be mentioned in the notice and item 6 of these details reads as follows:

The dates fixed by the Board of Revenue under S. 57 for the payment of each instalment together with the amount for each instalment.

Admittedly in the case out of which this appeal arises there has been a non-compliance with item 6. The dates fixed by the Board of Revenue under S. 57, Cess Act, are to be found in R. 112 of the Statutory Rules published under the Act. Most of the amounts involved in the case out of which this appeal arises are admittedly less than Rs. 10. This being the case, the date to be mentioned in the notices under S. 54 should have been 12th January whereas the dates actually mentioned in the relevant notices are 1st May and 1st November. Further as remarked by the learned Additional Judge in those cases in which more than one payment is allowed, the amounts payable in each instalment are not mentioned. Obviously the intention of item 6 was that the persons concerned should be informed of the actual dates upon which the cesses fell due and the exact amounts they would have to pay. If this is not done it may be argued that the persons who are liable to pay the cesses may be seriously prejudiced. These persons usually live in remote country villages and it is hardly to be expected that they would be acquainted with the notifications of the Board of Revenue under S. 57, Cess Act, which may be published in the Calcutta Gazette from time to time. It is therefore a matter of some importance that they should know the precise details regarding the payment of the cesses. It seems to me that, if such details are not mentioned in the notices, there is a substantial non-compliance with the provisions of S. 54, Cess Act. Taxation statutes of this nature must be strictly interpreted and having regard to the mandatory nature of the language used in S. 54, Cess Act, read with S. 56 of the same Act, it would appear that unless the notices required by S. 54 have been properly published with all the details specified in S. 54, it is not legal for the holder of the estate to sue for cesses under S. 58 of the Act. I must therefore hold that the mistake with regard to the dates fixed by the Board of Revenue which appears in the notices under S. 54, Cess Act, and the omission to specify the exact amounts payable constitute not merely an irregularity but an illegality which vitiates the notices. In these circumstances it is clear that the plaintiff's case must fail owing to non-compliance on his part with the mandatory provisions of the Cess Act.

The next point urged is that, in any case, the plaintiff is not entitled to sue for cesses for four years as he has done in this case and, in support of this contention, reliance is placed upon a decision of the Patna High Court in 8 Pat 358 (1), where it was held that a suit for the recovery of a penal sum under S. 58, Cess Act, is not a suit for the recovery of an arrear of rent, and that the claim is only an ordinary money claim governed by the rule of three years' limitation. Having regard to the circumstances of the present case I agree that this principle should be applied and that even if it could be held that the plaintiff's claim was maintainable, he would only be entitled to recover cesses for three years. A further point of minor importance has been mentioned to me with reference to the decree of the lower appellate Court. This decree appears to have been passed against defendants 1 and 2 personally but it is admitted on both sides that the intention must have been that the decree should be passed against them in their capacity as shebait. Having regard to the consideration mentioned above with reference to the interpretation of S. 54, Cess Act, this appeal must be allowed. The judgment and the decree of the lower appellate Court are set aside and those of the Court of first instance are restored. The appellants are entitled to get their costs in all the Courts. Having regard to the importance of the main legal point involved in this case, permission is granted to file an appeal under the Letters Patent.

1. Bhuneshwari Kuer v. Gopal Saran Narayan Singh, 1929 Pat 331=118 IO 783=8 Pat 358.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 783

M. C. Ghose, J.

Ekkari Ghose and others—Defendants 1 to 3—Appellants.

v.

Sideshwar Ghose and another—Respondents.

Appeal No. 1459 of 1933, Decided on 9th December 1935, from appellate decree of Sub-Judge, Second Court, Hooghly, D/- 25th March 1933.

Transfer of Property Act (1882), S. 53—Transfer to defeat or delay creditor—Suit to set aside—Representative nature—O. 1, R. 8, Civil P. C., is applicable—Suit if not validly framed relief cannot be granted.

Under S. 53, T. P. Act, a suit instituted by a creditor to avoid a transfer on the ground that it has been made with intent to defeat or delay the creditors of transferor, shall be instituted for the benefit of all the creditors, that is to say, a suit must be instituted according to the provisions of O. 1, R. 8. Where a suit is not instituted according to the law as laid down in S. 53, the plaintiff is not entitled to claim the benefit of S. 53. It would be evidently unjust to give him a decree under S. 53, since he does not make such a case in the plaint and does not give the defendant adequate opportunity to meet his plea: 32 Cal 198 (P C), Ref. [P 784 C 2]

Apurbadhan Mukherjee—for Appellants.

Nanda Gopal Banerjee—for Respondents.

Judgment—This is an appeal by defendants 1 to 3 in a suit for declaration that the lands in suit are saleable and attachable in execution of plaintiff's decree against the judgment-debtor, defendant 4 in the suit. The facts in short are that defendant 4's husband Annanda Prosad Ghose borrowed Rs. 76, from the plaintiff by a promissory note. The plaintiff brought a suit in 1929 on the promissory note against defendant 4 as widow and heir of the said Ananda. The suit was decreed on the 24th August 1929. The plaintiff in execution of the decree attached the lands in suit. The defendants 1 to 3 thereupon preferred a claim alleging that they had purchased the land on the 8th June 1929 and been in possession since the date, that the claim was allowed by the Court. Thereupon, the present suit was instituted. The plaintiff alleged in the plaint that the kobala by which the defendants purchased the lands from defendant 4 was a collusive and a benami document without consideration and was created in order to defraud the plaintiff. The trial Court found on the evidence that the appellants had purchased the lands for good consideration from defendant 4 and they are in possession since the purchase, and the Kobala was not a Benami transaction as alleged by the plaintiff. Thereupon, the trial Court dismissed the suit.

In appeal, the learned Subordinate Judge held that the appellants were not benamidars of defendant 4, but that they had purchased the land for consideration and that they are in possession since the date of their purchase. The Court, however, held that defendant 4 sold the lands to the appellants in order to defraud the plaintiff and defeat his claim in the suit, and therefore, though the kobala was for consideration it is hit by S. 53, T. P. Act, and the Court thereupon, passed a decree that if within the time stated, defendants 1 to 3 paid the decretal amount to the plaintiff, the suit would stand dismissed but in default of such payment the plaintiff would be entitled to attach and sell the plaint lands for realization of the decree. In appeal it is urged that the case of the plaintiff was that the document was a benami transaction without consideration and on that basis the parties went to trial. The case under S. 53, T. P. Act, was not made out in the plaint. Even under S. 53, as it stood before the amendment of 1929 it was held that a suit must be properly constituted under S. 53. If it was properly constituted there might be a defence to such a proceeding. See the case in 32 I A 1 (1). The amended S. 53, which came into force in 1929 applies to the present suit which was instituted in January 1931. It is laid down that a suit instituted by a creditor to avoid a transfer on the ground that it has been made with intent to defeat or delay the creditor of transferor, shall be instituted for the benefit of all the creditors, that is to say, a suit must be instituted according to the provisions of O. 1, R. 8. The present suit was not instituted according to the law as laid down in S. 53.

The plaintiff, therefore, is not entitled to claim the benefit of S. 53. It would be evidently unjust to give him a decree under S. 53, since he did not make such a case in the plaint and did not give the defendant adequate opportunity to meet his plea. It was urged by the learned advocate for the respondent that the plaintiff might be allowed to amend the plaint so as to comply with the provisions of O. 1 R. 8; if such amendment be allowed now it would be beyond time of limitation. The appeal is allowed, the decree of the Court of appeal below is set aside and that of the Court of first instance restored with costs.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

1. Chutterput Singh v. Maharaj Bahadur, (1905) 32 Cal 198=32 I A 1=8 Sar 713 (P O).

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 784

S. K. GHOSE AND EDGLEY, JJ.

Rash Behari Nandi and others—Plaintiffs—Petitioners.

v.

Sm. Hafeza Khatun Chaudhurani and others—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 313 of 1935, Decided on 7th February 1936, from order of Addl. Dist. Judge, Tippera, D/- 7th May 1934.

Court-fees Act (1870), S. 12—Suit for declaring revenue sale is illegal—Possession to auction-purchaser not delivered at time of filing of suit—Consequential relief not prayed—Fixed court-fee paid on basis of declaratory nature of suit—Objection to court-fee paid on basis of declaratory nature of suit—Decision of trial Court reversed by first appellate Court on appeal—On further appeal held, decision of lower appellate Court was wrong because order of trial Court was not appealable.

A suit was brought for a declaration that certain revenue sale was illegal and ultra vires. As no possession was delivered to the auction-purchaser when the suit was filed, no consequential relief was asked and fixed court-fee was paid on the basis of the purely declaratory nature of relief. The defence was that the suit was not maintainable till ad valorem court-fee was paid on a valuation of ten times the revenue, because subsequent to the suit possession was delivered to the auction-purchaser. The trial Court held that court-fee already paid was sufficient. First appellate Court reversed the order of the trial Court:

Held: the lower appellate Court had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal as the order of the trial Court was not appealable: 23 Bom 486; 16 I C 963; 1924 Cal 731 and 1919 Pat 270, Disting. [P 785 C 1, 2]

Abinash Ch. Ghose—for Petitioners.

Jatindra Mohan Ghose—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—The petitioners in this rule brought a Suit No. 52 of 1933 for a declaration that a certain revenue sale is illegal and ultra vires and not binding on the petitioners. The opposite parties being the defendants raised a defence that the fixed court-fee of Rs. 20 paid on the basis that the suit is purely of a declaratory character was insufficient and that the plaintiffs could not maintain the suit without paying ad valorem court-fees. Thereupon the trial Court took up the question of court-fees as a preliminary issue and by its order dated 20th March 1934 decided that the amount of court-fees paid by the petitioners was sufficient. Against that order an appeal was taken by the opposite parties defendants to the District Judge and the latter by his judgment, dated 7th May 1934 disagreeing with the decision of the trial Court held that the plaintiffs were bound to pay ad valorem court-fees at ten times the revenue payable for the estate in question. This judgment was passed ex parte. The petitioners having failed to get that judgment set aside moved this Court in revision and obtained this rule.

It is contended for the petitioners that the District Judge exercised his jurisdiction wrongly because the order of the trial Court holding that the case as framed did not call for ad valorem court-fees was not appealable. On the face of it, it was not, but it is contended for the respondents-opposite parties in this Court that an appeal will lie from the decision of a Court where the decision necessarily involves a decision of the category or class under which a suit falls, even though it should incidentally decide the question of valuation. It is pointed out that the trial Court took the view that the defaulting proprietors had not been dispossessed at the time of the suit and therefore they were not bound to ask for delivery of possession and that on the other hand the appellate Court took the view that, as possession had been delivered to the auction-purchasers subsequently, the suit was not solely for a declaration. No doubt it has been held that an appeal will lie where a question involves a decision of the class under which a suit falls in spite of the bar under S. 12, Court-fees Act: see for instance the cases in 23 Bom 486 (1), 16 C L J 375 (2), 28 C W N 683 (3) and 49 I C 442 (4). In all these cases the matter came up properly before the superior Court either on appeal or in revision. In the present case the matter would have to be appealable under the provisions of the Code before it would be said that the matter could be argued in appeal before the lower appellate Court. As to this contention it is only said for the respondents-opposite parties that the order of the trial Court dated 20th March 1934 must be taken to be a decree. We are not prepared to accept this contention. In that view no appeal lay to the District Judge and so the order of the District Judge, dated 7th May 1934 cannot be sustained. The rule must be made absolute. The order complained against must be set aside. We make no order as to costs.

B.D./R.K.

Rule made absolute.

1. Dada Bhau Kittur v. Nagesh Ram Chandra, (1899) 23 Bom 486.
2. Sundar Mal Marwari v. Jessie Caroline Murray, (1912) 16 I C 963=16 C L J 375.
3. Taraprosanna Changdar v. Nrisinha Murari Pal, 1924 Cal 731=81 I C 763=28 C W N 683=51 Cal 216.
4. Chandramani Koer v. Basdeo Narain Singh, 1919 Pat 270=49 I C 442=4 P L J 57.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 786

R. C. MITTER, J.

Maharaja Sashi Kanta Acharjya Bahadur—Plaintiff—Petitioner.

v.

Nasirabad Loan Office, Co., Ltd. and others—Defendants—Opposite Parties.

Civil Rule No. 1375 of 1935, Decided on 7th February 1936, from order of Munsiff, 1st Court Sadar, Mymensingh, D/- 8th August 1935.

(a) Revision—Powers of High Court—Appeal from order of lower Court, maintainable—Revision from such order can be maintained.

Revisional power of the High Court under S. 115 is a bar only when an appeal lies to High Court. The fact that an appeal lay to the lower appellate Court will not take away the powers of the High Court to revise the order of the trial Court. The language of S. 115 is that the High Court may call for the record of any case which has been decided by any Court subordinate to such High Court in which no appeal lies thereto. [P 787 C 1]

(b) Civil P. C. (1908), S. 9—Rights of civil nature—Enforceability in civil Courts by means of suits—Jurisdiction must be specifically taken away—Landlord's right to recover transfer fee under S. 26-E, Ben. Ten. Act—Bengal Tenancy Act not providing remedy to recover—Civil suit is maintainable.

A civil Court must entertain a suit of a civil nature unless the jurisdiction of the Court is either expressly or impliedly barred; this is the provision of S. 9, Civil P. C., which indicates that for the purpose of enforcing a civil right the normal and the ordinary method is by instituting a suit. The jurisdiction of the civil Court conferred by S. 9 may be taken away either expressly or impliedly by taking away the remedy, or the legislature may prevent institution of a suit to enforce a civil right by prescribing another mode of obtaining assistance of a Court, as for instance by an application. But unless the jurisdiction of a civil Court is taken away altogether, or for enforcement of a right another method is provided for namely, by means of a petition, a suit will be the proper remedy to get relief in respect of a civil right. [P 787 C 1, 2]

There is no indication in the Bengal Tenancy Act anywhere whether the remedy of a landlord to recover transfer fee under S. 26-E, Ben. Ten. Act, is to be sought by means of a suit or by means of an application. If the landlord is not paid his legitimate dues, he has a right to seek assistance of the Court to recover by means of a civil suit. Obi jus ibi remedium is a well settled principle of law: 1933 Cal 24 and 283, Disting.; 1932 Cal 135, Dissent.

[P 787 C 2; P 788 C 1]

Nagendra Nath Bose—for Petitioner.

Annada Charan Karkoon—for Opposite Parties.

Order.—This Rule has been obtained by the landlord whose suit to recover the balance of the transfer fee due to him under the provisions of S. 26-E, Ben. Ten. Act, has been dismissed by the learned Munsiff at Mymensingh on the ground that no suit lay. The position is this: Opposite party No. 1, The Nasirabad Loan Office, Co., Ltd., obtained a mortgage decree against opposite parties Nos. 2 and 3. In execution of that decree the mortgaged property was sold, but the mortgage decree not being fully satisfied, opposite party No. 1 obtained a decree for the balance under the provisions of O. 34, R. 6, Civil P. C. In execution of this decree they put up the holding which is the subject matter of controversy, to sale. In the sale proclamation the holding was described as an ordinary occupancy holding. At the sale held by the Court opposite party No. 1 purchased the holding for Rs. 325 and deposited a sum of Rs. 65 in the executing Court, the sum being 20 per cent. of the purchase price. The sale was confirmed. The rent of this holding is Rs. 57-13-9 and therefore under the provisions of S. 26-E the landlord is entitled to either five times the annual rent or 20 per cent. of the purchase price whichever sum is greater. Five times the annual rent is Rs. 289-4-9 and therefore in accordance with the terms of that section the landlord is entitled to that sum in any case and not Rs. 65. The landlord accordingly instituted a suit to recover the balance of the money. The learned Munsiff has held that the value of the holding is Rs. 1,500 and on that basis the dues of the landlord will be Rs. 300. Mr. Bose who appears for the landlord says that his client will be satisfied if he is given a decree on the basis that he is entitled to five times the annual rent. In this Rule he prays for a decree for Rs. 224-4-9.

The question in this Rule therefore is whether the learned Munsiff was right in holding that no suit lay, but the proper remedy was by means of an application. In support of his view the learned Munsiff relies upon two decisions of this Court in 36 C W N 847 (1) and 36 C W N 924 (2). I shall indicate hereafter that the two aforesaid decisions have no bearing on the present question. In support of the Munsiff's view Mr. Karkoon has relied upon

1. Srinath Bose v. Debendra Nath Barari, 1933 Cal 24=141 I C 627=36 C W N 847.
2. Aghore Chandra Jalui v. Rajnandini Debi, 1933 Cal 283=141 I C 842=36 C W N 924=60 Cal 289=58 C L J 484.

two cases of this Court, namely, the case in 35 C W N 974 (3) and an unreported decision of a Division Bench in Civil Rule No. 1598 of 1934 (4) decided on 4th April 1935. I shall deal with the question on the merits later on but it is necessary first of all to decide a preliminary objection which has been raised by Mr. Karkoon. The suit was instituted in the Court of the Munsiff at Mymensingh in his ordinary file. The Munsiff had no powers under Small Cause Courts Act to try suits of the value of this suit. The decree which he passed was a decree against which an appeal could have been preferred by the petitioner to the lower appellate Court. Instead of filing an appeal an application has been moved in this Court under S. 115, Civil P. C. There cannot be any doubt that this case falls within the provisions of S. 115, Cl. (c) if not under Cl. (b) of S. 115, because the Munsiff by an erroneous decision on a point of law has refused to exercise jurisdiction which is vested in law. This is the principle which has been laid down by Rankin, J., as he then was, in 46 Cal 962 (5).

The question therefore is whether this Court can exercise its revisional jurisdiction in these circumstances. In my judgment the revisional power under S. 115 is a bar only when an appeal lies to this Court. The fact that an appeal lay to the lower appellate Court will not take away the powers of this Court to revise the order of the Munsiff. The language of S. 115 is that the High Court may call for the record of any case which has been decided by any Court subordinate to such High Court in which no appeal lies thereto. I accordingly overrule the preliminary objection on the view which I have indicated above, which is supported not only by the decisions of this High Court but also of the other High Courts to which it is not necessary to refer in detail.

Regarding the merits of the case the principle is clear. A civil Court must entertain a suit of a civil nature unless the jurisdiction of the Court is either expressly or impliedly barred. This is the provision of S. 9, Civil P. C., which indicates that for the purpose of enforcing a civil right the normal and the ordinary method is by instituting a suit. The jurisdiction of the Court conferred by S. 9 may be taken away either expressly or impliedly altogether by taking away the remedy, or the legislature may prevent institution of a suit to enforce a civil right by prescribing another mode of obtaining assistance of a Court, as for instance by an application. But unless the jurisdiction of a civil Court is taken away altogether, or for enforcement of a right another method is provided for, namely, by means of a petition, a suit will be the proper remedy to get relief in respect of a civil right. This in my view is the principle from which the question ought to be approached and in the light of these principles I shall examine the cases which have been referred to in the Munsiff's judgment as also the two cases which have been referred to by Mr. Karkoon. The cases referred to in 36 C W N 847 (1) and 924 (2) relate to proceedings coming within the provisions of S. 36-J, Ben. Ten. Act. That section deals with only three classes of cases, namely where an occupancy holding is sold on the footing: (a) That it is a permanent tenure; (b) that it is a raiyati at a fixed rate or (c) that it is a lakhiraj. In these cases the landlord is expressly given the right to institute proceedings to recover the balance that will be due to him as landlord's transfer fee. The position in the above two cases in 36 C W N 847 (1) and 924 (2) was that although the holding was an ordinary occupancy holding, the transfer was made on the footing and with the false description that it was either a permanent tenure or a raiyati at a fixed rate. The landlord made an application to recover the balance but the transferee's reply was that the remedy was in a suit. S. 26-J does not say that the right is to be enforced by a suit or by an application, but S. 188 says that an application has to be made for enforcing the right given under S. 26-J. Therefore, in those cases which come under S. 26 J, it can be said with a good amount of reasoning that the legislature by providing for an application for enforcement of that right, has taken away the right to enforce it by a suit.

With regard to the case that I have before me there is no indication in the Bengal Tenancy Act anywhere whether

3. Sukh Chand Halder v. Jaineswar Mandal, 1932 Cal 135=135 I C 872=35 C W N 974.

4. Padma Lochan v. Barada Kanta, Civil Rule No. 1598 of 1934, Decided on 4th April 1935.

5. Hindley v. Joy Narayan Marwari, 1920 Cal 305=54 I C 439=46 Cal 962=24 C W N 288.

the remedy is to be sought by means of a suit or by means of an application. Mr. Karkoon says that where an ordinary occupancy holding is transferred but the transfer fee deposited is less than what is mentioned in Ss. 26-C and 26-E the landlord is without a remedy to recover the money. He says that he cannot recover money in any civil Court and he cites by way of analogy the case in 35 C W N 974 (3). That was a case in which the proper fee due to the landlord under S. 48-H had not been deposited and a suit was instituted to recover the legitimate dues of the landlord. This Court held that the landlord had no right to recover the same, and that all he can say is that the sublease was not binding on him. This is a judgment of a Judge sitting singly, and this decision accordingly is not binding on me. I cannot accept that view. If the landlord is not paid his legitimate dues certainly he has a right to seek assistance of the Court to recover. Ubi jus ibi remedium is a well settled principle of law. The question then is what is the proper form of procedure to enforce the right which is in controversy in this case. Inasmuch as the legislature has not indicated, either expressly or by necessary implication, that right of the landlord is to be enforced by an application, the power of the Court to entertain a suit under the provisions of S. 9 in my judgment remains unaffected. In this view of the matter I do hold that the proper remedy is a suit.

So far as the decision in civil Rule No. 1598 of 1934 (4) is concerned, the matter is not decided therein in a binding way. There was a gift of an occupancy holding on the footing that it was an ordinary occupancy holding, but the recital was that the donees were related to the donor by blood within three degrees and the landlord's fee was not therefore paid. The landlord filed an application and said that the recital was false and he successfully established his case and the Court decreed landlord's fee. The donees moved this Court and it was contended that an application would not lie and the remedy of the landlord was a suit. The learned Judges of this Court said that they were doubtful as to what would be the proper form of procedure. Then they said that there was no merit in the rule at all and discharged the rule on that ground, although in one passage of the judgment they indicated that they were rather inclined to think that an application would be the proper form of procedure. Having regard to the form of that judgment I think that the matter has not been decided in a binding way. I accordingly set aside the judgment of the learned Munsif and in lieu thereof pass a decree in favour of the petitioner before me to the extent of Rs. 224-4-9. As this case is a case of first impression and the procedure is settled by me for the first time, I make no order for costs of this rule.

B.D./R.K.

Order accordingly.

* * A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 788

HENDERSON AND R. C. MITTER, JJ.

Dr. Ranga Lal Sen—Appellant.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeals Nos. 582 and 664 of 1936, Decided on 28th September 1936.

* * (a) Gambling—Common gaming house—Necessary requisites are keeping of instruments of gaming and keeper of such place must have some gain—Slips of paper for recording bets are instruments of gaming—Gain should be otherwise than as result of betting—Instances, when person is said to make gain—Mere chance of winning is not gain.

To make a house, room, place, etc., a common gaming house two things are necessary namely: (1) instruments of gaming must be kept or used there, and (2) such instruments must be kept or used for the purpose of gain of the person owning, occupying, using or keeping such house, room, place, etc. To satisfy the first element, slips of paper used for the purpose of facilitating betting operations, e. g., papers on which bets had been recorded are instruments of gaming: 1935 Cal 466, Foll. [P 791 C 2; P 792 C 1]

To satisfy the second element, the intended gain must result to the person owning, occupying, using or keeping the place otherwise than as a result of betting by him. The chance of profit or the actual profit made by the successful gambler is not such gain as it is contemplated. To take instances: an entrance fee charged by a person owning, occupying or using the place would be gain within the meaning of the section. A commission charged by such a person from persons winning wagers as a result of betting in that place is such gain. A person running a proprietary club where he allows gaming or betting would be the keeper of a common gaming house, whether he himself takes part in betting or not. Such a person makes profit or intends to make profit from his establishment which profit is not the direct result of betting in which he himself may have taken part. The mere chance of winning wagers is not gain. [P 792 C 1]

(b) Calcutta Police Act (4 of 1866), Ss. 47, 46—For application of S. 47 there should be proper warrant under S. 46—Section to be strictly interpreted and complied with—Otherwise conviction will be bad—(Per Henderson, J.).

Per Henderson, J.—In order to determine whether S. 47 of the Act applies it is necessary to see whether there was a proper search within the provisions of S. 46. Unless the provisions of these sections are strictly interpreted and complied with, there can be no doubt that persons will be improperly convicted. [P 790 C 1]

(c) Calcutta Police Act (4 of 1866), S. 47—Search warrant—Search warrant proper in form—Recitals in warrant as to information on oath, enquiry and reason to believe that place is common gaming house—Presumption arises under S. 114, Evidence Act.

Where a warrant under S. 47 is issued by a competent authority and it recites the facts that an information on oath had been received and that an inquiry had been made, and then states that that authority had reason to believe that the place to be searched is a common gaming house, the presumption attaching to the regularity of official acts would be attracted and it would not be incumbent on the Crown to lead evidence on the point indicated above: 1926 Cal 966, Expl. and Disting. [P 792 C 2]

(d) Calcutta Police Act (4 of 1866), S. 47—Presumption under—Section creates special rule of evidence—Meaning of section explained.

The expression "It shall be evidence, until the contrary is made to appear" in S. 47 does not create a presumption in the technical sense in which that term is used in the Indian Evidence Act. In that case the Magistrate would be bound to convict unless the defence gives rebutting evidence of a negative character. But in nearly every case, it would be difficult if not impossible for them to do so. The natural meaning of the words is that the finding of certain things shall be evidence that the place is a common gaming house. Packs of cards may be found in hundreds of places which are not common gaming houses and it would be transparently absurd to say that the finding of a pack of card in a house would be evidence that that house is a common gaming house. This section was intended to create a special rule of evidence, because in view of the preliminary provisions there is not this absurdity in a case when there had been a proper search under S. 46. S. 47 only raises a presumption of fact, and so only a rebuttable presumption. If a search warrant is issued under S. 46 and if on a search made on the basis of a warrant instruments of gaming are found at the place or on the person gaming, this fact would be evidence of the further fact that the place is a common gaming house. The effect of such evidence may be nullified by other evidence on the record.

[P 790 C 2; P 791 C 1 P 792 C 1, 2]

Monindra Nath Mukherji—for Appellant.

D. N. Bhattacharjee—for the Crown.

Henderson, J.—These two appeals have been heard together. They originally came on for hearing before myself sitting alone. But in view of the importance of some of the points raised, I thought it desirable that they should be heard by a Division Bench. The appellant in Appeal No. 582 is one Dr. Ranga Lal Sen. He has been convicted of offences punishable under Ss. 44 and 45, Calcutta Police Act. The other appellant is one Mr. Jacob who was convicted of an offence punishable under S. 45 of that Act. The facts are extremely simple. The alleged common gaming house is situated in a consulting room at the Eastern Drug Stores, 17 Park Street. The appellant Sen is one of the Doctors who may be consulted by patients at that place. P. W. 1 Sergeant Clarke, came with a search warrant from the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Mr. Duckfield, and searched the place on the 29th June last. His evidence is that he found both the appellants sitting at a table. Sen was filling in a betting slip and a sum of Rs. 11-8-0 was found on the table. Other betting slips were also found in a drawer. Now we have no doubt at all from this evidence that at the time of the search Jacob was making a bet with Sen. He never even suggested that he had gone there for the purpose of a professional consultation. Sen alleged that the money found on the table had been sent to him on account of his fees for professional attendance by a man named Herbert and he called the defence witness Bannerjee, who is one of the partners of the Eastern Drug Stores, to prove it. Bannerjee says that the money was sent in a letter from Herbert about ten minutes before the search. There is no reason why Bannerjee should know what the contents of the letter were and no reason why the money should be found on the table. Herbert has not been examined. We have no doubt that this explanation is false and that the money had been put on the table by Jacob in connection with his betting.

Now it is quite clear that this evidence in itself would be quite insufficient to show that this consulting room was a common gaming house. The prosecution in fact relied on the provisions of S. 47, Calcutta Police Act, and contend that the finding of the betting slips is evidence that the consulting room is used as a common gaming house and that Sen and Jacob were there for the purposes of gaming. Mr. Bhattacharjee contended on behalf of the Crown that, altogether apart from this section, if Jacob was betting with Sen, Sen was presumably hoping to make a profit, and this is sufficient to establish that the room in question is a common gaming house. We are certainly not prepared to assent to that proposition; on such a construction the elaborate definition contained in S. 3 of the Act would be wholly unnecessary. The question has been considered in two cases to which our attention has been drawn. In 53 Cal 718 (1), S. 47 did not apply. It was however found that the evidence itself afforded sufficient proof on the point. In that case betting was carried on in the premises and fees were realised by the persons who were in charge of the place. The question was also elaborately considered by Costello, J. in 39 C W N 1114 (2). We respectfully agree with what is stated there. In our opinion the definition of a common gaming house implies that, altogether apart from money which may be made or lost at the actual gaming, some sort of profit must be made by the person referred to in the definition. In the present case, if persons merely bet with Sen, that would not be sufficient to make the place a common gaming house; on the other hand, if admission fees are levied or if Sen pays money to Bannerjee that he may allow the room to be used as a place for carrying on the betting, the terms of the definition show that the place is a common gaming house.

In order to determine whether S. 47 of the Act applies it is necessary to see whether there was a proper search within the provisions of S. 46. Unless the provisions of these sections are strictly interpreted and complied with, there can be no doubt that persons will be improperly convicted. Now in the present case the prosecution produced the warrant issued by Mr. Duckfield, Deputy Commissioner. It purports to be in full conformity with the requirements of S. 46 and the question which remains for consideration is whether the Court may presume that the necessary formalities were complied with. In 53 Cal 718 (1) cited above the learned Judges refused to draw any presumption. But in that case from the warrant itself, on its very face, it did not appear that the Deputy Commissioner had any reason to believe that the premises searched were a common gaming house and on that ground it was held that a presumption ought not to be drawn. The last two sentences in the judgment of C. C. Ghose, J., might support an inference that such a presumption ought never to be drawn. But when the passage is carefully read it is clear not merely that the main part of the discussion was directed to the defect in the warrant but that in this sentence the learned Judge mentions "other cases of this description."

He was dealing with a case in which the warrant was, on the very face of it, defective and we do not think his judgment was really intended to lay down that no presumption may be drawn in a case such as the present where the warrant is in proper form. In our opinion, in a case such as the present, the Magistrate is entitled to draw a presumption in accordance with the provisions of S. 114, Evidence Act, Illus. (e). Of course it is for the Magistrate to say whether he will draw this presumption or not. In the present case there is also the evidence of Sergeant Clarke that a sworn information was taken by the Deputy Commissioner. That being so, in our opinion the matter ends. It is not open to the Court to go behind the warrant and look into the information in order to see what inference might be based upon it. The Deputy Commissioner is not really concerned with the eventual proof of the case. He is merely deciding whether there ought to be a search of certain premises or not and provided that it is upon information upon oath, that he makes an enquiry, if he thinks it necessary, and has reason to believe that the place is used as a common gaming house, the search warrant is legal and S. 47 automatically comes into play. Upon proof of such facts the legality of the warrant cannot be called in question. The next question for consideration is what is the exact meaning of the words "it shall be evidence, until the contrary is made to appear" in S. 47.

It is of course useful to refer to this provision as a presumption in the loose way in which this term is sometimes employed; for example, it is often used in this way in connection with questions about the permanency of a certain tenure although the term "inference" might perhaps be a more happy expression. But we are not prepared to say that this section creates a presumption in the technical sense in which that term is used in the Evidence Act. In that case the Magistrate would be bound to convict unless the defence gives rebutting evidence of a negative character. But in nearly every case it would be difficult if not impossible for them to do so. The natural meaning of the words is that the finding of certain things shall be evidence that the place is a common gaming house. Now packs of cards may be found in hundreds of places which are not common gaming houses and it would be transparently absurd to say that the finding of a pack of cards in a house would be evidence that that house is a common gaming house. In our opinion this Section was intended to create a special rule of evidence, because in view of the preliminary provisions there is not this absurdity in a case when there had been a proper search under S. 46. The only difficulty in the way of this interpretation is the use of the words "until the contrary is made to appear" which might suggest that the intention was to create a presumption in the technical sense. Now supposing these words were not there, it might have been contended that the intention of the Section was not to indicate a presumption, but to make the finding of such articles conclusive proof. The draftsman may have inserted these words to prevent such a contention being put forward.

1. Walvekar v. Emperor, 1926 Cal 966=96 I C 264=27 Cr L J 920=53 Cal 718=30 C W N 713.

2. M. A. Adams v. Emperor, 1935 Cal 466=1935 Cr C 858=158 I C 1095=39 C W N 1114=62 Cal 1093.

The law with regard to presumption in the Evidence Act is well known and if the intention was to create such a presumption we see no reason to suppose that the ordinary language would not have been employed. We have reached the conclusion that this Section provides that something which would not otherwise be evidence is made evidence and it is for the Magistrate to take it into consideration. He may, if he likes, convict upon it or in certain cases he may say that it is not sufficient. If we were dealing with this case in revision, that would be sufficient to dispose of it. But we are, in fact, hearing appeals and we must reach a conclusion upon the evidence ourselves. Turning to the facts of the present case the learned Magistrate has come to a finding that Bannerjee was entirely ignorant of the fact that betting went on in this consulting room. Now if this is a correct finding, it is very unlikely that the room is used as a common gaming house. There is no direct evidence to show that it is and the investigation stopped short at the search. We see no reason to suppose that if a fuller enquiry had been made, evidence of a positive character might not have been forthcoming. In view of this finding of the learned Magistrate we are not prepared to say that the case is one of more than suspicion and the appellants ought to be acquitted. We therefore allow these appeals, set aside the convictions and sentences and direct that the fines, if paid, be refunded. The order confiscating the money found on the table must also be set aside.

R. C. Mitter, J.—The appellant Dr. Ranga Lal Sen has been convicted of offences punishable under Ss. 44 and 45, Police Act (4 of 1866) and sentenced to pay fines of Rs. 200 and Rs. 100 respectively, and in default of payment to suffer rigorous imprisonment for one month under each of the aforesaid sections. The appellant, Jacob, has been convicted of an offence punishable under S. 45 and sentenced to pay a fine of Rs. 100 and in default of payment to suffer one month's rigorous imprisonment. In pursuance of a warrant issued by the Deputy Commissioner of Police, Detective, Department, Calcutta, the Eastern Drug Stores at No. 17, Park Street, was searched on 27th June last and in the consultation room of the said premises the two appellants were found seated. A writing pad (Ex. 2) and some slips of torn up paper were seized, as also a sum of Rs. 11-8-0. I have no doubt that Ex. 2 is a piece of paper which contains the record of bets on horse races, and that both the appellants were at the time betting in that room. The appellants, however, cannot be convicted under those sections simply because they were betting there. The convictions can be maintained only if the place where they were betting was a common gaming house. To confine to the case of Ranga Lal Sen, who had the use of that room, he being a doctor attached to the said drug shop, he can be convicted under S. 44 if he kept or used the same as a common gaming house. Both the appellants can be convicted under S. 45 only if they are gaming or betting in a common gaming house.

Common gaming house is defined in S. 3. To make a house, room, place, etc., a common gaming house two things are necessary, namely: (i) instruments of gaming must be kept or used there, and (ii) such instruments must be kept or used for the purpose of gain of the person owning, occupying, using or keeping such house, room, place, etc. In 39 C W N 1114 (2) slips of paper used for the purpose of facilitating betting operations, e. g., papers on which bets had been recorded, were held to be instruments of gaming. In the case before us the first element is satisfied by reason of Ex. 2 being found in that room.

To satisfy the second element, it is my view that the intended gain must result to the person owning, occupying, using or keeping the place otherwise than as a result of betting by him. The chance of profit of, or the actual profit made by the successful gambler, is not such gain as the section contemplates. To take instances an entrance fee charged by a person owning, occupying or using the place would be gain within the meaning of the section. A commission charged by such a person from persons winning wagers as a result of betting in that place is such gain. A person running a proprietary club where he allows gaming or betting would be the keeper of a common gaming house, whether he himself takes part in betting or not. Such a person makes profit or intends to make profit from his establishment which profit is not the direct result of betting in which he himself may have taken part. In my judgment the chance of winning wagers is not the gain which the section contemplates. In this case there is no evidence that Dr. Sen or anybody else intended to gain anything in that sense. The facts establish only this, that Dr. Sen and Jacob were betting on horse races in the consultation room. The conviction of both the appellants cannot stand on the evidence on the record unless the Crown can get and retain the benefit of S. 47 of the Act. In my judgment that section only raises a presumption of fact, and so a rebuttable presumption. If a search warrant is issued under S. 46 and if on a search made on the basis of the said warrant instruments of gaming are found at the place or on the person of men found there at the time of the search, the fact that such instrument of gaming are found would be evidence of the further fact that the place is a common gaming house. The effect of such evidence may be nullified by other evidence on the record. That I understand is the effect of S. 47.

For taking the benefit of S. 47 the Crown, in my judgment, has only to show that the warrant in pursuance of which the place was searched was a legal warrant, that is, one which was issued in terms of S. 46. The Crown has to show, if at all, by evidence, that the warrant issued by the authority mentioned in that section was issued after that authority had received information on oath and after such enquiry which it deemed necessary. The warrant must state, as it usually does, that the authority on information on oath and on materials found on further enquiry (if any) had reason to believe that the place intended to be searched is a common gaming house. I cannot accept the contention of the learned advocate for the appellants that the Crown is to lead further evidence touching upon the nature of the information on oath received by the authority issuing the warrant or upon the nature of enquiry made by it. All that the Crown is required, if at all, is to prove that an information on oath was in fact made, and where the warrant recites an enquiry, that such an enquiry was in fact made. As the Court has no right to require proof by the Crown of any other fact, it follows a fortiori that it has no power to embark upon an enquiry as to whether the authority issuing the warrant could on the materials before it, e.g., the information on oath and the facts coming out of the enquiry, if any made, have reasonably come to believe that the place intended to be searched is a common gaming house.

This seems to be to me a fundamental principle. I am, however, inclined to the view that where such a warrant issued by a competent authority recites the fact that an information on oath had been received and that an enquiry had been made, and then states that that authority had reason to believe that the place sought to be searched is a common gaming house the presumption attaching to the regularity of official acts would be attracted and it would not be incumbent on the Crown to lead evidence on the point indicated above. I would not, however, decide the point definitely as it is not necessary in this case and as it would involve a careful consideration of the observations made by one of the learned Judges in 53 Cal 718 (1). Whatever evidence the warrant (Ex. 1) affords on the point as to whether the Eastern Drug Stores was a common gaming house or not, the entire evidence on the record leads me to the conclusion that the prosecution has failed to establish that it was a common gaming house. Surendra Nath Banerjee, one of the proprietors of the said drug shop, was examined as a witness. He attends his shop regularly. He said that he did not know that betting goes on or was going on in his shop. He has been believed by the learned Magistrate. His evidence belies the case that his shop or any part of it was used for the purpose of "gain" by Dr. Sen or anybody else in the sense in which that word has to be understood in connection with the definition of common gaming house. I accordingly agree with my learned brother that the convictions on both the appellants cannot be sustained. I agree with the order which my learned brother has made.

B.D./D.S.

Convictions set aside.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 793

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Naimuddin Biswas and others—Appellants.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 430 of 1936, Decided on 12th August 1936.

(a) Jury—Misdirection—Charge to jury that they must be satisfied as to place of occurrence—There is no misdirection.

Where a Judge tells a jury that, whatever view the jury might take of the defence version, they cannot convict the accused unless they are satisfied as to the truth of the prosecution version as to the place of occurrence, there is no misdirection causing any prejudice to the accused. [P 794 C 1, 2]

(b) Jury—Misdirection—Part of dying declaration found untrue—Rest of it corroborated by evidence—Judge while charging jury telling them to consider the value of declaration in view of misstatement—Held, there was no misdirection.

In a dying declaration the deceased made one exculpatory statement to the effect that he did not strike anyone from the accused's party. But there was evidence to show that this statement was false. The rest of the dying declaration was amply corroborated by a mass of evidence. While charging the jury the judge said: "You are to consider if in view of this single misstatement the entire version of the dying declaration should be disbelieved or not." It was contended for the accused that that amounted to misdirection:

Held: that no sensible jury would refuse to accept the remainder of the dying declaration corroborated by a mass of evidence merely because the deceased told one lie in his own interest. The Judge would have been guilty of misdirection if he had told the jury that if they thought this exculpatory statement to be untrue they could not believe the rest of the statement. No direction of this kind nor any provision of the law of this character would, in fact, ever prevent a jury from believing it, if they saw fit to do so; so there was no misdirection: 1925 Cal 876, Disapproved; 1933 Bom 479, Approved. [P 795 C 1, 2]

N. K. Basu and Binayak Nath Banerjee—for Appellants.

Khundkar and Bireswar Chatterjee—for the Crown.

Henderson, J.—The four appellants have been convicted of offences punishable under S. 326, I. P. C., and sentenced to various terms of imprisonment. The first two were convicted in connexion with an assault upon one Kalachand which eventually resulted in his death. The other two were convicted in connexion with an assault upon two persons named Meru and Palan. Various points have been taken by Mr. Basu on behalf of the appellants two of which deal with the general aspect of the case and the remainder of which relate to objections against specific portions of the charge delivered by the learned Assistant Sessions Judge. The first point taken is that the learned Judge ought to have proceeded with the case on the footing that the previous trial had finally delivered certain matters. What happened was that the appellants and various other persons were put on their trial not only on the present charges, but on charges under S. 148 and S. 304/149, I. P. C. The result was that the four appellants were convicted under S. 326, but the jury brought in a verdict of not guilty against the other persons and on the other charges. The appellants then appealed to the learned Sessions Judge who ordered a retrial.

The contention of Mr. Basu is that previous verdict really amounts to this: that the occurrence took place in accordance with the defence theory and the only thing which the learned Judge ought to have put before the jury was that they should consider whether the appellants had exceeded the right of private defence. There is of course no foundation for this argument. All that the previous trial amounts to is that the appellants have all been acquitted of rioting. For all we know to the contrary, the jury may not have been satisfied that there were as many as five persons in the attacking party. The learned Judge was clearly right in putting the case before the jury in the way he did. Then it was said that the defence case with regard to the right of private defence was not properly put before the jury at all. We have reached the conclusion that it was really put in an unduly favourable light, because the learned Judge left it open to the jury to find that the occurrence took place in accordance with the defence version although there is no evidence in support of that conclusion. Briefly the two versions were as follows :

The complainant Irad Mandal held certain land under one Srimanta Kundu as a Bargadar. On the day of the occurrence he and some relations and labourers were clearing jungle from a portion of his land with a view to preparing it for sowing Kalai seed. They were then attacked by the appellants and others headed by the Naib of the Putia Raj and assaulted with a view to depriving the complainant of the possession of the land. The defence made a case that the occurrence did not take place on Irad's land at all, but at a place called Bangalpara where the accused party were attacked by the complainant's party and a scuffle took place resulting in injuries caused to persons on both sides. Now if this defence version be true there must have been evidence available to establish it. But the defence did not examine a single witness. Nothing was elicited in the cross-examination of any of the prosecution witnesses to prove that the occurrence took place in Bangalpara. There was, therefore, no evidence at all which would have justified the jury in accepting this view. Nor was there any evidence upon which any sort of claim to the right of private defence could be founded. The learned Judge should, therefore, have directed the jury that there was no evidence at all to support any right of private defence. It is perfectly true that some of the evidence given by certain police officers might support an inference that the occurrence did not take place on Irad's land. The learned Judge was very careful to tell the jury that, whatever view they might take of the defence version, they could not convict the accused unless they were satisfied as to the truth of the prosecution version as to the place of occurrence. There was clearly no misdirection causing any prejudice to the appellants in this aspect of the case.

A part of the evidence was a statement recorded by a Sub-Deputy Magistrate and made by the accused Naimuddin. Now this evidence has been attacked in two ways. In the first place it is said that the learned Judge did not make it sufficiently clear to the jury that this evidence was inconsistent with that of the eye-witnesses. Now, there was another witness, a doctor, who also deposed about a statement made by the deceased. So far as this statement goes, the jury would have had to consider what view they would take of this evidence with regard to the discrepancies between it and the rest of the evidence. But when we turn to the dying declaration recorded by the Sub-Deputy Magistrate we find that there is absolutely nothing in it which is inconsistent with the rest of the case. Then it is said that there was a very serious misdirection with regard to the use which the jury were at liberty to make of this evidence. What the learned Judge said was this:

There is, however, one misstatement in the said declaration that the deceased Kalachand who was struck did not strike anybody as it is in evidence from P. Ws. that Kali struck his assailant with the Fala with which he was struck after he was struck and you are to consider if in view of the said single misstatement the entire version of the dying declaration should be disbelieved or not.

Mr. Basu's contention is that the proper direction would be that if the jury were satisfied that the statement with regard to the alleged striking of one of the assailants by the deceased was untrue, they were by law forbidden to believe the rest of the dying declaration. In support of this argument, reliance was placed upon a single sentence in a judgment delivered by our learned brother Mukerji, J., in 52 Cal 987 (1). The passage is at p. 1003 and is in these terms:

As regards a dying declaration, to accept a portion and reject the rest is entirely out of the question; there must be absolute guarantee of accuracy of the record and the truth of the entire statement before it can be acted upon.

In my opinion, the learned Judge did not intend to lay down any proposition of law at all. He was dealing with a reference under S. 307, Criminal P. C., and he had to form his own opinion about the facts of the case. A part of the evidence upon which the prosecution relied was a dying declaration said to have been made by the deceased and a latter part of the judgment from which this extract has been made deals with the question whether the dying declaration was correctly recorded and whether in view of the surrounding circumstances of the case it was a reliable piece of evidence. Indeed, at the bottom of the page already referred to the learned Judge says this:

1. Emperor v. Premananda Dutt, 1925 Cal 876
= 88 I C 1000 = 52 Cal 987 = 26 Cr L J 1256
= 29 O W N 738.

It becomes almost always a question of fact as to whether it should be relied upon or not.

In my opinion, that last sentence succinctly sets forth the true position. It seems to me that it is absolutely impossible to say that the tribunal responsible for coming to the decision upon the facts is not allowed to take into consideration what is admittedly part of the evidence and which it actually believes to be true. We have not been shown any authority for this proposition. Of course any sensible tribunal after reaching the conclusion that a part of the statement has been deliberately concocted, would decline to believe the rest of it without corroboration and, no doubt, in such cases the jury ought to be suitably cautioned. Again if certain statements are untrue owing to failure of memory or lack of powers of observation and so on, it would be ridiculous to say that because a man made a mistake with regard to one statement of fact the jury was debarred from accepting the rest. In the present case what happened was this. The deceased made an exculpatory statement with regard to an assault said to have been committed by him upon one of the accused party. Truthful witnesses sometime leave the path of truth in order to make exculpatory statements about themselves and I do not think any sensible jury would refuse to accept the remainder of the dying declaration in the present case corroborated as it is by a mass of evidence merely because the deceased told a lie in his own interest. In our opinion the learned Judge would have been guilty of misdirection if he had told the jury that, if they thought this exculpatory statement to be untrue they could not believe the rest of the statement. I need hardly say that no direction of this kind nor any provision of the law of this character would, in fact, ever prevent a jury from believing it, if they saw fit to do so.

The other points taken on behalf of the appellants are of minor importance: for example it was said that the learned Judge was wrong in directing the jury with regard to the evidence of some police officers. He was certainly entitled to give the jury his view of the matter and in addition to that he supported his view with very cogent reasons. A complaint, however, is made that his view is not supported by the record. The jury of course took their own view of the matter. We have ourselves been taken through these depositions by Mr. Basu and as recorded they are so unsatisfactory that it is really very difficult to know what these police officers meant. Finally, it was contended that the learned Judge led the jury to suppose that the first information report was actually substantive evidence with regard to the occurrence. The learned Judge never says so in plain terms; nor after perusing the whole of the charge do we think there is any legitimate reason to suppose that he intended the jury to believe so. All the points taken on behalf of the appellants fail and the appeal is, accordingly, dismissed. The appellants must surrender to their bail and serve out the remainder of the sentences imposed upon them.

Cunliffe, J.—I am of the same opinion and agree to the order proposed by my learned brother. An interesting contention during the course of the argument before us was put forward by Mr. N. K. Basu. As I understood his proposition it amounted to this: that because there was a mistake or untrue statement to be found in a declaration which was admitted in evidence under S. 32, sub-s. (1), Evidence Act, that whole declaration ought to have been withdrawn from the consideration of jury because any inaccuracy or untruth in a declaration of that character vitiated the whole of the contents contained therein. As my learned brother has pointed out, the authority for this proposition relied upon by the learned advocate for the appellants is the case in 52 Cal 987 (1). The argument rests upon a dictum of M. N. Mukerji, J., which is quite short and runs as follows. It is at p. 1003 of the report:

In my opinion a dying declaration stands upon a widely different footing from the testimony of a witness given in Court. In the case of the latter it is permissible and at times necessary under certain circumstances to accept a part which is unimpeachable and reject that which is obviously untrue, though to found a criminal conviction on such appraisal of evidence is very often unsafe. As regards a dying declaration, to accept a portion and reject the rest is entirely out of the question; there must be absolute guarantee of the accuracy of the record and the truth of the entire statement before it can be acted upon.

The learned Judge then went on to point out that the rule in India under the Evidence Act with regard to statement concerning death made by persons before their death in trials which are concerned with an investigation into the responsibility of the death is much wider than the rule with regard to dying declarations according to the principles of the English Law of Evidence. Sub-s. (1), S. 32, Evidence Act, does not confine these statements to that class of statement which is made by a man who is apprehensive and is just about to die. Therefore of course the statements which are admitted according to the Indian Law of Evidence lose a great deal of the sanctity which is supposed to invest the dying declaration according to the English Law of Evidence.

In this particular statement which is a very short one there is nothing in the statement itself which indicates that the dead man thought that he was going to die. It seems to me therefore to be somewhat dangerous from the point of view of the appraisal of the value of the evidence to put the statement which we are considering here upon a different footing from any other piece of evidence not as my learned brother pointed out of very great value. In my opinion the true principle upon which this kind of evidence should be recorded ought to be firstly, does it strictly come within the provisions of S. 32, sub-s. (1)? If it does come within those provisions from the point of view of admissibility, in my view the statement should be looked upon from the point of view of its own value and nothing else. I see no reason to introduce an artificial rule such as is suggested by the learned Judge in the judgment to which I have referred. I think it is almost certain that declarations of this kind ought to be corroborated but this is about as far as we can go. There is a leading case which is often quoted in the English Law of Evidence, the case in (1892) 17 Cox C C 503 (2), which is alluded to in Mukerji, J.'s judgment. In that case the learned Judge refused to admit a dying declaration for consideration because on examining it he found that instead of it being a straightforward account of what the dying man had said without any additions, it turned out to be a series of questions and answers and a good deal more question apparently than answer. In these circumstances the Judge said that he would not allow such a document to go to the jury because he apprehended that in the mental state which a dying man might be supposed to be in, it was very dangerous for anyone in authority to put leading questions to him and thereby possibly to direct his enfeebled mental powers towards uncertain questions in such a way that the authorities interested in the prosecution might possibly gain a benefit.

We were told by the learned Deputy Legal Remembrancer that as far as the case in 52 Cal 987 (1) is concerned this dictum has already been doubted by the Bombay High Court. I have had an opportunity of reading the judgment in the case to which he referred, namely, the case in 58 Bom 31 (3) and I am fortified in the view that I take that the value of the evidence amounting to a dying declaration cannot be whittled down in the manner in which Mukerji, J. suggests by the judgment of the Chief Justice of the Bombay High Court which, if I may say so, is characterised by an expression of good sense and good law. For these reasons and for the reasons given by my learned brother, I agree that this appeal must be dismissed.

B.D./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

2. R. v. Mitchell, (1892) 17 Cox C C 503.

3. Emperor v. Akbarali Karimbhai, 1933 Bom 479=1933 Cr C 1533=146 I C 548=35 Cr L J 109=58 Bom 31=35 Bom L R 1021.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 796

LORT-WILLIAMS AND JACK, JJ.

Istahar Khondkar and others—Appellants.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Appeal No. 486 of 1934, Decided on 25th February 1935.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 236, 237—Doubt contemplated by Ss 236 and 237 must arise at time of charge—To decide whether such doubt exists Judge must know at that time what facts can be proved—"Can be proved" means facts about which there is evidence in hands of prosecution—Doubt within meaning of S. 236 exists where evidence is circumstantial and decision depends upon question whether Court will draw possible inference—Evidence direct, and such that if believed would establish but one offence—Question whether jury would believe evidence or not is irrelevant for deciding applicability of Ss. 236 and 237—Such doubt is not contemplated by Ss. 236 and 237.

The doubt contemplated by Ss. 236 and 237 must arise at the time of the charge. In order to decide whether such a doubt exists as will attract the provisions of Ss. 236 and 237 the Judge must know at that time what facts 'can be proved.' The expression 'can be proved' means facts about which there is evidence in the hands of the prosecution. What the evidence amounts to is disclosed in the depositions taken by the committing Magistrate, and in any additional evidence which may be in the hands of the prosecution, and of which notice has been given. This matter cannot be affected by considerations whether the prosecution will be able to produce this evidence at the trial, or whether the Court or jury will believe it if and when produced. [P 799 C 1]

But where the evidence is direct and not circumstantial and would if believed by the jury, establish but one offence, the question whether the jury would believe the evidence or not is irrelevant upon the point whether Ss. 236 and 237 are applicable or not. Such a doubt is not contemplated by Ss. 236 and 237: 1931 Cal 414, Ref., 1925 P C 130 and 1923 Cal 596, Doubled. [P 799 C 1]

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 237—Applicability—S. 237 is controlled by S. 236 and applies only to cases falling under S. 236—Case not falling under S. 236—Accused cannot be convicted under S. 237 of offence with which he was not charged.

Section 237 applies only to cases which fall within the provisions of S. 236 and is controlled by it. Where a case does not fall under S. 236, the accused cannot be convicted under S. 237 of an offence with which he was not charged. [P 799 C 2]

(c) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 236 and 237—Doubt whether Court will make one and which of presumptions under S. 114, Illus. (a), Evidence Act, is not such doubt as is contemplated by S. 236—Such presumption is not one of fact which can be proved—It can only arise when some fact or facts cannot be proved.

A doubt whether the Court will make one and which of the presumptions under S. 114, Illus. (a), Evidence Act, is not such a doubt as is contemplated by S. 236. The question whether the Court will make presumption or which presumption, is irrelevant on the question of the applicability of Ss. 236 and 237. Such a presumption is not one of fact which can be proved. On the contrary it can arise only when some fact or facts cannot be proved. In appropriate circumstances, such facts, though they cannot be proved may be presumed. And in such a case there would be no doubt about which offence the facts which could be proved would constitute. Alone they could not be enough to constitute any offence. But if the Court decided to presume the existence of other facts, then the proved facts and the presumed facts together would constitute an offence. The doubt, therefore, arises about whether Court will or will not presume a fact, and which fact, not about which offence the facts which can be proved will constitute, within the meaning of Ss. 236 and 237: 1931 Cal 414, Commented upon. [P 800 C 1]

(d) Criminal Trial—Trial by Jury—Charge to jury—Misdirection—Accused charged under S. 395, I. P. C.—Facts proved that dacoity was committed by accused and that they were in possession of stolen goods—No charge framed under S. 412, I. P. C.—Judge directing jury that if they thought that there was not sufficient evidence of dacoity and that there was evidence that accused were in possession of stolen property, knowing it to have been stolen, they might find accused guilty under S. 412 although not charged under it—Accused convicted under S. 412, I. P. C.—Conviction held bad—Direction to jury both upon S. 412, I. P. C. and S. 114, Illus. (a), Evidence Act, held contrary to law—Verdict held inferentially to be one of acquittal on charge of S. 395, I. P. C., and that there being no appeal under S. 417 accused could not be retried.

Where the accused are charged under S. 395, I. P. C., with the offence of dacoity and the facts that are proved are that a dacoity was committed by the accused and that some of the stolen goods were found later in possession of each of the accused, the proper direction to be given to the jury upon S. 114, Illus. (a), Evidence Act, should be, that they may, and not they must, in the absence of any reasonable explanation, find the accused guilty, and that, if an explanation is given, which may be true, it is for the jury to say on the whole evidence whether the accused are guilty or not; if the jury think that the explanation may reasonably be true, though they are not convinced that it is true, accused are entitled to an acquittal. [P 800 C 2]

Where the Judge in such a case directed the jury that if they thought that there was not sufficient evidence of dacoity and that there was sufficient evidence that the accused dishonestly received or retained stolen property knowing it had been transferred by commission of dacoity, they might find the accused guilty under S. 412, I. P. C., although they were not charged under that section and the accused were ultimately convicted under S. 412:

Held: that the Judge's direction upon both S. 412, I. P. C., and S. 114, Evidence Act, was contrary to law and the verdict of jury was erroneous owing to those misdirections. That although the jury gave no verdict on the charge of dacoity, inferentially their verdict was one of acquittal upon that charge and that as there was no appeal under S. 417, Criminal P. C., against that verdict, the accused could not be tried again for that offence. [P 800 C 2]

(e) Evidence Act (1872), S. 114, Illus. (a)—Court cannot under S. 114, Illus. (a) presume knowledge of dacoity, required for conviction under S. 412, I. P. C.

The provisions of S. 114, Illus. (a) do not entitle the Court to presume the knowledge of dacoity or dacoits which is required for a conviction under S. 412, I. P. C. [P 800 C2]

(f) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 236—Doubt must arise from nature of the act or series of acts—Doubt would arise because of inferences which might be drawn from the acts.

The facts which can be proved within the meaning of S. 236 are only ascertained after the completion of the trial and the charge cannot therefore be made to depend on them. In the terms of S. 236, the doubt must arise from the nature of the act or series of acts and the doubt would arise because of the inferences which might be drawn from those acts. [P 801 C 1]

(g) Criminal P. C. (1898), Ss. 236, 237—S. 237 only applies to cases referred to in S. 236 and does not refer to cases in which it is doubtful which offence will be proved—Accused charged for one offence—He cannot be convicted under S. 237 of different offence.

In interpreting the Illustration of S. 237, it must be remembered that it only applies to the class of cases referred to in S. 236 and therefore it does not refer to cases in which it is merely doubtful which offence will be proved and S. 237 is no authority for holding that in such cases on a charge of one offence a man can be convicted of a different offence. Under S. 236 the doubt must arise from the nature of the facts or inferences which can be drawn from those facts: 1925 P C 130, Dissent. [P 801 C 1]

Satindra Nath Mukherji and Priyanath Bhattacharjee—for Appellants.

Amiruddin Ahmed—for the Crown.

Lort-Williams, J.—In this case six men were charged with dacoity namely, Istahar Khondkar, Maijuddi, Azahar Ali, Adam Ali, Sonatan Patikar and Umacharan Patikar and one Jamini Kanta Nath, under S. 412, I. P. C. Two of them were acquitted, namely, Sonatan and Jamini, all the rest the jury found guilty of offences under S. 412. These five have appealed from jail. The learned Judge appears to have directed the Jury that if they thought that there was not sufficient evidence of dacoity, but that there was evidence that the accused dishonestly received or retained stolen property knowing it to have been transferred by the commission of dacoity or received from dacoits, they might find them guilty under S. 412, although no charge under this section had been made against any one of them, with the exception of Jamini. Of the five accused who have appealed from jail one, Umacharan Patikar, has been represented by Mr. Satindra Nath Mukerji. The rest are unrepresented. The point raised by the learned advocate on behalf of Uma Charan is, that the jury were not entitled to convict him of an offence under S. 412, because no charge was made against him under that section: 26 Cr L J 1361 (1). This argument, of course, would apply to the rest of the appellants. Mr. Amiruddin Ahmed, who appears for the Crown, has argued that what the jury did was permissible under the provisions of Ss. 236 and 237, Criminal P. C. that is to say, he has argued that this was a case in which the facts which could be proved were not in dispute or doubt; what was in doubt was the kind of offence which those facts would constitute, within the meaning of those sections: 35 C W N 945 (2), and the cases therein discussed.

Now the facts were that a dacoity was committed, that none of the dacoits was recognised, but that some of the stolen goods were found about five to six weeks afterwards, in the possession of each of the accused. There was some evidence to show that each of the accused had taken steps to conceal the stolen goods. Two made confessions which implicated in the dacoity all of the accused except Jamini. The learned Advocate for the Crown has argued that this case comes within the ambit of S. 236, because there was no doubt about the facts which could be proved, and the only doubt which arose was what offence would be constituted by those facts, that is to say what inference would the jury draw from the facts. Would they consider that they were sufficient proof of an offence under S. 395, or of an offence under S. 412? He went further and suggested that though the facts were not in doubt, there was a doubt whether the jury would make one of the presumptions which they could make under S. 114, Illus. (a), Evidence Act, and which of those presumptions. Thus he argued that in cases to which that illustration applies, though the facts may not be in doubt, yet there will always be a doubt whether the Court will make such a presumption, and which presumption, the making of which is permissive and optional. and therefore Ss. 236 and 237 apply to all such cases. In my opinion, both these arguments are unsound. The facts which could be proved were that a dacoity had been committed by all the accused except Jamini, and that some of the stolen goods had been found, five to six weeks afterwards and partly concealed, in the possession of each of the accused. These facts could be proved by the confessions of Maijuddi and Azaharali and the evidence about the finding of the stolen goods. Whether the jury would believe the confessions and the rest of the evidence or not was and is irrelevant upon the point whether Ss. 236 and 237 were applicable or not. Such a doubt is not contemplated by the sections. There was no doubt about the admissibility of the confessions. They had been recorded in the prescribed way by a Magistrate, were declared therein to have been made voluntarily, and prima facie would be admissible in evidence. There was no doubt about what offence the facts to which I have referred would constitute. They would constitute, against all except Jamini, the offence of dacoity.

1. Achpal v. Emperor, 1926 Lah 192=89 I C 449=26 Cr L J 1361.

2. Mehr Sheikh v. Emperor, 1931 Cal 414=1931 Or O 510=132 I C 254=32 Cr L J 892=59 Cal 8=35 C W N 945.

Thus the evidence of dacoity was direct and not circumstantial, and if this evidence were believed by the jury to be true, the only possible inference which could be drawn from the proved facts would be that the accused, other than Jamini, were guilty of dacoity. The learned Advocate for the Crown has failed to appreciate the distinction between the doubt whether the jury would believe the evidence and the inferences which it was possible for them to draw, assuming that they did believe it. The doubt contemplated by the sections must arise at the time of charge. In order to decide whether such a doubt exists as will attract the provisions therein contained, the Judge must know at that time what facts "can be proved." Therefore this expression must mean facts about which there is evidence in the hand of the prosecution. What this evidence amounts to is disclosed in the depositions taken by the committing Magistrate and in any additional evidence which may be in the hands of the prosecution and of which notice has been given. This matter cannot be affected by considerations whether the prosecution will be able to produce this evidence at the trial, or whether the Court or jury will believe it if and when produced. With great respect for the decision of their Lordships of the Judicial Committee in 30 C W N 581 (3), I think that that decision will require to be reconsidered by them upon some future occasion. The facts which could be proved in that case against each of the accused clearly constitute both the offence of murder and an offence under S. 201, I. P. C., and, in my opinion, no doubt arose within the meaning of S. 236, Criminal P. C.

It is true that the illustration of S. 237, Criminal P. C., seems, at first sight, to support the different view which their Lordships adopted, but S. 237 applies only to cases which fall within the provisions of S. 236 and is controlled by it. And the illustration is not really inconsistent with the view which I have taken, because the decision in the case illustrated might depend upon which of several possible inferences would be drawn from the facts proved. Where the evidence is circumstantial, and the decision depends upon the question whether the Court will draw a possible inference, or which of several possible inferences, there exists a doubt within the meaning of S. 236 : 35 C W N 945 (2). The decision in 50 Cal 564 (4) was a case in point. In that case ornaments and money to the value of Rs. 18,000 were stolen from the room of the complainant. The accused occupied a room in the same flat. She was charged with theft under S. 380, I. P. C., and convicted of an offence under S. 54-A, Calcutta Police Act, with which she had not been charged. The evidence showed that she had obtained possession of the key and padlock of the door which separated her room from the room of the complainant. The rest of the evidence was matter of suspicion only, namely, that the accused made large payments to her creditors on the day of the theft and on the two following days, and later, pledged ornaments, and attempted to change notes for Rs. 1,000 and gave a goldsmith a large quantity of broken ornaments to be melted down. The identity of neither ornaments nor money was established. From the evidence about the key and padlock, a possible inference was that the accused stole the property. If this inference were not drawn by the

3. Begu v. Emperor, 1925 P O 130=88 I O 3=26 Cr L J 1059=52 I A 191=80 C W N 581=6 Lah 226 (P O).

4. Tulsi Tolini v. Emperor, 1923 Cal 596=72 I O 372=24 Cr L J 372=50 Cal 564.

Court, the whole of the evidence taken together, might afford reason to believe that they were stolen within the meaning of S. 54-A. And such was the decision, though I doubt whether such an inference was possible upon those facts, or could properly have been drawn.

The second argument of the learned advocate is still more unsound. The question whether the Court will make one and which of the presumptions under S. 114, Illus. (a), Evidence Act, is irrelevant upon a consideration of the provisions of Ss. 236 and 237, Criminal P. C. Such a presumption is not one of the facts which "can be proved." On the contrary it can arise only when some fact or facts cannot be proved. In appropriate circumstances, such facts, though they cannot be proved may be presumed. And in such a case there would be no doubt about which offence the facts which could be proved would constitute. Alone they would not be enough to constitute any offence. But if the Court decided to presume the existence of other facts, then the proved facts and the presumed facts together would constitute an offence. The doubt therefore arises about whether the Court will or will not presume a fact, and which fact, not about which offence the facts which can be proved will constitute within the meaning of Ss. 236 and 237. Upon this point there is a paragraph in the report of the judgment in 35 C W N 945 (2), supra, to which I was a party, which seems to be inaccurate and misleading. Therein it is stated at p. 947 that :

It may be that, even after evidence, the inference will be that the accused has committed one offence or another. For instance the Court may presume that a man, who is in possession of stolen goods soon after the theft and does not account for his possession, is either the thief or has received the goods knowing them to be stolen. In such a case the doubt may be taken up to the judgment stage and the Court shall pass judgment in the alternative under S. 367, Criminal P. C.

This must be a misprint for S. 237. The paragraph as reported seems to confuse inference with presumption, and to suggest that a doubt whether the Court will make presumption, or which presumption, may be such a doubt as is contemplated by S. 236. I did not intend to, and do not subscribe to any such proposition, as I have already stated. The direction of the learned Judge upon S. 114, Illus. (a), was neither correct nor complete. The direction should have been in accordance with the statement made by Lord Reading, L. C. J. in 11 Cr App R 45 (5), with which Bray, Avory, Lush and Atkin, JJ. agreed. It was as follows :

Where the prisoner is charged with receiving recently stolen property, when the prosecution has proved the possession by the prisoner, and that the goods had been recently stolen, the jury should be told that they may, not that they must, in the absence of any reasonable explanation, find the prisoner guilty. But if an explanation is given which may be true, it is for the jury to say on the whole evidence whether the accused is guilty or not ; that is to say, if the jury think that the explanation may reasonably be true, though they are not convinced that it is true, the prisoner is entitled to an acquittal, because the Crown has not discharged the onus of proof imposed upon it of satisfying the jury beyond reasonable doubt of the prisoner's guilt. That onus never changes, it always rests on the prosecution. That is the law ; the Court is not pronouncing new law, but is merely restating it, and it is hoped that this re-statement may be of assistance to those who preside at the trial of such cases.

The result is that in my opinion the learned Judge's direction upon both S. 412, I. P. C. and S. 114, Evidence Act, was contrary to law, and the verdict of the jury was erroneous owing to these misdirections. Although the jury gave no specific verdict on the charge of dacoity, inferentially their verdict was one of acquittal upon that charge and as there is no appeal against that verdict under S. 417, Criminal P. C., the appellants cannot be tried again for that offence.

The provisions of S. 114, Illus. (a), Evidence Act, do not entitle the Court to presume the knowledge of dacoity or dacoits which is required for a conviction under S. 412, and the only evidence of such knowledge is contained in the retracted confessions, which were rejected by the jury. The evidence, however, relating to the concealment of the stolen goods is sufficient to prove guilty knowledge, and the circumstances were such as to justify us in making the presumption that the appellants, other than Umacharan, received those goods knowing them to be stolen. The evidence against Umacharan, apart from one of the retracted confessions, is very slight, and in his case we allow the appeal, and set aside the conviction and sentence and acquit him. Instead of sending the cases of the other appellants back for re-trial, we alter the finding to one of conviction under S. 411, I. P. C., and in view of the fact that each of the appellants was in custody for seven months prior to his conviction, we reduce the sentence upon each of them to 1 year's rigorous imprisonment.

Jack, J.—I agree. The confusion which has arisen about the interpretation of S. 236, I. P. C., is due to the way in which it is worded. What is really meant seems to be:

If a single act or series of acts is of such a nature that it is doubtful which of several offences has been committed if the facts as alleged by the prosecution are established, the accused may be charged with the commission of all or any of such offences.

The facts which can be proved are only ascertained after the completion of the trial and therefore the charge cannot be made to depend on them; moreover in the terms of the section the doubt must arise from the nature of the act or series of acts, and the doubt would arise because of the inferences which might be drawn from those acts. In interpreting the illustration to S. 237, Criminal P. C., it must be remembered that it only applies to the class of cases referred to in S. 236, and therefore it does not refer to cases in which it is merely doubtful which offence will be proved, and S. 237, Criminal P. C., is no authority for holding that, in such cases, on a charge of one offence a man can be convicted of a different offence. With great respect to Lord Haldane it would appear difficult to reconcile S. 236, Criminal P. C., with his statement in the case referred to by my learned brother: 30 C W N 581 (3):

The illustration makes the meaning of the words plain. A man may be convicted of an offence though there has been no charge in respect of it, if the evidence is such as to establish a charge that might have been made.

This interpretation would make the doubt depend merely on the nature of the evidence whereas under S. 236, Criminal P. C., the doubt must arise from the nature of the facts or the inferences which can be drawn from these facts. If the doubt only depended on the evidence S. 237 would apply to every case. In the present case if the facts as alleged by the prosecution are established the accused were clearly guilty of dacoity and not of dishonestly receiving property stolen in a dacoity; therefore they cannot be convicted of the latter offence on a charge of dacoity. The accused ought to have been charged with dishonestly receiving stolen property in the alternative, but since they have not been prejudiced by failure to frame this charge, and since the verdict of the jury clearly shows that they were guilty of this offence, there is no need to send back the case for retrial. The jury found them guilty under S. 412, I. P. C., instead of S. 411 because of the misdirection of the learned Judge where he said:

1936 C/101 & 102

If the jury believe that there is not evidence to hold they committed dacoity but that they hold that they dishonestly received or retained stolen property knowing it to be such, they may find them guilty under S. 412, I. P. C.

The stolen property was not found with the accused until 6 weeks after the dacoity, and apart from the discarded confessions there is no evidence that they knew it was stolen in the dacoity, a factor which was necessary to bring the offence under S. 412, I. P. C.

R.M./R.K. Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 801

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Chhoteram Sarup Sha — Accused — Petitioner.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Criminal Revn. No. 680 of 1936, Decided on 17th August 1936.

Penal Code (1860), S. 199—Insolvency petition containing false statements—Such statements do not constitute evidence by themselves—No offence under S. 199.

The statements in a petition of insolvency are very analogous to statements made in ordinary civil pleadings—statements which are verified by law on the part of the person who places them on the record. But they certainly do not constitute evidence which is bound to be accepted by the Court. A petition in insolvency unbacked or uncorroborated by other evidence would not be accepted by the Court against the interests of any other person who was concerned in the question of the petitioner's insolvency.

In an insolvency petition, a petitioner made a false statement to the effect that he had never been an insolvent before. This was proved to be untrue and hence he was prosecuted under S. 199. The question to be decided was whether this statement contained in the insolvency petition came within the ambit of the expression that it was a statement 'bound or authorised by law to be received as evidence.'

Held: no offence under S. 199 was committed. [P 802 C 1]

S. K. Sen, Hiralal Ganguli and Sudhir Chandra Choudhuri—for Petitioner.

D. N. Bhattacharjee and Bireswar Chatterjee—for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—This Rule raises a short point of law on its Advocate High Court

Jammu & Kashmir

Srinagar.

tioner was convicted under S. 199, I. P. C., for making a false statement. S. 199 is a provision of the Code which deals with a very specialised form of perjury. This section which is not very often used is, in the following terms:

Whoever in any declaration made or subscribed by him, which declaration any Court of justice, or any public servant or other person, is bound or authorised by law to receive as evidence of any fact, makes any statement which is false, and which he either knows or believes to be false or does not believe to be true, touching any point material to the object for which the declaration is made or used, shall be punished in the same manner as if he gave false evidence.

The fact was that the petitioner put in a petition in insolvency and in his petition he made a false statement to the effect that he had never been an insolvent before. This was proved to be untrue and hence this prosecution. The question to be decided is whether this statement contained in the insolvency petition which was made in the district under the Provincial Insolvency Act comes within the ambit of the expression that it was a statement "bound or authorised by law to be received as evidence." In my opinion, it does not. The statements in a petition of insolvency are very analogous to statements made in ordinary civil pleadings—statements which are verified by law on the part of the person who places them on the record. But they certainly do not constitute evidence which is bound to be accepted by the Court. I doubt whether they are evidence in any sense of the word, except, possibly, in the form of admissions against the person who makes them. Certainly, a petition in insolvency unbacked or uncorroborated by other evidence would not be accepted by the Court against the interests of any other person who was concerned in the question of the petitioner's insolvency. There are decisions upon this question; but in my view, they turn on their own facts and it is not necessary to cite them. The rule, accordingly, is made absolute on the basis that I have indicated. The conviction and sentence passed upon the petitioner are set aside and we direct that the accused be set at liberty forthwith.

Henderson, J.—I agree. The decision of this Rule rests on the interpretation of the words "to receive as evidence of any fact" in S. 199, I. P. C. The prosecution was based on a statement made by the petitioner in a verified petition to an Insolvency Court to the effect that he had never filed any other application in insolvency. It is abundantly clear that that petition could not be used as evidence to prove that in fact he had not filed such a petition. It might be used for the purpose of contradicting his own evidence on oath; but certainly it is not evidence per se of any fact with regard to the insolvency. On behalf of the Crown, Mr. Bhattacharjee sought to support the conviction not upon the ground that his petition could be received as evidence in the ordinary sense of the term but upon the ground that it might be described as evidence in a certain special sense. His argument was to the effect that, without this statement, the petitioner would have been unable to induce the learned District Judge presiding over the Insolvency Court to take any steps with regard to his petition. For this argument Mr. Bhattacharjee relied on the definition of "Evidence" in the Evidence Act. In my opinion, that definition is really against him.

B.D./R.K.

Rule made absolute.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 802

GUHA AND NASIM ALI, JJ.

Sm. Matimala Debi and another—Judgment-debtors—Appellants.

v.

Surendra Nath Mudi—Decree-holder—Respondent.

Appeal No. 215 of 1936, Decided on 21st August 1936, against order of Sub-Judge, 1st Court, Hooghly, D/- 16th March 1936.

Civil P. C. (1908), S. 60, Proviso 1, Cl. (m)—Testator granting estate to his widow for her lifetime and then to his daughter absolutely—Daughter dying during lifetime of widow leaving her husband as heir—Interest of husband in property is not mere expectancy of succession and is not exempt from attachment and sale.

Where a testator after making specific bequests grants the residual estate to his widow for her lifetime, and then to his daughter absolutely, and the daughter dies during the lifetime of the widow, leaving her husband as her sole heir, the interest of the husband in the property is not a mere expectancy of succession and is not exempt from attachment and sale under S. 60, Proviso 1, Cl. (m), in execution of a decree obtained against the widow and the husband. The right to the property vests absolutely in the daughter after the testator's death and though a life interest is bequeathed to the widow, the interest of the daughter is not mere possibility but a vested remainder. So long as the daughter is alive her heir, i. e., the husband, has only an expectancy of succession to the vested remainder, but after the death it devolves on him by inheritance. The fact that the husband's right depends upon a contingency, namely the death of the widow, makes no difference, for a contingent interest is something different from a mere possibility of succession: In re Parsons, Stockley v. Parsons, (1890) 45 Ch D 51 and 1930 P C 17, Ref.

[P 803 C 2]

Atul Chandra Gupta and Phanindra Kumar Sanyal—for Appellants.

Radha Benod Pal and Narendra Nath Choudhury—for Respondent.

Nasim Ali, J.—This is an appeal by judgment-debtors against an order of the Subordinate Judge of Howrah, dated 16th March 1936, rejecting their objections to the attachment and sale of certain properties in an execution proceeding. One Jyotish Chandra Banerji was owner of these properties. He died having made his last will and testament, on 9th September 1917. By the said Will, after making specific bequests, the residual estate was granted to his wife for life, then to his daughter for life, then to her husband for life, and then to certain persons absolutely. By a codicil dated 5th May 1918, the residual estate was bequeathed by the testator to his daughter absolutely. The testator left surviving him his widow, Motimala Devi appellant 1, his daughter Anila Bala Devi and her husband Mrigendra Nath Mukerji, appellant 2. Probate of the Will was granted in due course. Thereafter, the daughter of the testator died intestate leaving her husband, appellant 2, as her sole heir. The respondent in this Court has attached these properties in execution of a decree obtained by him against the widow and the son-in-law of the testator. The latter objected to the attachment and sale of these properties on the ground that they were not liable to attachment. In view of the provisions contained in S. 60, proviso (1), Cl. (m), Civil P. C., the learned Subordinate Judge has overruled this objection. The judgment-debtors appeal to this Court. At the time of the hearing of this appeal, Mr. Gupta appearing for the appellants did not press the objection of appellant 1 to the sale of her life interest in the property in question. The whole argument of the learned advocate was confined to the question whether the interest of appellant 2 in the properties in question was liable to attachment and sale in execution of the decree against him. His contention is that although the right of the daughter was a vested right in terms of the Will, the right of her legal representative after her death, is only an expectancy of succession so long as the widow of the testator was alive and was consequently not liable to attachment. An expectancy of succession is a mere possibility and is not an interest or even a contingent title:

It is indisputable in law that no one can have any estate or interest, at law or in equity, contingent or other, in the property of a living person, to which he hopes to succeed, as heir at law or next of kin of such living person. During the life of such person no one can have more than a spes successionis, an expectation or hope of succeeding to his property: (1890) 45 Ch D 51 (1) at p. 55.

The right to the properties in question vested absolutely on the daughter on the testator's death, and though a life interest was bequeathed to the widow, her interest was not a mere possibility but a vested remainder, which was an interest granted out of the original estate. So long as the daughter was alive, her heir had only an expectancy of succession to this vested remainder. After her death, it devolved on Mrigendra, appellant 2, by inheritance. The interest of appellant 2 therefore is not a mere expectancy of succession. It is argued by Mr. Gupta that Mrigendra's right depends on a contingency, namely the death of the widow during his lifetime. But a contingent interest is something quite different from a mere possibility of a like nature of an heir apparent succeeding to the estate or the chance of a relation obtaining a legacy and also something quite different from a mere right to sue. It is a well ascertained form of property . . . in respect of which it is quite possible to raise money and to dispose of it in any way that the beneficiary chooses: 57 I A 10 (2) at p. 18.

The learned Subordinate Judge was therefore right in rejecting the objection of appellant 2 to the attachment and sale of the properties in question. The appeal is therefore dismissed with costs. The hearing fee in this Court is assessed at two gold mohurs.

Guha, J.—I agree.

R.M./R.K.

Appeal dismissed.

1. In re Parsons, Stockley v. Parsons, (1890) 45 Ch D 51=59 L J Ch 666=62 L T 929=38 W R 712.
2. Ma Yai v. Official Assignee, 1930 P C 17=121 I O 225=57 I A 10=8 Rang 8 (P C).

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 804

NASIM ALI AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Sm. Charusila Dassi—Plaintiff—Applt.

v.

Abhilas Bauri and others—Respds.

Appeals Nos. 1069 to 1071 of 1932, Decided on 24th April 1936.

(a) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885 as amended in 1928), S. 115 (c) (3)—Special Judge rejecting memorandum of appeal for failure to supply requisite fee—Order rejecting memorandum of appeal is not decree and hence not appealable.

Section 107 (2), Civil P. C., invests an appellate Court with the same power as are conferred on a Court of original jurisdiction. But it does not purport to give the order passed by an appellate Court the same effect as an order passed by an original Court of like nature. S. 2 expressly says that 'decree' shall be deemed to include the rejection of a plaint. If it was the intention of the legislature to include within the definition of 'decree' an order rejecting a memorandum of appeal it would have expressly said so. [P 805 C 1]

Section 115 (c) (3), Ben. Ten. Act, makes applicable S. 107 and the provisions of O. 42, Civil P. C., to appeals to the High Court. An order passed by a special Judge rejecting memorandum of appeal for failure to supply requisite Court-fee is not a decree and hence is not appealable: 1932 Cal 482, Foll. [P 805 C 1]

(b) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885 as amended in 1928), S. 105-A—Decisions under—Appeal from — Court-fee — Decision on questions specified in S. 105-A is in effect decree—For appeal before special judge memorandum of appeal is required—Such memorandum comes under Art. 1, Sch. 1, of Court-fees Act.

The decision on questions specified in S. 105-A is for all practical purposes a decision under S. 106. For appeals from such decisions before the special Judge memoranda of appeals within the meaning of Art. 1, Sch. 1, Court-fees Act, are required and the Court-fees payable on such memoranda are ad valorem on the value of the subject-matter of dispute in appeal subject to a maximum of Rs. 20: 23 Cal 723 (P C), not Foll. [P 806 C 2; P 807 C 1]

(c) Bengal Tenancy Act (1885 as amended in 1928), S. 115—Decision under S. 105-A—Appeal to special Judge—Principle laid down for determining value of memorandum of appeals in suits under S. 7 (ii), Court-fees Act, should be followed.

Where an appeal is made to the special Judge from the decision on questions under S. 105-A, for valuing the subject matter of dispute the principle laid down for determining the value of memorandum of appeals in suits under S. 7 (ii), Court-fees Act, should be adopted: 1932 Cal 674, Rel. on. [P 807 C 1]

Atul Chandra Gupta and Bhola Nath Ray—for Appellant.

Panchanan Ghose, Muktipada Chatterjee, Nirod Bandhu Ray and Subodh Chandra Dutta—for Respondents.

Ramendra Chandra Ray—for Deputy Registrar (in Nos. 1070 and 1071).

Basak—for Secretary of State.

Nasim Ali, J.—The appellant in these three appeals filed three applications under S. 105, Ben. Ten. Act, before the Revenue Officer of Rampurhat in the district of Birbhum for settlement of fair and equitable rent of certain holdings. Before the Revenue Officer she raised the following issues under S. 105-A: (1) Are the holdings in dispute, though recorded as Mokrari in the record of rights, occupancy holdings? (2) Are the rents recorded in the record of rights the existing rent of the holdings? (3) Is she entitled to get additional rent for excess area? She paid Court-fee of 12 annas for each of the holdings mentioned in her application and Rs. 20 for each of the three applications. The Revenue Officer decided against her. She filed three appeals before the Special Judge of Birbhum and paid the same Court-fee on the memoranda of appeals as she did on her applications before the Revenue Officer. The learned Judge treated the appeals as appeals arising out of suits under S. 106, Ben. Ten. Act, and demanded additional Court-fees. The appellant having failed to comply with the order of the Judge her appeals have been dismissed. She appeals to this Court. In her Memorandum of appeals to this Court she has paid the same Court-fees as before the Special Judge.

During the pendency of the appeal to this Court respondent 9 in S. A. No. 1069, respondents 17, 18, 45, 48, 72 and 73 in S. A. No. 1070, respondents 10, 13, 24, 41, 44, 59, 62, 66 and 94 in S. A. No. 1071 died. Their heirs were not substituted within the time prescribed by law. The appellant's claim for fair rent in respect of the following Khatians is therefore dismissed.

Appeal No.	Khatian No.
S. A. No. 1069 of 1932	114
S. A. No. 1070 of 1932	15
	18
	66
	133
S. A. No. 1071 of 1932	23
	31
	35
	39
	71
	191
	202

A preliminary objection has been taken to the hearing of these appeals on behalf of the respondents on the ground that the order of the learned Special Judge though in form an order of dismissal, is in substance an order of rejection of memorandum of appeals, and no appeal lies against such an order. In order to determine whether an order dismisses an appeal or simply rejects it, the substance and not the form of the order is to be considered. The order of the Special Judge is not accurately expressed because it states that the appeals are dismissed and not that the memorandum of appeals are rejected. It is however clear that the intention of the Judge was to reject the memorandum as they were not properly stamped. The learned advocate for the appellant however contends that an appeal lies against an order rejecting a memorandum. Now an appeal to this Court against the decision of the Special Judge lies under S. 109-A (now 115-C), Cl. (3), Ben. Ten. Act. That clause lays down that such an appeal is subject to the provisions of O. 42, Civil P. C. O. 42 of the Code lays down that the rules of O. 41 shall apply so far as may be to appeals from appellate decrees. The order appealed against does not come under R. 3, O. 41 which provides for rejection of memorandum of appeal. But by S. 107, Cl. (2) of the Code the appellate Court has the same powers as the Court of original jurisdiction in respect of suits instituted therein. By R. 11, O. 7 of the Code, the trial Court has been empowered to reject a plaint if the plaint is not properly stamped and the plaintiff being required to supply the requisite stamps fails to do so. The Special Judge therefore had power to reject the memorandum of appeal for failure of the appellant to supply the requisite stamps. The question then is whether the order is appealable. In 59 Cal 388 (1), Suhrawardy, J. observed :

Section 107 (2) invests an appellate Court with the same powers as are conferred on a Court of original jurisdiction. It does not purport to give the order passed by an appellate Court the same effect as an order passed by an original Court of like nature. S. 2 expressly says that "decree" shall be deemed to include the rejection of a plaint. If it was the intention of the Legislature to include within the definition of 'decree' an order rejecting a memorandum of appeal it would have expressly said so.

With these observations I respectfully agree. S. 109 (3), Ben. Ten. Act makes the provision of O. 42 applicable to the appeals to this Court. By implication the provisions of O. 41 are attracted. Even if the provisions of O. 43 also are attracted, an order rejecting a memorandum of appeal is not appealable under its provisions. As at present advised I am inclined to think that an appeal arising out of a proceeding under S. 105 against the decision of the Special Judge lies to this Court when there has been an investigation and determination by him of any of the questions under S. 105-A.

I am therefore of opinion that no appeal lies to this Court against the order of the special Judge. But in view of the facts and circumstances of these cases we treat the memorandum of appeals to this Court so far as they relate to the tenancies in respect of which the appeals have not abated as petitions for revision under S. 115, Civil P. C. The point for determination in these cases is what was the court-fee payable on memorandum of appeals before the Special Judge in respect of the Khatians other than those in respect of which the claim for additional rent has been dismissed by us. It was not disputed at the bar that the amount of court-fee payable for the petitions before the revenue officer is governed by the notification under S. 105 (3), Ben. Ten. Act. It is however argued by the learned advocate for the appellant that the notification does not apply to appeals and that for determining the court-fee payable we must look to the Court-fees Act. It is also argued that the memorandum of appeal before the Special Judge do not come under Art. 1, Sch. 1, Court-fees Act and that they came under Art. 1, Cl. (b), Sch. 2 of the same Act. In support of this contention the learned Advocate relied upon a Full Bench decision of this Court: 23 Cal 723 (2). This ruling is of the year 1896. In that case it was held that no memorandum of appeal was required before the Special Judge in an appeal arising out of a proceeding for settlement of rent under S. 104 (2), Ch. 10, Ben. Ten. Act of 1885 as it stood then inasmuch as the proceeding under that section was not a suit. The reasons given for this decision are these:

(1) The proceeding was instituted by an application and not by a plaint. (2) The application was not subject to an ad valorem court-fee. (3) The provisions of S. 107, (old Act) did not prescribe that the decision of the revenue officer in such proceeding would be a decree. It has

1. Jnanada Sundari Shah v. Madhab Chandra, 1982 Cal 482=138 I O 648=59 Cal 388.

2. Upadhya Thakur v. Persidh Singh, (1896) 23 Cal 723 (F B).

the force of a decree which it might have without the proceeding necessarily becoming suit. (4) None of the rules framed by the Local Government under S. 189(1) of the Act laid down that such a proceeding would be a suit. (5) The rule framed by the Government to the effect that such a proceeding should be dealt with as a suit in respect of its procedure did not make them suits for purposes of court-fees as S. 189 of the Act did not authorize the Government to make rules about court-fees. Ch. 10, Ben. Ten. Act of 1885 has been greatly modified from time to time after the Full Bench decision by amending Acts. Government have now obtained power from the legislature to fix court-fees for proceedings for settlement to fair and equitable rent: see S. 105 (3). S. 105-A has been introduced. Mukherjee, J., while stating the history of the introduction of this section in 23 C L J 281 (3) decided by a Full Bench of this Court, observed as follows in the year 1916 :

Section 105 did not by itself in its original form contemplate an investigation into the question of the correctness of entries in the Record of Rights; yet a practice had grown up in proceedings under that section to decide questions which the legislature contemplated should be determined by a suit under S. 106. To put up the matter in another way the parties were placed in the same position as if a suit under S. 106 and a proceeding under S. 105 has been simultaneously instituted and consolidated and an amalgamated trial held for the investigation of the question of fair and equitable rent. This led to the introduction of S. 105-A which regularises the practice that gradually developed; and the revenue officers while seized of proceedings under S. 105 were expressly authorized to determine questions mentioned in S. 105-A which in ordinary course would form the subject of an enquiry under S. 106 * * * It follows accordingly that if in any proceeding under S. 105 questions under S. 105-A have been investigated and determined, the order of the Settlement Officer, though in form an order which settles a fair and equitable rent does in substance embody a decision of question within the scope of S. 105-A and consequently of S. 106 We cannot be invited to sacrifice substance to form, to look merely at the label and not the contents of the adjudication.

Before the introduction of S. 105-A by the amending Act of 1907, by a notification of the year 1899 a court-fee stamp of 8 annas was payable on application under S. 105 which replaced S. 104 (2) of the old Act in the year 1898. By the notification of the year 1918 and 1922 under S. 105 (3), Ben. Ten. Act, court-fees payable were fixed thus : (a) A stamp of 12 annas for each tenancy which is the subject-matter of an application under S. 105. (b) An ad valorem fee chargeable under Art. 1, Sch. 1, Court Fees Act subject to a maximum of Rs. 20 in addition to the stamp of 12 annas for adjudication of issues mentioned in S. 105-A. By the notification under S. 35, Court Fees Act, the court-fee payable for a suit under S. 106 is exactly the same as for trial of issues specified in S. 105-A in a proceeding under S. 105. This has been made clear by the introduction of S. 105-B in Ch. 10, Ben. Ten. Act. S. 107 of the Act as it stood before its amendment in 1898 laid down that the decision in a proceeding for settlement of rent should have the force of a decree. The decision under Ss. 105 and 105-A have now the force and effect of a decree of a civil Court in a suit between the parties. By R. 60 (9) and (10) of Government rules framed under the Act the entry made in the decision of the Revenue Officer and schedule attached thereto with regard to the fair rent settled shall be held to be a decree and a proceeding under S. 105-A shall be considered as a part of the proceedings under S. 105.

Before 1898 there was no provision in Ch. 10 corresponding to S. 109 which was introduced by the Amending Act of 1898. After the introduction of S. 105-A proceedings under Ss. 105 and 105-A are now under the operation of S. 109. Under S. 108 (3) of the Act as it stood before 1898 though there was a second appeal to this Court from the decision of a special Judge in a suit under S. 106, there was no second appeal to this Court from the decision of the special Judge in a proceeding under S. 104 (2). S. 109-A (now S. 115-C after amendment in 1928) which has replaced the old S. 108 gives a right of second appeal if the decision of the special Judge is not a decision simply settling rent but a decision determining questions within the scope of S. 105-A and consequently of S. 106. By successive legislation and notification after the Full Bench decision in Upadhaya Thakur's case (2) the character of a proceeding under S. 105 in which questions mentioned in S. 105-A are investigated and determined has now been changed. The decision on questions specified in S. 105-A is for all practical purposes a decision under S. 106. The ruling in Upadhaya's case (2) therefore cannot in my opinion apply to appeals before the special Judge against the decision of the Revenue Officer determining questions specified in S. 105-A. For such appeals memorandum of appeals within the meaning of Art. 1, Sch. 1, Court-fees Act, are required and the Court-fees payable on such memorandums are ad valorem on the value of the subject matter of dispute in appeal subject to a maximum of Rs. 20.

3. Jnanda Sundari v. Abdul Rahman, 1916 Cal 418=33 I C 148=43 Cal 603=20 O W N 428=23 C L J 281 (F B).

The next question is what is the value of the subject matter of dispute in the appeals before the special Judge. In determining the value under Art. 1, Sch. 1 we have got to look to the principles laid down in the sections of the Act. In view of the decision of the Court to which the appellant was a party i. e. 59 Cal 997 (4) the principle laid down for determining the value of memorandum of appeals in suits under S. 7 (ii), Court-fees Act should be adopted in valuing the appeals before the Special Judge in these cases. The appellant is therefore liable to pay a court-fee of 12 annas plus ad valorem fee on ten times the difference between fair rent claimed before the revenue officer and the rent recorded in the record of rights subject to a maximum of Rs. 20 for each of the khatiana.

We therefore direct the stamp reporter to report what would be the additional court-fee, which was payable in the Court of the revenue officer and the Special Judge in accordance with our decision in the cases for the khatians other than those in respect of which the claim has been dismissed by us. The stamp reporter is also directed to report what amount of additional court-fee would be payable on the memorandums of appeals treated as petitions for revisions under S. 115, Civil P. C. Further orders in these cases will be made as soon as the report of the stamp reporter is submitted.

Henderson, J.—I agree.

S. A. 1069 of 1932: The appellant is directed to deposit Rs. 3 that is, the deficit court-fee, within a week from this date. On such deposit being made, the judgment and decree of the Special Judge will be set aside and the case will be sent back to him for hearing on the merits according to law. Costs in this Court will abide the result. Hearing fee one gold mohur. If however the deficit court-fee be not paid as directed above, the order of the Special Judge will be affirmed without costs. The petition of compromise filed in this Court will also be sent to the Special Judge for being disposed of according to law, if the deficit court-fee be paid as directed above.

S. A. 1070 of 1932: The learned advocate for the appellant states that his client does not want to proceed with this application for settlement of fair and equitable rent in respect of the Khatians other than Khatian Nos. 10, 19, 150, 171, 203, 206. The judgment and decree of the Special Judge in respect of those Khatians are therefore affirmed without costs. As regards the other Khatians, that is, Khatians Nos. 10, 19, 150, 171, 203 and 206, the landlord will get fair and equitable rent at the rate mentioned in the petitions of compromise.

S. A. 1071 of 1932: The learned advocate for the appellant states that his client does not want to press his application for settlement of fair and equitable rent so far as the Khatians other than Khatians Nos. 121 and 160 are concerned. The application for settlement of fair and equitable rent in respect of those Khatians is therefore dismissed. As regards the remaining Khatians that is, Khatians Nos. 121 and 160, the appellant will get fair and equitable rent at the rate mentioned in the petitions of compromise. There will be no order for costs in this case.

D.S./R.K.

Order accordingly.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 807

GUHA AND NASIM ALI, JJ.

Nazar Khan Kabuli — Creditor—Appellant.

v.

J. J. S. Barrclough—Insolvent and others—Respondents.

Appeal No. 419 of 1934, Decided on 20th August 1936.

Insolvency—Proof of debts—Conditional discharge—Debt can be proved any time before final discharge.

An order rejecting the application of a creditor for inclusion of his name as a creditor on the ground of delay is not proper if his name was not included in the list of creditors and if no opportunity is given to him to explain the delay in making the application. The provisions contained in S. 33 (3) Provincial Insolvency Act, entitle a creditor at any time before discharge to tender proof of his debt and apply to the Court for an order directing his name to be entered in the schedule. [P 808 C 1]

4. Charusila Dasi v. Mazaffar Shaikh, 1932 Cal 674=149 I O 37=59 Cal 997=55 O L J 303.

Sarat Chandra Janah and Hiran Kumar Roy—for Appellant.

Judgment.—This appeal has arisen out of an application made in an insolvency case by a person claiming to be a creditor and praying for inclusion of his name as such in the schedule of creditors. The application was made on 16th June 1934, before the learned District Judge, Midnapur, after a conditional discharge had been granted to the insolvent by the Court, on 26th May 1934. The application was rejected on 14th July 1934, on the ground that no sufficient and reasonable cause for the delay in making the application was made out. The order of 14th July 1934, mentioned above, was passed after hearing the objections raised by the creditors who had appeared in the proceeding before the Court. In our judgment, the order rejecting the application of the appellant for inclusion of his name as a creditor was not properly made, in view of the admitted position that his name was not included in the list of creditors, and seeing that no opportunity was given to the appellant to explain the delay in making the application out of which this appeal has arisen. The provisions contained in S. 33 (3), Provincial Insolvency Act, entitled a creditor at any time before discharge, to tender proof of his debt and apply to the Court for an order directing his name to be entered in the schedule. As at present advised, we are inclined to hold that the discharge mentioned in S. 33 (3), of the Act is the final discharge, and not a conditional order of discharge, as made in the case before us; a creditor being entitled under the law to prove his debt at any time so long as there were assets available for distribution, so as not to disturb the distribution of any dividend already declared. In the above view of the case before us, the appeal is allowed. The order of the Court below against which it is directed is set aside, and the case is remitted to the Court below for decision in accordance with law, after giving the appellant opportunity for proving his debt. There is no order as to costs in the appeal, as the respondents have not entered appearance.

B.D./R.K.

Case remanded.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 808

R. C. MITTER, J.

Khagendra Nath Chatterjee—Defendant 2—Petitioner.

Kanti Bhushan Banerjee—Opposite Party.

Civil Rule No. 690 of 1935, Decided on 3rd February 1936.

Limitation Act (1908), Art. 7—Motor-car driver is artisan and suit for wages by him is governed by Art. 7.

A bus or motor-car driver must know something of the mechanism of a car, must know how to start it, to stop it and to start it. He is supposed to attend to car in emergent cases when mechanism goes out of order. In this view of the matter the motor driver is an artisan within the meaning of Art. 7 and the suit for wages by him is governed by Art. 7: 1927 Rang 279, Rel. on. [P 808 C 2; P 809 C 1]

Abinash Chandra Ghose—for Petitioner.

Phanindra Kumar Sanyal—for Opposite party.

Order.—This Rule has been obtained by defendant 2 in a suit instituted against him by the plaintiff opposite party for recovery of the balance of wages said to be due to him for the period of his service which he said, began on 14th May 1931 and terminated on 15th September 1931. The learned Small Cause Court Judge has found, overruling the defence, on the point, that the service terminated on 15th September 1931. The lower Court has also found that the plaintiff was employed under defendant 2 as a bus driver on daily wages. The suit was instituted on 12th September 1934 and a plea of limitation was taken but has been overruled. The question is whether the decision of the Court below on the point of limitation is a correct decision on point of law. Defendant 2 contends before me that Art. 7, Lim. Act applies to this case, and inasmuch as the suit has been instituted more than a year after the termination of service, it is barred by limitation. The whole question is whether a bus driver is an artisan within the meaning of that Article. I do not agree in the contention that a bus driver is a household servant. In my judgment, a bus or motor-car driver is an artisan. He must know something of the mechanism of a car, must know how to start it, to stop it and to start it. He is supposed to attend to the car in emergent cases when the mechanism goes a somewhat out of order during a journey. In this view of the matter I hold that he is an artisan within the meaning of Art. 7. This point was considered by the Burma High Court in 5 Rang 477 (1) and I agree with that portion of the judgment of Maung Ba, J., where Art. 7 has been applied on the footing that a motor-car driver is an artisan.

In this view of the matter I do hold that the point of limitation has been erroneously decided by the lower appellate Court and the plaintiff's suit ought to have been dismissed on the ground of limitation. The Rule is accordingly made absolute and the decree passed by the Court below is discharged. The petitioner must have the costs of the Court below from the opposite party. There will be no order for costs of this Court.

P.R./R.K. Order accordingly.

1. Sewaram v. Lachminarayan, 1927 Rang 279 = 104 I C 520 = 5 Rang 477.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 809

CUNLIFFE AND HENDERSON, JJ.

Babu Lal Chaukhani — Accused — Petitioner.

v.

Emperor—Opposite Party.

Misc. Case No. 95 of 1936, Decided on 3rd August 1936.

(a) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 498—Appeal finally decided by High Court—Accused applying to Privy Council for leave to appeal—High Court has no power to grant bail during intervening period.

Between the time of the High Court dealing finally with a criminal matter and the time when a successful approach for leave to appeal has been made to the Privy Council, the High Court in matter of bail, is functus officio and has no power to grant bail to the accused : 1924 Cal 64, Foll. ; 1927 All 97 and 24 Mad 161, Dissent. [P 810 C 2]

Per Cunliffe, J.—Obiter—On the acceptance on the part of the Judicial Committee of the appeal, the power of the High Court with regard to bail would be revived and fresh seisin of the case with regard to the question of bail could be considered. [P 810 C 2]

Per Henderson, J.—It is only when leave to appeal has actually been granted that any question of granting bail either directly or indirectly arises. [P 812 C 1]

(b) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 561-A—S. 561-A should not be interpreted as having reference to bail—Per Henderson, J.

Per Henderson, J.—It is incorrect to interpret S. 561-A as having any reference to bail, a matter which is specifically provided for by the Code itself. [P 811 C 2]

(c) Criminal P. C. (1898), S. 561-A—Appeal finally decided by High Court—Accused applying for leave to Privy Council—High Court has jurisdiction under S. 561-A to extend time for accused to surrender—Per Henderson, J.—Obiter.

Per Henderson, J.—Obiter—The High Court has jurisdiction, under the power preserved to it by S. 561-A, to extend the time for an accused to surrender, between the time the case has been finally decided by it, and the time when leave to appeal to the Privy Council has been made, but it would not do so when no case has been made out for its interference on merits and when such direction would not give effect to any order passed under the Code, nor would it prevent the abuse of the process of the Court or secure ends of justice. [P 811 C 2 ; P 812 C 1]

C. Noad and Satindra Nath Mukerji—for Petitioner.

W. W. K. Page—for the Crown.

Cunliffe, J.—We now propose to give our reasons for rejecting the petition made to us last Monday on behalf of one Babulal Chaukhani. The petitioner, it appears, together with a number of other persons was put on his trial before a Magistrate for offences under the Electricity Act and also for conspiracy. A number of convictions resulted, including the petitioner's. Then a visit was made to the Court of appeal with the result that, so far as the petitioner was concerned, his conviction for conspiracy was set aside, but the Court preserved his conviction for theft under the Electricity Act. On that conviction he was sentenced to undergo one year's rigorous imprisonment.

As I understand it, the Court of appeal dealt with the cases of his co-accused and I believe these persons are now undergoing their punishment in jail. The petitioner approached us for the purpose of obtaining an extension of the time within which he would surrender to his bail before the Chief Presidency Magistrate. He had approached the Magistrate already who allowed him the concession of not surrendering until, I think I am right in saying, the 29th of the last month but beyond that the Magistrate was not prepared to go. The reason that the petitioner asked us to exercise the discretion of the Court in his favour was that he had instructed his solicitors in England to place a petition before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council with regard to an appeal before their Lordships. He mainly relied upon a case decided comparatively recently by a Bench of the High Court of Allahabad. That was the decision of Sulaiman and Bannerji, JJ., in, 49 All 247 (1). The learned Judges there decided that they had inherent jurisdiction to stay the execution of their own order when the ends of justice so required it and they could admit to bail a person whose appeal had been admitted by the Privy Council. The judgments of the Court showed that they relied upon the provisions of a new section in the Criminal Procedure Code, S. 561-A, which deals with the preservation of the inherent power of the High Court to make orders which might prevent the abuse of the process of the Court and so on. It is to be noted that the facts in that case were not analogous to the facts before us now, because in the course of their judgment the learned Judges made this observation:

Before surrendering and before any appeal to their Lordships of the Privy Council was actually filed, the accused applied to this Court for bail on the ground that they have sent instructions to a Solicitor in England for lodging a petition for special leave.

Then follow the important words:

The High Court naturally refused to entertain the application so long as the accused had not surrendered. After information had been received that they had surrendered, the Bench i. e., the earlier Bench of the Allahabad High Court which dealt with the matter dismissed the application, but without prejudice to the right to bring another application in the event of special leave being granted by the Privy Council.

It was presumably on the second attempt of the petitioner there that the learned Judges considered the exercise of their inherent power. Reliance was also placed upon a short decision by a Bench of the Madras High Court in 24 Mad 161 (2). That was a case, again, in which leave had already been granted by the Judicial Committee and the Madras High Court allowed bail in a substantial form with two sureties in two substantial amounts. So it will be seen that the facts there were not analogous with the facts before us at the present time. There is however a decision of a Bench of this High Court which dealt with a petition based on facts very similar to the petition before us now. That was the case in 50 Cal 585 (3), decided by the late Chief Justice of this Court, Sir Lancelot Sanderson sitting with Richardson, J. There, as I understand their judgment, the Court held that between the time of an appellate Court dealing finally, as far as this province is concerned with a criminal matter, and the time when a successful approach has been made to the Privy Council, the Court in matters of bail is functus officio. Reference was made to Subrahmaniam Ayyar's case (2). It was distinguished and in his judgment Richardson, J., said:

So far as the present case is concerned, this Court is functus officio; it has no seisin of the case in any way; the case cannot again be brought before this Court for the purpose of leave being given to appeal.

It was also held that in the circumstances such as this and in circumstances such as the Court was considering there, it was no question of the powers under Cl. 41, Letters Patent being successfully invoked. To my mind, the decision of this Court is binding on us. Nor do I think it is irreconcilable with either of the cases on which reliance was placed by the petitioner. In both the Madras and Allahabad cases, a further stage of a definite nature had been reached in the proceedings by the successful petitioner to the Privy Council to hear the petitioner's appeal, and as I apprehend what might well have been decided in this Court in the circumstances, that the further stage had been reached by the acceptance on the part of the Judicial Committee of the appeal, the powers of this Court in regard to bail would be revived and fresh seisin of the case with regard to the question of bail could be considered. After we had the benefit of Mr. Carden Noad's argument, we asked whether the Crown was represented and interested in this question of bail; whereupon we were told by Mr. Page, that he represented the Crown and we proceeded to hear him shortly both on merits and on the law. He argued with emphasis that there were not merits in the appeal and having regard to the leading decision in Dillett's case (4), the chance of a successful approach in such circumstances to the Privy Council was a very remote one. It may be of interest to say that shortly after we had given our decision in regard to the rejection of this application, the Registrar of this Court was informed formally that a suspension order had

1. Emperor v. Ram Sarup, 1927 All 97=98 I C 593=27 Cr L J 1377=49 All 247.

2. Queen Empress v. Subramaniam Ayyar, (1901) 24 Mad 161=2 Weir 657.

3. Tulsi Telini v. Emperor, 1924 Cal 64=72 I C 862=24 Cr L J 862=50 Cal 585.

4. (1888) 12 A C 459=56 L T 615=36 W R 81=16 Cox C C 241.

been issued by the Local Government in reference to this matter. I believe it was a temporary suspension order lasting until such time as the actual petition for an order of permanent protection pendente lite could be considered.

It is sometimes said in certain quarters that this Court has become hostile to the directions and orders of the Local Government. I desire to say that nothing is further from the truth. This Court is always anxious to co-operate with the Local Government, if it can do so according to the ordinary rules of law and procedure and bearing in mind its constitutional duty to protect the subject when requiring its protection. It is, in my opinion, only when Government speaks with two voices that any trouble arises. I think, I have already noted that the counsel for the Crown, a counsel of great experience, publicly urged in this Court that there were no merits in this application whatever, and that the petitioner's chance of a successful approach to the Judicial Committee was very problematical. It is difficult to understand having regard to the fact that it is the same official of Government who instructed the learned Counsel for the Crown in this Court to argue in this way who shortly afterwards issued this executive protection order in favour of the petitioner. The two attitudes cannot be properly reconciled. It is obviously much in favour of a petitioning convicted criminal that he should have the benefit of a protection order such as this to carry him right through until the time the Privy Council decided to admit this appeal. There is, of course, attached to such an order no unpleasant requirements, such as the signing of a bail bond or the calling upon sureties in substantial amounts to be responsible for his necessary appearance in Court. I should imagine that such an order also leaves open a much larger door to the question which sometimes arises of the personal evasion by a convicted criminal of the sentence imposed on him. I only make these observations in what I regard as the public interest.

Henderson, J.—In rejecting this application we indicated that we would give our reasons in writing later. The petitioner was convicted of certain offences by the learned Chief Presidency Magistrate. He appealed to this Court. The appeal, which was heard by my Lord the Chief Justice and Costello, J., was only partially successful and he was eventually directed to surrender to his bail and serve out a certain term of imprisonment. The petition before us was really under two heads. In the first place we were asked to interfere in revision with an order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate refusing to extend the time for the petitioner to surrender, in order that he might be able to apply for leave to appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. It was conceded by Mr. Noad that there is no specific provision of the Code of Criminal Procedure which empowers a Magistrate to make such an order and we attach no importance to the fact that similar orders appear to have been made in the past. It is clearly the duty of the Magistrate to see that the orders of this Court are carried out and not to assist convicted persons in the evasion of them. It is impossible for us, sitting here in revision, to direct the Magistrate to pass what would be a most improper order. Then in the second place we were asked to make an order for bail ourselves or to allow the petitioner an extension of time to surrender. Now the case in 50 Cal 585 (3) is a direct authority of this Court for the proposition that we have no jurisdiction to grant bail in a case of this kind. I need only say that I respectfully agree with that decision.

It was, however, contended by Mr. Noad that the law has been altered by the enactment of S. 561-A, Criminal P. C., and in support of his argument he relied on a decision of the High Court of Allahabad, 49 All 247 (1). As the application for bail was rejected the decision is not a direct authority. The opinion of the learned Judges was based not upon the precise terms of the new section, but on the inherent jurisdiction of the Court which that section purports to preserve. In my opinion, it would be incorrect to interpret S. 561-A, Criminal P. C., as having any reference to bail, a matter which is specifically provided for by the Code itself.

Finally we were asked to extend the time for the petitioner to surrender under the power preserved to us by S. 561-A, Criminal P. C. As at present advised I should not be prepared to say that we have no jurisdiction to do so, inasmuch as it is a matter outside the specific provisions of the Code, but I am strongly of opinion that no case has been made out for our interference on the merits. Such a direction would clearly not give effect to any order passed under the Code; on the other hand it would merely stultify an order of this Court. Nor would it prevent the abuse of the process of any Court. The only point which remains is to consider whether it would secure the ends of justice. In my opinion it would not. It is only when leave to appeal has actually been granted that any question of granting bail, either directly or indirectly, arises. It was for that very reason that the learned Judges of the Allahabad High Court rejected the petition which had been made to them.

R.M./R.K. Application rejected.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 812

LODGE, J.

Debendra Nath Sadhu Khan—Defendant—Petitioner.

v.

Rai Ramprotap Chamaria—Plaintiff—Opposite Party.

Civil Rule No. 355 of 1936, Decided on 25th August 1936, from order of Munsiff, 2nd Court, Howrah, D/- 5-2-1936.

Civil P. C. (1908), Ss. 2 (2), 115, 144—Order rejecting application for restitution under S. 144 on ground of limitation amounts to decree and is appealable—High Court cannot interfere under S. 115.

A rejection of a prayer for restitution under S. 144 on the ground of limitation amounts to determination of a question under S. 144 and the order dismissing the application is a decree and is therefore appealable and as such the High Court has no jurisdiction to interfere under S. 115. [P 812 C 2]

Apurba Charan Mukherjee—for Petitioner.

Panchanan Ghose and Bhola Nath Ray—for Opposite Party.

Order.—This rule was issued on the opposite party to show cause why an order passed by the Munsif, 2nd Court, Howrah on an application under S. 144, Civil P. C., should not be set aside. The material facts are as follows: The petitioner was defendant in Title Suit No. 57 of 1927 in the Court of the 2nd Munsif at Howrah. The suit was decreed in favour of the plaintiff on 8th September 1928 and on 30th September 1928 the plaintiff in that suit obtained delivery of possession in execution of the decree. An appeal against that decree was filed and the appeal was decreed on 12th August 1932, the plaintiff's suit being dismissed.

A Second Appeal being second appeal No. 1943 of 1932 was filed which was dismissed on 6th March 1935. In the meantime on 26th April 1933 the petitioner applied under S. 144 for recovery of possession of the property from which he had been dispossessed. He made no application at that time for mesne profits and no order for mesne profits was passed but an order for possession was passed and symbolical possession was delivered on 30th April 1933. On 24th August 1935 the petitioner applied for assessment of mesne profits. Objection was taken on the ground that the application was barred by limitation. The learned Munsif came to the conclusion that the application was barred by limitation and dismissed the same with costs. Against that order the present rule has been issued. A preliminary objection has been taken that as the order is an appealable order this Court has no justification for interference under S. 115, Civil P. C. Under S. 2, Cl. 2, Civil P. C., a decree shall be deemed to include a determination of any question within S. 144, Civil P. C.

It is argued that by the order of the learned Munsif a question under S. 144 has been determined and therefore the order is a decree and therefore appealable. My attention has been drawn to a note at p. 421 of Sir Dinshaw Mulla's Commentary on the Code of Civil Procedure, Edn. 10, 1934 in which it is stated that a decision that an application under this section is time-barred is a decision on a question collateral to the question of restitution and hence it is not a decree and not appealable as such. Relying on that the learned advocate for the petitioner has argued that the order is not appealable, and consequently the application for revision would be entertainable. In my opinion the preliminary objection must be upheld. I am unable to understand how it can be argued that a rejection of a prayer for restitution under S. 144 on the ground of limitation does not determine the question under S. 144, Civil P. C. In my opinion by rejection on the ground of limitation such a question was determined and the order was therefore a decree which is appealable. In this view of the case the Court has no jurisdiction to interfere under S. 115, Civil P. C. Under the circumstances I order that the rule be discharged.

but I make no order as to costs. Let the certified copies of the orders of the Courts below filed in this Court be returned to the learned Advocate for the petitioner.

R.M./R.K.

Rule discharged.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 813

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Jitendra Nath Roy—Plaintiff—Appellant.

v.

Madan Mohan Das Mohanta Maharaja and another—Defendants—Respondents.

Letters Patent Appeal No. 5 of 1936, Decided on 3rd August 1936, against judgment of Edgley, J., D/- 24th January 1936.

(a) Interpretation of Statutes — Taxation statute.

A taxation statute like the Cess Act must be strictly interpreted. [P 813 C 2]

(b) Bengal Cess Act (9 of 1880), Ss. 54, 56 and 58—Notices under S. 54 must be properly published with all details—Omission or mistake in them disentitles zamindar for recovery of cesses under S. 58—Such mistakes are not mere irregularities but illegalities.

In view of the mandatory nature of the provisions contained in Ss. 54 and 56, Cess Act, unless notices required by S. 54 of the Act have been properly published with all details specified in S. 54, the zamindar is not entitled under the law to sue for recovery of cesses under S. 58. Omissions and mistakes in the notices issued under S. 54 are not mere irregularities but illegalities which vitiate the notices.

[P 813 C 2]

Hemendra Chandra Sen and Satyendra Ch. Sen—for Appellant.

Bijon Kumar Mukerji and Narendra Krishna Bose—for Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal under S. 15, Letters Patent, and is directed against the decision of our learned brother Edgley, J. reversing the decision of Additional District Judge of Jessore Khulna; it has arisen out of a suit for recovery of cess payable in respect of some rent-free lands appertaining to the zamindari of the plaintiff-appellant. It appears that the trial Court dismissed the plaintiff's suit. On appeal to the learned District Judge, the decision of the trial Court was reversed, and a decree was passed in favour of the plaintiff entitling him to recover the amount claimed in the suit as cesses payable by the defendants. There was then a second appeal to this Court by the defendants, and in that appeal, the decision of the primary Court dismissing the suit was restored.

In this appeal the only question for consideration is whether the plaintiff appellant is entitled to recover cess at double the amount with interest from the defendants-respondents, payable in respect of the years 1333 to 1336 B. S. under S. 58, Cess Act. On the findings arrived at by the lower appellate Court the notices required by S. 54, Cess Act had been duly served, and the question is whether those notices were such as strictly complied with the provisions contained in that section. There can be no doubt about the position, in view of the language of the statute, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover cesses as claimed in the suit, unless there is compliance with all the items mentioned in S. 54.

There had been non-compliance, so far as the mention of 12th January, the date fixed by the Board of Revenue for payment of cess, the amount of which was less than Rs. 10 and most of the amounts involved in the case before us were less than Rs. 10; there was also no mention of the amounts payable in each instalment, where payments in more than one instalment were permitted. Regard being had to the position indicated above we have no hesitation in agreeing with Edgley, J. that the suit was bound to be dismissed on the ground that there was non-compliance on the part of the plaintiff, so far as the mandatory provisions of the Cess Act were concerned. As the learned Judge has observed, a taxation statute like the Cess Act must be strictly interpreted, and in view of the mandatory nature of the provisions contained in Ss. 54 and 56, Cess Act, unless notices required by S. 54 of the Act have been properly published with all the details specified in S. 54, the zamindar in the position of the plaintiff was not entitled under the law to sue for recovery of cesses under S. 58. In our judgment, the omission to specify the exact amounts payable by the defendants, and the further omission or mistake in the matter of mentioning the dates fixed by the Board of Revenue, in the notices purported to have been issued under S. 54, were not mere irregularities but were illegalities which vitiated the notices. The liability in respect of payment of cesses by persons in the position of the defendants was based upon the service of notice prescribed by law, and the provisions contained in S. 54, Cess Act, had to be strictly complied with in all particulars, before any statutory liability could arise, as claimed by the plaintiff in the suit.

The service of notice in the manner prescribed by law is the foundation of the party's claim to recover cesses by a suit like the one before us; and non-compliance of the provisions of the law as contained in S. 54 in any way whatsoever, cannot be treated as a mere irregularity which does not invalidate the notice, as it appears to have been held by the District Judge in the Court of appeal below. The equitable considerations that might arise in favour of the appellant before us, cannot be allowed to override the definite provisions of the law, creating rights and liabilities of the parties, so far as the present claim for recovery of cesses was concerned by a suit. The decision of our learned brother Edgley, J., against which this appeal is directed is in our judgment right and must be upheld. The appeal is dismissed. There is no order as to costs in the appeal.

R.W./R.K. Appeal dismissed.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 814

GUHA AND BARTLEY, JJ.

Radha Gobinda Sen and another—Plaintiffs—Petitioners.

v.

Ram Brahma Mondal and another—
Opposite Parties.

Civil Revn. Nos. 451 and 459 of 1936, Decided on 31st July 1936, from order of Second Court of Munsif., Krishnagar (Nadia), D/- 19th March 1936 and from order of Dist. Judge, Nadia, D/- 16th March 1936.

(a) Stamp Act (1899), S. 5—"Distinct Matters"—Test of—Vakalatnama—Two stipulations—One by which pleader to receive certain fees for work to be done—Second by which pleader if not paid not bound to appear—These two held not distinct matters.

Two matters however are considered to be distinct, if one of them is subsidiary to another contained in the same document, the test being whether one is incidental and accessory to the other. A vakalatnama contained two stipulations to the following effect: (1) The pleader is to receive certain fees for work to be done for his client in Court in a case before the Court in which the vakalatnama is filed. (2) The pleader is not bound to appear and act if fees are not paid in advance:

Held: that the stipulation to remunerate the pleader in advance was a necessary part of the vakalatnama and was not a separate agreement or a separate matter as contemplated by S. 5, Stamp Act. The vakalatnamas in question contained one indivisible contract and were chargeable under Art. 10, Sch. 2, Court Fees Act; and there were no such distinct matters contained in them to which the provisions of the Stamp Act relating to agreements were applicable.

[P 814 C 2 ; P 815 C 1]

(b) Interpretation of Statutes—Fiscal statute—It should be construed strictly and in favour of and beneficial to subject.

In case of doubt, the construction of a fiscal statute should be construed strictly in favour of and beneficial to the subject. There cannot be any equitable construction of a fiscal statute; and the Crown seeking to recover a tax must bring it within the letters of the law; otherwise, the subject is free. The intention to tax a particular instrument in different ways must appear in clear and positive words. [P 815 C 1]

*Ramaprosad Mukhopadhyaya, Mahit Kumar Mukerji and Umaprosad Mukopadhyaya—*for Petitioners.

*Bijan Kumar Mukerji—*for Opposite Parties.

Order.—The question for consideration in these cases is whether vakalatnamas containing stipulations to the following effect are required to be stamped as agreement under the Stamp Act, as also as vakalatnamas under the Court Fees Act: (1) The pleader is to receive certain fees for work to be done for his client in Court in a case before the Court in which the vakalatnama is filed. (2) The pleader is not bound to appear and act, if fees are not paid in advance. In view of the provisions contained in the Stamp Act, an instrument comprising or relating to several distinct matters is chargeable with aggregate amount of duties with which separate instrument each comprising or relating to one of such matters would be chargeable (S. 5). In applying this provision of law, there can be no doubt that what has to be taken into account is what the parties concerned purported to provide for, by an instrument, and not whether any particular provision was necessary or might have been dispensed with the question being whether a deed contained two distinct matters, as specifically mentioned in S. 5, Stamp Act. Two matters however are considered to be distinct, if one of them is subsidiary to another contained in the same document the test being whether one is incidental and accessory to the other. The position has to be kept in view and what has to be considered is whether any instrument contains distinct matters and not whether it contains two distinct contracts.

In applying the rules deducible from the provision contained in S. 5, Stamp Act, to which reference has been made above the canons of construction applicable to fiscal statutes must be kept in view and in case of doubt, the construction of a fiscal statute should be construed strictly in favour of and beneficial to the subject. There cannot be any equitable construction of a fiscal statute; and the Crown seeking to recover a tax must bring it within the letters of the law; otherwise the subject is free: See 32 C L J 421 (1) at p. 425. The intention to tax a particular instrument in different ways must appear in clear and positive words. In the case before us the stipulation to remunerate the pleader in advance is a necessary part of the vakalatnama and was not a separate agreement or a separate matter, as contemplated by S. 5, Stamp Act. The vakalatnamas in question containing one indivisible contract were chargeable under Art. 10, Sch. 2, Court-fees Act; and there were no such distinct matters contained in them to which the provisions of the Stamp Act relating to agreements were applicable.

On proper construction of the vakalatnamas before us, there was no doubt that the instruments do not comprise or relate to several distinct matters and there can be no question of charging them with the aggregate amount of duties with which separate instruments, each comprising or relating to one of such matters, would be chargeable under the law. As indicated sufficiently clearly, there is no room for any doubt as to the proper construction either of the terms of the vakalatnamas or of the provisions of the law applicable to the same; and even if there was any room for doubt, in the absence of any definite provision of the law, the vakalatnamas are not chargeable both under the Court-fees Act and the Indian Stamp Act, as held by the learned Judges in the Court below. The rules are made absolute. The orders against which the rules were directed are set aside. There is no order as to costs in the rules.

R.W./R.K.

Rules made absolute.

1. Killing Valley Tea Co., Ltd. v. Secy. of State, 1921 Cal 40=61 I O 107=48 Cal 161=32 C L J 421.

A. I. R. 1936 Calcutta 815

MUKERJI AND S. K. GHOSE, JJ.

Bhabataran Chakravarty and others—
Plaintiffs—Appellants.

v.

*Ramlal Das Mohunt—*Defendant—Respondent.

Appeal No. 49 of 1933, Decided on 6th January 1936, from Original decree of Dist. Judge, Bankura, D/- 25th January 1933.

Public Suits Validation Act (11 of 1932), Ss. 2, 3—Suit under S. 92, Civil P. C., dismissed as consent of collector not being in order—Subsequent passing of Act 11 of 1932—Restoration of suit on petition under S. 3 of Act—Court has to proceed with suit and cannot enquire into validity or otherwise of consent and dismiss suit on that ground.

A suit under S. 92 was dismissed on the ground that the consent of the Collector under S. 93, Civil P. C., with which the suit had been filed was not in order. Subsequent to this the Public Suits Validation Act (11 of 1932), received the assent of the Governor-General and came into force and the plaintiffs put in a petition under the provisions of S. 3 of that Act for restoration of the suit and the suit was restored. But the objection which the defendant had taken to the restoration of the suit was thereafter repeated before the Judge and as the result of that the Judge again dismissed the suit on the view that the consent of the Collector with which the suit had been originally instituted not having been in order and there having been no fresh consent given by the Collector with the previous sanction of the Local Government, the suit was not maintainable:

Held: that once the order of restoration was made, the suit will have to be proceeded with in accordance with law. S. 2 of the Act was already a part of the law of the land and if by its terms the sanction was applicable to the suit as it then was, the suit could again be dismissed but should be proceeded with if S. 2 warrants such a procedure. In the present case, at the time when the Act was passed, an appeal from the decree of the trial Court dismissing the suit was competent and open to the plaintiffs, and there could be no question that the validity or otherwise of the consent with which the suit was originally instituted could no longer be enquired into and would consequently form no ground for dismissal of the suit once again.

[P 816 C 2]

Narendra Krishna Bose—for Appellants.

Sitaram Banerjee and Sudhansu Kumar Sen—for Respondent.

Judgment.—This is an appeal preferred by the plaintiffs from a decree dismissing their suit under S. 92, Civil P. C. The suit was instituted with the consent of the Collector under S. 93 of the Code on 22nd June 1928. It remained pending for several years when on 30th November 1931 the decision of the Judicial Committee in 36 C W N 257 (1) was delivered. On 15th February 1932, in view of the said decision, the suit was dismissed, it being held that the consent of the Collector under S. 93 of the Code with which the suit had been filed was not in order. This decree was signed by the Court on 17th February 1932. On 8th April 1932, the Public Suits Validation Act (Act No. 11 of 1932) received the assent of the Governor-General and came into force. On 4th May 1932, the plaintiffs put in a petition under the provisions of S. 3 of the Act for restoration of the suit. This petition was objected to on behalf of the defendant but eventually on 20th June 1932 the learned District Judge set aside the decree of dismissal that he had made on 15th February 1932 and ordered the suit to be restored. The objection which the defendant had taken to the restoration of the suit was thereafter repeated before the learned Judge and as the result of that the learned Judge on 25th January 1933 again dismissed the suit on the view that the consent of the Collector with which the suit had been originally instituted not having been in order and there having been no fresh consent given by the Collector with the previous sanction of the Local Government, the suit was not maintainable in view of the decision of the Judicial Committee in 36 C W N 257 (1) referred to above. The learned Judge has taken the view that although in view of S. 3 of the Act the plaintiffs were entitled to have the decree of dismissal originally made set aside and their suit restored still the moment the suit came to be restored it would have to be proceeded with and proceeded with in accordance with the law from that point of time, S. 2 of the Act not applying to the suit at all.

This is a view which, in our opinion, is clearly not maintainable. S. 3 is concerned only with the question of restoration by the trial Court of a suit which had been dismissed merely on the ground of defect in the sanction required by S. 93 of the Code. Once the order of restoration is made, the suit will have to be proceeded with and proceeded with in accordance with law. S. 2 of the Act is already a part of the law of the land and if by its terms the section is applicable to the suit as it then was, there can be no question that the suit cannot again be dismissed but should be proceeded with if S. 2 warrants such a procedure. In the present case, at the time when the Act was passed, an appeal from the decree of the trial Court dismissing the suit was competent and open to the plaintiff's. That being the position, the suit was a pending suit within the meaning of S. 2 and once it is established that the suit was pending at that point of time, the provisions contained in S. 2 at once came into play. S. 2 being applicable to the suit as it then was, there can be no question that the validity or otherwise of the consent with which the suit was originally instituted could no longer be enquired into and would consequently form no ground for dismissal of the suit once again. We are of opinion that the learned District Judge was in error in the view that he took of this matter. The result is that the appeal succeeds. We accordingly order that the decree from which it has been preferred being set aside the suit be now tried on the merits in accordance with law. Costs of this appeal will abide the result; hearing fee being assessed at three gold mohurs.

R.W./R.K.

Appeal allowed.

1. Prem Narain v. Ram Charan, 1932 P O 51=136 I C 461=59 I A 121=53 All 990=36 C W N 257 (P C).

E N D

